Why the procedure which has been followed so successfully for more than 86 years now should be overturned I confess I cannot understand. I do not believe it would add to efficiency and we know it would very appreciably add to the cost. The Budget proposes language going part way in avoiding this extra expense. The committee proposes to go the whole way and is recommending a provision designed to preserve completely intact the modus operandi which heretofore has prevailed.

PANAMA CANAL

The estimates on account of the Panama Canal total $10,573,760. This sum is $549,184 less than the sum of current year appropriations, which comes about largely because there will be no extensive lock-overhaul work during 1938.

The estimate does not contemplate any unusual expenditures—just the usual line of additions and betterments.

INLAND WATERWAYS CORPORATION

Section 2, on page 15 of the bill, relates to the Inland Waterways Corporation. There is no item in the estimates touching this Corporation, but we concluded it would be well to have General Asburn, the president of the Corporation, come before us and give an accounting. He told us that of the last appropriation of $10,000,000, made in 1929, for increasing the capital stock of the Corporation, only $7,000,000 had been withdrawn from the Treasury and that the Corporation was doing so well he felt sure that the remaining $3,000,000 would not be drawn. Consequently we are proposing the repeal of the $3,000,000.

FLOOD CONTROL

Mr. Chairman, I have deferred discussing until last the items relating to flood control. I shall try to be brief, because the subject is one about which we have heard a great deal of late.

We are presenting the Budget estimates under both the Copeland and Overton Acts. The former, the omnibus flood-control act, authorizes and adopts 270 projects in 31 States, at a total cost of $320,000,000. The Budget estimate is $30,000,000, of which $5,000,000 will need to be applied to the Conchas Dam project in New Mexico.

The law provides that appropriations shall be applied to projects in order of emergency as may be determined by the President. Therefore we are unable to advise you definitely how the remaining $25,000,000 of the appropriation proposed will be allocated. A tentative allocation appears on page 75 of the hearings. In all probability the Chief of Engineers will use that set-up in his recommendation to the President, in whom final decision rests.

The estimate under the Overton Act, which applies to the lower Mississippi, is $22,500,000. If flowage rights are bought—and the provision of floodways is the very essence of the Overton Act—somewhere in the neighborhood of $14,000,000 of the appropriation will need to be employed in that way, which would leave an absurdly small amount for levee building, channel straightening, and other protective works.

I do not know how many of you were fortunate enough to hear the splendid speech delivered in this Chamber on the 19th of last month by the distinguished chairman of the Flood Control Committee, Mr. WHITTINGTON, of Mississippi, on floods and their damage in the Ohio Valley. I hope if you were unable to hear it you have since found the time to read it. It is replete with facts and figures dealing with the Ohio and its tributaries and the damage occasioned by floods along the main stream and its many feeders, dating back many years before the War between the States. Starting up at the headwaters of these feeder streams in New York State, in West Virginia, in the Johnstown area of my own State, in Kentucky, in Illinois, and Indiana, the story is told of the great devastation wrought year after year along these streams when in flood. I should like to read to you two or three excerpts from Mr. WHITTINGTON's speech:

Nobody knows the amount of damages in the Ohio Valley. When the flood waters receded Louisville estimated a loss of $71,000,000. At Paducah the estimate was $25,000,000. The losses on thousands of farms and in hundreds of smaller towns and villages will never be estimated. It is believed that the direct damages along the Ohio River amounted to more than $400,000,000. But this is not the whole story. Families were made bankrupt; citizens lost the savings of a lifetime; there was a cessation of business. It is difficult to estimate the loss of life through accident, through disease and sickness caused by the flood, through undernourisment and lack of clothing, and other necessaries of life through the destruction of the means of livelihood. The floods often came at night; they occurred during the winter. By what yardstick can we measure the intangible losses? The discouragement to Americans who lost their all through no fault of their own will drag into the years. Some day we may be able to estimate in dollars and cents the direct losses; but it will be difficult, if not impossible, to measure the intangible and the indirect losses.

Again, says Mr. WHITTINGTON:

It is safe to estimate that in the great Ohio flood of 1937 the direct and the indirect losses aggregate the staggering total of $800,000,000.

And, lastly, let me quote:

The money spent for protection against the ravages of flood is relatively small. Larger amounts have been spent for highways and railways. None of these expenditures, however, has resulted in as much revenue to the people, to the States, and to the Federal Government as has accrued by reason of flood-control work.

Think of it, my friends! One flood occasioning a loss of $800,000,000. And God knows what the total would have been had the White, the Arkansas, and the Red Rivers been at flood when the waters from the Ohio were swirling down the Mississippi. The loss of life and property that would have ensued is terrible even to contemplate..

It seems like folly to me not to attack this problem promptly and vigorously and bring to an early conclusion such remedial and protective measures as our engineers may advise, not alone in the Ohio Basin and the Mississippi Basin but in New England, southern New York, and eastern Pennsylvania, southern California, and elsewhere wherever these destructive forces are apt to recur. I submit it would be sound economics to pursue such a course. No one can say what the Federal Government loses by way of reduced income taxes because of property damage.

I know for a fact that one business house alone in the Golden Triangle district of Pittsburgh paid $300,000 less in taxes this year than it would have paid had there been no flood in 1936—just one establishment, mark you. I venture to say that if the damage annually paralleled that sustained early in this year, the entire cost to the Federal Government of the Copeland and Overton Acts would be saved in the course of a very few years. It would be saved in 1 year, considering losses of every character.

The obstacle to a vigorous program seems to be one of Budget balancing. The President and his advisers evidently feel that immediate Budget balancing is more important from a national standpoint. I bow to that judgment, much against my own. We may gamble with nature and win. On the other hand, if we lose, we are diminishing national wealth and national income far more, if the past be any criterion, than if we had gone ahead with an attack upon this problem in a way that would result in its early elimination. Furthermore, laying potential property losses aside, I do not like gambling with human lives as pawns.

While there seems to be a division of opinion as to the value of W. P. A. labor upon major flood-control projects, I believe that the projects that may be undertaken with the amounts proposed in the Budget may be very appreciably advanced if there be W. P. A. labor of the right kind available.

The President is keenly alive to this flood problem and personally has looked over much of the ground with remedial works definitely in mind, and I am sure that he will see that there will be made available of the relief appropriation which we passed a few days ago whatever amount may be required to employ available relief labor looking to advancing projects in the Ohio Basin and in the lower Mississippi to an extent very much greater than would be practicable with the amounts proposed in the Budget and carried in this bill.

With assistance in this way, we probably shall have to be content until a more liberal allocation may be set up in the regular Budget. In the meantime possibly Jupiter Pluvius may be kind to us and distribute his effusions more equably both as to time and place.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, let me say that I have a further word of assurance with respect to allotments of relief funds upon flood-control work. I asked Mr. Harry L. Hopkins to send to me his latest thought as to the amount he felt reasonably sure would be expended upon flood-control projects through the different channels of the W. P. A. during the fiscal year 1938. The letter is dated June 14, 1937, and reads as follows:

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, D. C., June 14, 1937.

The Honorable J. BUELL SNYDER,
The House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SNYDER: This letter is in response to your inquiry as to the amount of relief labor which the Works Progress Administration would be in position to furnish for work on flood-control projects during the fiscal year 1938.

On pages 5211 and 5212 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 1, 1937, you will find the text of my letter of June 1 to the Honorable JOE STARNES, stating the amounts of relief labor which it was believed could be supplied on the flood-control projects which have been authorized by the Congress for the lower Mississippi Valley by the Overton Act and in the omnibus flood-control bill (Copeland Act).

The specific projects mentioned in that letter were those listed for prosecution in the first and second years of a program for flood-control work which has been outlined by the Chief of Engineers, United States Army. The total probable employment on the projects listed was estimated at approximately 65,000.

Subsequent to the date of my letter to Congressman STARNES, the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937 (H. J. Res. 361) passed the House of Representatives with the following provision inserted in section 10:

"Provided, That with the approval of the President, materials, equipment, and personnel of the Corps of Engineers, War Department, may be assigned to service in connection with flood-control and water-conservation projects prosecuted under this act, notwithstanding that such projects have not been duly authorized by act of Congress."

If the act as finally passed should contain the above provision, the situation would be changed from that on which my letter to Congressman STARNES was based, in that it would be possible for the Works Progress Administration to furnish relief labor for work under the supervision of the Corps of Engineers on flood-control projects which have not been authorized by the Congress. This would, of course, increase the possibility of the use of relief labor and would be of particular importance in connection with work in the Ohio River Valley on projects which have not yet received congressional authorization.

I am in receipt of information from the Chief of Engineers that his report of April 6, 1937, proposes 151 flood-control projects along the Ohio River between Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cairo, Ill., the work being the constructing of levees and concrete flood walls. He further informs me that the maximum amount of work that could profitably be carried on on these projects in the fiscal year 1938 would involve the employment of approximately 35,000 relief workers. The location of the projects and the amount of certified labor available in the Ohio Valley is such that the Works Progress Administration can and would supply this labor.

The use of relief labor on flood-control projects, as outlined in this letter, is necessarily dependent upon the availability of regularly appropriated funds to the Corps of Engineers in order that that agency may be in position to provide the necessary material, equipment, and supervisory personnel to enable the work to be effectively carried on. Furthermore, it is not possible at this time to give accurately and in complete detail definite amounts of relief labor that can be supplied on specific projects. The program which I have outlined would necessarily be subject to such adjustments as may become necessary in view of local conditions, such as difficulties which may arise in connection with obtaining rights-of-way or other complications.

Very sincerely yours,

HARRY HOPKINS, Administrator.

On June 1, 1937, Mr. Hopkins wrote our colleague the Honorable JOSEPH STARNES to the effect—see page 5211, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—that there were available approximately 35,166 unemployed men who could be used on projects covered by the Overton Act and about 30,940 unemployed men available to be put to work on flood-control projects embodied under the Omnibus Flood Control Act. That means that the way is open through W. P. A. channels to spend about $26,274,000 during the fiscal year of 1938 on projects as set forth in the Overton Act and approximately $23,205,000 during the same fiscal year on projects as embodied in the Omnibus Flood Control Act, making a total of $49,500,000 plus of W. P. A. money that can be or may be spent on flood-control projects through the W. P. A. channels during the fiscal year of 1938.

Mr. Chairman, the committee is much consoled that it is able to report this appropriation bill under the Budget estimate, even though the amount be small. The amount is only $47,000, and yet it is under the Budget estimate.

I wish to take this occasion to express my deep appreciation of the splendid cooperation which I received not only from my committee but from everyone else while building up and bringing before you the War Department civil functions bill. I deeply appreciate the attitude of the minority members of the committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. POWERS] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL]. They were cooperative at all times. I may say the same thing of the majority members of the committee, Mr. DOCKWEILER, Mr. TERRY, Mr. STARNES, and Mr. COLLINS. There are no politics in this committee, I am very glad to report.

Above all, we all owe a debt of gratitude to another, and that is Mr. John Pugh. Someone said at the beginning of this session in presenting one of these bills—I forget who it was—that there are certain members of the staff of the Committee on Appropriations who work night and day and who are underpaid. I take this occasion to say that of John Pugh, who knows more about the Army and the Navy and flood control and river and harbor matters in the House and out of it than any other man in America. I thank you. [Applause.]

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

MUDDLED THINKING

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, Washington is a city of muddied waters and muddled thinking. Some men, coming to this city built in a swamp, soon imagine themselves dwelling upon the mountain tops, to be supermen, possessed of master minds. With delusions of grandeur but little different from the product of a diseased mind, they dwell in an artificial atmosphere, remote from practical affairs, from the realities of life. And Congress, like a flock of sheep, has followed such leaders.

Yielding its judgment, ignoring its common sense, refusing to listen to the voice of its conscience, betraying its constituents, Congress has followed, followed on, until today this country is on the verge of widespread bloody civil strife. About this there is no mistake.

We can talk and we can argue, as we did yesterday, over a petty piece of legislation which has to do with the regulation of those who practice the art of beautifying one's personal appearance. While we were discussing that measure, men, armed with clubs, bricks, guns, and knives, under the leadership of John L. Lewis and his crew of wreckers, without a word of disapproval from Franklin D. Roosevelt, are going about the country smashing the faces, breaking the limbs, and sending to the hospital honest laboring men, whose only sin is the desire to work.

COMMUNISM BREAKS IN AMERICA, AS PROPHESIED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

In a nationally known publication, it was asserted, and so far as I know it has never been denied, that about the time of Frank Murphy's return from the Philippine Islands at the request of the President, to become a candidate for the Governorship of Michigan, Murphy was reported as quoting President Roosevelt as saying:

If communism breaks in America, it will be in the Detroit area where it will first manifest itself.

Roosevelt was either possessed of prophetic vision or he had inside information as to the purpose of John L. Lewis. Great as the President may believe himself to be, there is no concrete evidence that he has supernatural powers, and there was no material fact then in existence justifying the supposition that in Michigan, where the motor industry was leading the way to recovery, there was unrest or discontent.

I do not understand how the President knew before the November election that communism was going to break in the Detroit area unless John L. Lewis told him so.

Mr. LUECKE of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. LUECKE of Michigan. Not so long ago the gentleman attributed that statement to Governor Murphy. Now which is correct?

Mr. HOFFMAN. What statement?

Mr. LUECKE of Michigan. The statement the gentleman has just made as attributed to the President.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, no, no. Governor Murphy said that the President said that when communism broke it would break in the Detroit area.

Mr. LUECKE of Michigan. That is not the way I understood it.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Oh, yes. I have it right here now. The gentleman can read it. I put it in the RECORD on June 1 (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 5175). Later Murphy said that all it needed was confiscation of property to bring communism to Michigan. That, as the gentleman knows, we now have.

It is more probable that, at that time, he was fully aware of the purpose of John L. Lewis, in whose honor Soviet Moscow had renamed Detroit. That purpose, as it now stands disclosed, was to assist the President, who had expressed the thought that, while in his first administration, those who created jobs and gave employment had met their match, he hoped they would, in his second administration, meet their master.

INDUSTRY BEATEN TO ITS KNEES

The hope of the President is coming true. All you need to do is to read your daily papers and learn each morning that some new act of violence has been committed, that another law of State or Nation has been openly defied. And the President sits in the White House, when he is not on a vacation, while Lewis imposes the "rule of tooth and of claw" upon the worker.

Well may Franklin D. Roosevelt boast of the achievement of his purpose to beat industry to its knees. By the aid of his Secretary of Labor, who was born only God knows where, but whose destination, if the predictions of many be true, is absolutely certain [laughter and applause]; with the assistance of his traitorous tool, Murphy, and the aid of the flying squadrons of John L. Lewis, the President has become the master of industry in Michigan and in thousands of other localities throughout our land.

Yes; he has brought industry to its knees. Lewis has destroyed hundreds of thousands of jobs. He threatens to drive hundreds of thousands of additional workers from their places of employment and, with the President's aid, Lewis has established himself as master of the working man.

They invaded Michigan because they knew that back of Governor Murphy was the Secretary of Labor. She stands back of Murphy, and back of her stands President Roosevelt.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I saw it stated lately, and I hope the gentleman will sympathize with the President—I read that it is very difficult for the President to talk with a $469,000 plaster—Lewis' contribution to his campaign—over his mouth. Cannot the gentleman sympathize with him in that situation?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I can sympathize with him and I can understand—no; I cannot do that because I am just an ordinary fellow. I can understand that presumably he is waiting for one of two things: He is either waiting for the situation to go on, this interference with the mails, the railroads, the closing of factories—he is either waiting until that reaches the stage where he can completely take over industry; or he is waiting until the sentiment of the people is such that he knows there will be an uprising impossible to quell and then he will come forward, declare that another great emergency has arisen—but this time it will be of his own making and for it he must assume entire responsibility—and, with great ballyhoo, announce that he has been anointed to rescue us from our peril.

I cannot say that he is waiting for the one or for the other; doubtless he is waiting until expediency determines his course. Perhaps he is waiting to hear what Lewis wants to tell him.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The gentleman made a statement a moment ago that I was very much interested in. He said that the Secretary of Labor is behind Murphy. What is there that the Secretary of Labor should do to stop these strikes that she did not do?

Mr. HOFFMAN. In the first place, she could have kept her mouth shut and not questioned the legality of the sit-down strike. [Applause.] In the second place, she could have stated, as could the President, that this thing is unlawful. She could have called upon the President to enforce the statutes of the United States to prevent interference with the United States mails. She could have shown how the stopping of these factories and the stopping of production was a burden on interstate commerce, a subject we have heard so much about. She could have called attention to the fact that throwing hundreds of thousands of men out of employment, depriving them of millions of dollars in wages, but increased the relief burden.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Right there, to clear that question up, she is only the Secretary of Labor trying to enforce the laws of this Congress.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I told the gentleman what she could do. She has a mouth; she can talk. She did use it to call on Sloan and the General Motors officials when she wanted to interfere, when she wanted to prevent business going on.

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield.

Mrs. O'DAY. The gentleman said nobody knew where Miss Perkins was born.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I may have displayed my ignorance.

Mrs. O'DAY. The gentleman has, indeed.

Mr. HOFFMAN. It is not the first time.

Mrs. O'DAY. She was born near Boston.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I have heard that she has as many birthplaces as some people have husbands. [Laughter.]

The President is presumed to be the Chief Executive officer of the land. Unlimited funds and arbitrary power have by this Congress been granted to him. There is no doubt but that he cracks the whip over this body and, like driven slaves, we hasten to comply with his slightest wish. The House Members talk loudly of their independence, but, like a dog who answers to his master's whistle, a word of command from the White House has found them delivering the votes.

We have followed this disgraceful, cowardly course; but today in many of our districts the people realize that no longer is the President of the United States the head of our Nation, but that he, too, has found a master, and his master is John L. Lewis.

THE PRESIDENT PAYS A DEBT

Early in his second administration the President was reminded by Lewis that labor elected him and that labor demanded payment of the political debt, and payment of that debt is one obligation which the President is continuing to meet, and there seems no end to the payment.

Without one word of protest being uttered—rather sanctioned by his policy of tacit approval—John L. Lewis threw hundreds of armed invaders from a half dozen cities and more than one State into Michigan, where it was our pride that working conditions were better, wages higher, than in any other place in the Union.

Why did these armed men invade Flint? They invaded Michigan because they knew they would receive the support of Murphy and the approval of the Secretary of Labor and of the President.

Why were they permitted to impose upon those wage earners a loss of more than $44,000,000 in that one strike? Because they knew that Murphy, so-called Governor of Michigan, would not interfere with them; because they knew that John L. Lewis, their leader, had the support of the President of the United States in his attempt to destroy the American Federation of Labor, to establish himself as a dictator over labor.

Why did they go to Detroit and again, armed and by force, take possession of factories, of stores, and of hotels? Because they knew that the President of the United States knew that when communism came to this country it would come first in the Detroit area, and they knew that the President was hand in glove with the man who would bring it to Detroit; because they knew that peaceable, law-abiding citizens, that those charged with the enforcement of the law, would be prevented by the Governor of Michigan and his National Guard and his State police, compelled to act under his orders, from regaining their jobs, possession of their factories.

In daily communication with the President throughout these first strikes in Michigan, Murphy threw the whole power of his office over National Guard and State police not behind the officers of the law but behind this crew of outside wreckers, behind these racketeers; and from that day until this moment he has been actively engaged in assisting them in their unlawful schemes, their unlawful acts, and their plans to disregard all law.

CITIZENS REBEL

A week ago last Thursday a little group of six or seven men, encouraged by the acts of the Governor and of the President, drove from Munising, Mich., some 75 miles to Newberry and demanded that the lumber mill close. The workers had no grievances; they refused to leave their places of employment. The Munising men promised to return the following day. They did return, some 75 strong, again demanded that the local workers leave the plant, and, when they refused, they set upon John Sands, a C. I. O. member who desired to continue at his work, and sent him to the hospital with broken ribs.

Angered by this outrageous conduct, the mill workers and citizens who had been attracted to the scene quickly drove these lawless followers of the President and of Lewis beyond the city limits; and, so far, they have not returned.

So far the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee has not found time to go to the aid or lend its moral support to the Munising wreckers.

It was the Newberry workers and townspeople, worthy of their Revolutionary ancestors who fought the Redcoats at Lexington, who drove this mob of red Communists from their midst.

All praise to them, to their courage, to their fighting spirit, to their willingness to act rather than to talk. Citizens of Newberry, patriotic Americans of Michigan, of the Union, hail you as the Minute Men who, in Michigan at least, have turned back the invader.

STATE CAPITAL CAPTURED

With the connivance of Murphy, C. I. O. took, and for a day held, possession of Lansing, Michigan's capital, and invaded East Lansing, but their ringleaders there were thrown into the Cedar River by Michigan State College students, who prefer the doctrines of this country to those of "red" Russia and the complacent acquiescence of Murphy in their lawlessness.

C. I. O. DEMONSTRATES LACK OF HUMANITY

Let us look at the Saginaw Valley, on the eastern side of Michigan. No more peaceful, beautiful, prosperous spot exists anywhere in the Union. Rich in agricultural products, magnificent in its industrial development, with almost unlimited power supplied from its many streams, that part of our State, compared with the dust bowl of the Central West and the drought-stricken areas of other States, is a paradise for the thrifty, industrious, honest, decent citizen.

Electricity and the comforts and luxuries which have followed in its wake are available alike to rural and city dweller. Housewives use it in innumerable ways—ironing, cooking, the operation of incubators, the refrigeration of food. Light and power for household purposes were always available.

Farmers used the electricity to lighten their daily tasks, to shorten the hours of labor, to increase their income. In cities, factories were operated by it; fire protection was furnished; streets were lighted at night; people were enabled to eat fresh meat, fresh vegetables, because the markets had electricity. Hospitals cared for the sick and the dying because the hours of darkness were turned into light by the power companies.

In short and in fact, the whole existence of the community depended upon its ability to obtain electricity. And what happened? Lewis and his loud-mouthed, lawless creatures of revolution had demonstrated their power in Flint, in Detroit—not once but repeatedly, and so a group, dissatisfied with conditions, ignoring the rights of thousands of their fellowmen, shut off the current of the Consumers Power Co. because their demands were not complied with.

Take note of what happened. This crew of pirates kidnaped these power plants. Did it matter to them that food was spoiling in butcher shops, in refrigeration plants? Did they care that housewives were forced to discontinue the preparation of meals because the power was shut off? Were they concerned because motorists traveling through the country had difficulty in obtaining gasoline because it could no longer be pumped by electricity?

Did they think of the farmers and the farmer housewives whose work came to a standstill because they chose to strike and prevent anyone else from working?

Did they care because fire alarm and police alarm systems, upon which the citizens depended for protection, were thrown out of operation?

The milk in the household refrigerators, upon which the babies depended for health and even in some cases life itself, was spoiling. Were these C. I. O. strikers concerned about that?

The President and his associates talk much about their humanitarian principles and policies, but the people were deprived, not only of light, of heat, of fire and police protection, but babies were deprived of their food because the President of the United States stands back of John L. Lewis; because Murphy, of the Philippine Islands, does his bidding and follows his wishes; because the C. I. O. hails him as its sponsor and believes he views with approval its actions.

Go one step farther with me, if you will, and look into those hospitals in that district, dependent as they were upon electrical power for light, for the preparation of food, for the performance of surgical operations. The C. I. O. spellbinders talk much about the poor laboring man and his right to an American standard of living; but they, inhuman monsters that they are, turned off the current which furnished light which enabled doctors to perform operations which were necessary to promote health, to save life.

Go with me, if you will, for a moment as the evening shadows gather into a room in one of these hospitals, and it matters not, for the purpose of the argument, whether the scene be real or imaginary.

It is nighttime. Days of long suffering are about to draw to an end. Around that bed of a father, a mother, a daughter, or a son, are gathered the loved ones of the family. The last few moments of life are at hand. Soon the light which is feebly flickering in the eyes of the one to depart upon that last long journey will fade; soon the voice which has spoken words of cheer, of love, of affection, and of hope will be stilled forever. Those last few moments are precious—precious beyond price, and as the end approaches, as hand meets hand, and eye attempts to meet eye to catch a glimpse of a departing soul, the lights go out, and the loved one is gone—gone forever and gone in darkness, because someone pulled the switch in the power plant. The C. I. O. has pulled the switch in the power plant because of the orders of John L. Lewis, and Lewis acts with the knowledge and without a protest from the President.

Nero fiddled while Rome burned. The President sits in the White House, ponders his next vacation plans, contemplates new experiments while, throughout the land men, women, and children are ill-housed, ill-clothed, ill-nourished because he denies to men the exercise of their right to work.

The President should remember that words are but as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals. His actions, his failure to act, his violation of his constitutional oath of office, his refusal to uphold the laws of the United States which he has sworn to do, render him responsible for the "red" terror which has come to Michigan.

MONROE SHOWS THE WAY

On Sunday last, a dull, gloomy day, I stood at the entrance of an industrial plant in Monroe, Mich. Less than 3 miles away was the place of a mass meeting where, newspapers report, in the afternoon gathered from eight to twenty thousand C. I. O. sympathizers. Addressing that meeting, one Bittner, from Chicago, served notice upon the citizens of Monroe that in 2 days the C. I. O. would be back.

A few days before, 1,200 workers who for 2 weeks had been deprived of their jobs by 99 C. I. O. members, assisted by the townspeople, rushed the picket lines and went to work. This breaking of the picket line, this returning of peaceable, law-abiding citizens to their accustomed places of toil, would be designated by some organizations as an interference with civil liberties. To me, it seems like the assertion of the right to work.

To guard this factory, to protect these workers, citizens of Monroe have for several days, armed with clubs, shotguns, rifles, and machine guns, been on duty.

I noticed in particular two of these men. One, Leo Spade, treasurer of the Monroe Paper Products Co., and another, Howard Fashbaugh, vice president and secretary of the Greening Nursery Co.—neither in any way interested in the struck plant—had been on duty for 3 days and 3 nights, one getting but 9 hours' sleep, the other but 11.

Each of these men had served in the World War. Each was a Legionnaire; each, true to the traditions of the Legion, had answered when invasion threatened, when duty called. Armed with machine guns, they were prepared to resist, not only by words but by action, the invasion of their town. This they were compelled to do because the Governor of the State, the President of the Nation, had each failed to perform his duty.

Another, Ivor Ewing, a small man, weighing no more than 140 pounds, who, when a wreck from the ravages of tuberculosis, had been saved by the kindness of the mayor, had been almost continuously on duty since before the picket lines were broken. His boy, 26 years of age and a worker in the plant, had been crowded off the highway, injured by strikers who were determined he should not work. This father was fighting not only because of his gratitude to the mayor, who had saved him, but so that his son might work and live.

There were many, many others who rendered equal service and whose desire was but the preservation of their city, of their industrial plants, of the jobs of their workers.

Murphy, traitor to the State that he is, has refused to assist them. Apparently he is doing as he did at Flint, standing behind the lawlessness of the strikers; depriving the worker of his right, of his civil liberties, of his property—the only thing which many of them have—the right to use their hands in daily toil.

If Murphy had had his way, C. I. O. would today be in possession of Monroe and its industries. Fortunately for the people of Monroe and for the State of Michigan, Monroe has a mayor—Daniel A. Knaggs—just an ordinary, everyday American, a real friend of labor, the personal friend of many of the workers of the city.

When Monroe was invaded, when the law was set aside, Mayor Knaggs notified Murphy that, regardless of the inactivity of the State police or the National Guard, Monroe could and would protect itself, and to date it has kept its promise.

But Monroe, in its opposition to the militant forces of John L. Lewis, is confronted by an overwhelming task and it must have help. The Governor of our State has failed it. The Governor of our State has betrayed it. He is in active cooperation with the forces of disorder and of lawlessness.

Their acts of violence, their lawlessness, the success of their program to stop production at its source, has become so widespread in Michigan that the motor industry which gives employment to thousands upon thousands of workers, which has a pay roll of millions of dollars, may be forced to close, bringing economic hardship to thousands of innocent workers and businessmen.

PRESIDENT BETR'YS "THE FORGOTTEN MAN"

A President of the United States, voluble on all other subjects and at all other times, remains silent. Strange as it may seem, although he has time and time again spoken in behalf of the worker, pledged his every effort to the betterment of the worker's condition, won two elections upon the theory that he not only would guarantee the worker freedom from coercion but was sympathetic toward his troubles, today he has betrayed the worker, the toiler of America, into the hands of a dictator, John L. Lewis, who would drive him from his job unless he pays tribute.

It is almost inconceivable, nevertheless the facts seem to indicate, that the President of the United States intends to let this violence, this bloodshed, this rioting, this civil strife—all in violation of law—continue until the psychological moment arrives. Then he will call in the reporters and after lives have been sacrificed and untold suffering has been brought to our people, will boldly declare that the law must be obeyed, and so reap political prestige.

While "reds", under the leadership of Lewis, with the approval of the President and the active assistance of Michigan's Governor, go from place to place, by force and violence closing factories, hotels, places of business, depriving men of the means of supporting their wives and their children, we sit here, discuss tax evasion, the beautifying of one's personal appearance, and many other matters which are insignificant when compared with this one great vital issue which confronts us.

Mr. SACKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. No; unless the gentleman wants to ask me—and I do not suppose he does—about the milk in the refrigerators that those mothers up there in the Saginaw Valley were keeping for their babies when these fellows down below turned off the current.

Mr. SACKS. No. I would like to make an observation.

Mr. HOFFMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SACKS. I wanted to make this observation: I agree with the gentleman in some respects, but he forgets there are some wrongs being committed by those industrialists, too.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Undoubtedly the gentleman from Pennsylvania is right, but those sins are sins of the past, because those industrialists have not even been able to raise their voice in justifiable protest under this administration. Under the domination of Lewis they have had no opportunity to protest. Under the Wagner law, as interpreted by the National Labor Relations Board, protests from them are of no moment.

If we continue our inaction, if we fail to heed the danger signals which can be read on every side, if we fail to demand the enforcement of the law, if we fail to enact legislation that may be needed to protect the freedom, the liberty, of our citizens, then we have betrayed those who sent us here. I, for one, refuse to remain silent and inactive in this situation.

WOULD WRECK THE NATION

Lewis goes about the country practicing extortion, leaving ruin and destruction in his wake.

The morning papers tell us that, failing to close the plants of the Republic Steel Co., he intends to close coal mines; that he intends to shut down ore mines; to interfere with the Great Lakes shipping; in fact, we learn that, unless those who oppose his demand for a signed contract yield to him, he will bring economic and financial disaster to the whole country.

IT WOULD BE A FUTILE GESTURE

Now, what is it that this man Lewis wants? He demands a signed contract. And do you inquire as to why such a contract need not be signed?

Let me give you the answer. The signing of a contract with the C. I. O. is a futile act. In the first place, he demands that a responsible employer sign a contract with an irresponsible C. I. O. As I have pointed out, the C. I. O. is not a legal entity. An agreement signed by it could not be legally enforced. A contract must have two parties, each responsible to the other. Lewis is responsible to no one.

Employer organizations are responsible. The C. I. O. is not. I refer now to the legal aspect.

As a practical proposition, the signing of such a contract would mean nothing. General Motors signed a written contract and that contract provided that while it was in existence strikes should not be called, but within 60 days from the signing of that contract there were 50 strikes in General Motors and industries upon which it depended for operation, and strikes are still continuing.

The settlement forced by Murphy upon General Motors fixed but one thing, and that the conviction in the minds of the citizens of Michigan that he was the tool of Lewis and his Communist bedfellows.

Consumers Power Co. signed a written contract with the C. I. O., but the ink upon it was not dry before it was violated by the C. I. O. members.

It has been demonstrated time and again that those who march under Lewis' banner recognize neither legal nor moral obligations.

Nor is there any lawful basis for the demand that a written contract be signed by any employer. Lewis has no legal justification for his demand. Listen to this quotation from a letter written by Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER on November 2, 1935, and published in the New York Sun of November 4, 1935. Speaking of the Wagner law, he said:

> The law does not require any employer to sign any agreement of any kind. Congress has no power to impose such a requirement.

The question now before us is whether the command of Lewis shall be obeyed. Upon the Ten Commandments he has superimposed another. It is: "Thou shalt not work without the consent of John L. Lewis."

As stated a moment ago, the time for action has arrived. In common with all right-thinking Americans, I abhor violence and bloodshed.

When the international bankers and traders of the world brought about the last war, I was not eligible to be drafted. I did not enlist because I do not believe in sacrificing life to promote trade or advance financial or political interests and because I did not want to be shot. Many others were of like mind.

But today a different situation confronts us. Our liberties, our homes, the safety, and the lives of our loved ones are threatened and this is not an exaggeration.

My visit at Monroe convinced me that, unless we give aid and assistance to communities who are willing to fight for their liberties, we will all go down together to destruction.

A RED THREAT

A few days after the civil authorities at Monroe, under the leadership of Mayor Knaggs, had given protection to the workers who returned to their jobs, C. I. O. called a mass meeting on the outskirts of Monroe. Newspaper reporters estimated the crowd at from two to eight thousand. Addressing them, Bittner, C. I. O. agitator from Chicago, among other things, said:

> By God, they'll pay for what they did at Monroe, and pay well.
>
> I say to the people of Monroe, "If you and your Knaggs want to run your government as you are running, we'll block you off from the rest of the United States."
>
> Do they imagine they'll keep us out of Monroe forever? No. If it wasn't for our loyal workers, we'd leave them alone to starve in their own folly. But we'll bring our union in there and make decent citizens out of those hoodlums.

Reread this threat to peaceful, law-abiding citizens of Monroe, whose only offense was that they had insisted that men who wanted to work, rather than go upon relief rolls, should be permitted to work. It will be a wonderful blessing to the citizens of Monroe if a C. I. O. agitator never again comes within radio distance of their city.

Railroad trains, automobiles, are not speedy enough to carry these men from place to place. Lewis flies here and there and all over, and the object of his mission is to close factories or compel employers to do his will. Martin goes from town to town, city to city, and State to State, preaching the gospel of hate and of violence. The Reuthers, Victor and Walter, "red" Communists, and a dozen others who preach violence and who preach bloodshed, exhort workingmen to quit their jobs, join the army of unemployed, and establish a soviet government.

Stalin shoots those who disagree with him. Hitler has the heads of those who oppose him cut off. Mussolini sends the youth of his country to be slaughtered in foreign lands.

AN ANSWER TO THAT THREAT

In Porter Township, Cass County, Mich., is the farm my grandfather cut from the forest. By unceasing toil, by prudence, foresight, and self-denial, he saved it for my father. By like methods, it came on to me, and it is my intention that despite the intentions of Lewis and his ilk it shall go on to my children and my grandchildren.

On it there is an orchard which requires the labor of men in the gathering and packing of apples.

I do not want to be shot now. I do not want any trouble. I will never, if I can avoid it, enlist for any foreign war or do anything to bring about any foreign war or domestic strife. But when men come to Michigan, to my State, to my home, from other States, and, armed, invade it, then the hour has struck, and I am ready. I do not want to be a general, and I do not want to serve in the commissary department. I do not want to meet any of those poor deluded men who have been misled into acts of violence by Lewis, Homer Martin, the Reuthers, or any of those "red" Communists.

To Lewis, I say, if you think you can enforce your will in this land of freedom, come yourself and bring with you your Homer Martin, your Frankensteen, the Reuther boys, or any of the other of your gangsters, down to that farm in Michigan.

Leave your women and your children, behind whom your Communists so often hide, at home. Bring not with you some hired gangster from the slums of some great city; bring not with you some deluded worker who knows not what you would do to him and to this country of ours.

Come yourself to the scene of the disorder which you would create and bring with you your inciters of violence and disorder, and, for once in your life, do your own dirty work at the point of actual danger. Let me know the time of your arrival, and I will be there. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to our distinguished minority leader the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] such time as he may desire to use.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, I desire at this time simply to make a very short statement relative to the severe economic conditions which are confronting the dairy farmer of the northeastern part of the United States at the present time.

There is no doubt that some of the various activities of the Department of Agriculture, through the N. R. A., the A. A. A., and other alphabetical institutions, have been of benefit to some parts of the country and to farmers producing certain crops; but the man who has been a producer of milk in the northeastern section of the United States has received practically no benefit whatever. As a matter of fact, I think he is probably producing milk today under a greater handicap than ever before, although the dairy farmer at the present time produces about 25 percent of our agricultural income.

As a result of these various activities, the farmer in my section of the country, who, unfortunately, has to buy a large amount of his grain and other feed, is paying anywhere from 50 to 100 percent more than he did a short time ago for the grain which he is using to feed his cattle to produce milk, and there has been practically no rise in the price of milk products. I have never seen the substantial farmers of my section of the country so absolutely discouraged as they are at the present time, and a great many of them are men who own their own farms, live on them, and work them, and are trying to get a living off them for themselves and their families, and they do not belong to the class who are continually wanting the Government to do something for them. All these people want is fair opportunity to earn a living.

I think the situation can be summed up in a short statement a friend of mine who is a farmer made to me when I was home a few days ago. He is one of our substantial farmers. He owns his farm. He works, and works hard. I happended to meet him on the street, and he told me, "I am going out of the dairy business." I said, "Cap, that is rather peculiar. I thought you had a pretty good farm and were doing pretty well." He replied, "I have been discouraged for some time, but this morning I brought in a load of milk and sold it for $1.35 a hundred, and paid $2.46 a hundred pounds for a balanced ration to feed my cattle. You see, it just cannot be done, and I am going to start disposing of my dairy immediately on my return home."

These are not men who are asking for any help. They do not want the Government to support them. They do not want anybody to support them. However, unless they can make a decent living by working hard all day 7 days a week, even strong men are going to break down and quit.

I wish I knew the answer. I am frank to say I do not know it; but I have one or two suggestions which I know would help the dairy interests of our section of the country. There is no question but what the reciprocal-trade treaties and the reduction of duty on various dairy products have been a serious drawback. I am going to extend my remarks and include in the extension a comparison of the imports and exports of dairy products for the last 4 or 5 years. It is really surprising to find how the imports have increased. As a matter of fact, as nearly as I can understand the situation, the result of the reciprocal-trade agreements has been much more in favor of the foreign farmer than in favor of the American farmer in the northeastern part of the United States.

Mr. HARLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to my friend the gentleman from Ohio. I am waiting for information.

Mr. HARLAN. I am wondering if the gentleman is including in his extension the imports of farm produce, which, of course, would be very interesting information. Would the gentleman also include the exports of dairy products especially and other farm produce since reciprocity has gone into effect?

Mr. SNELL. My investigation was confined entirely to dairy products, but in my extension of remarks I shall include the exports of dairy products as well as the imports. This is the special object of my remarks at the present time. Our people in the northeastern part of New York State depend for a living very largely on the dairy farmer. If the dairyman does not get a reasonable price for his products, it is a pretty slim situation from an economic standpoint for all our people. We have no large manufacturers. We have very little to bring money there except the sale of dairy products.

Mr. GREEVER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Certainly.

Mr. GREEVER. Do I correctly understand the gentleman to say $1.35 a hundred is the prevailing price in his district for milk at the present time?

Mr. SNELL. That was the price of his milk. I cannot say whether it was the price of the Dairymen League, Shef-field's, or Borden's, or to which factory this man was taking his milk. He told me, "The price of my milk this morning was $1.35, and I paid $2.46 a hundred for feed for my cattle, and I cannot afford to do it."

Mr. GREEVER. The reason I ask the gentleman that question is because in the Rocky Mountain section of the country at the present time it seems the price of dairy products is much better than it has been for some time.

Mr. SNELL. There is no material change in prices in the northeastern part of the United States. Of course, some people who have higher-test milk may have received more than $1.35, but for the average grade that is what they have received.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. BOILEAU. I would like to support the statement of the gentleman from New York. While I do not have recent figures in the dairy section of Wisconsin, $1.35 seems to be in line with the prices we are getting for fluid milk sold to manufacturing plants.

Mr. SNELL. This man told me about this last week and I know he was telling the truth.

Mr. BOILEAU. And I may say further with regard to the statement that dairy prices are going up, within the last few weeks dairy prices have gone down materially because of the seasonal situation. As soon as the farmer gets a large supply of milk which goes into cheese or butter, the price invariably goes down.

Mr. SNELL. There has been no material rise in prices in the last year or two so far as dairy products are concerned.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. THURSTON. If the Democratic Members had voted for my amendment last week, increasing the duty 25 percent on farm products, including dairy products, we would have benefited the situation of the farmer. All the Republicans voted for my amendment, and all Democrats, except two, voted against this aid for the farmer.

Mr. SNELL. Well, I did. I am in favor of anything that will help them out, but I am especially interested in helping them out from the tariff standpoint; this is the most effective of anything we have yet tried. Before these reductions in tariff, imports were comparatively small.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. I am very much interested in the remarks of the gentleman because he has had experience, particularly in the cheese business, if I am not mistaken. I represent, perhaps, one of the richest dairying districts in the United States. Our price of milk has dropped, while the price of agricultural machinery has risen 8 percent during the time of the drop. My colleague the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] just referred to the fact that there has been a seasonal slump. There should not be a seasonal slump at this time, because your grass is better than it is at any other season of the year; but we are subject to the manipulations of the large processors who use the Canadian reciprocal-trade agreement to hammer down our prices.

Mr. SNELL. That is along the line of my suggestion that there is one thing I am quite sure of and that is that the Canadian agreement has really been a real detriment to the farmers in my section of the country.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. Let me say to the gentleman from New York that there has been a decline in all agricultural commodities and it is not due to seasonal conditions——

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman let me interrupt him right there, and then I will let the gentleman continue? If you compare the price of milk 3 or 4 years ago with the price of cotton 3 or 4 years ago, you can see how you come out. Your price of cotton has gone up 200 percent, because the gentleman told me so yesterday, and the price of milk remains practically the same.

Mr. RANKIN. Who told the gentleman that?

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman told me that himself. The gentleman said the price of cotton had gone up to 12 cents, whereas it was 5 and 6 cents a few years ago.

Mr. RANKIN. Cotton is now selling at the same price it was selling during the Taft administration.

Mr. SNELL. We were talking about prices in recent times, not ancient history. I am talking about present conditions.

Mr. RANKIN. There has been a decline in all agricultural commodities which has been due to contraction of the currency.

Mr. SNELL. Let us not get into a discussion of that question. I do not yield for that.

Mr. RANKIN. Raising rediscount rates and squeezing the currency are bringing about a decline in prices.

Mr. SNELL. I do not yield further, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman asked for information and I am giving it to him.

Mr. SNELL. I do not yield for a speech on that subject. I would like some information that I can understand. I am discussing a practical situation, not a theoretical one.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. REED of New York. Here is what we are up against in the matter of imports. There are several countries organized for export business, and exclusively for export business. We may take New Zealand or Denmark, for instance, and every time our farmers begin to see a glimmer of hope because prices are stepping up, just at that time these export countries begin subsidizing.

The farmers are subsidized and shipping is subsidized for people who produce for export and they glut our markets just in time to break the market. So we have no chance whatever as long as these foreign exporters are sending their products in here in competition with our dairy people.

Mr. SNELL. I simply wish to say that while we are giving consideration to a great many classes of people, we must, in the near future, give consideration to the hard-working, honest dairy farmer, who is now about ready to quit. These are real, genuine American citizens who have performed the work of this country for centuries and they are willing to work and want to work, but you will have them on the relief rolls unless some way can be devised whereby we can increase the price of dairy products and do away with some of the competition that comes into this country at the present time.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield to my friend from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I notice that the report issued by the Department of Agriculture on June 12, 1937, shows that in the last 10 months our exports of farm products have decreased $35,000,000 below the same period for last year.

Mr. SNELL. I have a long list of figures which I am going to put in the RECORD as an extension of my remarks.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. And our imports have increased $280,000,000. I was in Kentucky the other day and I noticed a report along this line in the Kentucky papers. Louisville is one of the receiving ports and the statement showed an increase of collections at that port of $124,000,000 for May over May of last year, an increase of 200 percent, and the report went on to recite what had brought this about.

It was the import of malt, and the import of cottonseed oil to Louisville, Ky., the greatest farm country in the world.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me this whole subject is important enough for Congress to give it very serious consideration. Notwithstanding I am a protective-tariff man, with all propositions, my position has always been that we should give protection enough to protect the American farmer so that he can raise the foodstuffs that are necessary to feed our own population. I stand for that first, last, and all the time, and I am opposed to these tremendously large imports that are coming in very largely on account of the policy of the administration in connection with the restriction of growth of products and the reciprocal-tariff agreements.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. What has the Governor and the legislature in the gentleman's own State and my State done on this very question?

Mr. SNELL. If I had 2 hours, and I knew more about it than I do, I could not tell the gentleman. It is very complicated, but they have never come to any agreement. The fact that the reciprocal-trade agreements let large imports of these very products in at reduced rates is something that the gentleman and I and every other man can understand. We have the figures from the Department to prove our statements.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Will the gentleman put them into the RECORD?

Mr. SNELL. I shall be very glad to put them into the RECORD in my extension.

Mr. RICH. When we adopted the Bankhead Cotton Act several years ago we lost our foreign markets in cotton. Today the farmers of the South are increasing their dairy products because they have lost their cotton market, and that, with the reciprocal-trade agreements, provides one reason why the dairy farmers of the North are unable to find a market for their products.

Mr. SNELL. I think a certain part of the statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania may be true. I have no opposition to the men in the South producing dairy products if they so desire. They are a part of this country. I did oppose taking land out of cotton and other agricultural products and allowing it to produce dairy products when we were paying these people to let their land lie idle; but if the South, the West, or any other part of the United States want to go into the dairy business, they have a perfect right to do so. I am speaking for the entire dairy interests of the country, which I am sure are pretty nearly done for under the present economic conditions.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. DIES. I call attention to the fact that the Federal Treasury is purchasing gold at the rate of $1,500,000,000——

Mr. SNELL. Oh, let us not get into the gold proposition. I am merely talking about some dairy matters that the average man can understand. I do not think many of us understand the "hifalutin" gold situation. I have not any gold, and I am sure that none of the farmers in the Thirty-first Congressional District of New York has any.

Mr. DIES. I was going to say to the gentleman that what is happening is that they are swapping us gold and sending in imports also.

Mr. SNELL. I am against these imports, especially at this time, of dairy products. I have always voted against these imports at all times during my service here.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein some tables to which I have referred in my statement.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SNELL. In the face of mounting dairy imports, in the face of tremendous amounts of butter, cheese, cattle, milk, and oil substitutes pouring into this country from Canada, Mexico, and other foreign countries, the administration took an added slap at the dairy industry.

IMPORTS GROWING—TARIFF REDUCED

Late in 1934 and in 1935 imports began to grow, but the administration placed in effect January 1, 1936, tariff reductions on cattle and dairy products to help swell the totals and they will not change them. Why?

TARIFF POWER TO PRESIDENT AND HULL

The tariff-making power belongs to the Congress, but in your great wisdom you turned over to the President the tariff-making power, and he is very pleasantly sharing it with Secretary Hull, altruistic, at least, if not a free trader de luxe. Hardly had the President been given this tariff power before down went the tariff on agricultural products, especially those of the dairy. Included were cattle, cheese, cream, and oil substitutes, which were bound on the free list.

WASHINGTON RINGS WITH PROTESTS

Washington rings with protests from dairy organizations, but the administration keeps on forgetting. Secretary Hull says it will promote peace—peace with babassu nuts.

HAS $50,000,000 DAIRY IMPORTS

And what has happened? In 1935 and 1936 this country has imported $50,000,000 in dairy products and cattle. In the same 2 years this country exported $10,000,000 in dairy products and cattle. Is not that nice for the neighbors and is it a drop in the bucket?

YEAR 1935 DAIRY IMPORTS $23,527,691

In 1935 we imported dairy products, including cream, milk, condensed milk, dried and malted milk, butter, and cheese, valued at $15,000,570, and cattle valued at $8,527,121, making a total of $23,527,691.

YEAR 1935 DAIRY EXPORTS $5,804,343

In 1935 this country exported dairy products valued at $4,533,019 and cattle valued at $271,324, making a total of $5,804,343.

YEAR 1936 DAIRY IMPORTS $26,811,184

In 1936 this country imported dairy products valued at $16,102,954 and cattle valued at $10,708,230, making a total of $26,811,184.

YEAR 1936 DAIRY EXPORTS $4,455,010

In 1936 we exported dairy products valued at $4,114,578 and cattle valued at $340,432, making a total of $4,455,010. Is this the right kind of reciprocity?

YEAR 1937 LOOKS LIKE BANNER IMPORT YEAR

Reports of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce indicate 1937 is to be a banner import year. The reports for the first quarter show this.

HUGE CATTLE IMPORTS

In 1936 this country imported 399,113 head of cattle, valued at $10,708,230, the tariff reduction of 50 percent being effective January 1, 1936. Parenthetically speaking, this country imported only 59,000 head of cattle in 1934, valued at $616,000.

In 1936 this country exported or sold in foreign countries 4,240 head of cattle—about half for breeding—valued at $340,431.

In this little transaction the United States got the lesser end by some $10,000,000 and the tariff reduction by the President helped the other fellow.

WE BUY 60,000,000 POUNDS OF CHEESE

In 1936 this country imported 59,848,896 pounds of cheese, including Swiss, about 11,000,000 pounds more than in 1935. The value of the 1936 cheese imports was $12,716,795. The administration boosted this along with a decrease in the tariff on cheese from 7 to 5 cents a pound, effective January 1, 1936, although cheese imports were high in 1934 and 1935.

In 1936 this country exported 1,136,208 pounds of cheese, valued at $267,489. In 1935 the exports were about the same. In that little deal we took a loss of $12,000,000.

BUTTER IMPORTS, 32,000,000 POUNDS, 1935–36

In 1935 this country imported 22,674,642 pounds of butter, valued at $3,576,942.

In 1935 this country exported 957,701 pounds of butter, valued at $246,920.

In 1936 this country imported 9,874,005 pounds of butter, valued at $2,015,660.

In 1936 this country exported 825,934 pounds of butter, valued at $266,858. We took the count on butter in quite a tidy little sum.

In addition to all of this we imported in 1936 some 24,583,855 pounds of dried and malted milk, although in 1934 we imported only 6,000 pounds of dried and malted milk.

Is not that splendid cooperation for the benefit of our neighbors? The dairy industry is certainly helping in the Hull peace program; the dairy cow is for more peace.

COW DOES SOMETHING ABOUT IT

Secretary Hull talks of peace and says the reduced tariffs on dairy products and other agricultural products will help it along. We are all very seriously for peace; we are striving hard for it. Some of us do not see just how governmental sacrificing of agriculture will promote peace. The meek and humble cow has long been for peace, is almost symbolic of peace, but the difference is that the cow does something about it.

BLASTS AT DAIRY INDUSTRY

This is what the administration did to the dairy industry:

First. Reduced tariff on dairy cows coming into this country 50 percent.

Second. Reduced tariff on cheese from 7 to 5 cents a pound.

Third. Reduced tariff on cream.

Fourth. Bound palm oils on free list.

Fifth. Provided payments for placing staple crops in grasses and legumes, thus increasing pasture and feed, paving way for increasing milk supply.

CANADIAN TRADE AGREEMENT

In the reciprocal-trade agreement with Canada, which under the most-favored-nation clause applies to all countries except Germany and Australia—all other countries get the same reductions—the administration reduced the tariff on dairy cattle weighing over 700 pounds coming into this country from Canada from 3 to 1½ cents a pound. The reduction on other cattle was reduced from 3 to 2 cents a pound, a wallop at the livestock industry. Quota restrictions were provided, but the imports grew.

CATTLE IMPORTS HEAVY IN 1935

Canadian cattle and cattle from Mexico began coming into this country in 1935 as a result of the Roosevelt scarcity program, but in spite of that the administration went ahead and reduced the tariff on cattle effective in 1936.

HAD $10,000,000 IMPORTS IN 1936

In all of 1934 this country imported 59,000 head of cattle, valued at $616,000.

In all of 1936 this country imported 399,113 head of cattle, valued at $10,708,230.

In the first 3 months of 1937 this country has imported 142,149 head of cattle, valued at $4,626,391, so that barring accidents and the placing of tariff-making power back with Congress where it belongs, the total for 1937 should be huge, reaching maybe $15,000,000.

HOW WE HELPED THE NEIGHBORS

Here is a table showing how and to what extent we helped our neighbors in the cattle business:

Year	Number imported	Value
1931	85,000	$1,852,000
1932	98,600	1,499,000
1933	65,000	584,000
1934	59,000	616,000
1935	364,623	8,497,117
1936	399,113	10,708,230

In other words, since the Roosevelt policy of scarcity and tariff reduction has been in force, we have gone for $20,000,000 in foreign cattle.

HOW ABOUT THE CATTLE WE SOLD?

Now, for exports, the cattle we sold to these countries which were shipping to us. In all of 1935 we exported 3,348 head of cattle, valued at $271,324, including cattle for breeding.

In all of 1936 this country exported 4,420 head of cattle, valued at $340,432. About half were for breeding.

That is not much percentage for the United States of America.

BUTTER IMPORTS JUMP

Back in 1933 this country imported 899,000 pounds of butter, but in the last 3 years we have gone into millions in butter imports. For the first 3 months of 1937 we imported 7,839,517 pounds of butter, valued at $1,609,404. Looks like 1937 will eclipse 1935, a banner importing year, with its more than 22,000,000 pounds. Nineteen hundred and thirty-seven may show 30,000,000 pounds. That would take care of quite a lot of our surplus milk, but it is great for the neighbors. Butter is coming to us from Belgium, Denmark, New Zealand, Estonia, Greece, Latvia, Canada, Russia, Lithuania, the Netherlands, Cuba, and the Argentine.

BUYING OUR CHEESE ABROAD

Imports and exports of cheese tell the same story. The reduction in the tariff produced great results—for the foreign producer. In the first quarter of 1937 this country imported 13,027,897 pounds of cheese, valued at $2,523,160. At this rate our 1937 imports ought to trim the 1936 total of 60,000,000 pounds.

CREAM IMPORTS INCREASE

In 1935, before the tariff reduction on cream coming here from other countries was reduced from 56.6 cents a gallon to 35 cents a gallon, we imported 793 gallons. In 1936 this country imported 44,396 gallons of cream, valued at $65,380. They seem to be beginning on cream.

FOREIGN TRADE BUILD-UP

When the autocratic proposal was made that Congress turn over to the President the tariff-making power it was declared that the administration wanted to build up our foreign trade. Well, that is building up foreign trade for the dairymen abroad and taking it away from our own dairymen. The Tariff Commission is still a nervous wallflower; the star chamber is still the same star chamber. The National Grange has demanded the repeal of the whole Reciprocal Tariff Act if trade agreements reducing the tariff on agricultural products coming here from other countries were not rescinded. Still the same program goes forward, reducing, reducing, reducing; still the same star chamber.

PALM OILS

Palm oils, especially the oil of babassu nuts, is used in making substitutes for butter and take the place of fats produced on our farms. The administration bound such oils on the free list. National dairy organizations protested. But without avail; still the oils pour into our markets. Dairymen know what they do to the dairy business, and some people think they are not soothing to the great American stomach, but still they come.

NEARLY 300,000,000 POUNDS

In 1936 this country imported 338,788,706 pounds of palm oil, valued at $12,225,642; in 1935, 296,502,422 pounds, valued at $8,541,658. In the first 3 months of 1937 we imported 29,584,148 pounds of babassu nuts and 300,000 pounds of babassu oil.

Maybe we should change our slogan of "Buy American" to "Good-by America."

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

ONLY FINLAND PAYS

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, for the fifth consecutive time all the debtor nations of Europe, save Finland, have today defaulted on their payments to the American Government in the aggregate sum of $205,000,000, which should be an insignificant item for such rich countries as Great Britain, France, Italy, and Belgium, each one of whom is spending several times that amount every year in preparing for the next war. The total amount now in default is about $1,526,000,000, which the American taxpayer has had to dig up out of his own jeans.

June 15 is now known as "default day", but in order to spare the feeling of our debtors, who tell us they would pay if they could, I have today introduced a resolution changing the name from "default day" to "keep-out-of-war day." I would have June 15 set aside as a legal holiday to give the American people an opportunity to reflect upon how they were played for suckers back in 1917, when we very foolishly went to Europe to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the Allies under the hallucination that we were going to make the world safe for democracy.

Mr. Chairman, I would set June 15 aside as a day when we should reflect upon the futility of war. On that day we should hold parades in every city in the land, and I would only permit to participate in such parades the blind and the maimed veterans, gold-star mothers and fathers, and Boy Scouts carrying white crosses commemorating the memories of those who made the supreme sacrifice. The only sound would be that of stumbling feet marching to the time of muffled drums. I would have the exercises in charge of veterans' organizations, their auxiliaries, and gold-star mothers and fathers. The addresses should be delivered by those who have been in actual contact with war and its horrors.

Mr. Chairman, the time has come to put the American people on their guard against the subtle propaganda that is now being sprayed over the Nation like poison gas by several nations with which we were associated during the World War.

One can hardly pick up a paper today without finding some subtle propaganda that is intended to inflame the passions of our people. Even the patent insides of the lowliest country weekly is not free from this poison.

Members of the House, no major war can be waged for long without the American market to draw upon. That being the case, we should pass a neutrality law, such as I introduced on yesterday, which would place an absolute embargo on all shipments from this country in time of war. If we had had such a law back in 1914 I doubt if the World War would ever have broken out. Certainly it would have been of short duration. Oh, I know that there are those who will talk about the freedom of the seas and the rights of our ships to sail the seven seas. Yes, I grant that. I also grant that we have freedom of the streets when a riot is going on. However, none but the foolhardy would stand upon his rights at such a time except it be in defense of law and order.

My friends, let us on this "default day" dedicate ourselves anew to the principle that we will not again allow ourselves to be duped by Europe. Let us think only in terms of America, for in that direction lies eternal peace.

In closing, let me say all honor to little Finland, the country poorest in resources but richest in her regard for her sacred word of honor. The statesmen and the citizens of the defaulting countries should hang their heads in shame whenever they think of little Finland and her honorable record. [Applause.]

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. WITHROW].

Mr. WITHROW. Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time to speak in support of House Joint Resolution 389, introduced by myself, calling for an investigation by the Federal Trade Commission of the relations between automobile manufacturers and their retailing dealers. I am informed by those who know best that out of those relations has grown a condition that is harmful to the consuming public and to the greatest of our American industries.

I have before me a resolution adopted by the legislature of my State, Wisconsin, requesting such an investigation, and which is the result of some 2 years of attempts by State authorities to curb some of the retailing practices of the automobile industry that are harmful to the consuming public. I assure you the State agency and the officials who urge the inquiry know whereof they speak. The resolution is as follows:

Whereas the banking commission, in administering chapter 218.01 of the Wisconsin statutes, a law licensing automobile dealers, automobile salesmen, and automobile finance companies, has found many inequities and abuses in automobile factory-automobile dealer relations which vitally affect the consuming public; and

Whereas the trade-practice commission in its findings of fact of conditions in the automobile retailing trade has found automobile factory-automobile dealer relations responsible for many of the existing unethical cutthroat competitive practices so harmful to the consuming public; and

Whereas some of this automobile manufacturer-automobile dealer relationship, because of its interstate character, is beyond the direct control of the banking commission, the trade-practice commission, and the State of Wisconsin: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, both Houses of Congress, and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

Adding to our background of information is a letter I have in hand from the National Automobile Dealers' Association, which I will read, as follows:

DEAR CONGRESSMAN WITHROW: We have recently learned of the resolution in the House of Representatives introduced by yourself, and of a similar resolution introduced by your associate, Congressman HARRY SAUTHOFF, of Wisconsin, which resolutions authorize and direct an investigation of the procedure employed in the distribution of motor vehicles and the relationship between automobile manufacturers and their dealers, particularly insofar as these procedures and this relationship affect the public interest.

A business which has grown as rapidly and to such immense proportions as the automobile business affects the daily lives and well-being of millions of the citizens of this country. Practices employed by any division of an important industry also have an adverse influence upon public welfare.

For many years the automobile dealers of America have complained of policies pursued by manufacturers which, in their opinion, were inequitable. The N. A. D. A. on numerous occasions during the past several years has called the industry's attention to these problems, has suggested reforms, and has made many constructive recommendations relative thereto.

The high mortality rate of automobile dealers during the past 15 years indicates that conditions are not as they should be. It is alleged that the practices and policies employed by automobile manufacturers have resulted in the dissipation of a tremendous amount of dealer capital; that coercion has been used by the factories in requiring the dealers to make purchases and employ practices which are unprofitable and uneconomical; that automobile-dealer selling agreements have been canceled without cause; that sales have been forced beyond all reason by the manufacturers; and that the retailers have made very little profit during this period, while the manufacturers have made a tremendous amount of money.

An investigation such as you propose would doubtless bring to light the actual conditions which exist in this industry.

We are aware of the fact that there is more restlessness and dissatisfaction existing today among automobile dealers than at any time in the history of the business. Although the public is receiving greater value for the dollar spent for motor vehicles than ever before, although the factory worker is being paid more than at any time in history, many dealers are enjoying a "profitless" prosperity, due principally to competitive conditions created by the manufacturer and over which the dealer or the individual manufacturer has no control.

It is surprising to many people to know that there is more money invested and more people employed in the retailing of motor vehicles than there is in the manufacture of motor cars. This emphasizes the importance of this entire subject.

In our opinion, the great majority of the 40,000 and more motor-vehicle dealers of America welcome this investigation and feel that it will be helpful to both the public and to the industry.

Very truly yours,

E. M. LIED,
President, National Automobile Dealers' Association.

I know that unrest among the automobile dealers has been growing at the same rate as they have seen their investments disappear, as they have seen the manufacturers' net profits increase, and as they have experienced competition in the industry become so intense that they are now desperate to find means of self-preservation.

It is recognized by men in the retailing outlets, who have seen their fellow dealers come and quickly go, that there is an unreasonably high mortality among them. There is not available to my knowledge definite national figures except totals compiled by the Chilton Trade List for the years back to and including 1927, when the number of dealers was given as 51,440. This increased a few hundred in 1928, and started to drop steadily in following years until it was 34,129 in 1934, gained in 1935 and reached the total of 41,278 in 1936. In these figures we find a loss of some 17,000 dealers but it undoubtedly was much greater because of new dealers and new capital constantly coming into the picture to replace those disappearing.

In some cities telephone directories for some years have been checked to determine the mortality rate. Such experience proves conclusively that 25 percent of the dealers disappear from the business each year. It was cited at the last convention of the National Automobile Dealers Association that in Baltimore, a city of more than 800,000 population, there were only two dealers remaining among those who originally comprised the dealers association of that city.

It is also asserted by members of the automobile retailing trade who have been in the business some years that a high percentage of the dealers would be insolvent if liquidated. Some definite records of automobile finance companies bear this out.

A few years ago the dealer put his own capital in the business but as the years passed continual losses, it is alleged, under conditions over which they have no control, have caused the loss or withdrawal of such individual capital. At least it no longer is in the retailing automobile business.

Today the dealers generally look to the finance companies to "floor plan" or finance their stocks of new cars. According to the National Association of Sales Finance Companies the amount of money it is now necessary to loan to dealers on their new and used car stocks in order for the dealers to continue in business has grown from $677,700,000 in 1929 to $1,703,600,000 in 1936.

This means that in 1929, the high year in new passenger car and truck registrations, with a total of 4,407,263 new units, the dealers required only about one-third as much outside capital as they did last year, when registrations were 3,911,220 units, almost 500,000 less units than in 1929.

Shall we say from this factual data that the difference between what they borrowed from the finance companies or banks in 1929, and what they had to borrow in 1936 to remain in business, represents approximately how much of their own, individual capital they had lost in those intervening years? That difference is $1,025,900,000. If they did not actually lose it, they certainly did not employ it in their business. Why? It is alleged that the cause lies in bad-trade practices and the fact that the manufacturer can cancel their franchises at will.

Another significant fact is seen in these figures. Do they not indicate that the more cars a dealer sells the larger become his losses, and the more profit the manufacturer makes? That is an allegation that is freely and generally made, and trade surveys have shown it to be true.

What is the cause? It is predicted that an investigation will show that one of the problems which the dealers are helpless to correct under existing conditions is the fact that the manufacturer, in order to increase his volume of production, often forces his dealers, under the implied threat of canceling the dealer's franchise, to accept and pay cash for an unreasonable amount of new cars and accessories that both know must be disposed of at an ultimate loss to the dealers.

I will explain how some of the losses occur, but time will not permit going thoroughly into that subject here. One of the practices, I am told, is for the manufacturer to unload cars on his dealers at the end of the production year and just before the introduction of new models. The dealer's capital is tied up in such stocks, which become obsolete and in order for him to stock up on the new models for which he must pay cash, he slashes prices on the obsolete stock, overallows on used-car trade-ins and takes the loss.

One of the matters which first engrossed the attention of the interim committee of the Wisconsin Legislature, which in 1933 started an investigation of the automobile dealers' relations in the State of Wisconsin, was the matter of dealer franchises. These contracts in the past have been very much one-sided. In many instances there have been clauses which compel the dealer to accept whatever merchandise, consisting of automobiles and accessories, the factory deemed proper in its discretion. Another clause puts the entire control of the dealer's business in the hands of the factory, and under its powers the factories have been in the habit of ordering the dealer to put in expensive racks for the purpose of holding nuts and bolts or other accessories. Many times this has occasioned a great deal of expense on the part of the dealer which could hardly be afforded.

Another provision of these contracts usually cancels on short term. That is, 30 days, even though the dealer may be tied up for a period of 5 or 6 years. In short, under these contracts the dealer has practically no rights whatsoever, and, of course, the factory really has a life or death proposition so far as the dealer is concerned, especially when that dealer has over a term of years built up a lucrative business.

Now, starting with this sort of a contract as a basis of operation, you can readily see the power which the factory has over its dealers. A careful count is made of the number of automobiles sold by each dealer each week. Of course, the cutthroat competition exists largely between the big three, and if the Plymouth dealer in a given territory falls below the Ford for a week, say in the matter of three sales, immediately the Plymouth dealer is called on the mat. This practice has gone so far in certain localities that dealers have resorted to fraud, misrepresentation, and even actual forgery for the purpose of getting sales. This factory pressure also leads to price cutting, overallowances on used cars, and then, staring actual bankruptcy in the face over a period of time, the dealer resorts to packing the finance charges. There have been instances where, on top of a reasonable finance charge for a period of 12 months or 18 months, there has been added to this a dealer participation as high as $67.

There has apparently been no attempt on the part of most of the factories during the past few years to attempt to build up quality dealers in a given territory. But, on the other hand, there has been a program which has been merciless to say the least. For instance, the factory representative time and time again has contacted a dealer in a particular locality who has a certain amount of capital, and usually the dealer is selected not because of his fairness nor his merchandising ability, but because he has capital to invest in automobiles and accessories. A huge factory production has been built up because this fortunate business demanded cash on the line and therefore it is the policy to seek the man with capital regardless of his ability as a merchandiser. In a few short years, usually about 3, this new dealer finds himself in serious difficulties. His capital has resolved itself into a bunch of used cars and his credit is destroyed at the bank. When the factory representative determines that this particular individual has no more money to invest in automobiles and accessories, then he immediately tries to contact other prospects with capital and proceeds to cancel out the dealer whose cash he has already absorbed, many times leaving him in a serious predicament, tied up with a long-term lease and staring actual bankruptcy in the face. Oftentimes, too, this canceled dealer leaves the public in the lurch; that is to say, he has accepted cars in exchange as well as cash and cannot deliver new cars nor return the old ones, so that there is an actual loss to the public.

In many instances under these kinds of cancelations no provision is made whatever to relieve the old dealer of his used cars or his accessories and service equipment.

During the past year of 1936, taking the dealers as an average over the country, there was a loss of $7.10 for each car the dealer sold. This condition could only continue to exist in a business like the automotive trade, because there has grown up a practice in the handling of automobiles known as dealer participations in finance charges. This is probably the only reason the vast body of dealers have been able to "get by." On account of the overcrowding of dealers in a given territory by factory representatives, a deplorable condition has arisen. The good dealer who has been a real businessman in his community has rarely been able to satisfy his factory demands. The minute the factory sees that this particular individual has made a little money it is the custom to put other dealers handling the same make of car in his territory. This, of course, cuts down the profit of the legitimate, honest dealer, and in many instances has ruined him.

These deplorable conditions have compelled the automobile dealer today to live not on his discounts which he receives for selling cars because he is under such pressure that he is not able to retain any of the discounts, being compelled to give over-allowances for used automobiles, but on his dealer participation. In other words, the finance charge for the carrying of unpaid balances has been by general custom increased in order that the dealer might live from the burden of increased finance charges upon the public and not from the commissions which he should receive from the factory.

Let us not lose sight of the significant fact that back in 1929, when the volume of sales was the greatest in the history of the industry, the dealers handled their business with two-thirds less outside capital than they did last year with a less volume of sales. From a public consumer standpoint, is it not true that when bad trade practices drive out private capital, and any fly-by-night Tom, Dick, or Harry can get into the business as a gamble on some finance company's capital, that the standards of that trade are lowered, and the consumer is sure to suffer discrimination and other bad effects of vicious competition?

The whole theory of automobile financing has changed in a few years, and problems that are new and as yet unsolved, have arisen. This industry is a young giant whose stride forward within a very few decades has carried it beyond itself so far as its merchandising problems are concerned. Where other industries have progressed slowly but surely through many years, the automobile industry has had to hurdle, and leave unsolved, much of its merchandising difficulties that now approach fatal proportions. This has been due to fine engineering skill and improvement of the product, and extension of splendid highways, and the ever-increasing demand of the public for that product.

Before 1928 the dealer required little if any outside capital to run his business. His sales were made chiefly in the spring and summer months. The cars were the open or touring type. In those days the dealer might borrow a little money from his bank to carry some new cars through the winter, when the public could not use them and did not buy very many.

Then the closed car that the public could use the year around was produced.

Sales increased in the winter months. Before that there were no used-car problems. Today it is the crux of the whole situation. Then the merchant did not have to borrow money to finance a used car taken in trade in lieu of cash as part payment on a new car. According to factual data recently published by the National Association of Finance Companies, the percentage of wholesale dollars to new retail dollars in 1936 was 154. This means that the dealer must get outside financing at the rate of 154 percent for each new-car sale, or, in other words, if he takes a new car and must pay cash in full, say $600 wholesale, he must borrow $900 to finance the deal. First he must take in a used car as part payment, which ties up working capital. Usually when he does sell that used car taken in trade, he must take in another used car as part payment on the first. In 1929, the peak year, the rate was 60 percent.

Now, the dealers are constantly called upon by the manufacturers to obtain greater volume of sales, which to the dealer means greater used-car stocks on hand, capital tied up, and outside financing of both new and used-car stocks. The ratio of used cars to each new-car deal, as shown by a national survey of N. A. D. A. in 1935, is 1.75 used cars to each new-car sale. A 1937 survey shows the ratio now to be, for the dealers reporting in the survey, 1.67 used cars to each new-car sale.

The same survey showed that used-car losses are so tremendous that they more than offset the gross profit made on new automobiles. For example, in 1935, the reporting dealers lost $8.59 per new unit sold, when all expenses, losses, and all profits from finance reserves, service departments, and other sources are compared.

In the retail financing or installment buying the consuming public often is harmed according to evidence found in administering the Wisconsin licensing law, and as indicated by agreements being promoted by various automobile trade associations and the better finance companies in attempts to check the evil known as "finance packs."

The intense competition forced upon the dealer causes the dealer to allow a customer more for his trade-in used car than he can possibly get back in resale after proper reconditioning.

According to the N. A. D. A. analysis of surveys, dealers have failed to make a profit in their new- and used-car departments combined in any year in the last 10.

How do they survive? Remember, 25 percent is the estimated turnover of dealers per year. Then most of them make profit out of their service and repair department. Others stay a few years until their capital is gone. There is a profit in the dealer's finance reserve or rebate he gets from the finance company for the installment business, and there is the "finance pack", or an added amount above what is required or is right for the finance carrying charge, and which the customer pays with his installments on the car purchase.

Where does the automobile dealer's capital finally go? What eventually becomes of the dissipated discount on the new-car sales? Is it not obvious that when he loses money in the intense competition to increase the manufacturer's volume of production, that the dealer's losses in the new- and used-car departments finally find a resting place in the huge salaries and gigantic net profits of those manufacturers?

According to Barron's National Financial Weekly of March 22, 1937, the six leading automobile manufacturers in which the public holds an investment this year will likely have aggregate profits close to the 1936 total of about $300,000,000. The net profits of General Motors for 1936 was given in the annual report as $238,705,192. This was a net profit of $127 per new car. Hudson is given as having a profit of $3,000,000 in 1936, an official estimate of $24 per new car. Chrysler in 1936, according to Barron's, made a net profit of $62,110,543, or $97 per new car. Studebaker's net profit for the year was $2,187,783, or $24 per new car, and the net profit for Nash, not including Kelvinator, is given as $1,020,707, or $22 per new car.

A great many people are under the misapprehension that the automobile manufacturer has the majority of capital that is tied up in this great American industry. Nothing could be further from the truth. The automobile dealer with his capital invested in buildings, with his daily pay roll, advertising expense, and so forth, has in reality by far the larger investment in the automobile industry.

In closing I want to draw this one deduction. Here is a going industry, on the make as it were, with the dealer who has by far and above the larger investment, losing money consistently—25 percent of them going out of business every year. On the other hand, we have the manufacturer making undreamed-of profits. Something must be wrong. If the manufacturer's policies and his relations and dealings with the retailing dealers are above reproach and on the square, then surely he can have no objection to this investigation. [Applause.]

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WITHROW. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. What does Henry Ford's crowd make?

Mr. WITHROW. I did not take occasion to look that up. I just have the ones I have given you. I can get that, and I will be pleased to put that in the RECORD.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WITHROW. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the survey or report which the gentleman has clearly set forth any definite reason why these failures?

Mr. WITHROW. No; there were not any. This is the report as to net earnings and as to the per car unit net profit.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I understand; but the gentleman was speaking about a turn-over of 25 percent.

Mr. WITHROW. I say 25 percent turn-over in the dealers. In other words, 25 percent of the retail dealers are going out of business every year because of these racketeering practices that are perpetrated upon them by the manufacturers, who hold the club over their heads at all times.

Mr. CRAWFORD. The question I was asking was, Does the report which the gentleman is discussing come to any conclusions as to why these failures; any definite reason?

Mr. WITHROW. Yes. I will give that to you if you will give me a chance.

Why are 25 percent of the dealers going out of business every year? The reason is that the manufacturer holds a contract. That contract, as far as the manufacturer is concerned, is a short-term contract. It can be canceled almost any time—as long as it takes to get a registered letter from Detroit to the dealer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. WITHROW] has expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] has 33 minutes remaining.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Appropriations opposed to the present bill, I believe I have a right to recognition for 1 hour, as well as the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. POWERS]. Am I correct?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DITTER. I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS].

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I take this time because I want to ask the chairman of the committee a few questions with reference to flood control. I know that he is very well posted on this subject, and I know that his sympathies are with the proposition. If there is any question I may ask that he cannot answer I want to have the privilege of asking the same question of someone else on the committee.

First, can the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] advise me whether or not the $30,000,000 provided in this bill for flood control has been earmarked in any way?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. It has not been earmarked in any way whatsoever.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Is there any special reason why it was not earmarked?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. The law provides that the President of the United States shall designate where the money shall be spent. He determines the order of emergency of projects.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. That is leading me to what I want to know.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DITTER. Part of it is earmarked for flood control on the Mississippi and its tributaries.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. We carry another appropriation for $22,500,000 for expenditure upon the lower Mississippi and its tributaries in consequence of the Overton Act; yes.

Mr. DITTER. Then, the gentleman was in error when he said we had not earmarked flood-control money, so far as the inquiry of the gentleman from Ohio is concerned.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. No; I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that there are two separate acts, the omnibus Flood Control Act, sometimes known as the Copeland Act, and the Overton Act. The former covers all flood-control projects save those covered by the Overton Act, which applies entirely to the lower Mississippi.

Mr. DITTER. There are, however, certain funds that have been earmarked.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. No; I would not say that any funds have been earmarked. The $30,000,000 is available for expenditure upon any of the projects included in the Copeland Act which have qualified or may qualify in accordance with the provisions of that act.

Mr. DITTER. Will my distinguished colleague yield further?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, for he is well informed on the question of the appropriation of money.

Mr. DITTER. I read from page 1042 of the hearings:

> If you have in the $22,500,000 the $14,000,000 to acquire flowage rights you will then have about $8,000,000 left for all the other projects under the Overton bill.

That would certainly imply, would it not, that $14,000,000 has been definitely earmarked to acquire flowage rights?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Oh, no; they may spend a portion of the appropriation for land or they may spend all of it upon construction.

Mr. DITTER. Then the gentleman was in error when that question was asked.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. In what respect was I in error?

Mr. DITTER. I refer to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TERRY]. He definitely said there that $14,000,000 was to be used for acquiring flowage rights. Now, was he correct or was he in error?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. It can be applied to land purchase or not, just as they see fit.

Mr. DITTER. I am very much interested in this bill and I really would like to have some satisfactory information. I have studied the hearings. I wonder whether the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TERRY] was correct or incorrect when he definitely said that $14,000,000 was to be used to acquire flowage rights. Now, is that wrong? Was that presumption incorrect or was it correct? If the gentleman will answer that for me, I shall be satisfied.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Application of the money is entirely discretionary.

Mr. DITTER. I am not inquiring as to the gentleman's opinion; I am inquiring whether the Army, under this program, has authority and discretion, or whether this money has been definitely earmarked as was indicated by our distinguished colleague's inquiry on page 104 of the hearings?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. The expenditure of the $22,500,000 is entirely within the discretion of the Army Engineers. They can spend it for land or they can spend it for channel straightening or they can spend it for levees, or whatever in their judgment they may think proper to do with it in order to stop floods on the lower Mississippi River, so long as the work is authorized by the Overton Act.

Mr. DITTER. Then this was an incorrect statement.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I suggest that the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TERRY] answer for himself.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas, for he, too, is sympathetic with this problem of flood control.

Mr. TERRY. I may say for the information of my friend the gentleman from Pennsylvania that $22,500,000 was allotted under the Overton Act. I was trying to ascertain how much of that would go for flowage rights. I asked that question of General Markham, I believe.

Mr. DITTER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. TERRY. I was asking if that was not the amount it was estimated that the flowage rights would cost. I was trying to point out what a meager amount had been allotted for the work, if the information I had was correct, that it would be $14,000,000 that would go for flowage rights, leaving about $8,000,000; but that was not a question of allocating that much for flowage rights. From some source I had learned that that was what the flowage rights would cost.

Mr. DITTER. Is the gentleman satisfied that the information upon which he predicated this question was authentic information? The answer of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] has not satisfied me. I wish he would supplement it.

Mr. TERRY. I do not think that the statement made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania was incorrect, because the amount that I mentioned, $14,000,000, was not an allocation but an appraisal of the flowage rights.

Mr. DITTER. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, the chairman of the Flood Control Committee.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It occurs to me that the answer to the question propounded by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, as to the break-down of the $22,500,000 embraced in this act for the lower Mississippi, will be found on pages 102 and 103.

Mr. DITTER. I have studied that, and that is the thing that disturbed me.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The whole project would contemplate the acquiring of some million acres of land down there and the expenditure of $14,000,000 and, as the gentleman from Arkansas stated, if $14,000,000 of the $22,000,000 were used for acquiring those flowage rights, there would be only $8,000,000 left for public works.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, this colloquy confirms my judgment that there is nothing definite about this flood-relief program. The only thing definite is that we in the Ohio River Valley last winter experienced the most disastrous flood that part of the world ever saw, and up to this time, 5 months after the flood, no one can put his finger on any kind of a definite program. For instance, let us consider this $22,500,000 that is provided for by the Overton Act. No one knows whether $14,000,000 or $12,000,000 is going to be used for the purchase of land or not. If it is used for the purchase of land, it will leave the pitiful sum of $8,000,000 or $10,00,000 with which to make improvements, which will be practically nothing.

Mr. Chairman, when we look around and notice what the Government and the administration is trying to do for flood control, we cannot come to any other conclusion than that they do not want to do anything of a definite nature. I want to be respectful to the gentlemen because I appreciate the gentleman from Arkansas and the gentleman from Pennsylvania are vitally interested in this matter, and I think perhaps they would agree with me.

Mr. TERRY. The gentleman understands that the amounts mentioned in the Overton bill are entirely separate and distinct from the Copeland bill, which covers flood-control projects.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I come now to the Copeland bill, which carries $30,000,000. That is just a bald appropriation of $30,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, there is provided in this bill a well-rounded figure of $30,000,000 to be spent in the Ohio River Valley. The chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations ought to know about it, and if he does not know it is because somebody has neglected and failed to give him the information; and I think, as distinguished a man as he is, a man who has shown his interest in this important subject to the extent he has, should have the information, and it is absolutely wrong to deny him that knowledge if anyone else has the knowledge. If they have only fed out this $30,000,000 as a sop, then we, who are interested in this matter, ought to know whether it is a sop or not. If it is a sop, we are not satisfied. We are not satisfied with one single dollar as a sop. We want a program. If we cannot get more than $30,000,000, we will take the $30,000,000 and be glad to get it, although it will not be nearly enough. We want a program. We are entitled to it.

Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania tell me whether or not my fears are well grounded in this respect, or whether he has something more definite to give me that I may take back to my people?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I may preface my reply to the gentleman's inquiry by saying that, as we look back over the flood-control procedure in this country for many years—and I do not care whether we go back 50, 100, or 125 years—we will not find that we ever had a program.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes. We had a well-recognized program up to the last great flood. The Army engineers had a program that was very well defined. I want to say, by way of compliment to the gentleman from Pennsylvania and the different organizations in Pennsylvania, that they had a pretty well-defined program up there. You have done a splendid job.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. We had a program for the Mississippi but not an adopted program elsewhere.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes; we had a program for, I think, about 30 large reservoirs, calling for an expenditure of about $200,000,000. The various organizations in Pennsylvania, however, have done a fine job and have indicated a willingness to cooperate beyond the expectations of almost everyone. Before I leave the question I would like to know whether or not we will have a definite program? I think a man with the gentleman's understanding ought to have a definite program, or else somebody ought to give it to him.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. In 1929 there was $24,892,000 expended; in 1930, $25,754,000; in 1931, $36,903,000; in 1932, $28,409,000; and in 1933, $38,632,000.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Where was that money spent?

Mr. TABER. That was spent on a flood-control program covering the Mississippi River.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. That is what I thought. That is all on the Mississippi River. We are not talking about that. We are talking about the Ohio and upper Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I want to know whether or not we have anything definite. Let me indicate to the gentleman from Pennsylvania what I have in mind. We appreciate the $30,000,000 that it is proposed to give to us, but we cannot say whether it is going to be spent to buy land or what it is going to be spent for, and apparently the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] does not know.

There is another bill having to do with flood-control matters that will come up for consideration. Everyone knows that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] is a recognized and outstanding flood authority in this country and in this Congress. The gentleman may know more than I think he knows about the matter; however, in my conversations with him I know he wants to be honest with me. I have never been able to get anything tangible or definite from him. No doubt he has not been given anything definite.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, this morning it was brought out that 12 separate towns along the Ohio River were selected by the President himself to be beneficiaries of a flood program. There is one little town in my district that I think is to have $350,000 under the program. They will be expected to match at least a portion of that amount.

This town cannot do that. It is not financially able. There are two large cities right below it and one across the river from it. These cities, within 30 miles of the town, are what may be called large cities on the river. They are not mentioned at all.

What kind of a program is it? What is in the President's mind? What is in the mind of the administration? What is in anybody's mind if they just go around like this and shut their eyes and pick out one little place here and there and say this place shall have so much and another place shall have so much? This is not businesslike, this is not statesmanship, and cannot be consistent with good engineering. Someone should be able to explain this. I fear that we are being fooled. I fear that in connection with the next big bill on which the President seems to be sold, which is the authorities bill, the President is just handing out these little sops to us, and we are not going to get anything. He is going to come along with this big authorities bill and say, "You have to take your flood control along with power."

Mr. Chairman, this is not what my people want. We do not want this kind of an arrangement. Let power stand on its own feet. We want something which will stop these perennial visitations of disastrous floods which take property, which take life, and which take ambition out of our people. We want something definite. I beseech the Chairman of the Committee, if he can, and I do not know that he can, and the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON], who has done so much, to bring out something tangible, that they use their influence with the President that he may appreciate what a flood really is. So far he seems not to have realized what it means for a million people to be driven from their homes in the dead of winter.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes; I yield gladly to my friend, the gentleman from Arkansas, who is another flood-prevention enthusiast and who generally knows what he is talking about.

Mr. MILLER. I may say I introduced this morning a bill which will solve the problem if the Members of Congress will vote to assume their responsibility as legislators and settle the problem themselves. There are many reasons why we do not have a program now insofar as the tributaries are concerned. It is because of the conflict between the act of June 22, 1936, and the act of June 15, 1936. The bill I introduced this morning covers the Ohio, the Missouri, the Arkansas, and the White Rivers, and provides a coordinated, integrated system of reservoirs at a cost of $480,000,000.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How does the gentleman's proposal stand with reference to whether it has a chance of having the approval of the Army engineers?

Mr. MILLER. It is based on the report and recommendations of the Army engineers.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Does the gentleman know anything about what is in the mind of the President with reference to what he expects to do regarding flood relief?

Mr. MILLER. Only what is included in the letter the President sent to the Committee on Flood Control when he asked the committee not to consider any further authorizations until January of next year.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Did the gentleman take that to mean, as I did, that our chances for any flood control might be meager unless we come under the authorities bill?

Mr. MILLER. I take it to mean that if the Congress is going to sit down and let our people be washed away and our property destroyed—in other words, fiddle while Rome is being burned—it is our responsibility. This is why I introduced my bill, for the purpose of giving Congress the opportunity to assert its own individual responsibility and assume the authority it has.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] has just shown me a figure indicating that less than 2 percent of all the flood-control moneys spent from 1930 up to the present time has been spent north of Cairo. How does the gentleman view this situation? The other day we passed a bill in which there was an item providing for the expenditure of $112,000,000 for one dam down in Kentucky. I have nothing against Kentucky or its people. May God bless them all, so far as that is concerned. However, why in the world should we spend $112,000,000 to build one dam for power purposes and hand out a meager proposition like $20,000,000 to the great Ohio Valley from Pittsburgh to Cairo? How can anybody justify this?

Mr. MILLER. It cannot be justified, in view of the tremendous damage which has been occasioned by floods this year in the Ohio, the White, the Arkansas, and the Missouri Valleys. We can correct that situation, according to General Markham, Chief of Engineers, by spending $480,000,000. Our damage to property this year alone amounted to that sum.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. What would be the period of time within which the bill of the gentleman would operate?

Mr. MILLER. It would probably take 2 or 3 years to complete all of the 69 reservoirs. This is a reservoir bill, pure and simple. Here is a committee document to which I would like to refer, committee document no. 1 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, Flood Control Committee. This is based on the report of General Markham; but, mind you, this is the report the President has said he does not want considered until January 1938.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I think the gentleman has a splendid idea. I believe the great flood of 1937 brought out conclusively to the people, especially those who live in the Ohio River section, that the original program of the Army engineers for reservoirs at the headwaters will not be adequate. It is only one branch of a great program. Now, there is another program in regard to flood walls, such as the gentleman from Mississippi is trying to get through for us. It is generally conceded now that we ought to have a well-rounded program to take in the whole situation. I am glad the gentleman has submitted such a program. I hope something may develop from his bill. [Applause.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. POWERS].

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 22 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK.]

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. LAMNECK. Mr. Chairman, in his immortal Gettysburg Address, Abraham Lincoln said:

> Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure.

Little did I think that the day would come in my time when I should feel under a solemn duty to arise in my place in this House and give utterance, in my humble way, to a similar statement. Yet that is exactly why I stand here today, seriously disturbed because I know only too well that few of you will realize without my explanation the parallel which I am about to draw.

I refer to the present controversy between capital and labor which is sweeping this country like wildfire. I solemnly assure you that in my opinion the issue involved is just as vital to the future of my country and your country as any issue of the War between the States, just as "testing" whether our Democratic capitalistic form of society can long endure. And you have only to pick up your daily paper to learn that the issue is being fought out in a civil war, with all the violence and bloodshed, all the usual implements of any civil war.

My interest in the situation centers in the steel strikes now going on. It has been aroused for two reasons: First, because the most aggravated, the most unhappy, and the most menacing conditions exist in the State of Ohio which I represent in this House; and second, and much more important, because I feel that the very foundations of our National Government are threatened by the sinister implications which these strikes carry.

Let me first make myself clear as to my attitude toward labor.

I have said on the floor of this House on previous occasions that a laboring man has the right to strike when he wants to, work when he wants to, and quit when he wants to. He has the right to select leaders of his own choosing, free from any coercion or direction on the part of his employer, to negotiate in his interest. I do not believe that there is a person in this country who has given this any thought who would not agree generally with this proposition. I go further, as does the law, and claim that the employee has the right to use peaceable means of persuasion to influence his fellow workers to his way of thinking.

However, my personal belief is that there should be a justifiable reason for striking. If the laborers' wages are not sufficient, if their hours are too long, if their working conditions are improper, they have the right to complain, to protest, and to strike if they want to, in the hope of rectifying these conditions.

But the strikes to which I now refer do not involve these issues or any other issues which can really be said to require the invocation of that specious and much-abused phrase "human rights." I claim that no workingman who is interested in the future of this country and is a patriotic American citizen should strike unless there is a justifiable reason and a reason basically connected with his work.

Since 1930 the Federal Government has been compelled to spend $20,000,000,000 in an attempt to restore prosperity and to provide jobs for those American citizens who, through no fault of their own, were thrown out of employment. Great progress has been made, business was fast recovering until there was thrust upon it the present epidemic of strikes. This recovery is now seriously threatened by the drive of labor to secure more than their just and sensible rights. This drive is based solely upon the ambition of a small group of men who are trying to impose their will to organize upon employers and their fellow employees alike, regardless of their wishes in the matter.

I say that no workingman who will strike without a just and sufficient cause is a patriotic American citizen.

Let me next give you a little background on these particular strikes which I am discussing.

These strikes involve the Republic Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., whose principal activities are in the Mahoning Valley in the Youngstown district of Ohio. Inland Steel is also involved and now Bethlehem has been drawn in. They have no strikes in my congressional district, therefore my comments on the situation are based entirely upon a firm conviction that if these strikes are permitted to go on and if the communistic forces, with their growing strength in this country, are permitted to destroy property and hinder people who want to work, it will lead to disastrous results.

I say there are no strikes in my district now; but who knows how soon, if present indications elsewhere are realized, that some of the industries in my district will not be compelled to shut down because, forsooth, they see fit to buy from or to sell to one of the steel companies now on strike. Such is the trend and such is the threat.

I should like to tell you in detail how the present controversy arose, but time will not permit. The issue has been repeatedly set forth in the public press. There is only one issue, and that is whether the companies involved shall sign a contract binding them for the period thereof to stated terms of employment in general accord with the provisions of the Wagner Act. The union has not asked the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election to determine whether it controls a majority of the workmen in any plant or company. The corporations have no such right.

So the issue has been drawn, not over wages, not over hours of work, not over vacations, not over working conditions, but purely and solely on the question of whether or not the companies involved shall sign a written contract binding them to bargain collectively.

I think at this point it is important to state the legal aspects of this question.

The only law, except the natural law of force, compulsion, upon which the C. I. O. relies for authority in its present demands, is the Wagner Act. Does this act by its language impose an obligation upon employers to actually make contracts agreeing to its terms? It does not; it is absolutely silent on this point and in this regard.

Does the spirit of the act imply such an obligation as is suggested by the unions and their sympathizers, among whom are apparently numbered the National Labor Relations Board? Chief Justice Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court, speaking for the Court, would be generally regarded, I should have thought, as the highest authority on this point. Fortunately he has recently expressed himself on this subject after exhaustive study of the Wagner Act in the case of the National Labor Relations Board against the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co. There he said, within the past 30 days:

> The act does not compel agreements between employers and employees. It does not compel any agreement whatever. It does not prevent the employer "from refusing to make a collective contract and hiring individuals on whatever terms" the employer "may by unilateral action determine."

Despite the explicit language of the Chief Justice, labor leaders daily proclaim that they are within their rights in demanding a signed contract, and the National Labor Relations Board implies a similar belief. In other words, the Supreme Court is no longer the last word on the law of the land in some quarters.

I am advised by lawyers that if the Wagner Act had explicitly required employers to sign contracts, or if it should be so construed, it would be held unconstitutional.

But the question may be asked, Why do the steel companies object to signing a contract? Because obviously, in the first place, they are not obligated by law to do so and cannot legally be so obligated. But, second, and this is the essence, because they are absolutely convinced from their long experience in dealing with labor that the signing of the first contract marks the first step in future demands for more burdensome contracts, finally ending in a demand for a contract embodying the closed shop and the check-off. If this comes, they say, God help the steel industry; I say God help this country.

On this subject let me quote you from the well-known columnist, Westbrook Pegler. He has voiced my thought as well as I or anyone else can do it:

> Senator GUFFEY blames the steel trouble on the refusal of three companies to sign contracts with the C. I. O., and, granting only for the sake of argument that this is so, the justification for this refusal is obvious. This justification is that a contract with the C. I. O. isn't worth a damn, and won't be until the law provides some penalty in case of repudiation by the C. I. O.
>
> In fact, no contract with any union is worth any more than a treaty with Mussolini, nor will be until there is mutual responsibility, as there must be in any contract that is a contract.
>
> Under present conditions the employer is bound to observe the agreement down to the last comma and concede all border-line cases to avoid penalties, including possibly a term in jail. But a union has no more responsibility than a cyclone, and a leader who may be a thief or a dictator on the rise, with ambitions to emulate Stalin, Trotsky, or the Duce, may treat a contract as a scrap of paper if it suits his convenience to do so.
>
> Suppose the C. I. O. does break a contract dictated by its own representatives and backed on one side by the law, the Government, and the employer's property, and on the other side by nothing. Who is going to do what to whom? Nobody is going to do anything to anybody.
>
> So why should any employer sign a contract with the C. I. O. if he doesn't have to? Senator GUFFEY proposes a rather wide investigation of the steel strikes, but while they are at it the statesmen could do much worse than inquire into the affairs of labor in general with an eye to coercion, extortion, and the unofficial but inescapable income tax which is levied on the earnings of nominally free American workmen by labor unions, to which many of them have no desire to belong.

What does labor say to this question? Does John L. Lewis deny his ultimate objective is the closed shop and the check-off? No. On the contrary, he has made it abundantly clear in recent months that this is a goal toward which he is relentlessly driving. I say "a goal", not "the goal", deliberately, because neither I nor anyone else can say today what his real, full future objectives may be. As a matter of fact, they may well be shaped by the amount of power which he can gather to himself.

How far they may well go is even today fairly apparent.

Is there any definite recent experience by which to measure the force of the steel company's position with respect to signing a contract?

I need only call your attention to the fact that within the past few days the newspapers have reported that the automobile workers have instructed their delegates to advise General Motors of new demands when the contract so recently agreed upon expires in August.

So much for the question of signing a contract which, mark you, is the sole issue in the present strikes.

Let me now give you some idea of how these strikes are being conducted. Facts are public knowledge, therefore, there can be little question about them. The press of the Nation daily devotes most of its first page to incidents occurring in the strike-struck towns in my State of Ohio and elsewhere. Remember that I believe sincerely in the laboring man's right to strike so long as the strike is lawfully conducted. Let me say a little first about the situation in Chicago. Your recollection must be as vivid as mine of the recent riot in which eight men were killed. This occurred when the police of the city were, in the legal discharge of their sworn duty, seeing that law and order was being upheld. Who were these men in Chicago who sought to take the law into their own hands with such dreadful results? Were they all disgruntled employees of Republic Steel? I quote you from bold type on the first page of the Daily Worker, special Chicago supplement, of Wednesday, June 2, 1937, referring to one of the pickets who died as the result of injuries received while marching upon Republic's plant:

JOSEPH ROTHMUND, COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBER

One of the six labor martyrs was an active, loyal member of the Communist Party. He was active as a cook in the kitchen set up for pickets, and whenever he had a moment to spare he sold the Daily Worker to pickets and to workers generally in South Chicago.

When the Tribune learned from police that Comrade Rothmund was a member of the Communist Party, it again yelped about "reds" and "outsiders." But such vile attacks have no effect on intelligent people.

Comrade Rothmund was a useful worker, a member of the bakers' union, a citizen of Chicago, and far more valuable than Colonel McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, or Tom Girdler, the parasite exploiter of steel workers and other tax dodgers who live off the sweat and blood of Chicago men, women, and children.

Yes; Communists are in this and every other strike. They are there because it is their duty as workers to fight for their class. Communists have no interests apart from the interests of the working class. The whole party and the whole working class mourns the death of Comrade Rothmund and the others who fell with him in their line of duty.

Let me ask you one question: Is this the type of American laborer and is this an example of human rights which the State and Federal Governments can afford to encourage or condone?

So far the only recorded deaths in these strikes occurred in connection with the Chicago riot. But in the State of Ohio the Mahoning Valley presents throughout its extent the spectacle of plants beseiged by lawless mobs in the guise of picket lines—the peaceful picketing which the law permits. But in those localities where workers of their own free will have elected to stand by their posts there are daily, nay, hourly, occurrences which we in the peaceful atmosphere of Washington cannot even begin to appreciate. Let me tell you about Niles and Warren. Several thousand men are at work in these plants. Others would like to return to work but dare not. These plants are surrounded day and night by a cordon of strikers and their sympathizers, armed with lethal weapons. These men have used every means at their command to prevent loyal workers from entering or leaving the plants. They have shot to kill at workers attempting to slip in under cover of night. They have threatened and coerced the wives and children of men in the plant. They have by threats of violence prevented the railroads serving the plants from taking cars in or bringing them out, thus restraining interstate commerce and breaching the Federal laws. In the early days of the strike they held up United States mail trucks and prevented them from delivering food, clothing, and newspapers mailed to persons in the plants. Such an act is a clear violation of the Postal Code of the United States. Latterly the local postmasters have declined to accept packages containing such articles into the United States mail, on the pretext of a technical rule of the Postmaster General or in the theory that danger would be involved in attempting to deliver them against the will of the strikers.

In other words, the Federal mail service at these points is virtually controlled by the wishes and commands of a group of men engaged daily in breaches of law in every direction. These are the mails which Grover Cleveland ordained should go through in his famous proclamation on July 8, 1894, when mobs of striking employees of the Pullman Co. attempted to arrogate to themselves the rights which the present strikers are assuming and up to this point without serious interposition by Federal authority. Let me read you what Cleveland said:

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Whereas, by reason of unlawful obstruction, combinations, and assemblages of persons, it has become impracticable, in the judgment of the President, to enforce, by the ordinary courts of judicial proceedings, the laws of the United States within the State of Illinois and especially in the city of Chicago within said State; and

Whereas, for the purpose of enforcing the faithful execution of the laws of the United States and protecting its property and removing obstructions to the United States mails in the State and city aforesaid, the President has employed a part of the military forces of the United States: Now, therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby admonish all good citizens and all persons who may be or may come within the city and State aforesaid against aiding, countenancing, encouraging, or taking any part in such unlawful obstructions, combinations, and assemblages; and I hereby warn all persons engaged in or in any way connected with such unlawful obstructions, combinations, and assemblages to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes on or before 12 o'clock noon on the 9th day of July instant.

Those who disregard this warning and persist in taking part with a riotous mob in forcibly resisting and obstructing the execution of the laws of the United States or interfering with the function of the Government and destroying or attempting to destroy the property belonging to the United States or under its protection cannot be regarded otherwise than as public enemies.

Troops employed against such a riotous mob will act with all the moderation and forbearance consistent with the accomplishment of the desired end; but the stern necessity that confronts them will not certainly permit discrimination between guilty participants and those who are mingled with them from curiosity and without criminal intent. The only safe course, therefore, for those not actually unlawfully participating is to abide at their homes, or at least not to be found in the neighborhood of riotous assemblages.

While there will be no hesitation or vacillation in the decisive treatment of the guilty, this warning is especially intended to protect and save the innocent.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be hereto affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord 1894 and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and eighteenth.

I understand that the Republic Steel Corporation will file legal action, as a measure of desperation and of last resort, against the Postmaster General of the United States to compel him to deliver packages of food through the mails. Packages such as are being accepted for mailing and delivered by the thousands throughout the country. This food, mark you, is destined for the necessary sustenance of those men at work in the steel mills who by the thousands are marooned and deprived of ordinary mail service because and only because they wish to continue at work on their jobs.

Is there any more important human right than the right to work, the right to furnish support for a family? What differentiates the Government's boasted obligation to see that the unemployed are provided for from the Government's apparently forgotten obligation to see that those who are willing and able to work—who are even willing to fight for the right to work—are protected in this right?

Yet if the newspaper quotations of statements of Post Office officials are to be believed, and there seems no reason to doubt them, the Post Office Department first defends its position on a legalistic ground which rivals in sophistry the worst arguments of those social classes which are daily being held up to public shame and censure by proponents of the "more abundant life."

Its second line of defense is the fact that conditions surrounding the strike-bound plants present dangers of physical violence to men and equipment which the Post Office Department cannot afford to risk. Its Budget might be unbalanced if some of the mail trucks were damaged or destroyed.

Have the processes of law and order sunk to such a low degree in this country that the United States Government is to be deterred from the discharge of its duties by the menace of a group of self-willed men?

I have before me a cartoon from Monday's edition of the Washington Post. Is there any wonder that the men whose job it is to picture current events to the people feel licensed to hold this situation up to ridicule and contempt? This cartoon depicts a bewildered postman seated with his mail bag before an industrial plant; near him is a signboard bearing the legend "On strike, C. I. O." He holds in his hand and is reading the well-known motto of the Post Office Department, "Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of the night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their rounds." The caption is, "It says nothing about strikes."

The flagrant breaches of Federal law which have occurred repeatedly, the definite restraint upon interstate commerce which has been imposed would, in Cleveland's time, without doubt, have resulted in prompt and appropriate action by the Attorney General of the United States.

So far as I am advised no voice has been raised from this quarter during the present period of violence.

The Sherman Act, the first of the antitrust laws of the United States, provides as follows:

Every contract combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations is declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding 1 year, or by both said punishments in the discretion of the court.

The courts of last resort have held that this statute is applicable to labor unions. As I have read you, the statute provides for criminal prosecution for its violation; by a later section provision is made as well for civil action by those peculiarly damaged.

Can there be any doubt in anyone's mind that Lewis and his henchmen are conspiring to obstruct and interfere with interstate commerce for the purpose of achieving their ultimate objective. Where is our Department of Justice, which springs into such swift and drastic action when any corporate interest dares violate the spirit, not to say the letter, of the law—violations which from a standpoint of national importance fade into insignificance when compared to what Lewis and his C. I. O. are doing?

Has the loan of $50,000 to the Democratic National Committee, mentioned in last week's newspaper, and the campaign contribution which Mr. Lewis has so often and so feelingly referred to, any bearing on this situation?

In order to get food to workers in the plants the company has been compelled to resort to dropping it from airplanes. Today these planes are riddled with bullet holes, the act of men lying in ambush outside the plants, armed with high-powered rifles. Let me read you what a newspaper reporter who was flown over one of the plants to get first-hand news says. Read the Cleveland Press, June 3, 1937:

FLIES OVER STRIKE-BOUND MILL AT WARREN IN VOLLEY OF SHOTS

I went into the war zone of Trumbull County today, and luck brought me back.

It was luck, because when the pilot who flew me over the sheet mill of the Republic Steel Corporation at Niles dipped low over the strike-bound plant a volley of rifle fire greeted us.

The pilot, a youth not more than 22, zoomed the open biplane skyward when the firing began. At least 20 shots were fired at us as the plane circled and headed toward the Erie Railroad tracks.

Three bullets hit the airplane. One struck the wing to my right. The pilot, seated behind me, yelled a warning, and I ducked below the cowling.

A second later another rifle bullet hit the wing of the plane to my left.

ANOTHER BULLET

As the airplane shot skyward over the railroad tracks a third bullet hit us. This one gave me a most uncomfortable feeling. The shot tore a neat hole in the metal body of the front compartment.

The men in the mills, probably thinking the pilot was going to drop them food, waved at us as we flew overhead. The men on the picket lines near the railroad shook their fists.

"Let's go around once more", the pilot yelled. I shook my head and pointed my hand toward Cleveland. "Go back!" I hollered. More shots greeted us as we flew over the street.

As the bullets "zinged" past, the pilot shot the nose of the plane up and headed toward Cleveland. I gave a sigh of relief.

NINE BATTLE SCARS

When we had left Cleveland Airport 2 hours before there were six bullet holes in the body of the plane. When we taxied up to our hangar, the plane carried nine battle scars.

Let me read you a pamphlet which was dropped by the thousands from an airplane flying over Republic's Canton plant a week ago:

REPUBLIC STEEL WORKERS NOW WORKING

You are riding a losing horse. The C. I. O. has gone into this fight with a record of having never lost a strike. Republic Steel will not break that record.

This strike is being supported financially by all steel workers in the United States. Three hundred thousands workers will donate 1 day's pay each month to see us win.

Other C. I. O. unions in this vicinity are supporting us physically. These include Timken, Hercules, Hoover, and others. Akron rubber workers will close down their plants to come here if needed.

Republic coal mines are being closed down. Longshoremen are refusing to load and unload Republic freight.

Twelve of seventeen Republic plants are closed down completely. Forty-four thousand out of 52,000 workers are striking.

Our pickets are well fed and happy. Relief is being arranged for their families. Four departments of the United States Government are fighting on our side.

Republic Steel Corporation cannot win!

Your wives and families are worried about you and need you.

Your coming out may be the deciding factor in getting us all back to work!

You are still welcome out here with us. Extra precautions will be taken throughout the next 12 hours to guarantee your safety in leaving the plant. After that time your safety will be your own responsibility.

As far as I am advised the Federal Government has made no reply to the plain statement that four or its departments are fighting on the side of the strikers. Why?

It is my purpose now to make clear to you, as I see it, the full significance and the necessary implications of these strikes and of the present labor movement in the United States.

First let me say to you that it is my firm belief that the time has arrived when those of us who form the legislative and executive branches of the Federal Government as well as those to whom has been entrusted the government of the States affected, must take cognizance of this situation and act with all our power to keep it within bounds. As surely as I stand here if, recreant to our trust and blind to our plain duty, we fail to act and to act promptly, our children and our children's children will rue this day.

One opportunity, one crying demand for firm and positive governmental action, has come and gone unheeded. I refer to the recent sit-down strikes when governmental authority actuated by an alleged high regard for human rights and fear of bloodshed gave apparent sanction to the taking over of private property without due process.

In the sit-down strikes there was violated the sacred right of private property. Decrees of established courts to that effect were derided by the ravishers and unenforced by executive authority charged with that duty.

There was a sigh of relief throughout the country when these outrages were apparently ended, ended with the open and brazen violation of fundamental rights which had occurred unpunished and unredressed. What was the result of the policy, this policy of high regard for human rights? Today, within a few months of the so-called truce, we have before us the spectacle of even greater excesses. We have labor, in the form of the C. I. O. led by the ambition-ridden John L. Lewis, going to far greater lengths than the sit-down strikers, not in pursuit of higher wages, not in pursuit of shorter hours, not in pursuit of better working conditions, but seeking only to impose by force upon employers the performance of an act which even the one-sided Wagner Act does not require. And as a necessary part, the course of such autocratic and unwarranted demands subjecting their fellow workmen, who will not join hands with them, either to the penalty of not working at all or to staying at work, which they have freely chosen to do under conditions of indescribable hardship.

The opportunity presented by the sit-down strikes to make clear once and for all the fact that law and order must prevail in this country regardless of who is affected thereby, has come and gone. Now, we are confronted with an even more urgent call. Not only is the right to the peaceful possession of one's property threatened but the right to work without molestation at the job of one's choice is being denied.

If we fail to heed this call, what next?

I urge upon the municipal and State authorities that they do everything in their power within their several jurisdictions to see that their laws are obeyed and that the property rights of their citizens, including particularly the right to work, are protected, let the results be what they may. I invoke their most anxious, their most prayerful consideration of the fact that if they fail in this crisis they are furnishing the most effective possible ammunition to that school of thought whose constant effort today is to take from the powers of the State governments and add to those of the central government. No more persuasive argument exists than the shining example of failure by you to meet such an emergency as now exists.

I call upon the executive branch of our Federal Government to put an immediate stop to the flagrant and open violation of Federal statutes which, through the medium of the daily press, have become a matter of common knowledge throughout the country. The sovereignty of our Government is being openly flaunted and held up to ridicule by a group of self-willed men bent upon their own purposes without any regard whatever for our country's laws, who will go just as far in their disregard for law and order as the authorities will permit.

This is the first step to anarchy.

Failing action by the executive department under present laws, I call upon this House, this Congress, to enact legislation making it mandatory upon those charged with the enforcement of our laws to take those steps which are so evidently necessary now to preserve our form of government and to stop the further progress of these elements in our society which are so obviously bent upon a program of destruction. [Applause.]

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for one question?

Mr. LAMNECK. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. In line with the gentleman's statement about the mails, I have in my hand a short ad put out by the Post Office Department, which reads as follows:

Use parcel post; reaches everywhere. This branch of the Postal Service was established to afford a safe, convenient, and inexpensive transportation and delivery service for your parcels. It belongs to you, learn more about it, and you cannot fail to use it. Ask your letter carrier or the postmaster. Valuable post-office information and rates will be found in the classified section of the telephone directory.

This is the ad put out by the Post Office Department itself.

Mr. LAMNECK. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMNECK. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. On June 5 there appeared a letter in the Chicago Tribune stating that the Post Office Department had made parcel-post delivery of food, medicine, and newspapers to sit-down strikers in the Fan Steel Mill in North Chicago.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KIRWAN].

Mr. KIRWAN. Mr. Chairman, as a new Member, this is my first attempt to address the House.

When my colleague, Mr. LAMNECK, told about the labor conditions which prevail in Ohio he was speaking of my district. I represent the Nineteenth District of Ohio, where the strike is going on.

Let us not confine our discussion to this strike, but let us go back to the first major strike in this country, which occurred in 1893. Let us consider the strike in Chicago, the Pullman and railroad strike, and recall how the troops shot the strikers down that day. Let us move on to the steel strike, a couple of years afterward, and remember when Carnegie paid Frick $1,000,000 to break that strike. It will never be forgotten how the Pinkerton detectives on a boat shot down those strikers on the river banks.

Frick went to the hospital after Carnegie paid him a million dollars to break that strike. He become melancholy from thinking over what he had done and the lives that had been lost there. When he came out of the hospital he and Carnegie became bitter enemies. Carnegie sent a messenger to him and undertook to bring about a reconciliation. You remember his reply, "I will see you in hell; we are both going there." This was Frick's reply to Carnegie in 1896 or 1897.

Remember the next strike of the coal miners in Pennsylvania in 1902, when 149,000 workers with 500,000 dependents were on strike. The 6 months of victorious strike freed labor from slavery.

Let us move on now to Colorado and consider the coal and fuel company strike there. We had a fellow named Roosevelt as President. Teddy, I think, was his first name, or they called him that. Remember when they burned the houses that these miners lived in and then loaded them in box cars, transported them to the plains of Kansas and left the women and children out in Colorado to starve.

I am asking my colleague from Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK], if he is in the House—in fact, I throw this challenge at him—show me anywhere in the world during the last 160 years, as long as this Government has been functioning, where they have committed a crime like that. Consider the other nations of the world. There was only one thing to equal it, and that was when Turkey gathered up her stray dogs in Constantinople and loaded them on a boat and put them out on an island, and the whole world complained about that, but you did not hear any complaint in 1903 or 1904, when they moved out these miners and left their women and children to starve.

At the turn of the century, if you asked for your rights, you were called an anarchist, and later, in 1910, a Socialist. Everything moved along until 1919, when, if you stood up for your rights, you were called a Bolshevik. Today, if you protest for your rights, they will call you a Communist or a Nazi-ist, or one of those terms; but go to the La Follette hearings, if you want information, and find out who was branded a rat or stool pigeon for giving information against labor. Look at the names appearing in that hearing and you will find that they were all good American names and not one of them from Russia.

I belong in the steel district, and last Sunday the only paper in that town, which is serving 300,000 people, in a front-page editorial was telling the owners to sign up with the men; that they had carried the thing too far; that the men are right. [Applause.]

The men are right; and every strike that we ever had in this country, whether the men lost or won, within 2 years at the latest, the companies put into practice what the men went out on strike for.

In 1919 Mr. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of United States Steel, said you could not put 8 hours a day into the steel plants, that it would never work, but it did work.

Look back on that Colorado strike, when John D. Rockefeller sent his son out there because he wanted a report on what was happening, and when young John D. reported to his own father, from that time on it made a good man out of Rockefeller and a credit to the Nation, as was his son also. He sold the holdings he had out there, and the Standard Oil is one of the best companies to work for in the country today. You are pensioned at 60 years of age, from the president on down.

Where was your Government in those days that it did not take a hand in keeping law and order, when they let those men and women starve? They starved in the anthracite region for 6 months. That was Teddy Roosevelt. He never took a hand. Where was he in 1903 and 1904, during the Colorado strike? He never took a hand.

We are complaining a lot about the steel situation. This reminds me of an old story that Walter Kelly, the Virginia judge, used to tell. Coming up through the Southland he stopped to watch a crowd of youngsters playing ball. He asked one of the boys who was chasing the ball, "What's the score, sonny?" The boy replied, "Fifty to nothing." Kelly said, "They are lamming the life out of you." The boy quickly replied, "Nope; we haven't had our turn at bat yet."

For 50 years labor has been chasing the ball. It begins to look like labor is beginning to have its turn at bat.

In Ohio they are doing all right, because those men are on strike demanding their rights. The paper stated on Sunday that the company should sign up. They are not asking much. All they are asking is for a definite contract. History has proven that when the amalgamated workers of steel companies were working under union contracts they never had any trouble; business men could get their stock every year, could go along and do business. Everybody seemed to be happy; but now, because a man is asking for his rights, he is called a Communist.

Mr. HARLAN. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman have time to yield?

Mr. KIRWAN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. HARLAN. The gentleman spoke a moment ago about the La Follette investigating committee.

Mr. KIRWAN. Yes.

Mr. HARLAN. Our mutual colleague from Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK] mentioned the check-off. Does the gentleman recall that the La Follette investigating committee showed that the mine owners in Kentucky were exercising the check-off and making the miners contribute out of their pockets for the sake of fighting unionism and preventing the organization of miners in that district? The gentleman spoke about the opprobrious names applied to every group that attempts to do anything for the laboring man. Does the gentleman recall that when Thomas Jefferson was trying to get a third-grade public education in the United States he was referred to as a Jacobean, which was the worst and longest name they could think of in those days?

Mr. KIRWAN. I thank the gentleman for that information. The gentleman mentions Thomas Jefferson. At the convention last summer in Philadelphia the Philadelphia Record had a reprint of the proceedings during the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and stated that George Washington presided, and in 3 days did not make a speech. The paper pointed out that one of the most refreshing things of the Convention was to think that that "radical" Thomas Jefferson had not showed up. That is what the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARLAN] is referring to. But I say in regard to conditions in Ohio, I was out there last Sunday, and things are all right. The men are picketing the plants. The Wagner Act allows them to do that; it is a peaceful picketing. Last Sunday or the Sunday prior to that the city authorities demanded that if anyone had a stick, they should let go of it, and they did, and they are merely asking people not to go to work.

That is all right. I say that from my observation, from what I saw in Ohio, everything is moving along all right. I admire those men who are striking for their rights, and I do object when a colleague of mine stands up and slurs the laboring people of the State of Ohio, as does the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK]. I again repeat, the only newspaper in that vicinity, which serves 300,000 people, came out in a front-page editorial and demanded that the steel owners recognize the men. I do not think conditions are so bad out there. They have been on strike only 2 weeks. I call attention to the 6 months' strike that I was in from April until October. I do not think we had anything more than cornmeal and weeds to eat for 6 months. Yet we survived it. We made conditions better in this country after we won that strike. [Applause.] The President is trying to bring about a balanced prosperity in industry. If the steel companies put the same amount of weight on the scale as labor will do, the President's plan will be realized. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired. The Chair informs the Committee that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] has consumed 44 minutes, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. POWERS] has consumed 1 hour, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER] has consumed 43 minutes. One hour and forty-three minutes of the time has been allotted by the minority and 44 minutes by the majority.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. As I understand it, the House went into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union without fixing the time for debate. Therefore anyone recognized under the rule is recognized for 1 hour, and there is no limitation. I think the Parliamentarian will bear me out in that, that the Chair must recognize anyone seeking recognition for 1 hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the gentleman from Michigan propounding a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will please state it.

Mr. MICHENER. Under the rule, is not the Chair compelled to recognize anyone seeking recognition for 1 hour? The Chair cannot refuse to recognize anyone in that manner. In other words, we might continue day in and day out unless the Committee rose and went into the House and fixed the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan is correct in his statement and the Chair has been acting in accordance therewith.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, the attention of Congress as well as the attention of the country has been centered during the last 6 months upon the question of flood control, as it has been on a few other subjects. I shall confine my remarks to that part of the pending bill that deals with the appropriations for flood control. In 1936 Congress passed two acts, which provided in the aggregate for the expenditure over a period of 6 years of some $672,000,000 for flood control. All of the projects embraced in those acts were carefully considered by the Congress. The amounts to be appropriated for the execution of the several projects were known to Congress and to the country.

I may say that one of these acts is known as the Overton Act. It has to do with flood control along the lower Mississippi River and three of its tributaries. Two hundred and seventy-two million dollars over a period of 6 years was authorized for the execution of that act. It contemplated the expenditure of around $40,000,000 annually. Substantially one-third of that expenditure is for navigation. It might be proper to remark here that navigation along the lower Mississippi River is almost as important as navigation at the great seaports and the great harbors of the country. For my part I believe that public expenditures and internal improvements should be wisely distributed.

When it is observed that Congress has heretofore appropriated for flood control in the lower Mississippi Valley, it will be kept in mind that the people of that valley, to protect themselves from the floodwaters of more than 30 States extending from the Alleghenies to the Rockies, have expended as much or more money than the Federal Government has expended for flood control. Moreover, it will be kept in mind that while some two hundred and seventy-five or three hundred million dollars has been expended for flood control along the Mississippi River, many more hundreds of millions of dollars have been expended for navigation—to improve rivers and harbors in other sections of the United States. For that I stand.

For instance, there have been expended some $250,000,000 for navigation along the Ohio River and its tributaries. I shall not detain you to tell you how much has been expended along the Hudson or at the great ports of New York and Boston; but for my part, as an American citizen, I believe that expenditures in internal improvements should be distributed so that the entire country will be benefited.

In 1936 we passed the omnibus flood control act. It provides for the expenditure, over a period of 6 years, of around $310,000,000. Projects are named in substantially 31 States of the Union. There are 272 of those projects. I am very grateful for the interest and cooperation of the members of the appropriations committee who have manifested in more ways than one their interest in flood control. I shall give facts. I want to be helpful. I want to be constructive.

It is my view that the time for planning, the time for allocation, is when bills are before the Congress of the United States; and when the Congress has adopted legislation it is for the Congress of the United States to provide for the execution of the projects in the orderly course and in the usual manner. What is the situation? More than a year has elapsed since these two acts were passed. We have appropriated not $975,000,000, not $1,500,000,000, but millions more for relief. The Director of the Budget recommended for the National Flood Control Act $30,000,000. That is substantially one-half the amount that the Congress said should be expended annually. For the lower Mississippi River the Director of the Budget recommended $22,500,000, substantially one-half what the representatives of the people said should be expended for the improvements, annually.

I went before the Subcommittee on Appropriations. I was aware that the Director of the Budget had spoken. I was aware of the economy wave and economy sentiment, but the time for economy—and for that I stand—is when legislative measures are being considered and before authorizations are made. I urged the committee to increase the amounts under both flood control acts.

The relief bill in the meantime came on for consideration. The members of that subcommittee—and I refer particularly to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STARNES] who has been most sympathetic, who has been most broad-minded, offered an amendment to earmark, as best he could, some of those funds.

I stated at the time, and you will find my remarks in the RECORD of May 25, 1937, page 5007, inasmuch as that amendment was presented by a member of the subcommittee handling this appropriation, and inasmuch as there were restrictions on the part of the Budget which the committee felt should follow, that while there were limitations in the use of relief funds, I would support and did support that earmarking amendment. Subsequently that amendment was voted down, and for this reason: There was inserted in the RECORD a letter from Mr. Hopkins to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STARNES], and in that letter, which you will find in the RECORD of Tuesday, June 1, 1937, page 5211, it was stated substantially:

> It is possible in flood-control works along the Mississippi, the Ohio, in New England, Pennsylvania, and elsewhere, to utilize relief labor for more than the amount of the earmarking.

Thereupon the amendment was voted down by the House.

What are the facts? When I supported the Starnes' amendment I stated that it had its limitations. When the Congress authorizes money for flood control, for internal improvements, there is no more reason why those funds should come out of relief funds than funds authorized for highways and for reclamation. Relief had its limitations. You cannot altogether do work with relief labor. I stated I hope those limitations would be removed if that earmarking obtained in another body. Let me remind you—and I say it in an effort to be helpful—I am skeptical and exceedingly doubtful as to whether very much of relief funds will be used for flood control. Why? These two acts have been on the statute books for almost a year—quite a year. Not one dollar, when there was more relief labor available than there will be in the next 12 months, has been allocated for the Overton or the Mississippi Flood Control Act.

The omnibus bill has been on the statute books for almost 12 months and Congress has not appropriated a dollar, and W. P. A. in that 12 months, with more relief labor available, has not allocated or appropriated or made available one dollar for the construction of any of the $45,000,000 that they say may be utilized, with this exception: The President of the United States, out of relief funds, did make available about $10,000,000 for an investigation of the projects under the act of 1936. But I am talking about actual construction.

I make that statement for the reason that the authorizations have been made. I favor economy. I know the unemployment that exists in many cities of our country. I am in sympathy with the efforts to relieve it, but I am doubtful of the policy of the Government to support in the congested centers of population those who are unemployed. Who built the transcontinental railways following the War between the States? Were they built by the laborers or workmen who resided on the Plains? Who constructed the Panama Canal? Were the laborers those who resided in that area? I tell you that in the solution of the problem of unemployment it is going to be necessary to transport those who are unemployed to places where we can provide permanent and satisfactory public works.

Another thing: I appreciate the cooperation of the committee. I tell you that, in my judgment, there can be no defense—and I speak plainly—of the proposition that has been submitted by the Budget, to wit, that where $272,000,000 has been authorized, only $22,500,000 for all the projects therein embraced is recommended. I tell you it is indefensible to say that when the Congress of the United States has provided for flood control from New England to Los Angeles only $30,000,000 of the $300,000,000 can be spent. I am giving you the facts.

One thing more and I shall have concluded: For the first time we are considering separately the nonmilitary activities of the War Department in the military appropriation bill. I am doubtful of the propriety of this action. I am a Member of Congress just as you are. I am here to cooperate. Why should there be a separation of these projects from the military parts of the bill? They have been handled together throughout the years. I know of the alleged reason assigned; I appreciate the statement of the chairman of the subcommittee that it makes the appropriations for the War Department appear too large. It would be just as sound to separate in the Department of Agriculture bill the public-works provisions, to wit, about $215,000,000 contained in that bill for highways.

It would be just as sound as to separate in the Interior Department appropriation bill the millions and millions of dollars provided for reservoirs, reclamation, and other internal improvements as it is to separate in the military appropriation bill the items for rivers and harbors, and flood control. I say that there was more reason for combining in the case of flood control than there was in the case of Agriculture and in the case of the Interior Department. Why? Because floods and their control have played a very important part in military campaigns. In 1937 for a distance of 900 miles, from Pittsburgh to Cairo, the river that is crossed by a number of railways and by dozens of highway bridges could not be crossed at all in that distance except at one highway bridge, and in that case the people had to go through water for part of the distance to reach the bridge. All railway bridges save one went out in the flood. I maintain that as part of the national defense of our country flood control should be considered in connection with the military activities of the Government. General Grant, in the War between the States, was greatly hindered by floods in his campaign against Vicksburg.

Mr. Chairman, under leave to revise and extend my remarks, I remind Congress that in the Flood Control Act of June 22, 1936, for the first time, Congress adopted a policy of national flood control. It provided for about 270 projects in about 31 States; it contemplated an annual expenditure of $50,000,000. I believe that the $30,000,000 carried in the bill should be increased to at least $50,000,000.

The gentlemen of the minority have criticized the majority for no flood-control program. The answer is that a policy and a program were adopted under the present administration in 1936. It is the responsibility of Congress to see that that program is executed. It can only be carried out by appropriating the amounts contemplated by the program.

The Overton or Mississippi River Flood Control Act authorizes $272,000,000. Of this amount substantially $72,000,000 is for navigation. A 6-year program was contemplated. It is necessary to supplement the levees by floodways. The act provides for substantially $40,000,000 annually. The Chief of Engineers is to be the judge of the value of flowage rights. Flowage over something like a million acres in the Eudora and Morganza floodways is to be acquired. The moneys will not be expended unless the values are within the terms of the act. A limitation has been placed upon the amounts that may be paid for flowage rights in the Eudora and other floodways. If the owners of the lands do not furnish the flowage rights for reasonable values, the funds will not be disbursed. It is the duty of Congress, however, to make the funds available. The landowners would be sacrificing enough to give up their lands.

The gentlemen of the minority said that there was uncertainty about how the $22,500,000 carried in the pending bill for the lower Mississippi River would be disbursed. The break-down is to be found on page 102 of the hearings. A careful reading of the break-down shows that it is imperative that the appropriation be increased from $22,500,000 by at least $14,000,000 to provide for acquiring flowage rights in the Eudora and Morganza floodways.

The criticism of the administration with respect to the expenditure of the $30,000,000 carried in the pending bill under the Omnibus Flood Control Act is likewise unfounded. The break-down can be found on page 75 of the hearings. The projects extend from Massachusetts to California.

Of course the break-down in the case of both bills is tentative but there is no uncertainty; there is nothing haphazard. Priority and emergency projects would come first. The act of June 22, 1936, contemplates the expenditure of $50,000,000 annually for 6 years. The hearings show that more than $100,000,000 of projects are ready.

It is said that no provision is made for the regions that were devastated by the 1937 flood. The Chief of Engineers, in response to a resolution of the Committee on Flood Control, has recommended a comprehensive plan for flood control along the Ohio River and its tributaries, and along the Mississippi River and its tributaries. His report is dated April 6, 1937; it has been published as House Flood Control Committee Document No. 1, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session.

The President of the United States, in transmitting the report, asked that consideration of the comprehensive plan recommended by the Chief of Engineers be continued until the next session of the Congress. Personally, I was not content. I urged in season and out of season that provision should be made for at least priority and emergency projects in the lower Ohio River Basin. The President recognized that provision should be made for emergency projects in the lower Ohio River Basin. He recommended to the committee that approximately $25,000,000 for the relief of some 12 communities be authorized to be constructed over a period of 2 years. He stated he felt he could provide for $11,000,000 for the first year out of the relief appropriation.

The cities and communities were named in the suggested program of the President as emergency projects. Thereupon I introduced H. R. 7393. Personally I believe the amount of the authorization should be increased. The Committee on Flood Control is now conducting hearings. While I am not authorized to speak for the committee, I believe the hearings have gone far enough for me to say that the committee will report the largest authorization that it believes will be approved, but that the committee will not designate the projects. The projects are listed and have been reported by the Chief of Engineers. The construction of all the projects would cost much more than $25,000,000. I believe that the committee will report a bill that will authorize the Chief of Engineers, in cooperation with the local interests, to select from the projects studied and reported on by him and approved by him the prior and emergency projects for the amounts that may be authorized in the bill. In other words, I believe that the bill to be reported by the committee will give to all cities and communities in the Ohio Basin equal treatment.

The President of the United States has asked that the comprehensive plan be continued. I give it as my view that Congress will be recreant to its duty if it does not continue to consider a comprehensive plan and if it does not provide for its adoption before the adjournment of the next session of Congress. There is no conflict between the partial authorization during the present session and the comprehensive authorization during the next session of the Congress, but there is delay.

I have already stated that relief funds for flood-control works have their limitations. Personally I believe that the unemployed can be used advantageously in flood-control works.

Regular appropriations can be utilized to aid the unemployed. The Chief of Engineers, in furnishing programs, has utilized those who were unemployed but, as I have already pointed out, the fact remains that while Administrator Hopkins, in his letter to Mr. STARNES in the RECORD of Tuesday, June 1, page 5211, stated that relief labor might be available, there is no commitment that any definite amounts would be expended for flood control. I quote from the said letter:

> The following is in response to your inquiry regarding the possibility during the fiscal year of 1938 of furnishing relief labor for work on flood-control projects which have been authorized by the Congress for the lower Mississippi Valley (Overton Act) and in the omnibus Flood Control Act (Copeland Act).

There is a possibility that relief labor might be utilized. I know of no better way to judge the future than by the past. The fact is that during the past 12 months relief labor has not been utilized. There is certainly less unemployment today than 12 months ago. Relief funds are not satisfactory for permanent public works. The agencies charged with the execution of the work can utilize the unemployed. The restrictions and limitations on relief labor do not obtain.

I must not be misunderstood. I have consistently advocated that the appropriations be increased. I supported the earmarking of relief funds because such earmarking was proposed by the committee in charge of the pending appropriation. In the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Tuesday, May 25, 1937, page 5007, I stated:

> The earmarking of relief funds in the relief bill has limitations. In order to provide for the works adopted in the two flood-control acts of 1936, I trust these limitations will be removed in another body.

The pending bill carries the amounts recommended by the Budget. The picture has changed since the Budget was submitted to the Congress. The great flood of 1937 has come and gone. In emergency work the Corps of Engineers expended some $4,000,000. Surely provision should be made to replace these funds.

Under section 9 of the Overton bill, $15,000,000 is authorized for rescue, repair, and maintenance on the tributaries of the Mississippi River. This is really one of the constructive features of the legislation. It applies to all of the tributaries of the Mississippi River. The Ohio flood has come and gone. There was on hand some $200,000 at the time the Budget submitted its estimate. This appropriation should be materially increased for I have emphasized that there is no more constructive provision in the flood-control acts than the provisions of rescue, repair, and maintenance on the tributaries where the Federal Government, in many cases, is executing no flood-control projects.

If the amounts carried in the pending bill are increased there would be no occasion for diverting relief funds. Relief appropriations could thus be reduced. The sound policy is for Congress to appropriate for authorized projects. The best way to promote flood control in the future is to provide for the execution of flood-control projects that have already been adopted.

It is loosely asserted that large appropriations have been expended by the Federal Government in the construction of levees and for flood control along the lower Mississippi River. The fact is that in all of the 150 years of its history the Federal Government has expended for flood-control works along the lower Mississippi River, including the expenditures under the act of 1928, to date, approximately $292,000,000. The local interests have expended more than this amount. In addition, the Federal Government has expended substantially $100,000,000 to improve navigation.

During the same period the Federal Government has expended hundreds of millions of dollars for the improvements of harbors, including the harbors of Boston, New York, and Philadelphia.

The Federal Government has expended for navigation along the Ohio, the Allegheny, and the Monongahela Rivers substantially $240,000,000, while the Government has expended for navigation along the Cumberland, the Muskingum, the Kentucky, and other tributaries of the Ohio River many millions more. Rivers and harbors along the oceans, lakes and gulf have been widely improved. Federal expenditures have been widely distributed.

It has been carelessly stated that the yardstick for local contributions along the lower Mississippi River is different from the yardstick that obtains for local contributions in the Copeland or omnibus Flood Control Act. The fact is that the yardstick is identical. The principal improvements along the lower Mississippi River are levees. Under the law the local interests are required to furnish rights-of-way for levees and river walls along the Mississippi River. A similar requirement obtains in the omnibus or Copeland Flood Control Act.

The provision for local contribution in section 8a of the Overton or Mississippi River Flood Control Act is identical with the provision of section 3 of the Copeland or omnibus Flood Control Act. There is just a little change in phraseclogy; both mean the same thing. Under the omnibus act the Conchas Reservoir, started as a relief project, is exempt. Under the Overton or Mississippi Flood Control Act the Sardis Reservoir, started as a relief project, is exempt. Otherwise, under both acts the local interests are required to furnish lands and rights-of-way for reservoirs.

Under both acts the local interests are required to pay for railroad relocations in reservoirs.

Under the Mississippi River or Overton Flood Control Act the Government pays the flowage rights in floodways. The cost of flowage rights in the floodways is a small part of the costs of flood-control improvements in the lower Mississippi Valley.

I repeat to emphasize that the local contribution under both acts is uniform and that the same yardstick obtains in both acts. There is not one rule on the Mississippi River and another rule on other streams. The rule in both cases is the same. I believe that the rule, especially respecting reservoirs, should be liberalized.

(Mr. WHITTINGTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks.)

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Alabama rise?

Mr. STARNES. I seek recognition in support of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. After the gentleman from Alabama has consumed his hour will the Chair recognize me?

The CHAIRMAN. That is not a parliamentary inquiry, but the Chair will gratuitously state that the Chair will undertake to comply with the rules and will be governed by the situation when it arises.

Mr. RICH. Will the Chair recognize me? I ask to be recognized following the gentleman from Alabama.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has answered the gentleman's inquiry.

Mr. RICH. But will the Chair recognize me?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will act in accordance with the rules. The gentleman asks a hypothetical question. The Chair will meet the situation when the situation is presented.

Mr. RICH. Will the Chair force us out so that we will not be recognized?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is basing his statement upon assumed facts which do not in fact exist.

The gentleman from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR] and reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Chairman, as this day is one of general debate I want to say a few words in behalf of an involuntarily subjected people, namely, the Indians.

In view of the fact that there are several bills pending in the House affecting the rights of Indians and amending existing statutes conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims, in order to give relief to Indians heretofore denied the same, and in view of the fact that apparently there is a feeling of prejudice entertained by some of the Members of the House toward these proposed measures, I feel that a few words in connection with the relationship between the Government of the United States and the Indians and their rights would not be out of place. Therefore these remarks.

The Indians were the aboriginal inhabitants and occupants of the vast domain comprising the United States. They were divided into nations, tribes, or bands, and supported themselves from Nature's abundance and by hunting and fishing. With the arrival of the colonists to this country, encroachments upon the lands of the Indians necessarily conflicted with the interests of the Indians, resulting in bitter contests between the Indians and the colonists, and many of the latter were massacred. Notwithstanding the dangers and hardships endured by the colonists they gradually increased in number, subdued the Indians, and prospered.

The great pacifier and "benevolent friend" of the Indians, William Penn, was among the first to recognize the right of the Indians to their lands, and in dealing with the Indians occupying what now comprises the State of Pennsylvania, he purchased the area within that State for the "princely" sum of about $500.00. The deed given to Penn by the Indians is of such a curious character that it is deemed worthy of reproduction here.

This indenture, made the fifteenth day of July, in the yeare of our Lord, according to English Accompt, One Thousand Six Hundred Eighty Two, Between Idquahon, Ieanottowem Idquoquequon, Sahoppe for himselfe and Okonikon, Merkekowon Orecton for Nannacussey, Shaurwawghon, Swanpisse, Nahoosey, Tomakhickon, Westkekitt & Tohawsis, Indyan Sachamakers of ye one pte, And William Penn, Esqr, Chief Proprietor of the Province of Pennsylvania of the other pte: WITNESSETH that for and in Consideracon of the sumes and particulars of Goods, merchandizes, and vtensills herein after mentioned and expressed, (That is to say,) Three Hundred and fifty ffathams of Wampam, Twenty white Blankit's, Twenty ffathams of Strawd waters, Sixty ffathams of Duffields, Twenty Kettles, ffower whereof large, Twenty Gunns, Twenty Coates, fforty Shirts, fforty payre of Stockings, fforty Howes, fforty Axes, Two Barrells of Powder, Two Hundred Barres of Lead, Two Hundred Knives, Two Hundred small Glasses, Twelve payre of Shooes, fforty Copper Boxes, fforty Tobacco Tonngs, Two small Barrels of Pipes, fforty payre of Sissors, fforty Combes, Twenty ffower pounds of Red Lead, One Hundred Aules, Two handfulls of fish-hooks, Two handfulls of needles, fforty pounds of Shott, Tenne Bundles of Beads, Tenne small Saws, Twelve drawing knives, ffower anchers of Tobacco, Two anchers of Rumme, Two anchers of Syder, Two anchers of Beere, And Three Hundred Gilders, by the said William Penn, his Agents or Assigns, to the said Indyan Sachmakers, for the use of them and their People, at and before Sealing and delivery hereof in hand paid and delivered, whereof and wherewith they the said Sachemakers doe hereby acknowledge themselves fully satisfyed, Contented and paid. The said Indyan Sachamakers, (parties to these presents), As well for and on behalfe of themselves as for and on the behalfe of their Respective Indyans or People for whom they are concerned, Have Granted, Bargained, sold and delivered, And by these presents doe fully, clearly and absolutely Grant, bargayne, sell and deliver vnto the sayd William Penn, his Heirs and Assignes forever, All that or Those Tract or Tracts of Land lyeing and being in the Province of Pennsylvania aforesaid, Beginning at a certaine white oake in the Land now in the tenure of John Wood, and by him called the Gray Stones over against the ffalls of Dellaware River, And soe from thence up by the River side to a corner marked Spruce Tree with the letter P at the floot of a mountayne, And from the sayd corner marked Spruce Tree along by the Ledge or floot of the mountaines west northwest to a corner white oake, marked with the letter P, standing by the Indyan Path that Leads to an Indyan Towne called Playwickey, and near the head of a Creek called Towsissinck; and from thence westward to the Creek called Neshammonys Creek, And along by the sayd Neshammonyes Creek unto the River Dellaware, alias Makeriskhickon; and soe bounded by the sayd mayne River to the Sayd first mentioned white oake in John Wood's Land; And all those Islands called or knowne by the severall names of Mattinicunk Island, Sepassincks Island, and Orecktons Island, lying or being in the sayd River Dellaware, Togeather alsoe with all and singular Isles, Islands, Rivers, Rivoletts, Creeks, Waters, Ponds, Lakes, Plaines, Hills Mountaynes, Meadows, Marrishes, Swamps, Trees, Woods, Mynes, minerals and Appurtenences whatsoever to the sayd Tract or Tracts of Land belonging or in any wise Apperteyning; And the reversion and reversions, Remaindr. and Remaindrs. thereof, And all the Estate, Right, Tytle, Interest, vse, pperty, Clayme and demand whatsoever, as well as them the sayd Indyan Sachamakers (ptyes to these presents) as of all and every other the Indyans concerned therein or in any pte. or Peel. thereof. To have and to hold the sayd Tract or Tracts of Land, Islands, and all and every other the sayd Granted premises with their and every of their Appurtennces vnto the sayd William Penn, his Heires and Assigns forever, To the only pper vse & Behoofe of the sayd William Penn, his Heires and Assignes, forevermore. And the sayd Indyan Sachamakers and their Heirs and Successors, and every of them, the sayd Indyan Sachamakers and their Heires and Successors, and every of them, the sayd Tract or Tracts of Land, Islands, and all and every other the sayd Granted pmisses, with their and every of their Appurtennces unto the sayd William Penn, his Heires and Assignes forever, against them the sayd Indyan Sachamakers, their Heires and successors and against all and every Indyan and Indyans and their Heires and successors, Clayming or to Clayme, any Right, Tytle or Estate into or out of the sayd Granted prmisses, or any pte. or prcel. thereof, shall and will warrant and forever defend by these presents; In witness whereof the said Prtyes to these present Indentures Interchangeably have sett their hands and seals the day and yeare first above written, 1682.

The (x) mark of Kowockhickon
The (x) mark of Attolreham Wm. Markham.
Deputy Govr. to Wm. Penn, Esq.

Sealed and Delivered in ye presence of Lasse Cock
Pieowjicom
Rich. Noble
Thos. Revell

(Indian Laws and Treaties, vol. 3, p. 696.)

When the American Revolution was won and the treaty between Great Britain and the United States of North America, dated January 20, 1783, was proclaimed, the United States as the successors of Great Britain acquired sovereignty over the Indians and their lands.

Among the first statutes enacted or ordained by the United States in Congress assembled was the Ordinance of July 13, 1787 (1 Stat. 52), reading, in part, as follows:

The utmost good faith shall always be observed toward the Indians; their lands and property shall never be taken from them without their consent; and in their property, rights and liberty, they never shall be invaded or disturbed, unless in just and lawful wars authorized by Congress; but laws founded in justice and humanity shall from time to time be made for preventing wrongs being done to them, and for preserving peace and friendship with them.

The first Indian treaty made was that of September 17, 1778 (7 Stat. 13), by Andrew and Thomas Lewis, commissioners for and on behalf of the United States of North America and the Delaware Nation; and among the last important treaties made and ratified prior to the act of March 3, 1871, prohibiting further treaty making with the Indians, were with the Crows of May 7, 1868; with the Eastern Shoshoni of Wyoming, of July 3, 1868; and with the Nez Perces of August 13, 1868 (Indian Affairs, Laws, and Treaties, vol. 2, p. 1020). In all, there were about 350 Indian treaties made and ratified by the Senate, thus becoming law.

Indian reservations are created or established by treaties, acts of Congress, or Executive orders of the President. (See act of Feb. 8, 1887; 24 Stat. 388; Spaulding v. Chandler, 160 U. S. 394.)

From the beginning to the ending of treaty making with the Indian tribes, Congress only once exercised its power to annul a treaty without the consent of the Indian tribe, viz: treaty with the Sioux Indians of Minnesota on account of violation of the treaty by warring against the United States. However, Congress subsequently paid to these Indians the proceeds arising from the sale of the lands they had vacated. (See Annual Report, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, 1890, p. 29.)

The Supreme Court of the United States in numerous cases has defined the nature of the rights of the Indians to their lands. A few leading cases are cited as follows:

Worcester v. Georgia (6 Pet. 575; U. S. Cook, 19 Wall. 593; 86 U. S. 591): The Indians are acknowledged to have an unquestionable and heretofore unquestioned right to the lands they occupy until that right shall have been extinguished by the voluntary cession to our Government.

Mitchell v. United States (9 Pet. 711, 746; 9 L. ed. 283, 296): Indian possession or occupation was considered with reference to their habits and modes of life; their hunting grounds were as much in their actual possession as the cleared fields of the whites; and their rights to its exclusive enjoyment in their own way and for their own purposes were as much respected until they abandoned them, made a cession to the Government, or an authorized sale to individuals * * *. It is enough to consider it as a settled principle that their right of occupancy is considered as sacred as the fee simple of the whites.

Holden v. Joy (17 Wall. 211, 244; 21 L. ed. 523, 534): Throughout, the Indians, as tribes or nations, have been considered as distinct, independent communities, retaining their original natural rights as the undisputed possessors of the soil from time immemorial, subject to the conditions imposed by the discoverers of the continent, which excluded them from intercourse with any other government than that of the first discoverer of the particular section claimed. They could sell to the government of the discoverer, but they could not sell to any other governments or their subjects, as the government of the discoverer acquired, by virtue of this discovery, the exclusive preemption right to purchase, and the right to exclude the subjects of all other governments, and even their own, from acquiring title to the lands.

Enough has already been remarked to show that the lands conveyed to the United States by the treaty were held by the Cherokees under their original title, acquired by immemorial possession, commencing ages before the New World was known to civilized man. Unmistakably their title was absolute, subject only to the preemption right of purchase acquired by the United States as the successors of Great Britain, and the right also on their part as such successors of the discoverer to prohibit the sale of the land to any other governments or their subjects and to exclude all other governments from any interference in their affairs.

Leavenworth R. R. Co. v. United States (23 Wall. 743): As long ago as in Cherokee Nation v. Georgia (5 Pet. 1) this court said that the Indians are acknowledged to have the unquestionable right to the lands they occupy until that right shall be extinguished by a voluntary cession to the Government; and recently (United States v. Cook, 19 Wall. 591, 22 L. ed. 210), this right of occupancy has been held to be sacred as the title of the United States to the fee. * * * This perpetual right of occupancy, with the correlative obligation of the Government to enforce it, negatives the idea that Congress, even in the absence of any positive stipulation to protect the Indians, intended to grant their lands to a railroad company, either absolutely or cum onere. For all practical purposes, the Osages owned the lands as the actual right of possession; the only thing they deemed of value was secured to them by the treaty of June 2, 1825, until they should elect to surrender it to the United States. In the free exercise of their choice, they might occupy their lands forever; and whatever changed this condition or interfered with it violated the guaranties under which they had lived since that date.

Minnesota v. Hitchcock (185 U. S. 373): The Indian right of occupancy has always been held to be sacred, something not to be taken from him except by his consent, and then upon such consideration as should be agreed upon.

Also see United States v. Kagama (118 U. S. 375); Doe v. Wilson (23 How. 457); Buttz v. Northern Pacific Railroad Co. (119 U. S. 55); Beecher v. Wetherby (95 U. S. 517).

From the beginning it may be said that the United States recognized as a general principle the right of Indian tribes covering the lands actually claimed and possessed by them perpetually to use, occupy, and possess such lands in common, the fee remaining in the United States.

Attorney General Stone (34 Op. Atty. Gen., pp. 171–181), in an opinion to the President and the Secretary of the Interior on the question whether the Indians' right to reservation lands included any right to the hidden and latent resources of the land, said:

If a transfer by the United States would convey only the naked fee, it goes without saying that the complete equitable property was in the Indians. The earlier and fundamental decisions make this plain. In Worcester v. Georgia (6 Pet. 515, 544, 545), Chief Justice Marshall clearly states that the right asserted in behalf of the discovering European nations was merely a right, as against each other, which he defines as "the exclusive right of purchasing such lands as the natives were willing to sell." As late as 1872 the Supreme Court said: "Unmistakably their title was absolute, subject only to the pre-emption right of purchase acquired by the United States as the successors of Great Britain, and the right * * * to prohibit the sale of the land to any other governments or their subjects" (Holden v. Joy, 17 Wall. 211, 244).

If the extent of the Indian rights depended merely on definitions, or on deductions to be drawn from descriptive terms, there might be some question whether the right of "occupancy and use" included any right to the hidden or latent resources of the land, such as minerals or potential water power, of which the Indians in their original state had no knowledge. As a practical matter, however, that question has been resolved in favor of the Indians by a uniform series of legislative and treaty provisions beginning many years ago and extending to the present time. * * * In all these instances Congress has recognized the right of the Indians to receive the full sales value of the land, including the value of the timber, the minerals, and all other elements of value, less only the expenses of the Government in surveying and selling the land.

It will appear from the above quoted citations from the opinions of the Supreme Court and the opinion of the Attorney General of the United States that there is a material difference between a treaty or contract title to an Indian reservation and the mere aboriginal occupancy rights of Indans to lands which have not been recognized by the United States by treaty, act of Congress, or Executive order of the President. In the latter case the Court of Claims has held in the Duwamish case, 79 Court of Claims Report, 535, that where Indians have occupied lands immemorially, but such occupation had not been recognized by the United States either by treaty, act of Congress, or Executive order, claims for payment for the taking of such lands cannot be maintained; that only Congress can grant relief in such cases, the question involved being a political one in which the authority of the courts cannot intrude.

At this point I wish to dwell upon a most unusual occurrence in the history of treaty-making with the Indians, caused by the negligent or careless handling of important documents in the Indian Office. The treaty involved is that of the famous treaty of Fort Laramie of September 17, 1851, made by the United States with the Sioux or Dakotas, Cheyennes, Arapahoes, Crows, Assiniboines, Gros Ventres, Mandans, and Arickarees (Indian Affairs, Laws, and Treaties, vol. 4, p. 1065). Under this treaty each of the above tribes was granted a defined reservation, and in consideration for making the treaty and ceding certain rights to the United States, the United States agreed to pay the said Indian tribes the sum of $50,000 for 50 years. The treaty was ratified by the Senate May 24, 1852, with an amendment reducing 50 years to 10 years, with discretion in the President to extend the payment for 5 years additional. The State Department decided that the Senate amendment must be submitted to the several tribes for ratification, which was done; the final ratification by the Crows having been obtained September 18, 1854. Instead of the Interior Department immediately forwarding said ratifications to the State Department so that the treaty could be proclaimed, said ratifications for reasons still unexplained were retained in the files of the Indian Office. The State Department, not having been advised of the due ratification of the Senate amendment by the Indians, published in the Statutes at Large, volume 11, page 749, a note that this treaty had not yet been ratified by the Indians, and therefore was not printed as a law. This situation continued from 1854 to 1925, when, through the hearings on the Northern Pacific Railroad land grants by the joint congressional committee, the ratifications of the amendment to the Fort Laramie treaty came to light, and in 1930 the Court of Claims in the case of the Fort Berthold Indians, composed of the Arickarees, Mandans, and Gros Ventres, parties to the Laramie treaty of 1851, held said treaty valid and in force and effect.

From 1854 up to the time of the Court of Claims decision all Government officials, treaty commissioners, and superintendents of Indian affairs were laboring under the impression that the Fort Laramie treaty of September 17, 1851, was not law, and were guided accordingly. The early annual reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, in tabulations of Indian moneys and appropriations, recited that the Laramie treaty was unratified; and in a report to Congress the Secretary of the Interior advised the treaty "not ratified" (S. Ex. Doc. 4, 40th Cong., special sess., p. 35, Mar. 1867). Under this false assumption the President by Executive order, in 1870, on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, deprived the Fort Berthold Indians of North Dakota of several million acres of their treaty lands without compensation and without their consent, a large part of which went to the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. to satisfy land grants, and parts were opened to settlement. For this deprivation of lands belonging to the said Indians the Court of Claims awarded a judgment. In its decision describing what was done with the Indians' ratifications of the Senate amendment to the Laramie treaty of 1851, the court said (71 Ct. Cl. 336–337):

The treaty of Fort Laramie of 1851 was ratified by the Senate on May 24, 1852, after amending article 7 of the same. The amended treaty was returned to the tribes for their assent to the modification of the same. All tribes assented thereto, and due to an administrative error and oversight the treaty was never proclaimed, hence the Indian Office and other delegated officials concerned in negotiations with the Indians proceeded upon the erroneous conviction that the Fort Laramie treaty was never ratified. * * * There can be no doubt that the failure of Government officials and others dealing with the Indians at this time to recognize the treaty of 1851 was due exclusively to a belief that the treaty of 1851 was never ratified by the Senate. The plaintiff Indians were at the time an ignorant and unlettered people, forced by their status and situation to rely implicitly upon the representatives of the Government, and while they laid claim to a much larger territory than the 1870 reservation, they were in no position to controvert an alleged existing condition, which was represented to them by those in authority as leaving them without any landed reservation whatever. As we look at it, it was the Government's error and unintended misrepresentation which resulted in procuring a settlement with the Indians in 1870 which did not equitably compensate them for rights granted them under the Fort Laramie treaty of 1851.

Keeping in mind what the Court of Claims found as above quoted, namely: "The Indian Office and other delegated officials (meaning treaty commissioners) concerned in negotiations with the Indians proceeded upon the erroneous conviction that the Fort Laramie treaty was never ratified", and "There can be no doubt that the failure of Government officials and others dealing with the Indians at this time to recognize the treaty of 1851" as law, and that the "Indians were at the time an ignorant and unlettered people, forced by their status and situation to rely implicitly upon the representatives of the Government", and that "they were in no position to controvert an alleged existing condition, which was represented to them by those in authority as leaving them without any landed reservation whatever", we come to a similar situation relating to the Crow Indians of Montana, who, as the records show, were always the friends and allies of the Government. In substantiation of this statement the reports of the Government officials and Army officers are submitted.

General Augur, from Fort Phil Kearney, April 6, 1867, reported to the Secretary of War:

The conduct of the Crows during the recent Indian troubles has been all that we could expect. They have refrained from joining the hostile tribes against us, though every inducement was held out to them to do so, and I am firmly persuaded that it is to them that we are indebted for the safety of Fort C. F. Smith. * * *

The attitude of this tribe has been so commendable during the past year that I deem them entitled to every possible care and consideration from the Government.

Governor B. F. Potts, of Montana, reported to Assistant Secretary of the Interior B. R. Cowen, June 24, 1874:

I feel that the Mountain Crows are entitled to the thanks of our people for their loyal defense of our eastern settlements and so far as I can I shall aid them for the protection they have afforded our people. I shall take occasion to examine into their wants and report the facts to the Department.

Capt. D. W. Benham, commander of Fort Ellis, Mont., dated February 12, 1877, reported to Major Brisbin:

The Crow Indians have in every reasonable way shown themselves to be the fast friends of the white man and in proportion to their advantages loyal and true to the Government. Their scouts have been with the Army through the late campaigns against the Sioux and all the officers with whom I have conversed in regard to them bear testimony that they did good service.

In my opinion the Crows have been misused. I will not undertake to locate the cause of the wrongs which have existed and do exist at present, but simply state that there are faults somewhere that should be looked into and corrected. Aside from any desire to see right done by the Government toward the Crows, I feel that it is the interest of the Government to keep them friendly. They are not only a protection to the settlements in the valley against the hostile Sioux, as they are located between the settlements and the Sioux country, but this whole valley would be at their mercy at any time when the troops are away from Fort Ellis should they be provoked to become hostile toward the whites.

The Army has little to do with Indian matters, but there are times when it is proper for any class of citizens to speak in defense of a wronged people, and I believe that such a time has come in the history of our dealings with the Crows.

Endorsement by Maj. James A. Brisbin, Seventh Cavalry, March 12, 1877:

The Crow Indians are the firm friends and faithful allies of the whites, but I doubt if any Indians on the continent have been worse treated by the Government. The delay in supplying them is shameful and the frauds a disgrace to any civilization.

Endorsement by Gen. A. H. Terry, March 28, 1877:

Recommend Executive order of November 23, 1876, be so modified as to allow the sale of metallic ammunition to the Mountain Crows, as the events of the past year have shown that they can be implicitly relied on as friends of the whites, and that any ammunition furnished them will be neither used against white men nor disposed of to the Sioux Indians.

The United States Crow Indian superintendent, George W. Frost, dated Crow Agency, Mont., August 17, 1877, reported to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, as follows:

If an Indian's word can be taken for anything, or if he can be judged by his acts, I believe that the disposition of the Crows is of the most friendly and loyal character. They have gone out as scouts with different Army officers in large numbers, and have been very efficient in fighting the Sioux and the Nez Perces. Although friendly with the latter tribe, they said: "We are the friends of the white man and of the Nez Perces; but we fight all of the white man's enemies, and if the Nez Perces fight the white man, then they are no longer our friends and we will fight them." This steady, uniform friendship when deprived by fraud of their annuities for 1 year is worthy of the highest commendation. (Rept. Com. Ind. Affrs., 1877, pp. 133–134.)

Gen. Hugh L. Scott, in his Some Memoirs of a Soldier, page 61, published in 1928, and who commanded a troop in the winter of 1876–77, says they sought the Crows one day to join in fighting the Sioux. "The next morning there were 200 Crows in camp ready to go to war with us."

Senator Dawes, who, as chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, conducted an extensive Indian investigation in 1884, reported of the Crows:

These Indians have for a number of years been very quiet and orderly, not only giving the Government no trouble but rendering it great assistance in beating off the warlike Sioux from incursions and attacks upon the whites. They and the Sioux have long been enemies, and in any outbreak of the latter the Crows have sided with the Government of the United States and rendered great assistance in preserving life and property. As a lamentable consequence of this, they have been neglected by the Government. It has been too much and too long the policy of the Government to be solicitous only about those Indians who give the Government most trouble. (S. Rept. 283, 48th Cong., 1st sess., p. 10.)

As hereinbefore stated, the Crow Tribe was a party to the Fort Laramie Treaty of September 17, 1851. The Crows, as reported by Indian agents, and as shown by the above quotations, at all times observed their obligations under said treaty; said treaty granted them a defined reservation.

Gov. Francis F. Meagher, of Montana, stated, under date of December 14, 1865 (Commissioner of Indian Affairs Annual Report, 1866, p. 196):

That it is more than expedient such a treaty with the Crows shall be made as speedily as possible must be conceded, in view of the fact that hundreds of miners and others desirous of locating farms and laying out towns are, even now, passing down into the great valley of the Yellowstone and into the country beyond the junction of the Gallatin with the Missouri.

The President subsequently appointed what is known as the Northwest Indian Commission, composed of General Curtis, Governor Edmunds, Orrin Guernsey, and Henry W. Reed, to treat with the Crows and other tribes of Indians. This Commission proceeded up the Missouri River to Fort Union, convened the Crows in council, and on July 15, 1866, General Curtis told the "chiefs and headmen of the Mountain and Prairie (River) Crow Indians":

We now want to make a treaty with the Crows. We know that you have always been our friends. Your old treaty has expired, and we are here to make a new one. The Great Father does not want to injure but to help you. He wants a road up to Yellowstone Valley, and one up this river; with stages and traders along the lines, and a great depot for goods at this place. He wants the right-of-way along the Missouri and Yellowstone, and pieces of ground for stations. This is the kind of treaty we want to make and in consideration thereof you will have an agent at the mouth of Milk River and he can deliver your goods anywhere on this river. We will give you a much larger annuity than you ever had before. With the old treaty you got about $3,000; but under this treaty you will have 10 times as much.

That same afternoon Governor Edmunds told the Crows:

We told you this morning that the Laramie treaty had expired.

In its report to Secretary Harlan, dated August 25, 1866 (Ann. Rept. 1866, p. 168), the Northwest Treaty Commission said:

In accordance with our appointment by the President of the United States and the instructions of your Department given orally and otherwise, at sundry times, the undersigned have, during the past two seasons, visited the various tribes of Indians of the Northwest for the purpose of making treaties with such as have never made treaties, and renewing treaty arrangements with those who had been parties to the treaty of Laramie, which has terminated by its limitation of 15 years.

On April 5, 1866, Secretary Harlan wrote Indian Commissioner Cooley:

I have to state that the expiration of that (Laramie) treaty on account of the amendment adopted by the Senate, should be explained to the Indians, and urged as a reason, in connection with other reasons, for entering into another treaty.

He wrote that Indians should not expect payments "for the fulfillment of treaty stipulations which do not exist according to the terms of the amended treaty."

The Crows signed the treaty as drafted by the Commission on July 16, 1866, but it was not ratified.

Here were direct statements to the Crows by the official representatives of the Government that the Fort Laramie treaty which granted the Crows a defined reservation had "expired", and by the official report of the Commission to the Secretary of the Interior had "terminated by its limitation of 15 years", and by Secretary Harlan that it does not "exist."

It may be noted here that four of the leading Crows who were present at the above-described council in 1866 and heard the statement of Curtis and Edmunds, and who signed the treaty of 1866, were also signers of the later treaty of May 7, 1868, which, due to the mistake of fact as to the validity and effectiveness of the treaty of Fort Laramie, both by the representatives of the Government and the Crows, caused a wholly inadequate consideration to be paid the Crows for a cession of over 30,000,000 acres of their Fort Laramie treaty reservation lands.

After the making of treaties with the Crows and other western tribes in 1866, none of which were ratified, the Sioux started hostilities against the Government and the whites, which lasted through the years 1866 and 1867, and the Sioux made every effort by promises and presents to induce the Crows to join them, as hereinbefore described, without swaying the Crows—the Crows joining the Government Army forces to subdue the Sioux. In 1867, under an act of Congress, the so-called Indian Peace Commission was created, composed of Indian Commissioner Taylor, Army officers, and well-known civilians. This Commission proceeded westward in the fall of 1867, and assembled the Mountain Crows—at that time there were two bands of the Crow Nation, the Mountain and the River—in council at Laramie on November 12 and 13, 1867.

Keeping in mind that all Government officials, including the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, were under the erroneous conviction that the treaty of Fort Laramie of 1851 had not been ratified and was not a law, and that the Crows had been told by the Northwest Indian Commission in 1866 that the Fort Laramie treaty had expired, terminated, and a new treaty was necessary, Indian Commissioner Taylor told the Crows on November 12, 1867:

We learn that valuable mines have been discovered in your country, which in some instances are taken possession of by the white people. We learn that roads are laid out and traveled through your land; that settlements have been made upon your lands; that your game is being driven away and is fast disappearing. We know also that the white people are rapidly increasing and are taking possession of and occupying all the valuable lands.

Under these circumstances we are sent by the Great Father and the Great Council at Washington to arrange some plan to relieve you as far as possible from the bad consequences of this state of things and to protect you from future difficulties. We desire to set apart a tract of your country as a home for yourselves and children forever, upon which your Great Father will not permit the white man to trespass. * * * We will always feel grateful for your friendship to us. We will show our friendship by our acts.

It may be stated here that the Crows had occupied the area embracing Montana and parts of Wyoming from time immemorial; that they held their country against all comers, and naturally they considered it their land and their home; they thought their occupancy and possession of their lands had been confirmed by the United States by the Laramie treaty of 1851, but they were told by the Northwest Indian Commission that such treaty had expired; had terminated, which the Court of Claims has held in the Fort Berthold case was erroneous.

Bear's Tooth, replying to Commissioner Taylor, among other things, said:

A long time ago you made a treaty with my nation, the Crows. * * * The Sioux told us you were going to fool us and not give us back our country, and that you would play us the same trick you did them.

Blackfoot said:

A long time ago a treaty was made with us. Our agent told us the Great Father wanted to see us. We had an enemy's country to go through, but we went. We sold them the California road. They were to give us goods for 50 years. * * * We are being surrounded by the whites and by other nations. Our country is getting smaller and smaller. The whites have made two branches of a road beside the California and have cut up the best game country we have. * * * You would be mad if we were to go into your country and kill all your stock. I cannot go anywhere without coming on some of your people. I would like to have them called in and the road stopped (meaning the Powder River Road). Your people do not make anything by that road that I can see. Your people going through the country looking for gold are the ones who cause us much trouble. I ask you to stop them. * * * Give us a good agent. Give us a copy of the treaty that you will make with us.

Wolf Bow:

None of us ever fought against you. We have never been your enemies. * * * Call off your young men from the Powder River Road and let that road be abandoned. * * * Put the Sioux Indians in their own country and keep them from troubling us.

Commissioner Taylor, the next day, said:

On account of your refusing to join the Sioux against us, when urgently requested to do so, you are dearer to us than ever. We hope when you return to your country that you will inform the Sioux of our promises, and that they will be induced to make peace. * * * Formerly you could find all the game you needed, but now the buffalo have entirely disappeared from a large portion of your country. The game will soon entirely disappear. Our people were formerly confined to the eastern country, but they are rapidly spreading all over the West. Your Great Father looks ahead and wishes to preserve, for your own use, some of the good lands as a reservation for you and your children forever. * * * We are sorry all who are interested in that (Powder River) road are not here. If they were we might settle the question at once, but as only a few are here we can only tell you what to say to the Sioux when you return. We will consider your wishes in that respect. We will meet you next spring [NOTE.—This was in the autumn of 1867] and settle the matter. * * * If you will stop the war and keep the peace in good faith until we hold our peace council next year, we may do as you wish us to do about the road and the posts. We hold that road to protect our people against bad Indians. If war continues, the posts and roads will be held. If we do not abandon the road in the spring we will pay you for it.

Blackfoot, replying, said:

We are not very numerous but are very strong and powerful. There is plenty of buffalo, deer, elk in my country, beaver in all the streams and plenty of fish. * * * Your people like to get my country for nothing. That is not right. I want to be paid for it. I believe all you tell me * * *. You have not kept the promises made to us in the last treaty. We have only received goods once, when we ought to have received them every year.

Commissioner Taylor:

The goods were sent by the Great Father, but were stolen by his agents. We will report the matter to him and have you righted.

Wolf Bow:

I am peaceable, and yet you refused me ammunition. The Sioux are trying to get me to join them, but I want to stay with the whites. I do not want my country made the battleground of the Sioux, as you might think my nation was mixed up with them. (Indian Office files, treaty box.)

General Sanborn said they had drawn up a treaty and asked if the Crows would sign then or next spring, to which Blackfoot replied that they would sign in the spring when the Commissioners came to Kearney and could see all the Indians together.

The Peace Commission again met the Mountain Crows in council at Fort Laramie, May 6 and 7, 1868, and after further but unimportant discussion the treaty drafted by the Commission was presented and signed on May 7, 1868 (15 Stat. 649).

The cession made by the Crows by this treaty was over 30,530,000 acres of valuable mineral and agricultural land and the consideration named in the treaty in the form of annuities and goods amounted to $1,499,866, or about 5 cents an acre.

The treaty of May 7, 1868, was made on the part of the Government under the erroneous conviction that the Fort Laramie treaty was not law and that the Crows had merely an occupancy right to the land, whereas in fact and in law they held a treaty title, which it is conceded is of far greater value than a mere right of occupancy. Under the circumstances it is plain that on account of the mistake of fact as to whether or not the Crows had a treaty title, the Government paid the Crows a wholly inadequate consideration. As stated, most of the consideration was paid in goods, and the following statement made by Chief Blackfoot before the Brunot Commission of 1873 shows the character of goods furnished the Crows:

The treaty (of 1868) you say, has bought all our land except on the side of the river. And what do we get for it? We get a pair of stockings, and when we put them on they go to pieces. They get some old shirts and have them washed, and give them to us; we put them on and our elbows go right through them. They send us tin kettles; we go to get water to carry to our lodges; we dip the water up, but it all runs out again. That is what we get for our land. Why do they send us annuity goods? We go to the buffalo country and get skins; our wives dress them, and we give them to our friends. We give more presents to our white friends than all the annuity goods we get are worth. And this is what we get for our lands! What goods are given us are no better than we give the whites, and I do not see what we are getting for our lands. (Report of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, 1873, p. 136.)

On the question of inadequacy of consideration paid the Crows, the following taken from the report of the Commission which made the treaty of May 7, 1868, which report is addressed to the Secretary of the Interior in submitting said treaty, proves the great value of the land ceded:

We have made our stipulations with them (Crows) as with a perfectly barbarous people. * * *

It will be seen from the above that in fixing the terms of these treaties the Commission has been governed less by the consideration of the value of possessions ceded by the Indians than by what they considered essential conditions to the maintenance of peace with and the civilization of the Indians. The whole expense of this 30 years' effort to civilize is no more expense than 30 weeks' expense of actual war with them.

But if the value of the possessions ceded is to be considered, then for stronger reasons the Government should not hesitate to have the treaties ratified and executed. Mineral lands of exhaustless wealth and inconceivable value extending over thousands of square miles; navigable streams, rivers of hundreds of miles in extent, on the banks of some of which (the Muscle Shell) our capitalists have already invested more than a million dollars in mines of copper that promise to exceed in richness any that have ever before been discovered. Large agricultural tracts, the finest of the eastern slopes of the mountains, are a portion of what these tribes have ceded by this treaty.

Former Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Meritt, before the Joint Congressional Committee on Northern Pacific Land Grants, testified under date of April 16, 1925—Hearings before Joint Congressional Committee on Investigation of Northern Pacific Land Grant, part 4, page 1927:

Mr. RAKER. What does the record show that the Crow Indians received, if anything, for making the treaty of May 7, 1868, and reducing the amount of land specified in the Laramie Treaty of 1851?

Mr. MERITT. In reading the treaty, gentlemen of the committee, I was impressed with how little they got for the large amount of territory they gave up under that treaty of 1868. * * * The Crows gave up approximately 30,000,000 acres of land under that treaty of 1868, and it is claimed that some of that land was very valuable for mineral and other purposes; and they got very little in return for it.

Mr. RAKER. Well, it has not been only in this case but in others; it has been demonstrated to me that the Indians, even following and after these treaties, have not been dealt with fairly.

In a report of the Secretary of the Interior to the Senate Indian Committee dated April 20, 1936, he stated:

The amount received by the Indians (Crows) for the vast area of 30,530,764 acres appears to have been inadequate.

By the Northern Pacific Land Grant Acts of 1864 and 1870 (13 Stat. 365 and 16 Stat. 378) it was provided the lands granted should bring the railroad company $2.50 per acre. In order to avoid competition with the Northern Pacific in the sales of its land grant the price of public lands in alternate sections was raised by the above acts from $1.25 to $2.50.

A letter by James B. Kerr, counsel for the Northern Pacific, to the Congressional Investigating Committee, part 6, page 3419, states that for the year ending June 30, 1875, "303,338 acres were sold for $1,766,326, the average price per acre being $5.82."

Northern Pacific Land-Grant Congressional Hearings, part 6, page 3294, show that up to June 30, 1925, the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. and its subsidiary, the Northwestern Improvement Co., reserved the mineral rights in the case of 3,109,898 acres and that 1,955,278 acres of these mineral-right reservations were in Montana. Of the mineral reservations in Montana, the hearings show—page 3295—160,176 acres were reserved in Custer County, 135,340 acres in Musselshell County, 105,413 acres in Yellowstone County, and 499,472 acres in Rosebud County, the mineral-right reservations being largely on account of coal and including the entire Forsyth coal field.

A statement submitted by Attorney Kerr, of the Northern Pacific—part 6, page 3323—states that on June 30, 1887, the gross proceeds of land sales by the Northern Pacific and its subsidiary land company was $57,890,622.17, and the net proceeds, after deducting expenses and taxes, was $45,146,306.07. The statement said the "average gross selling price as of June 30, 1887, was $2.048 per acre for land and an average net price of $1.50." The statement said that up to 1924 the gross from land sales was $109,745,100.70 and the net $81,549,819.09.

Many million acres of land within the boundaries of the Crow Fort Laramie Treaty Reservation, ceded by the treaty of May 7, 1868, were granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. for land grants, and an action is now pending in the courts of the State of Washington, brought by the Government, to secure the return of such lands as have been unlawfully received by the company.

I will now repeat the quotation from the decision of the Court of Claims in the Fort Berthold Indian case, above cited, on the point of the "erroneous conviction" on the part of the Government officials that the Fort Laramie treaty of 1851 was not law, viz:

The treaty of Fort Laramie of 1851 was ratified by the Senate on May 24, 1852, after amending article 7 of the same. The amended treaty was returned to the tribes for their assent to the modification of the same. All tribes assented thereto, and, due to an administrative error and oversight, the treaty was never proclaimed; hence the Indian Office and other delegated officials concerned in negotiations with the Indians proceeded upon the erroneous conviction that the Fort Laramie treaty was never ratified. Congress, however, recognized its terms and appropriated the sums mentioned in the treaty to meet the Government's annual obligation under it to the Indians. There can be no doubt that the failure of governmental officials and others dealing with the Indians at this time to recognize the treaty of 1851 was due exclusively to a belief that the treaty of 1851 was never ratified by the Senate. The plaintiff Indians were at the time an ignorant and unlettered people, forced by their status and situation to rely implicitly upon the representatives of the Government; and while they laid claim to a much larger territory than the 1870 reservation, they were in no position to controvert an alleged existing condition, which was represented to them by those in authority as leaving them without any landed reservation whatever. As we look at it, it was the Government's error and unintended misrepresentation which resulted in procuring a settlement with the Indians in 1870 which did not equitably compensate them for rights granted under the Fort Laramie treaty of 1851.

The claims presented by the Crows come squarely within the above holding of the Court of Claims. The conditions as to knowledge of Government officials prevailing in May 1868, when the Crow treaty was made, were identically the same that prevailed 2 years later when a transaction was consummated regarding the lands of the Fort Berthold Indians. Both had been treated as though the Fort Laramie treaty was nonexistent. Under the "erroneous conviction" and "belief" of Government officials, as stated by the court, that the Laramie treaty was not a law and consequently neither the Fort Berthold Indians nor the Crow Indians had a treaty title to the lands they occupied, the Government in the Fort Berthold case took away their lands without compensation and in the Crow case obtained their lands for an inadequate consideration.

There was a mutual mistake of fact on the part of the United States when it made the Crow treaty of May 7, 1868, and informed the Crows that the 1851 Laramie treaty had expired, had terminated, and the Crows accepted the statement from the official representatives of the Government as correct. Coming as it did from superior beings, who possessed the treaty and knew, or should have known, all about what happened to it, it cannot be argued that the Crows knew the true facts in 1868. In view of what the Government commission told the Crows the United States cannot contend that the Crows should have known to the contrary. As stated by the Court of Claims in the Fort Berthold case, "they were in no position to controvert an alleged existing condition which was represented to them by those in authority as leaving them without any landed reservation whatever." In other words, it was a mistake of fact as to title which induced payment of a wholly inadequate consideration for a valid treaty title to a defined area. Payment was not made or provided for on the basis of a valid treaty title. This point is basic in the Crow case.

There is now pending on the House Calendar Senate Joint Resolution 55, conferring adequate and effective jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to adjudicate the claims of the Crow Indians, and when said joint resolution is under consideration I am confident that this House will see that justice and equity are done the Crow Indians of Montana.

As long as I am in Congress I am going to fight to see that the Indians get a square deal. I do not believe that they have always been dealt with fairly. This work I will regard as a large part of my duties as Congressman. [Applause.]

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER].

THE RECORD MADE AT MEMPHIS IN THE 1937 FLOOD ON THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, as the most disastrous flood in the annals of the Mississippi Valley becomes part of the history of our country, it is proper to record the magnificent fight made by National, State, county, city, and private agencies centered at Memphis for the relief of hundreds of thousands of homeless and suffering people, for the protection of millions of dollars' worth of property from damage and loss, and for the care and treatment of the thousands who were made ill from exposure, fatigue, and hunger.

No finer exhibition of the American spirit exists than that displayed over the length and breadth of the Nation when the news spread that cities, towns, villages, and farms along the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers and their tributaries were being inundated by a superflood. Almost $25,000,000 flowed into the treasury of the American Red Cross, and the hearts of the people went out to a stricken humanity. A heroic struggle against a destructive force of nature was necessary. Along a front of more than 2,000 miles, courageous men and women labored day and night while the rivers drowned their banks and the floodwaters rushed on to the Gulf of Mexico in a volume of 3,000,000 cubic feet per second.

The President of the United States, based on early reports of unprecedented rainfalls and summer temperatures in the upper Ohio Valley, quickly recognized the danger and called upon the American Red Cross and various governmental agencies to do everything in their power to prevent deaths among the threatened inhabitants and destruction of their property, and to ameliorate suffering. The Army being prepared for emergencies of this nature, Gen. Malin Craig, the Chief of Staff, under the general direction of the Secretary of War, was put in immediate charge. Prompt decisions were vital. Time and distance were important elements. An improvised organization had to be accomplished quickly, not only to direct the Army's efforts, but to coordinate all the other splendid units, governmental and civil, which wanted to cooperate. Without hesitation, General Craig threw in the entire support and resources of the War Department. In brief radiograms to corps area commanders and district engineers, the situation was explained, troops and supply establishments were alerted and instructed, and most important of all, responsibilities were definitely placed, so that every one of the thousands of miles of river bank in danger would be watched and precautions taken to avert the impending disaster.

As the crests moved southward, Memphis became the flood capital of the Mississippi Valley. Built on the fourth Chickasaw bluff, high above the river, and possessing extensive urban facilities and a large depot of the United States Engineer Corps, Memphis was the strategic point of resistance and became the shelter of more than 60,000 panic-stricken refugees who hurried into the city from the lowlands of eastern Arkansas, southeastern Missouri, northern Mississippi, and western Tennessee.

When it appeared that the crest might exceed the height of the levees which protected the rich and populous St. Francis Valley, word went out to prepare for an all-time high-water record on the Mississippi. Troubled and overwrought people construed the warning as an order to evacuate the valley and a flight which has been described as comparable to that of the helpless Belgians before the German Army in 1914 was suddenly under way. All roads led to Memphis. "On they came, like trails of ants", laden with all the worldly goods which they could carry in wagons, on trucks, or in packs on their rain-soaked, shivering backs. The lame, the sick, and the weary faltered on the roadside, overladen vehicles failed under the loads and jammed the highways for hours, while shrewd traders, taking advantage of misery and distress, bought livestock and household effects from the refugees at grossly inadequate prices.

For a hundred years Memphis has been known as the place of refuge from floodwaters, and as the unbroken caravans entered the open gates our people rose in mass to meet the new emergency. In this crisis Memphians faced a double task. More refugees than ever before had to be fed, clothed, housed, and given medical care, and the outskirts of the city had to be protected from the rapidly rising river. Two populated sections would be subject to overflow at a 55-foot stage of the Mississippi River—the North Memphis, or Wolf River Basin, embracing 3,051 acres, on which are located 4,600 dwellings and store buildings and 40 industrial plants, all of an aggregate value of approximately $18,800,000; and the South Memphis, or Nonconnah River Basin, north of the levee, 1,789 acres in area, and including more than 300 homes and stores and 20 industries, aggregating in value $5,100,000. A valuable riverside drive and extensive wharf and dock facilities were seriously menaced also. But human needs would be met first.

On January 20, 1937, the city government granted Mayor Watkins Overton extraordinary powers to take all such steps as he deemed necessary to meet the crisis and the county commission reposed special authority in its chairman, E. W. Hale. Immediately a comprehensive plan was drafted and an emergency flood committee was created to handle every problem that might arise. An efficient organization was set up and went into action on a 24-hour schedule, and by the time that arrivals of refugees reached a daily load of 6,000 persons Memphis was prepared to receive them.

The Mid-South Fair Grounds, comprising 125 acres, became an immense camp. To supplement permanent structures already available, eight 100-bed dormitories, 4 bathhouses, kitchens, mess halls, an administration building, and a clinic were built to provide essential facilities. The United States Army sent more than 25,000 cots and 6,000 blankets for the use of the refugees at the camp. The city closed 18 public schools and transformed 12 buildings into hospitals and refugee centers. The new Juvenile Court Building became a hospital for 200 children, many of whom had been separated from their parents during the panic. A "well babies' clinic" was established at the fair-grounds camp, where doctors and nurses experienced in infant and child hygiene examined, bathed, clothed, and fed the babies and youngsters.

Each refugee was registered and tagged on arrival and was immunized against typhoid fever and smallpox. Many children were also given diphtheria serum. Isolation hospitals were set up to care for cases of communicable diseases, for which the centers were checked daily. Clinics were held. A corps of inspectors was put on sanitary patrol duty at the camps and centers. A small army of doctors, internes, nurses, medical students, and attendants worked unceasingly to hospitalize the sick and prevent the spread of disease. As there were fewer than 1,000 cases of serious illness among 60,000 or more refugees, the health measures which were adopted proved effective. When the dangers of overcrowding became imminent, large contingents of refugees were transferred to other points in Tennessee and to Mississippi and Alabama, where especial care likewise was given.

The American Red Cross, sensing a disaster, established headquarters in Memphis on January 22 and sent some of its most efficient and experienced representatives to have charge of the work of rescue, relief, and rehabilitation. The local chapter of that great organization raised over $213,000, considerably more than the community's quota, and expressive of a generous desire to do its own part and help to relieve the distress elsewhere.

The completeness and effectiveness of the work of the Red Cross whenever and wherever disaster strikes has become so traditional that to comment on its signal efforts in the Memphis area during the 1937 flood emergency is but to repeat an ofttold story. Throughout the years we have learned to expect 100 percent cooperation and efficiency from the Red Cross in times of stress, and of course it was forthcoming in this instance. From the Memphis headquarters all operations of the Red Cross in the local area and in the States of Tennessee, Mississippi, and Louisiana were directed. In the event of levee crevasses the wide territory adjacent to the Mississippi River would be inundated and cause a repetition of what had already happened in the Ohio Valley. Part of the basin actually was submerged where waters from the Mississippi backed into the tributary feeders. It was responsibility of the Red Cross not only to care for refugees who found their own way to Memphis and elsewhere, but also to supervise and direct the organization of rescue parties and seek out and bring into this port of safety those who were marooned on housetops, in trees, in barn lofts, and in other precarious situations. A very real hazard of life existed in the rural areas where only about one-half of the people could be induced to leave their homes. Those remaining were determined to stay until the floodwaters actually reached them. When they were forced to leave many were ill from exposure and lack of nourishment, and the Red Cross provided warm clothing, wholesome food, medicines, and comfortable shelter to all alike. The Junior Red Cross, too, did a most helpful service in presenting recreational programs for each concentration center.

In conjunction with the Red Cross, the ministers of all denominations formed a religious-work committee, under the leadership of Rev. R. J. Bateman, chairman, and Rev.

Robert H. McCaslin, vice-chairman. The committee organized the pastors and the religious workers, white and colored, and served in every concentration point, day and night, comforting and ministering to the sufferers, holding services, and placing refugees in homes wherever possible.

The railroads, air lines, street railway and bus lines, ambulances, steamboat and other transportation agencies, including taxicab companies and private automobile owners, cooperated to the fullest in moving refugees into and out of Memphis. The four large radio stations broadcasting from Memphis joined with hundreds of smaller stations in the flood areas and with amateur and short-wave stations in disseminating information of vital importance to those in the path of the onrushing waters, as well as to the scores of rescue parties working day and night to save those in danger. The Signal Corps improvised an effective communication system for the battle. It consisted of radio, supplemented by wire lines, Air Corps and messenger service, in order that reserves of manpower and supplies could be started to threatened points in time. At Memphis the Army engineers had 23 radio stations, the Army flood relief had 21 river stations, and the Federal Barge Line 3. The Army also provided 400 miles of military field wire and 400 field telephones so that the levee patrolmen could flash each indication of a levee failure. The newspapers, telephone, and telegraph companies also were tremendous factors in giving needed publicity to all phases of the vast relief program.

As soon as it appeared that the problem was reaching critical proportions, President Roosevelt sent Maj. Gen. George V. H. Moseley, commanding Fourth Corps Area, United States Army; Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, Chief of Engineers; Surg. Gen. Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service; Director Harry L. Hopkins, of the Works Progress Administration; Col. F. C. Harrington, of the United States engineers, and others to Memphis for a complete survey of the situation. The Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard, the Marines, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Tennessee National Guard, the National and State Public Health Services, and the Forestry Service all converged in Memphis for the performance of particular duty in each field.

Memphis Post, No. 1, of the American Legion, in cooperation with the Red Cross, commanded and operated the camp at the fair grounds, and its members held key positions in many of the organizations which were on duty everywhere. The Legionnaires worked day and night throughout the campaign, and discharged loyally and thoroughly the particularly arduous tasks placed upon them. The Boy Scouts likewise gave unstintingly of their services.

Medical-relief activities at Memphis were consolidated and achieved the utmost efficency. Local physicians to the number of approximately 300, including the entire membership of the Memphis and Shelby County Medical Society, played a very large part in extending medical care to the sick and suffering. These volunteer physicians, working in close cooperation with the medical relief committee of the American Red Cross, rotated in assisting the nine doctors composing that committee, on duty in emergency hospitals. The records show 70,707 out-patient treatments administered and 2,515 sick refugees cared for in all the hospitals. Medical students of the University of Tennessee also did their part by assisting physicians at first-aid stations and the health authorities in administering 70,646 vaccinations and inoculations.

The United State Public Health Service did a most creditable job under the direction of Dr. M. S. Lombard, medical officer in charge of the Marine Hospital at Memphis, and deserves high praise for the way in which this all-important phase of the flood-relief work was coordinated and carried through. A most heartening spirit of harmony prevailed among those who participated in all the staggering human tasks, and there were practically no delays or misunderstandings to hinder the work and thereby jeopardize the lives of those requiring medical attention. Nothing was left undone that could and should have been done to insure a maximum of health and minimum of suffering among the flood victims.

The Army engineers, who, as a corps, have studied the rivers for over a hundred years, were admirably suited to direct the protective work against the flood. They mobilized a great body of workers consisting of civilians in the various localities, P. W. A. workers, C. C. C. men, and soldiers, both of the Regular Army and the National Guard, and continuously fought the sinister encroachment of the yellow waters up the levees. As rapidly as the Mississippi River rose, the work of rescuing thousands who had been unwilling to leave their homes became an acute problem. Every available craft was pressed into service and fleets of small boats were built by the Engineers Corps, the city of Memphis, and the Red Cross, and sent in search of stranded refugees. Several thousand people, large quantities of household equipment, livestock, and farming implements also were brought to safety in Memphis through the efforts of volunteers, many of them doing heroic duty in the face of hazards seen and unseen.

The United State Coast Guard, which well might be called the Red Cross of the sea, rendered invaluable aid in the Memphis area. It is axiomatic that the Coast Guard may be relied upon to appear upon the scene, stripped for action, on the approach of any threatened marine disaster, and its efficiency in protecting property and human life has rarely been more clearly shown than during the 1937 flood. Starting with the first threat of an overflow in the upper Ohio Valley, the Coast Guard rode with, and often in advance of, the crest of the flood over its entire course, rescuing its hapless victims, ministering to the suffering, and salvaging the property of the homeless.

The arrival of two picket boats from New Orleans on the evening of January 23 with seven rescued persons aboard marked the beginning of Coast Guard activities at and around Memphis. This modest nucleus was quickly augmented by six 165-foot, eight 125-foot, and nine 75-foot patrol boats, stationed at crucial points along the Mississippi River, where anxiety over threatened breaks in the levee system prevailed as the flood crest drew near. These boats were radio equipped and provided shelter for the crews of innumerable small Coast Guard boats of the open motorboat type that were dispatched in all directions to respond to calls for help from marooned flood victims.

Under the direction of Commander Henry Coyle, headquarters and an emergency radio station were set up in the same building with the Red Cross, and these two great humane agencies joined hands, under the supervision of the latter, in linking Memphis with a chain of 240 radio stations operating throughout the flood area and carrying to a successful conclusion rescue work that was nothing short of magnificent. As many as 1,000 messages a day were cleared through the Memphis emergency Coast Guard radio center.

After the flood crest passed from the Ohio River into the Mississippi and was rushing headlong toward Memphis and the lower valley, Commander Coyle was joined by Captain Reinburg, commander of all Coast Guard relief forces, and with him came reinforcements, including 6 observation planes, and additional boats to bring the total up to 64, with a total personnel of 300 Coast Guardsmen. The service of this highly trained force embraced not only rescue work but the return of refugees to their homes, the transportation of mails, towing of boats, houses, and barns, and miscellaneous duties too numerous to mention. A summary of Coast Guard operations in and around Memphis discloses that transportation was provided to 3,112 refugees, 615 passengers, 183 Red Cross nurses and doctors, 809 troops, 432 head of livestock, and 6 tons of feed grain.

Of no less importance than the part of other agencies was the role of the Works Progress Administration in the general flood-relief drama at Memphis. For 27 days and nights the W. P. A. remained on duty, supplying relief labor to man the forces required in bolstering the levees protecting the threatened industrial districts of the city and county, and also in lending assistance to the Red Cross in the establishment and operation of warehouses, the distribution of food and clothing, and the servicing of refugee camps and emergency hospitals. Throughout the period the W. P. A. employed and superintended the work of an average of 4,400 persons per day, reaching the limit of 10,000 during the several days when the work was at its peak. Practically all of this labor was drawn from relief rolls, affording temporary employment to persons who were without income and who could not afford to volunteer their services when they themselves were in what might be described as a state of emergency.

Activities of the W. P. A. did not cease with the passing of the flood threat and the return of refugees to their homes, but continued well beyond that time and were directed to the cleaning up and restoring of buildings and camp sites utilized for relief work. From the beginning to the end the Works Progress Administration was most useful, and the people of the district which I represent appreciate it.

The Tennessee Valley Authority volunteered its services and contributed materially to the successful handling of the situation in the Memphis area. Under the direction of Maj. H. E. Davis, chief of its reservoir clearance division, the T. V. A. almost overnight established the camp at Hodges Field, a local athletic center, from which was directed the activities of an emergency personnel of 600 trained employees, including physicians, nurses, first-aid men, engineers, guards, carpenters, boat operators, car and truck drivers, and mechanics. Many carloads of equipment were supplied, including 62 boats with or without motors, 74 passenger automobiles, 115 trucks, 7 ambulances, and such miscellaneous equipment as tractors, tents, bedding, waterproof clothing, and so forth.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, we recognize the fact that the Tennessee Valley Authority had already performed a service of far greater magnitude by protecting the vast Tennessee Valley area from any flood at all. That was accomplished, shall we say, automatically, through the normal operation of the series of dams constructed thus far as a part of the President's great flood protection and water program. This experience alone should pave the way toward an expansion of this program to other sections of the country.

The Tennessee Valley Authority has earned and has already received the highest praise from Army and Red Cross officials, as well as from the mayor of Memphis for the conspicuous service it rendered in the fight against a common foe—flood disaster—even though the battleground lay beyond its immediate field of activities.

The rising waters brought to Memphis another and an exceedingly difficult task of protecting the marginal lands in the north and south portion of the city from overflow. On Wolf River, the city government constructed a levee of 500,000 sand bags, and employed 2,000 men to protect an important section from irreparable damage. On the south side, only the most extraordinary efforts prevented the inundation of a large industrial area and a section in which the homes of many factory workers were located. There, the combat was hardest, and was led by my valiant and distinguished predecessor, the Honorable E. H. Crump. He took personal charge of 5,000 toiling men, and stood in mud and water for days and portions of nights in order to construct and strengthen a levee along the north bank of Nonconnah River where rising back waters from the Mississippi River flowed into an otherwise peaceful stream and threatened destruction of life and property. To those of us who know Mr. Crump, it was not surprising that he was in the forefront of the fight and exposed himself to dangers without regard to his personal safety and health. Volunteers joined him, and men from the prison camps, pressed into emergency service, worked with revived spirits while under his charge, without promise of any sort of compensation. Nevertheless, they were justly rewarded when the job was done.

Rising from a stage of 30 feet at Memphis on January 14, the Mississippi River crested there on February 9, at 50.4 feet, or 3.8 feet above any previous record, and rose to within 1.6 feet of the top of the North Memphis levee. Fortunately, the high bluff protected the major portions of the city from danger, but the lowlands on Wolf River and Nonconnah River were submerged by backwaters from the Mississippi River. The crest remained at Memphis for 3 days and slowly receded, leaving in its wake the correspondingly serious problem of cleaning the inundated areas, and returning the bewildered refugees and victims to their homes. Many had lost everything in the flood. Clothes were supplied, sufficient food provided, and transportation was furnished wherever needed. The problem of rehabilitation was a prodigious one and sometimes heart rending.

A stubborn fight was won, with remarkably satisfactory results. Of the more than 60,000 refugees assembled in the city of Memphis, there were only 150 deaths, caused principally by pneumonia resulting from exposure, and contracted before reaching the city. The great levee across the Mississippi from Memphis, constructed under the supervision of the Army engineers, and protecting the rich agricultural land in eastern Arkansas and Missouri, withstood the flood. On that eventuality, everything hinged. The city of Memphis sustained property damage amounting to about $300,000; and about $900,000 was raised by the city and private interests and spent in providing flood prevention.

The people of America have drawn real lessons from the gigantic 1937 flood. We know that we have in the Federal Government the available facilities and the trained personnel to meet and overcome many of the effects of sudden and terrific emergencies, although the people themselves are wholly unprepared to cope with the sweeping destruction of a vis major. We know that great cataclysms of water will fall again as they have fallen before to deluge the earth. We know that there is no escape from the surging waters of a flood and its consequences, but we can minimize the loss and damage by man-made barriers and human understanding.

The people of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys faced their adversities with fortitude and resignation. A calamity of the magnitude of the 1937 flood makes all of the victims akin and knits the people into an unity of spirit and purpose, bringing the traditional American trait of neighborliness to the fore today as distinctly as it was evidenced in earlier days. The name "Memphis" means "place of good abode", and the people of this hospitable city of the old South proved themselves good neighbors in a time of great strain, and I am proud to pay tribute to them. And this American trait is not confined to my home city. It is everywhere in our wonderful land. It permeates the atmosphere of America. In that spirit of unselfish cooperation and with a deep sense of thankfulness and gratitude to everyone, the people of the Mississippi Valley, a sturdy people, have joined hands in the rehabilitation of farm, home, and business, and are working their way back to prosperity even before the new chapter in American history is written.

Set up primarily as a temporary emergency organization, Mayor Overton's emergency flood committee has been converted into a permanent institution, subject to call at any other time that Memphis may be privileged to play the role of "good neighbor" to those in distress. The work of the committee, under the supervision of the mayor, is apportioned among no less than 28 subcommittees, each under the direct guidance of a public-spirited citizen and each charged with some specific phase of relief work. It is a well-knit, skillfully coordinated fighting force that can be mobilized and thrown into high gear within 24 hours should the occasion demand.

On us in Congress the 1937 flood has placed the responsibility of seeing that no such devastation shall ever occur again if human hands can prevent and human ingenuity devise means to avoid. From the standpoint of economic stability, safety, public health, and common humanity, a program of adequate flood protection for the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys must be undertaken and pushed to early completion. All of the cities and towns and villages must be made safe, and impartial consideration must be given to the problems of each and every community. Along with other places, Memphis, the haven of refuge, needs protection, and her problem of flood control is one of concern to the entire lower valley.

As in the past, Memphis may be depended upon as the strategical position in any mid-Mississippi flood emergency. The city's lofty bluff overlooking the river ever beckons the refugee. It is the highest point between St. Louis and New Orleans to which the unfortunate may fly for safety, and if and when Memphis is called upon again to become the snug harbor for Mississippi River flood victims, the city should not be hampered by the necessity of providing temporary flood protection on its own account. This Congress should see to that. For value received during the recent flood period alone, the Federal Government should compensate the city of Memphis by providing permanent protection for its outlying sections, thereby leaving the citizens free to concentrate their attention and resources on the far greater task of caring for the refugees who come from every nook and corner of the lowlands.

A comprehensive plan for flood control at Memphis has been submitted by the city to the Mississippi River Commission, which has made recommendations to the War Department for appropriate action by Congress. In brief, this plan contemplates the construction of two retaining walls, supplemented by two earth levees further inland, one along the northern border of the city, and the other at the extreme southern boundary. Provision also is made for construction at the city's expense of auxiliary pumping stations of sufficient capacity to pump surface storm water over the barriers and into the river. The effect thereof would be to protect submarginal areas from any flood reaching a level of 55 feet on the United States engineers' gage, and thereby preserve homes and industrial properties having a conservatively estimated value of approximately $25,000,000. Suffice it to say here that the city of Memphis, situated at the crossroads of the South and supplying the needs of 10,775,000 people, occupies an important place in the well-being and security of our country, and that the proposed program of permanent flood protection is of national importance and wide public interest.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN]

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I endorse what has just been said by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON], chairman of the Flood Control Committee.

BUDGET RECOMMENDATION OF $30,000,000 INSUFFICIENT

I believe that the sum of $30,000,000 recommended by the Budget for the construction of projects under the omnibus Flood Control Act is insufficient and in support of that statement I call upon no less an authority than the report of the committee itself. The report on this bill, as my colleagues will note, states on page 6:

> The Chief of Engineers indicated to the committee that definite plans have been prepared and assurances of local cooperation received for projects totaling a cost of $150,000,000.

Here is another passage from the committee report:

> Because of the almost certain recurrences, with always the possibility of unprecedented proportions of these forces, the Budget estimate quite obviously is not adequate.

The committee itself states that the Budget estimate of $30,000,000 for the construction of projects under the omnibus act is inadequate, still the committee comes in here and reports a bill appropriating only $30,000,000. I say that constitutes an open invitation to the members of the Committee of the Whole to increase that amount to such an extent as we think is necessary to meet the urgent needs for protecting the lives of our people and the property of our people.

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I am sorry. I only have a few minutes.

THE PRIMARY FUNCTION OF GOVERNMENT IS THE PROTECTION OF THE LIVES AND PROPERTY OF THE PEOPLE

Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Members to the fact that the Congress and not the Bureau of the Budget is responsible for legislation and every Member is charged with responsibility to provide protection against future floods. If you do not appropriate a sufficient amount, will you take it upon your conscience to answer for the thousands of lives that may be lost in the future? Will you, my colleagues, take it upon your conscience to answer for the millions and millions of dollars that might be lost, because you are trying to save a few pennies? Will you take it upon your conscience to cripple national defense?

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I cannot yield.

Mr. Chairman, will the Members take it upon their conscience to subject the Ohio Valley, in which is concentrated the industrial might and force of this Nation, to flood damages, so that if any flood occurs it might interrupt preparations for national defense? I say that we have a duty to perform. The primary function of government is the protection of the lives and the property of our people and we must protect those lives and that property against floods. Last year and this year the floods alone drove 300,000 people from their homes and cost $750,000,000 in property damages.

I hope the committee itself will offer an amendment increasing this amount and if nobody else does I shall.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DEMUTH].

Mr. DEMUTH. Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that while we are embarking on a definite program to protect the lives and property of the citizens of this country, I think it behooves us all to know that our plans are correct. According to the figures I have received from the War Department, the cost of the nine dams authorized to protect Pittsburgh and the people living on the tributaries of the Ohio River, including those on the Allegheny, Monongahela, and upper Ohio River, will cost $44,994,305.

According to the records offered at the hearing, it is proposed to supply the sum of $5,000,000 the first year, $6,000,000 the second year, $6,000,000 the third year, $6,000,000 the fourth year, and $607,500 for the fifth year.

This makes a total of only $23,607,500, which will leave a deficit to complete the program of $21,386,805. Therefore, I would urge the committee to make a recommendation to include sufficient money to carry out the program, because, according to these figures, the only way the program can be completed is by spending the total amount of approximately $45,000,000, or by eliminating some of the nine reservoirs already authorized to protect Pittsburgh. I know it is not the intention to eliminate any of the reservoirs, because we should have additional reservoirs rather than fewer reservoirs to protect Pittsburgh. The information that has been submitted is that the nine reservoirs will reduce the crest at Pittsburgh 10.1 feet, and this will increase as you go upstream and decrease proportionately as you go downstream. Since we in Pittsburgh and in that district understand our program calls for nine reservoirs, the Budget and the appropriation should be sufficient to take care of this amount over a 5-year period and not fall short by more than $21,000,000 over the 5-year program. [Applause.]

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAHON].

Mr. MAHON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct attention for a moment from the subject of flood control to the item in this bill under the caption of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, which provides for an appropriation of approximately $140,000 for the Bureau of Insular Affairs in administering our government in the Philippine Islands. Of course, this $140,000 item is not tremendously large. The item is in the bill to take care of the salaries of the High Commissioner and other salaries and incidental expenses of approximately 40 employees of the United States Government in Manila. We are paying the former Governor of Indiana, Hon. Paul V. McNutt, the sum of $18,000 per year in his present capacity of United States High Commissioner to the Philippines.

The mention of his name will recall to your mind an unfortunate incident which occurred in Manila a few weeks ago. It was somewhat of a "tempest in a teapot", but it precipitated a very awkward situation in Filipino-American relations. You will recall that Mr. McNutt issued a rather abrupt notice that in the future at social functions he should be toasted prior to the President of the Philippines, Hon. Manuel Quezon. The High Commissioner was technically correct, but his lack of diplomacy in handling this situation brought forth a burst of unfavorable comment in American newspapers and created friction and ill-will on the part of the Filipinos against the United States. Our rating for diplomacy in the Far East suffered one more jolt.

This little incident over such a small matter shows that it is not difficult to get into embarrassing situations in the Orient. The world is full of war and rumors of war. Peace is the dearest thing to the hearts of the American people but a survey of world conditions does not make one feel that there is much hope for world peace. A major war in Europe or in the Orient would not surprise many people. We are legislating for neutrality. We are bent on preserving peace for America regardless of war in Europe or Asia. We are far from Europe but as long as we maintain our sovereignty in the Philippines, we are liable to be in the middle of a conflict in the Orient. This is most unfortunate, and this untenable position should be terminated at the earliest possible moment. It is one of the major threats to peace for the United States.

The people of the Philippines have clamored for independence for years and finally in 1934 we agreed to give them complete independence on July 4, 1946. They voted by a vote of 1,213,046 to 44,963 to accept our terms of independence. On November 15, 1935, the Filipinos began a period of probation with Manuel Quezon as the first President.

Mr. Quezon is now in the United States. He arrived here several months ago. He told us that his mission to Washington was to ask for complete independence for the Philippines in 1938 or 1939. President Roosevelt has appointed an interdepartmental committee consisting of Hon. Joseph E. Jacobs, vice chairman, Chief of the Office of Philippine Affairs, Department of State; Hon. Louis Domeratzky, Chief, Division of Regional Information, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce; Hon. Lynn R. Edminster, chief economic analyst, Division of Trade Agreements, Department of State; Col. Donald C. McDonald, Assistant to the Chief, Bureau of Insular Affairs, War Department; Hon. Carl Robbins, Assistant Chief, Sugar Section, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Department of Agriculture; Hon. Frank A. Waring, senior economist, United States Tariff Commission; Hon. Jose Yulo, vice chairman of the committee and chairman of the Philippine group, secretary of justice of the Philippine Commonwealth; Hon. Conrado Benitez, dean, college of business, University of the Philippines; Hon. Joaquin M. Elizalde, member of the Philippine National Economic Council; Hon. Quintin Paredes, Resident Commissioner for the Philippines; Hon. Jose E. Romero, floor leader, majority party, Philippine National Assembly; and Hon. Manuel Roxas, floor leader, minority party, Philippine National Assembly.

Since the Filipinos want independence in the near future, and since the granting of this request will be equivalent to writing a vital peace insurance policy for America in this troubled stage in world affairs, I say that it is time for the Congress to prepare to pass an act granting complete independence to the Philippines at the earliest practicable moment. May I now point out that in addition to being a war hazard, the Philippine Islands are and have been very expensive financially to the United States.

A few striking facts from the history of our relationship to the Philippines will be appropriate to illustrate this point:

We paid Spain the sum of $20,000,000 for the Islands upon taking them over in the treaty at the end of the war with Spain.

Pacification of the islands several years after Dewey's fleet sank the Spanish fleet cost us 4,165 good American lives.

From May 1, 1898, to June 30, 1902, occupation and pacification of the islands cost, in money, $190,000,000.

In 1934, it was estimated that the United States Army and Navy had expended approximately $614,000,000 since peace was established.

It is also estimated that the balance of trade which has always been in favor of the islands has cost the American consumer about $30,000,000 per year.

The total actual cost to the United States, including all departments of the Government which have made expenditures in the islands, from the date of occupation to the present year, would safely be estimated at approximately $900,000,000.

This $140,000 item in the bill before us does not look excessive here, but if we stop to consider that such an expenditure must be continued over the next 10 years it can be readily seen that the cost takes on larger proportions. Furthermore, the item is only for governmental functions on the part of the United States in the islands and does not cover the cost of maintaining our Army and Navy there. During the last fiscal year, according to definite figures given me by the Departments today, we spent $11,953,933 for the Army and $2,653,341 for the Navy. Maintaining this expenditure over the next 10 years imposes an excessive burden upon this country. These millions could best be spent in America in the development of the institutions of our own country.

There are those who will say that we ought not to surrender the Philippines. Perhaps not, but that question is no longer debatable. We have already agreed to independence for the islands. The law is written and our honor is at stake. The question is not independence, but independence when? In 1946 or prior to that time? It might well be said to those who want the Philippines as a military and naval base for the United States that the 7,000 Philippine Islands are hardly capable of being defended and that insofar as our interest in the Pacific is concerned we are building the military and naval Gibraltar of the Pacific in the Hawaiian Islands. If we ever have to make our last stand in the Pacific we can make it with confidence at Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands.

I do not want my remarks to indicate any lack of consideration for our "little brown brothers" across the sea. They have been under the dominion of other powers for more than 400 years. They long for liberty. It is not a foregone conclusion that Japan will take over the islands when they become independent. We hope that that can be prevented. At any rate, we cannot deny them their right of choice.

I have a sincere affection for the Filipino people. They are a wonderfully kind and grateful people. They realize that American arms, money, and educational and religious institutions have done much for them. In many ways they have done much for America and we must also be mindful of that.

And so, ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, I have felt it appropriate during the debate on this appropriation item for the American official establishment in the Philippine Islands to point out the grave danger to peace involved in our Philippine problem. I hope that this important problem may receive the attention of the Congress, and that next year we may be able to pass a bill permitting the independence of the Filipinos at the earliest practicable moment and the withdrawal of American sovereignty from the troubled shores of the Far East.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, the bill presented to the House carries the full amount recommended to the committee by the Bureau of the Budget, for flood control particularly, $22,500,000 for the lower Mississippi under the terms of the Overton Act and $30,000,000 for flood-control projects throughout the country under the terms of the Copeland Act, both acts approved in June 1936.

The committee realizes the amount of funds provided herein is not sufficient to carry on 1 year's work under these two flood-control acts. In an effort to obtain sufficient funds to carry on a complete 1-year program and at the same time not override the recommendations of the Budget, I introduced an amendment which sought to earmark at lease $45,000,000 of the $1,500,000,000 relief fund for use on flood-control projects to supplement the amounts provided for in this bill. We have had definite and positive assurance from Mr. Hopkins, who is the Administrator of W. P. A., that a sufficient amount of relief labor is available and will be used on authorized projects in excess of the amount provided in the amendment which I proposed to the work-relief bill. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, under the terms of this appropriation bill, and with the direct promise given by the W. P. A. and the positive assurance from an even higher authority in the affairs of our Government, we can reasonably expect to expend at least $100,000,000 on flood-control work this year.

I think it is high time the Government discharges its responsibility to its citizenship and take steps looking to a well-balanced integrated program for the solution of the flood problems which confront this country.

According to the testimony of General Markham before our committee, this country has suffered more than a billion dollars in the past 18 months from floods alone. By a system of reservoir dams in the headwaters of these streams of ours, and by a system of levees and spillways in the lower stretches of the streams of the country as they near the sea we can, to a large extent, control floods and save an untold amount of monetary damage each year in this country, make our citizens secure in life and property, and make life happier and sweeter to them.

This system of reservoir dams, levees, and spillways must be supplemented by watershed protection which is afforded by upstream engineering, run-off retardation, and soil-erosion-prevention methods. A proper integration of the work of the War Department and the Agriculture Department will, in my judgment, offer the only workable solution of flood-control problems. The War Department will direct its major efforts to engineering problems on waterways, while the Department of Agriculture will devote its main efforts on watersheds, the one having to do with floods in the rivers, the other to floods on lands. I have no doubt that with the funds provided in this bill and with the amounts which will be available under work relief, we will have a sufficient amount of money to carry on all projects the coming fiscal year upon which the money can be wisely and well spent.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a brief observation?

Mr. STARNES. Yes.

Mr. PARSONS. Does the gentleman know that the Senate committee eliminated from the W. P. A. bill, which the Senate has before it for consideration today, the amendment placed in the bill for the assignment of materials, equipment, and personnel of the War Department for construction by W. P. A. relief labor of the flood-control program we had planned here as a compromise? This has been stricken from the bill by the committee, but the amendment has not been voted on by the Senate.

Mr. STARNES. I did not have that information, but I do know that the Flood Control Committee, of which the distinguished and able gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] is chairman, has been holding hearings and studying a measure to take care of the lower Ohio Valley. We hope they will report a bill to authorize these projects, and, if they are authorized, then a considerable amount of relief labor can be used in the lower Ohio, because Mr. Hopkins informed us that the labor was available and could be used if the projects were authorized.

Mr. PARSONS. But we cannot do that unless the amendment is carried in the bill.

Mr. STARNES. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 30 minutes remaining.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I reserve 2 minutes of that time, and I now yield 28 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. POWERS].

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BACON].

Mr. BACON. Mr. Chairman, yesterday my good friend the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN] inserted in the RECORD a statement made in 1924 by the late James M. Beck, a former Member of Congress from Pennsylvania. The statement which was inserted in the RECORD was made in 1924 before the Committee on the Judiciary in favor of a Comptroller General under the control of the President.

Mr. Beck did make this statement in 1924; but in fairness to him I want to read a statement that he made in 1932 in a chapter of his book which is entitled "Our Wonderland of Bureaucracy." Mr. Beck, in one of the chapters of this book, argues in favor of an independent Comptroller General, subject only to Congress, and I quote as follows from the closing paragraph of that chapter:

In concluding this chapter a word of personal explanation seems necessary. When the author was Solicitor General, a bill had been introduced in the House and referred to its Committee on the Judiciary affecting the powers of the Comptroller General, and the author made an argument on May 27, 1924, before the committee to the effect that there should be no official at the head of the accounting system who was not responsible to and removable by the President. No action was taken on the bill by the committee, and subsequently in my argument of the Myers case I attempted to strengthen it by reference to the Comptroller General's tenure of office, following in some respects my arguments before the House Committee on the Judiciary. After I had resigned the office of Solicitor General and pending the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Myers case, I had the leisure and opportunity to examine more thoroughly the history and jurisdiction of the Comptroller General's office; and after the decision was handed down in the Myers case I stated in an article in the New York Times, Sunday, November 7, 1926, that the decision did not necessarily include legislative agents of Congress, who are not in strictness executive officers and therefore not removable by the President, and I added that among such limited class of officers "the Comptroller General is regarded as the special representative of Congress in seeing that its appropriations are faithfully disbursed."

My further study and reflection and especially my service in the House of Representatives have convinced me that my first position in this matter was unsound and that it is necessary, to prevent irresponsible spending of public funds, that the Comptroller General be responsible only to Congress. Congress has the power over the public purse. It is its greatest power, and in the history of the English-speaking race it has been a most potent one, not merely in safeguarding the Commonwealth but the liberties of the citizen. To enable Congress to retain full control over the public purse, it must have its own appropriate agency. That agency is the Comptroller General, and he must be independent of the Executive.

This method—so consistent with the best traditions of the English-speaking race—has been admirably vindicated by its results. No scandal has ever besmirched the office of Comptroller General, and there would be fewer suggestions of favoritism and scandals in the bureaucracy if the Comptroller General were given more power.

I quote this to show that in 1932, upon further reflection, Mr. Beck repudiated what he had stated in 1924 and which my good friend has put in the RECORD. In fairness to one of the finest and ablest minds that has ever been in the House of Representatives I include in the RECORD his later statement, which I have just read to the Committee.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, there has been much debate this afternoon upon the merits and demerits of the C. I. O. Much has been said in condemnation and also in commendation of the activities of the C. I. O. I do not propose to join issue at this time. I merely point out that there have been more strikes in the last 4 years under the Roosevelt administration than there have been in the prior 12 years under Republican administrations. I would be surprised if there have not been more strikes under this administration in the last 4 years than in the entire history of our country. I listened to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KIRWAN] speak about a few scattered strikes that have occurred in the last 50 years. I am given to understand that there have been 50 strikes since the General Motors signed their contract with C. I. O. in the General Motors companies in the last 2 or 3 months.

I happen to be a friend of labor. I believe in the right of labor to strike; I believe in collective bargaining; I believe in social and industrial justice. I believe in labor receiving a fair share of the fruits of their labor, but I do not believe in illegal strikes, lawlessness, or in violence or in the unlawful seizure of private property. I make this prediction, that we have not yet begun to see the violence and the bloodshed in the past few months that we will see in the next year or two, and why? Because under the C. I. O.—and I do not charge Mr. Lewis with being a Communist, for he appeared before the House investigating committee, of which I was the chairman, and denounced the Communist vigorously and openly—but Mr. Lewis and the C. I. O., and nobody can contradict it, are using the Communists today, aiding and abetting the Communists, who have rushed into his organization, using the C. I. O. as a vehicle to spread revolutionary activity and communism.

You can read these facts in the Daily Worker. You do not have to take my word for it. You can read it in the Russian newspapers that are translated here, that the Communists of America are participating in the C. I. O. strikes and fanning and inflaming class hatred and promoting communism. I make the prediction that within a short time there will be a bitter contest in the C. I. O. to determine whether Mr. Lewis controls or whether the Communists do. If the Communists gain control of the C. I. O., then you will have a very serious industrial situation in the United States from north to south, and east to west. Mr. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has always refused to compromise with Communists and communism. He has driven them out of the ranks of his organization, and naturally they hate Mr. Green and the American Federation of Labor and have rushed pell mell into the C. I. O. and have been welcomed into the ranks of that new organization. The Communists, native-born and alien, are using the C. I. O. to spread communism, revolutionary activities, class hatred, sabotage, and industrial unrest in the United States.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. BEITER. The gentleman has been condemning communism. On December 15, 1936, he addressed the State Teachers College of Buffalo and at that time he said that there is something admirable about communism. He said that they had the same principle every year, and in every country.

Mr. FISH. Precisely; and let me go on and finish the sentence which the gentleman has attempted to quote. I said that there is something admirable about Communists; that you know exactly where they stand; that they stand for the same principles whether they are Communists in Russia, in Paris, in New York, in Chicago, or Pekin. They stand for class hatred, they stand for destruction of private property, they stand for hatred of God and of all religion, they stand for the overthrow of democracy and our republican form of government, and all other forms of government except communism, and for the substitution in our country of the red flag for the American flag. You know exactly where they stand. They are to be admired for that. They are not like the Republicans and the Democrats, who write their platforms one day and forget about them the next—and I refer particularly to the Democratic Party and its recent promises and pledges which have been discarded and repudiated.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Which is the worst menace, communism or fascism?

Mr. FISH. The gentleman knows perfectly well that I am against both of them.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. We all are.

Mr. FISH. They are both practically the same; they are both governments by compulsion and force and violence, seeking to destroy free institutions and democratic governments and the rights and liberties of liberty-loving people throughout the world. So I am opposed to both of them. There is no room in this country for either one of them. They are brothers under the skin, autocratic, militaristic, ruthless, and despotic.

Mr. Chairman, I rose for the purpose of calling attention of the reigning party, the Democratic Party, to the fact that this is the due date for the payment of the war debts. What are you doing about it? The ides of June are here. Today is the 15th of June. What are you doing about collecting any of the $12,000,000,000 defaulted war debt? This administration gave a deliberate promise. The President said that it would be the first objective of his administration to collect the war debt, and added, "I propose to collect them, but I propose to collect them in my own way."

Four years have gone by, but he has not collected a penny except from little honest Finland, which is still paying her debt to us.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Is it not a fact that Mr. Hoover's moratorium started the default of war debts and that if it were not for that the debts would still be being paid?

Mr. FISH. Oh, no. At that time there was a world financial crisis and some temporary postponement in the collection of the war debts had to be arranged if the entire financial structure of Europe was to be preserved. The moratorium was only a temporary breathing spell based on justice, equity, and fair dealing.

At that time the Democratic leaders in Congress, at the invitation of President Hoover, agreed to put through a moratorium bill in the House of Representatives and the Senate which was the right and square thing to do. You had a majority in this House and in the Senate at that time. Make no mistake about the facts. Up to that time, under Republican administrations for years and years, we received $200,000,000 annually in payment of those war debts. President Roosevelt promised to collect those debts, and he has not collected anything at all except from little Finland.

I propose to rise on every June 15 and every December 15 and ask the party in power what they are doing, what do they propose to do to collect any of this money that is owed the American people. Why should we continue to be Santa Claus for the entire world?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. If the gentleman were President of the United States, would he please explain to this House and to the American people how he would collect the debts at this time?

Mr. FISH. Gladly. I will tell the gentleman and I will tell the world, if the press will carry it.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. They will carry it, all right.

Mr. FISH. We were talking a few moments ago about Soviet Russia. The gentleman knows about Soviet Russia, as he was born there. Now, Soviet Russia is one of the nations which has repudiated her war debt. When we recognized Soviet Russia we were promised payment of that war debt.

That was only a few years ago. They have not paid a penny. Does the gentleman want to know how Soviet Russia can pay her war debt to us? We have bought in the last few years through the fantastic gold-purchasing policy of this administration hundreds of millions of dollars of gold from Soviet Russia, produced at $5 or $10 or less an ounce, and for which we paid $35 an ounce. The profit in American dollars is now in New York banks to the credit of Soviet Russia, and there is enough money there to pay all those war debts to us. All they would have to do is to turn that profit which they made on the sale of gold to us over to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. But what would the gentleman do if he were President of the United States? Would he confiscate the money?

Mr. FISH. I would call attention to the default; I would make a protest. Does the gentleman remember a Democratic President by the name of Andrew Jackson, how he collected the French war debts and the spoliation claims? He did not remain silent as this man now in the White House has done. He protested and he continued to protest and then he demanded, and he got payment.

Now, let us take the British Empire, for example. They owe us $5,000,000,000 in war debts. They are not even paying us the interest on the money we loaned them after the Armistice. They practically repudiated those debts. Their Chancellor of the Exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, recently said they not only had balanced their budget, but they had a surplus, and their financial house was never in better order, and was the envy of the world. Why? Because they did not make any effort whatever to pay their debts to us. If they wanted to pay it, there are four or five ways of paying it.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I wanted the gentleman to explain that.

Mr. FISH. They could pay us in rubber. We do not produce any rubber. They could pay us in tea. They could pay us in tin. They could build battleships for us with their own pound sterling and save us hundreds of millions of dollars in building battleships. If they do not like that, they could give us Bermuda, the Bahama Islands, Jamaica, and the other British islands in the Caribbean Sea. There are many ways by which they could liquidate that debt to us without seriously hampering themselves financially.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I agree with the gentleman, but the fact is they refuse to pay. What is the gentleman going to do, and what would he do if he were President of the United States?

Mr. FISH. I claim that this administration has not raised a finger except to send a bill on the due date. Why not make a protest? Why not try to get around the table and propose a settlement? We have not done one thing, and I defy you or any other Democrat to show where this administration has in the last 4 years made any sensible effort to collect these war debts.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Great Britain can hardly offer the plea that she is not able to pay. In other words, she looks ridiculous when she offers that plea, in view of the fact that within the last 2 or 3 months she has announced a military program costing something like $7,000,000,000.

Mr. FISH. The gentleman is quite right. Great Britain has announced a program of a billion and a half pounds, or $7,500,000,000, in 3 years to be spent on armaments alone, for purposes of war, but they have not paid their war debts to us, and we are still holding the bag. The same thing goes for Italy. Italy owes us $81,000,000, due today. We do not get a penny and we have not received a penny under this administration, but Italy can bankrupt itself on armaments for the purpose of promoting another world war, and we do nothing about it. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call attention to the War Department civil-functions appropriation bill, and to the fact that the expenditures for these nonmilitary activities of the War Department this year amount to $194,328,363. Last year we appropriated for the civil functions of the War Department $189,341,985. The pending bill carries $4,986,378 more than the bill of a year ago for like activities. I also call attention to the War Department appropriation bill. Last year it was $393,375,854. This year it is $416,413,382, an increase of $23,037,528. In other words, the total War Department appropriation bill, war and civil, is $28,023,906 more than a year ago.

Now, let me call attention to the Treasury statement of June 11, showing that the total receipts up to that date of this year were $4,639,000,000. The total expenditures have been $7,056,434,949.99. You have spent more than you have received by $2,417,240,941.77. These figures, as I say, are as of June 11, with a national debt of over $35,000,000,000.

I cannot help calling attention to the statement made by President Roosevelt in his Budget message of January 3, 1934. I quote:

> Furthermore, the Government during the balance of this calendar (1934) year should plan to build its 1936 expenditures, including recovery and relief, within the revenues expected within the fiscal year 1936. We should plan to have a definitely balanced Budget for the third year of recovery and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the national debt.

The President of the United States made that assertion in his Budget message of January 3, 1934. I now quote from the President's inaugural address of March 4, 1933:

> Though this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making the income balance the outgo.

If ever in the history of this Nation a man has made statements in reference to trying to make the income balance the outgo so that we would have a balanced Budget, Franklin D. Roosevelt is that man; if ever there was a President of the United States who has gone so far afield as this President in trying to do the things he said he would do, then black is white and green is red, because the President of the United States certainly has betrayed the American people since 1933 in his promises and in his performance.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. BEITER. Does the gentleman believe that former President Hoover betrayed the people of the United States when he told them every other day that prosperity was just around the corner?

Mr. RICH. When former President Hoover made that statement he thought he would get some assistance and aid from Congress, but he found a Democratic Congress, a Congress that had turned completely around and would not give him the least power or help. He was helpless. When Mr. Roosevelt came into power they gave him complete, absolute authority, and you fellows have been nothing but the greatest rubber stamps any Members of Congress have ever been in all history. You gave all power to Mr. Roosevelt. Notwithstanding the fact that he has had the power to do these things he has not done them. That is the difference between the two men. One President, Mr. Hoover, did not have the power but had his hands tied; this President, Mr. Roosevelt, has the power but is doing absolutely the opposite from what he promised to do. Quite a difference, I would say. All the difference in the world.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I will yield to the gentleman when he resumes the chair. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. RICH. The President of the United States has taken two vacations since January 1, but many Members of Congress have not had a chance to go back home even once. Think of it! He has gone fishing once for 2 weeks and he has gone down to Hot Springs to take a 2 weeks' vacation. It is right that he should do so if it is necessary. He has been back home to his great mansion a little ways above New York City a number of times. Nothing wrong about that. The Supreme Court is taking a vacation. I pick up this morning's Washington Post and find that Mrs. Roosevelt reveals that she, too, will take a vacation. May joy go with her. The Vice President, Mr. Garner, is going on a vacation. Joy go with him.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question in regard to Roosevelt?

Mr. McCORMACK and Mr. SACKS rose.

Mr. RICH. They are not going to let Mrs. Roosevelt take this vacation and I want her to have it. I want her to go out just as much as she wants to and wherever she is welcome.

Mr. Chairman, if we were not in the Committee of the Whole, I would move that the House adjourn sine die and take a vacation. I think that would be the best thing in the world for the United States. I think it would be the best thing in the world if we could get this Congress out of here. Why? Because you fellows have appropriated over $8,000,000,000 already in this session of Congress. Think of it! Over $8,000,000,000, and the national income is going to be less than $6,000,000,000. Can you figure it out? Do you think that the President is going to make his party keep their pledges?

I want to be serious so far as expenditures are concerned. In this bill there is a lot of money appropriated which we can cut out. May I call attention to the amount appropriated for the Inland Waterway Corporation, a corporation owned by the Government which functions on the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. This corporation has been losing money ever since it was started. They are figuring on spending on the Mississippi River between the Ohio and Missouri Rivers, $43,000,000; between the Missouri River and Minneapolis on the Mississippi River, $148,177,000; on the Illinois waterway, $30,189,500; a total to be spent on the Mississippi River of $221,356,500 for the benefit of the inland waterways. It is all wrong to do so.

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. That is not correct.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. The gentleman is off $23,000,000 on the Mississippi River.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 1 minute to clarify a statement he has made.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, today I intend to point out one of the most flagrant invasions of the rights of Congress and the abuse of executive confidence, both brought about through the workings of a bunch of civic shysters who have wormed their way into the graces of the President only to deceive him.

I refer again to the allocation of $6,750,000 of work-relief funds appropriated under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, which has been set aside for the special benefit of the real-estate promoters of St. Louis for the building in that city of the world's greatest monument to fraud, corruption, graft, and waste—the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial. No project ever conceived by the mind of man was ever more self-indicting once the true facts became known about it.

This project is now being brought under way contrary to all the basic laws of the Nation and with absolute indifference to the rights of either the people of St. Louis or of this Congress, to whom the Constitution gives the supervision over public spending for projects of the character this has been represented to be. Mr. Chairman, our laws, if properly enforced, would not permit the invasion of the rights of Congress in any such manner as is contemplated in this case.

To begin with, money appropriated under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act, which was passed and became a law April 8, 1933, sets up as its major objective to "provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects."

In the face of the examining engineer's report that the memorial to Jefferson in St. Louis "cannot be classed as a public necessity", and in view of the additional fact that in the acquisition of land for the building of this memorial thousands of people now engaged in industry in this area will have to suspend operations and move to other locations to provide but a modicum of work relief—this project can in no way be said to come under the head of a work-relief project; neither can it be said to fill any known useful purpose.

Mr. Chairman, I have previously called the attention of the Congress to the provisions of the United States Code which prohibit the erection of or expenditure of money for buildings in national parks in an amount exceeding $1,500 except by and with the consent of Congress.

While this proposed memorial is presumed to be an improved national park or plaza, it has been carried forward under the guise of an attempt to preserve "historic sites."

Mr. Chairman, the Historic Sites Act was passed by the Congress and became a law August 21, 1935.

This act itself contained no appropriation for the specific purpose of preserving historic sites, but on the contrary, specifically delegates the power of making such appropriations to the Congress and denies it to all agencies and departments of the Federal Government.

The act in section 2, subsection (d) says:

> Provided further, That no such property shall be acquired or contract or agreement for the acquisition thereof made which will obligate the general fund of the Treasury for the payment of such property, unless and until Congress has appropriated money which is available for that purpose.

To say that the money appropriated by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, which became a law April 8, 1935, is money for the Historic Sites Act which became a law August 21, 1935, is more than anticipating the fact, and just a plain fantasy.

To dig a little deeper into the Historic Sites Act we find again in subsection (e) the following words used:

> Provided, That no contract or cooperative agreement shall be made or entered into which will obligate the general fund of the Treasury, unless or until Congress has appropriated money for such purpose.

This shatters the claim the President had a right to accept money from the city of St. Louis, raised as the result of a bond issue election in which fraud and corruption are the outstanding features, or to enter into any kind of an agreement either directly with the city of St. Louis or the real-estate mayor, Bernard Dickman, for the building of this second monument to Jefferson in their city.

The President acted beyond his authority if I can properly interpret the English language as written into the laws by my associates here in Congress. If these laws we pass do not mean what they say, then we better fold up and go home. And if we do not do something in cases like this, the people are going to wake up and get wise to where their money is being wasted, and a lot of the Members will be left at home.

Mr. Chairman, I do not bring these matters to the attention of the Congress with any malice either toward the President or the Members of this House. I believe the President has been basely deceived. And I know that the Members of this House would not appropriate a dime for the St. Louis real-estate promoters. So I want to read you one more section of the Historic Sites Act. Section 6 says:

> There is authorized to be appropriated for carrying out the purposes of this act such sums as the Congress may from time to time determine—

Keep those words in mind—

> may from time to time determine—

Not shall from time to time determine. It was left entirely to the discretion of Congress to say how much shall be spent for historic sites and where.

But that is not the worst of this rotten deal; it is the historic sites themselves. Here is where the President was more than hornswoggled.

A bunch of slickers from St. Louis came down here to Washington with a hot-shot idea when their plan for a loan and grant of around $22,000,000 blew up after the frauds in the election had been brought to the attention of Secretary Ickes and Mr. Hackett in the fall of 1935.

The promoters camped around the White House offices and fixed up the data on which the President issued his Executive order of December 21, 1935, naming the 37-block site on the river front in downtown St. Louis as the place whereon were situate—the Spanish colonial office where during the administration of Thomas Jefferson all the territory comprised in the upper Louisiana Purchase were transferred to the United States. The Government house (which is the same as the previous place) where on March 9, 1804, Charles Dehault Delassus, the Spanish commandant in St. Louis, transferred possession of upper Louisiana to Capt. Amos Stoddart, of the United States Army, who had been designated by France as its representative and where on the following morning of March 10, 1804, as agent of the United States, Capt. Stoddart took possession for the United States and raised the American flag.

Now, in brief, here were two minor incidents of history, nothing much to brag about, because lower Louisiana had been for months past part of the Union and the hauling down of the Spanish and French flags were only a ceremonial much the same as has been carried out by our Government on countless occasions in all parts of the world. Our flag has been up and down, but never so basely disgraced as when we propose to spend $9,000,000 buying property in St. Louis for such a useless project as this appears to be. I can see where St. Louis can use more charities, more hospitals, and more money for civic improvements, but I cannot reconcile myself to any idea but that this memorial promotion is the biggest boondoggle ever before the Congress, and up to the Congress to either put an end to or be subjected to eternal ridicule for having permitted it without an investigation.

But I want to go a little further, if you please, into these fake historic sites.

The President was led to believe, and he set up in his order that this was the place where the Oregon, the Santa Fe, and other trails originated. This cannot be established by the records. These trails did not originate here any more so than they did in the minds of somebody hanging around Washington for a purpose. The Santa Fe trail, according to reliable encyclopedias, originated at or near the town of Old Franklin, Mo., more than 150 miles by river from St. Louis. The Oregon trail had its beginnings at St. Joseph, Mo., more than 250 miles from St. Louis, and so it is with most of the historic sites. If there were ever any sites worthy of preserving here the people of St. Louis did not care very much about them, for they have all been torn down dozens of years ago, excepting the old Cathedral of St. Louis, which is in daily use as a common Catholic church, and cannot be acquired under the provisions of the Historic Sites Act. All the rest of this historic sites stuff is just camouflage to conceal the real purpose of the memorial promoters, which in short is to unload 37 blocks of real estate onto the Government at fancy top prices and make profits by forcing people who are in business in the district to rent their unoccupied buildings elsewhere in St. Louis.

All the newspapers of St. Louis know about the infamy of this whole proposal, yet but two have had the courage to protest. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch in an editorial last Friday said:

[From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of June 11, 1937]

IF CONGRESS INVESTIGATES

If Congress grants the request of Representative Lambertson, of Kansas to investigate the proposed Jefferson Memorial on the St. Louis river front, it will discover facts that will humiliate this city in the Nation's eyes.

It will discover that the city held a bond-issue election in September 1935 to determine whether or not bonds in the sum of $7,500,000 should be issued to defray the city's share of the cost of the memorial.

It will discover that the project was advertised as a means of putting the unemployed to work, and that the voters were told that work could be started 10 days after the election. Nearly 2 years have now elapsed and not a shovelful of earth has been turned.

It will discover that the voters were told that the Government would put up $3 for every $1 contributed by the city, and that the Government's total contribution would be $22,500,000.

It will discover that, despite this glowing prospectus, the bond issue fell far short of obtaining the two-thirds vote necessary for passage in nine wards, containing one-third of the city's population, while in the 19 other wards it was given a vote in the approximate relation of 5 to 1.

It will discover that, in each of the 19 wards where the bond issue was certified as passing, wholesale fraud was demonstrated.

It will discover that grave doubt exists as to whether or not a recount of the ballots would bear out the city administration's claim of victory for the bond issue; so flagrant were the frauds, and so suspicious is the circumstance that the topheavy vote was confined to certain wards, that it is a fair presumption the election was stolen.

A congressional investigation would bring out these facts and more. It would bring out the highly significant story of how all attempts to institute a grand jury inquiry into the frauds have failed.

Congress will be interested in the remarkable story of Judge Padberg's grand jury, on which sat four men with political connections or associations. The Padberg jury refused flatly to investigate the frauds, because, as its foreman said, the memorial project was a good thing for the city.

Congress will be interested in the subsequent history of the case in the courts—the strange proceedings before Judge Joynt, for example, a suit filed by dummy plaintiffs. It will be interested in the fact that every effort has been made by political lawyers—thus far successfully—to keep the lid on the ballot boxes where the incriminating evidence lies.

In examining the memorial project, as it stands at present, Congress will find that, instead of a $30,000,000 project, it is only a $9,000,000 project, the city putting up $2,250,000 and the Federal Government $6,750,000. The latter sum was allocated by the President, and Congress had nothing to say about it.

It will find that the $9,000,000, instead of being a work-relief fund, will be used to condemn and purchase the site.

It will find that after the property owners have been paid off, there will be little, if anything, left over for the employment of labor.

It will find that, instead of a great memorial to Thomas Jefferson, there is likely to be nothing on the river front but a grassy sward.

Finally, it will find that a great many St. Louisans are appalled at the idea of going ahead with a project, in honor of a man who held sacred the processes of democracy, which has its roots in the prostitution of the ballot.

Mr. Chairman, time will not permit me to go further today. In closing may I direct your attention again to the fact that this is not a work-relief project, neither are there any worth-while legitimate historic sites in this area that can now be preserved. But supposing, for the sake of argument, that there were such historic sites still existent and that they could be preserved even now at this late date, Mr. Chairman, I submit the language of the Historic Sites Act reserves to this Congress the right to say how much money will be spent, and how and when and where.

Therefore I again call on the Democratic majority of this House to institute such proceedings as decency demands, a full and complete investigation of this Jefferson Memorial in St. Louis.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAHON] has perhaps made the speech I really intended to make this afternoon. I want to endorse everything the gentleman had to say in connection with the early withdrawal of American troops from the Philippine Islands.

I have consistently appeared before the membership of the House on this particular question. I have appeared before the subcommittee on the question, and believe I have the sympathy of the chairman and the membership of the subcommittee in the statements I have made indicating we could save $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 annually by withdrawing our idle troops in the Philippine Islands, who are now doing absolutely nothing.

I bring some good news to you today. I usually bring you news of drought and suffering and starving livestock. It has rained in my district. The farmers in my district are cutting their first crop of alfalfa, they are plowing the corn, and they are hoping and praying for a real harvest. However, the conditions in my district are such we are short of feed to feed the livestock. Much of the feed is being imported. In fact, all of the corn coming into the State of Nebraska is being imported from other States and is being fed upon arrival. I wish the Members would pray with us that we do have a harvest, because if we do not and we have another drought, we will be in worse condition to face another winter than we have ever been in the history of our State. Because of this and because I feel that perhaps along the line we may be called upon to come here and ask for more help, I have studied the hearings in connection with the various appropriation bills and have called attention to some instances where I thought we were spending money uselessly.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak briefly today on this bill which we have under consideration—a bill to appropriate nearly $200,000,000 additional to the War Department for civil functions for 1938. There are many meritorious items in this bill, but to remain consistent I must go on record against some of the items which appear to me to be too high and which in my opinion represent useless expenditures of the taxpayers' money.

Only recently this House passed a War Department bill appropriating nearly half a billion dollars for 1 year—the largest amount for the Army during peacetime. When that bill was before us I endeavored to cut down the amount by endeavoring to show to the membership of this House where many millions of dollars could be saved for the taxpayers. I refer specifically to the useless expenditures we are making for the maintenance of an idle army in the Philippine Islands. In the bill before us we find another item for spending considerable money in the Philippine Islands which no longer belong to us.

As I understand it, this is the first time this appropriation for civil functions of the War Department comes before us separately. Heretofore it came to us combined with the Regular Army appropriations, but evidently the amounts have increased to such large proportions that it is brought to us in a separate bill. Even the Army apparently does not want it mixed up with the Regular Army functions of the War Department.

I call your attention to only one item in this bill which apparently has puzzled even the subcommittee which held exhaustive hearings. I refer to the amount of about $152,000 for the High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands. This amount, in my opinion should be cut in half. It would be enough to maintain one High Commissioner in those islands.

I wish to commend the membership of the subcommittee for cutting down some of this appropriation. The subcommittee members before which I appeared on the question of stopping further appropriations for an idle army in those islands has not only worked hard and diligently on this item, but has seen through much of the waste of the taxpayers' money which we are dumping into those islands by the millons each year. The result is that the committee members which have had a tremendous task to perform have gone into these items with great care and should be congratulated. However, I feel that the real picture has not been presented to the membership of the committee, which can only act on the information they receive from Army people.

The membership of the House, however, should know something about the lavish manner in which our High Commissioner is going to live in those islands at the expense of the American taxpayer. I do not wish to be recorded as having any personal feelings in the matter insofar as the High Commissioner is concerned individually. I make the protest and demand for further cuts in expenditures in the Philippine Islands on the basis of principle. I do not even wish to go into the question of the charges made in the newspapers that our High Commissioner in those islands is demanding to be toasted first at public functions and banquets. That is a personal matter which, in my opinion, would never have occurred if the island affairs were turned over to the Department of State instead of being in the hands of political patronage.

Mr. Chairman, American people should know that we were very generous when we inaugurated the Philippine Commonwealth in 1935 and turned over practically everything we owned in the islands to the Philippine Government. When we took that step we decided that so far as American rule is concerned we would no longer have anything to say about the islands. With the exception of our idle army, we decided to have there only one High Commissioner, who would report to our President the fiscal conditions of the islands. So we even gave to the Philippine Government the grand palace which had been occupied by our Governor General for many years. It is located on the Pasig River and has grand grounds, beautifully parked. The palace itself is one of the most complete and beautiful buildings in the islands. We just walked out and had to rent space for our High Commissioner. Congress then appropriated about $750,000 to build a palace for our Commissioner. In the meantime our taxpayers are called upon to pay around $20,000 a year for rent.

The new quarters for our High Commissioner will not be completed for another year or more. The rent of $20,000 annually will have to be paid. We could have made a better bargain and have kept our own palace until such time that our own building was completed. I believe that part of the bargain we made was not shrewd Yankee business on our part.

Something has been said to the effect that the Philippine people have given us the ground on which we are to build our Commissioner's palace. The membership of this House should know that we never were given any ground by the Philippine Government. That, in fact, we were given water in Manila Bay around which we are building a retaining wall and other construction to keep out the water at an already incurred expense to our taxpayers of $61,000.

The Filipinos in harbor dredging are pumping earth into that enclosure of water without cost to us. But never let it be said that we were given anything but water in this bad American bargain.

Now as to the expenses of our High Commissioner in the Philippine Islands. Let me tell Members that we are appropriating more money here for this High Commissioner than we are for our Ambassadors to countries as large as Great Britain. I refer to the $10,000 we are appropriating for the Commissioner's entertainment fund. I feel the committee did wisely when they cut this amount down. The cut is not deep enough. It should not be more than the $4,800 we give to our Ambassador at London.

Little did we dream that we would not save much money in the islands when we withdrew a Governor General and put in a High Commissioner. The fact is that the present expenditures in the islands will be very little less than they were when we thought we were through with the islands.

Let us look at the records. I ask every Member to read the hearings on this item. You will find them on page 205 in the hearings you now have in your possession. The High Commissioner draws a salary of $18,000. That does not include the $10,000 for entertainment and household expenses. He has $20,000 more for renting his present quarters and a residence. He has a legal adviser costing us $12,000 a year; three chauffeurs and three automobiles paid by the American taxpayers. Here are a few figures of what you are spending on this item alone:

		Estimate, 1938
		Positions	Average salary
	PERSONAL SERVICES, FIELD
	Professional service:
	Legal adviser	1	$12,000
	Assistant legal adviser	1	7,500
	Financial expert	1	10,000
	Assistant financial expert	1	7,500
	Clerical, administrative, and fiscal service:
	High Commissioner	1	18,000
	Private secretary to High Commissioner	1	5,000
	Administrative assistant	1	6,000
	Accountant statistician	3	3,500
	Clerk:
	American	6	2,850
	Filipino	6	1,167
	Custodial service:
	Messenger and porter	6	200
	Chauffeur	3	533
	Gardener	1	500
	Janitor	4	250
	Laborer	2	250
	Watchman, guard	2	900
	Total, personal services	40	107,200
02	Supplies and materials		4,200
05	Communication service		3,500
06	Travel expenses		4,000
07	Transportation of things		1,000
10	Furnishing of heat, light, power, electricity		1,200
11	Rents		20,000
12	Repairs and alterations		500
13	Special and miscellaneous current expenses		10,000
30	Equipment		1,000
	Total other obligations		50,900
	Total estimate or appropriation		152,600

Mr. Chairman, feeling that many of our Ambassadors to countries much larger than the Philippine Islands are not furnished with such tremendous amounts of money and do not have the opportunity to live in such lavish fashion, I hope that this House can see fit to make more reductions in this item of expense. It will in some way equal the expenditures we make for the same purpose in other countries and indicate to the American taxpayer that we are ever on the alert to save some of their money wherever that is possible. I say this because I know that we are through in the Philippines and that money is badly needed in our own country. It will in some way serve economy notice on the Army and Navy which insists on maintaining our present force of idle troops there until the completion of the present commonwealth period. If we make more cuts in this appropriation, we will keep the membership of this House on the alert to make an effort to save many millions of dollars when next year's Army appropriation bill comes up and when we again will go into the question of useless expenditures in the Philippines.

We know that we must continue to spend money in our own country to keep people employed. We are served notice by the executive department to economize. We who have gone through these vast appropriation bills know that there are many items of useless expenditures which we could easily eliminate and save money instead of piling on more and more taxes. We could make these savings without injuring the program of relief here in the United States. Do not forget the nearly billion dollars the Army and Navy took out of our relief funds during the last 4 years. Do not overlook the fact that a demand is made on us to balance the Budget. Do not forget that we are still spending $8 for every four and a half dollars we bring into the people's Treasury. Also, do not overlook the fact that our public debt is now close to $40,000,000,000. If we can save a few hundred million dollars by going more thoroughly into these items and cut useless expenditures where they do not affect the actual welfare and happiness of our own people, let us do it now.

Mr. STARNES and Mr. RICH rose.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the committee [Mr. SNYDER].

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania rise?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I ask recognition.

The CHAIRMAN. A preferential motion is before the Committee. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. The Chairman knew I intended to seek recognition. What reason has the Chair for recognizing the chairman of the committee when he knew definitely that I wanted recognition because I had told him so a half dozen times? Why is the Chair not going to recognize me?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. There is one parliamentary inquiry pending. Pending action on that inquiry, the Chair cannot entertain another one.

The Chair in response to the inquiry of the gentleman will state there are several reasons why the Chair is compelled under the rules to recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER]. In the first place, the gentleman has made a motion which has a preferred status under the rules. Until the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has been acted upon, the Chair, under the rules, is precluded from recognizing any other Member who may seek recognition.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, the British war debts, the Jefferson Memorial, the other extraneous matters having been fully covered in debate, some of us would like to be heard for a minute or two on this bill. I want to know what will become of it under the 5-minute rule if the Committee rises now?

Mr. MICHENER. Regular order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's inquiry being made for the purpose of obtaining information, the Chair will state that while it does not constitute a parliamentary inquiry, insofar as the Chair can convey information to the gentleman on the inquiry he may say that such decision rests with the House.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the Committee do now rise.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. RICH) there were—ayes 102, noes 4.

So the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MCCORMACK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 7493, had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7493) making appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for civil functions administered by the War Department, and for other purposes; and pending that motion, I move that general debate on the bill do now close, and on that motion I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that general debate do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7493.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 7493, with Mr. McCORMACK in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for civil functions administered by the War Department, and for other purposes, namely:

QUARTERMASTER CORPS

CEMETERIAL EXPENSES

For maintaining and improving national cemeteries, including fuel for and pay of superintendents and the superintendent at Mexico City, and other employees; purchase of land; purchase of tools and materials; purchase of one motor-propelled hearse at a cost not to exceed $3,150; and for the repair, maintenance, and operation of motor vehicles; care and maintenance of the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater, chapel, and grounds in the Arlington National Cemetery; repair to roadways but not to more than a single approach road to any national cemetery constructed under special act of Congress; headstones for unmarked graves of soldiers, sailors, and marines under the acts approved March 3, 1873 (U. S. C., title 24, sec. 279), February 3, 1879 (U. S. C., title 24, sec. 280), March 9, 1906 (34 Stat., p. 56), March 14, 1914 (38 Stat., p. 768), and February 26, 1929 (U. S. C., title 24, sec. 280a), and civilians interred in post cemeteries; recovery of bodies and disposition of remains of military personnel and civilian employees of the Army under act approved March 9, 1928 (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 916); for repairs and preservation of monuments, tablets, roads, fences, etc., made and constructed by the United States in Cuba and China to mark the places where American soldiers fell; care, protection, and maintenance of the Confederate Mound in Oakwood Cemetery at Chicago, the Confederate Stockade Cemetery at Johnstons Island, the Confederate burial plats owned by the United States in Confederate Cemetery at North Alton, the Confederate Cemetery, Camp Chase, at Columbus, the Confederate Cemetery at Point Lookout, and the Confederate Cemetery at Rock Island, $1,227,009, of which $295,477 shall be available immediately: Provided, That no railroad shall be permitted upon any right-of-way which may have been acquired by the United States leading to a national cemetery, or to encroach upon any roads or walks constructed thereon and maintained by the United States: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for repairing any roadway not owned by the United States within the corporate limits of any city, town, or village.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I offer this pro-forma motion for the purpose of propounding an inquiry in order to get information.

In this paragraph there is provision made for appropriations for headstones for unmarked graves of soldiers under the various acts herein recited. It was called to my attention a few months ago that, especially with reference to the headstones for veterans of the World War, they are of such a character that they are not adapted well to the purpose, that they frequently chip or scale or discolor in such a way that the engraving upon them becomes illegible after a certain length of time. It has been called to my attention, furthermore, that they are not in keeping with the kind of monuments used in marking tombs in various private or municipal cemeteries over the country, and for this reason, frequently, these veterans who have passed away are interred in a rather isolated spot in a cemetery where these small marble markers appear.

The suggestion has been made that these markers should be of granite, which would be more enduring, or of bronze or some kind of metal in order that the inscriptions may remain for identification and in order that these burial plots may be more in keeping with others in the various cemeteries.

I should like to know whether under existing law there is authority for change in the character and design of these headstones in order that they may more appropriately conform to the kind of monuments used in various cemeteries throughout the country, and in order that there may be no discrimination in location with reference to the burial places of those who served in the great World War.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I may say to the gentleman from Texas that there is no law that prevents a change in the type or kind of marker, neither is there any law to prevent them from changing from marble to granite. I invite the gentleman's attention to section 279 of title 24 of the United States Code.

Mr. LANHAM. In other words, it is a matter that is optional with those who have the selection of these stones?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. LANHAM. In this connection, may I bring this to the attention of the chairman of the subcommittee in order that it may be investigated—and I shall be pleased to bring this to his attention again and give him the benefit of any information which I have—because the statement which I am making is not predicated upon a purely local consideration, but one that applies throughout our country, and one in which those who have control of various cemeteries that are not owned by the Government have a great deal of interest.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I thank the gentleman from Texas for his contribution and I am sure I voice the sentiment of the committee in stating that we shall take the matter up with the Quartermaster General in connection with the next annual appropriation. I may say that this year the cost of the markers we are now supplying has advanced $1.85 apiece.

Mr. LANHAM. I think, perhaps, there would be no additional cost in providing the other markers, and this suggestion is not offered for the purpose of increasing the cost, but to get something that will be more permanent and that will cause the inscriptions to endure for the history that they contain, and also to have markers that are more in keeping with monuments generally used in cemeteries. In this way they may be able to prevent their isolation in some little place where they are not in conformity with the general requirements of cemeteries.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JOHNSON of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment. A statement was made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] which I think is not quite accurate. He says that the bill carries an appropriation for the upper part of the Mississippi River from the Missouri River to Minneapolis of $148,000,000 for a so-called 9-foot channel. That is not correct.

The appropriation so far expended on the river is $113,000,000, and the bill carries $27,000,000 for the fiscal year 1938, which leaves an amount of $8,000,000 under the total Budget recommendation of $148,000,000 to complete the job. And I ask members of the committee whether or not that is correct. The inference was that this expenditure, measured from the standpoint of returns to the economic betterment of the Middle West, is not justified. That is not true. Even with a 6-foot channel in the Mississippi, which in the low periods of the summer is only 5 feet, today with such a low stage of water with only the Inland Waterways Corporation practically operating on the Mississippi River, there has been a tonnage of 1,700,000 in what is practically a 5-foot channel. That is not a great deal when you compare it with the tonnage on the Ohio River, due to the industrial cities in Pennsylvania, down to the Mississippi, where they carry 20,000,000 tons, but up at Minneapolis, in the upper part of the river, where we proposed to get a harbor if the administration will grant the canalization and locking of the St. Anthony Falls, we have 10,000,000 tons annually, of which 55 percent is available for water transportation down to the South, where you have lumber in Arkansas, Mississippi, and Tennessee. You have coal along the Ohio River. That can all be transported by water transportation to Minneapolis.

We have iron which can be transported down the Mississippi to the Ohio and up the Ohio to the Pennsylvania steel mills. About five and a half million tons of freight are within five blocks of the Mississippi River in the Minneapolis area alone. That means that the economic practicality of a 9-foot channel is absolutely assured, and when it is completed in less than 2 years it will be one of the greatest benefits to the country in that it will balance the economics of the United States. It will give the inland part of the country an outlet to the ocean, the same influence that made the cities on the Ohio, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, and the rest of the towns, all great cities, and that will give the same opportunity to the river towns on the upper Mississippi. The Army engineers who have done the job have done a wonderful thing from an engineering standpoint, and in behalf of the people of the twin cities of Minnesota and the upper Mississippi River, and in behalf of the Upper Mississippi Waterway Association, I want this RECORD to show a vote of thanks given by them to the administration for the wonderful support we have had in that area, and the completion of the project that we have been waiting for, for decades. [Applause.]

All that is now necessary to bring the 9-foot channel to the practical reach of all agriculture and industry of the Northwest is for this Congress to define and fix the northern termini of this 9-foot channel to the north city limits of the city of Minneapolis. This definition should be made at once by appropriate legislation.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I say to my colleague from Minnesota [Mr. JOHNSON] and to Members of the House that I do not wish to leave any false impressions. If I said there were $221,356,500 in this bill for inland waterways I intended to say it was the intention to spend on the Mississippi River, for the benefit of the inland waterways, that amount; you know that the bill calls for a whole lot less than that and it shows that it was an error on my part if I made the statement. I do not believe I did make the statement.

We are spending for the inland waterways on the Missouri River from the mouth to Kansas City $72,000,000, and from Kansas City to Sioux City $92,000,000, and from the Missouri River at Fort Peck $108,600,000, or a total of $272,600,000 on the Missouri, plus the amount we are spending on the upper Mississippi of $221,356,500, which makes a total of $493,946,500 for the area of the inland waterways on those two rivers. What I want to bring to your attention is the fact that this inland waterways corporation was chartered in 1928, and, according to the statement made by Major General Ashburn, on page 221 of the hearings, that from 1924 to 1936 it made a profit of $1,581,718.49. If you figure the $12,000,000 of capital for 12½ years at 3 percent, it would have netted the Government $4,240,000, three times what he says they earned, but I say to you that when Major General Ashburn makes a report in reference to the inland waterways he does not know the first thing about business. He is running the inland waterways and telling you that he has made a profit, and if you look at that report you will see the amount for each year.

Four years he ran in the red. Major General Ashburn has his salary paid by the Army. He is the head of it. All the mail of the inland waterways is franked. He has his office rent in Washington paid by other departments of the Government. He pays no taxes; he pays nothing for the money he will spend building up his right-of-way running into millions and millions of dollars. That is all given him. He does not know how to charge off depreciation. Then he comes in after you have given him this $15,000,000 for capital and all these advantages and says that he has made a profit. If anyone could not make a profit under those conditions, there is something wrong with him. Are you going to continue to put the Government in business when you know it is losing money and it is in competition with the railroads that are in that locality and which you are trying to put out of business by continuing the inland waterway and the railroads of the country help pay the taxes to support it?

Is it fair to the railroads of this country? Is it fair to the stockholders who have their money invested in those railroads? Is it not communistic to put the Government into business when this inland waterways was supposed to be taken out of business several years ago? I defy any Member of Congress to take the statement and figure out where Major General Ashburn is making any money on the operation of this Inland Waterways Corporation if it is figured in the legitimate and proper way. It is a crime for the Government to continue in business. It is a crime to continue to spend this $500,000,000 on a waterway that is frozen up 6 months of the year. For 6 months of the year you cannot even go up and down this river highway that you are constructing for this Inland Waterways Corporation, because it is frozen up.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield for a question.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The Inland Waterways Corporation was created under the Coolidge administration and is a Republican baby. [Laughter.]

Mr. RICH. Well, it is a sick Republican baby. [Laughter.] I will say that. I am glad the gentleman brought that out. If the Republican Party is responsible for its birth, then the Democratic Party ought to have common sense enough to get up and kick it out. I hope they will. [Laughter and applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania spoke of putting the Government in business. I desire to make some reference to that subject. Two years ago I made a trip to the Panama Canal. The appropriation for the Panama Canal Commission is in this bill. There is a Government corporation known as the Panama Railroad Co. They have two passenger ships that are 35 years old and two cargo ships. Those ships carried all the cement and so forth for the construction of the locks on the Canal. The passenger ships are fine old tubs, but the time had arrived when they should be replaced. I made a little investigation, and I found the Panama Railroad Co. had a replacement fund. Money in the Treasury that could only be used for one purpose, money that could be used to alleviate the unemployment situation and not to be taken out of the general fund of the Treasury.

I called this to the attention of the President when I came back and the President ordered the Panama Railroad Co. to build two new ships. Just a few days ago they let a contract for three new ships. My view was that if you had two new ships which could make 15 or 16 knots an hour they would take the place of four ships which they now have making 8 to 10 knots an hour. My contention was that the Panama Railroad Co. should not be competing with private steamship companies as it is doing now. If they will mind their own business and carry their own freight and the employees of the Panama Canal they can get along with two ships. They do not need four ships. There is no way whereby the construction of that third ship can be prevented in this bill, because the contracts are already let, and I believe that when the Government of the United States makes a contract it should keep that contract. However, two ships would have been sufficient. There is absolutely no reason why those ships should go into Haiti any longer, because our marines are out of Haiti, thank the good Lord; but if those two ships which they are about to start constructing will go direct from New York to Cristobal they can make the trip in 4 or 4½ days. They are taking 8 or 9 days because they stop at Haiti going and coming.

I want to suggest now that it will be to the advantage of the Panama Railroad Co. to stop competition with private steamship companies. They should handle Government freight, and Government freight alone, and carry the employees of the Panama Canal. If they do not do this, some of these days on this floor you will see some opposition to the Panama Railroad. They should remember one experience some years ago when they tried to take those ships off altogether. The House defeated that movement, but it will be revived if they continue to compete with private steamship companies. This Government steamship line has absolutely no business competing with private steamship companies. I am sure they can get along with two ships instead of three, if they would confine themselves to handling Government freight and Government employees. A word to the wise should be sufficient. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, it is with deep regret that I announce the death of Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Great War Speaker of the House and mother of the Senior Senator from Missouri, who died this morning at the home of her devoted daughter, Mrs. James M. Thompson, of New Orleans. For a generation—a period of more than 30 years—she was a resident of Washington and during the Sixty-second Congress, when her husband was officially the titular leader of his party, and succeeding Congresses was one of the most loved women in the Nation. I am certain that the Members of the House who knew her in those eventful days will learn of her passing with profound regret.

The Clerk read as follows:

SIGNAL CORPS

ALASKA COMMUNICATION SYSTEM

For operation, maintenance, and improvement of the Alaska Communication System and for purchase, including exchange, of one motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicle, and for operation and maintenance of vehicles of this character, $166,338, to be derived from the receipts of the Alaska Communication System which have been covered into the Treasury of the United States, and to remain available until the close of the fiscal year 1939: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall report to Congress the extent and cost of any extensions and betterments which may be effected under this appropriation.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have just finished the compilation of certain information on the concentration of wealth by banks and corporations. I ask unanimous consent to insert this information in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD together with certain excerpts in explanation thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair feels that with reference to the excerpts the gentleman would have to secure permission in the House.

Mr. PATMAN. Then, Mr. Chairman, I modify my request to leave out the excerpts.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, a few men controlling a few banks control a majority of the corporate wealth of the Nation, if not a majority of the entire wealth of the Nation. Something must be done in the direction of encouraging local banks and local business. Branch banks should be discouraged and absentee ownership of business should be discouraged. The broad road of opportunity cannot long remain open to the deserving young men and young women of this country if monopoly and concentration of wealth and power continue as they have in the past. Independent businessmen and independent bankers have a common cause. They should unite to protect their own interest, which in this fight against monopoly is in the interest of the general welfare of the people. I hope the day will never come when the deserving young people of this Nation will be compelled, in order to obtain positions, to seek such employment only from our few industrial leaders and bank executives of the East.

I have asked for this time for the purpose of disclosing a study that I have recently completed regarding the concentration of wealth and power.

OWNERSHIP AND CONTROL OF WEALTH

The national wealth of the United States of America is estimated at approximately $320,000,000,000, and the population of this country at 128,000,000 as at the end of 1935. This vast amount of wealth and the large number of people whose economic existence is affected by its ownership and control have made this subject one of increasing importance to every individual.

The importance of this subject is further emphasized by the increase that has taken place in our population, national wealth, and per-capita wealth since 1900, shown as follows:

Year	Population	National wealth	Per-capita wealth
1900	76, 129, 000	$88, 500, 000, 000	$1, 163
1904	82, 601, 600	107, 100, 000, 000	1, 297
1912	95, 097, 000	186, 300, 000, 000	1, 959
1922	109, 872, 000	320, 000, 000, 000	2, 912
1929	121, 526, 000	385, 000, 000, 000	3, 168
1935	127, 521, 000	320, 000, 000, 000	2, 509

A study has been made to ascertain if there is a concentration of the ownership of wealth in a few groups, how the control of this wealth is exercised, and to determine any trends relating to the concentration and control of wealth. This study, due to the magnitude of the subject can deal only with the major phases of ownership and control of wealth.

Almost 40 percent of our national wealth is owned by nonfinancial corporations, the remainder is represented by the wealth owned by financial corporations and by agricultural land and improvements, residential real estate, personal property, including automobiles, and the large volume of Government property. To ascertain if there exists a concentration of wealth, the wealth in the hands of corporations, and the resources of financial corporations and institutions is dealt with. While that part of the wealth represented by agricultural land and equipment, residential real estate, and so forth, is not directly covered in this study, much of this wealth is indirectly influenced by the major corporate units dealt with in this study.

REFERENCE MATERIAL

In connection with the study, the following material has been reviewed and is listed here for reference in the event any additional information may be desired:

(1) The Modern Corporation and Private Property, Berle and Means.

(2) The Internal Debts of the United States, Evans Clark.

(3) Concentration in American Industry, Harry W. Laidler.

(4) Statistical Abstract of the United States, 1935.

(5) Lords of Creation, Frederick Lewis Allen.

(6) Moody's Manual of Banks, Insurance, Real Estate, Investment Trusts, 1930, 1936.

(7) Moody's Manual of Steam Railroads, 1930, 1936.

(8) Moody's Manual of Public Utilities, 1930, 1936.

(9) Poor's Industrial Manual, 1930, 1936.

(10) Poor's Register of Directors, 1937.

(11) National Income of the United States, 1929, 1935.

(12) National Wealth and Income, Federal Trade Commission, 1926.

(13) The New Freedom, Woodrow Wilson.

(14) Weeds of Wall Street, Wickwire.

(15) Other People's Money, Brandeis.

Several of the above books have bibliographies listing additional reference material on this subject.

DIVISIONS OF STUDY

After a review of the material and data available relating to the concentration and control of wealth it was decided to treat the study in three major divisions, as follows:

A. The concentration of corporate wealth in major corporations.

B. The concentration of banking resources in the largest commercial banks.

C. The interlocking control of the major corporations, financial institutions, and largest commercial banks.

These are discussed in the order listed. A summary is included for each division, the final summary covering the entire study. The previous general and introductory material is included in this first division.

NATIONAL AND CORPORATE WEALTH

In a study dealing with the concentration of wealth, it is first necessary to have some estimate as to our national wealth for use as a yardstick; and since we propose to study corporate wealth, estimates must be secured as to this division of our national wealth. For the purposes of this study, I have dealt with the corporate wealth of the nonfinancial corporations. Needless to say, estimates of wealth may be controversial. These have been prepared primarily for comparative purposes in order to estimate general relationships.

The recent estimates as to national and corporate wealth were obtained by taking the trend indicated by the national income and applying it to the last available estimates.

The following amounts are used in this study as of the approximate date of December 31, 1935:

National wealth	$320,000,000,000
Corporate wealth (nonfinancial)	120,000,000,000

CONCENTRATION OF CORPORATE WEALTH

For the year 1934, 528,882 corporations filed income-tax returns. Of this number, approximately 300,000 are nonfinancial corporations. This first division of the study deals with the concentration and control of the assets of the major nonfinancial corporations. As estimated, the total wealth of nonfinancial corporations is approximately $120,000,000,000.

A review of the available data indicated that sufficient information relating to the concentration of nonfinancial corporate wealth could be obtained by the study of less than 200 nonfinancial corporations out of a total of approximately 300,000.

In the Modern Corporation and Private Property, Berle and Means, it is estimated that 200 of the largest nonbanking corporations, as of January 1, 1930, had assets of $81,077,000,000 and that approximately one-half of the assets of the nonfinancial corporations of the country had been concentrated under the control of these 200 corporations out of a total number in excess of 300,000.

INFLUENCE OF HUGE CORPORATIONS

In dealing with the subject of concentration of assets it must be pointed out that the influence of these huge corporations extends beyond the assets under their control, since the smaller corporations which sell to or buy from the larger corporations are likely to be influenced by them to a great extent. Therefore, it would be fair to assume that if the 200 large corporations control one-half of the assets of nonfinancial corporations much more than one-half is indirectly controlled by these same corporations.

TWO THOUSAND INDIVIDUALS CONTROL ONE-HALF OF INDUSTRY

This concentration is more significant when it is recalled that approximately 2,000 individuals who are the active officers and directors of these 200 corporations, out of a total population of 127,500,000, are in a position to control and direct more than one-half of industry.

As an illustration to show the extent to which concentration has progressed, the following estimates are significant. These indicate the total assets of the 200 largest corporations at various dates:

Year	Total assets	Increase (percent)
1909	$26,000,000,000
1919	43,700,000,000	68
1929	81,100,000,000	85

LARGER CORPORATIONS GROWING THREE TIMES AS FAST AS SMALLER CORPORATIONS

In the book previously mentioned, from which the above information was taken, it is indicated that from the period 1909 to 1928 the annual rate of growth of the 200 largest corporations was 50 percent faster than all corporations, or two and one-half times as fast as smaller corporations. During the period of 1924 to 1928 it appears that the larger corporations were growing three times as fast as smaller corporations.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE CORPORATIONS STUDIED

The data on the above 200 nonfinancial was tabulated as of January 1, 1030. No tabulated information of this nature has been available as of a recent date. In order to show the degree of concentration of assets as of a recent date and to furnish specific data relating to the major corporations a tabulation has been prepared of the 175 major nonfinancial corporations showing their assets as of January 1, 1930, and December 31, 1935. In order to obtain comparable data the number of corporations was reduced from 200 to 175, since several corporations included in the 1930 tabulation were reorganized or merged.

In the information hereafter shown in this study there are, in a few instances, slight variations in the amounts reported for 1930 when compared with the figures used by Berle and Means. In each case the amount was checked against the manuals and where the variation was slight the amount reported by the manual was used. If a wide variation was indicated, the figure used by Berle and Means was taken, since in some cases certain subsidiaries may have been consolidated for the purpose of the study, which are not ordinarily included in published statements. The amounts for 1935 have been obtained from the manuals and placed on a comparable basis for the purposes of this study. The main purpose of this study has been to ascertain if there is a concentration of wealth.

The 175 largest nonbanking corporations in the United States

	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1929 (millions)	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1935 (millions)
AMUSEMENTS
Eastman Kodak Co	$163.4	$168.3
Loew's, Inc	124.2	129.2
Paramount Publix Corporation	236.7	118.9
Radio Corporation of America	158.6	102.5
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc	167.1	168.5
Subtotal	850.0	687.4
CHEMICALS
PETROLEUM
Atlantic Refining Co	167.2	163.0
Continental Oil Co	198.0	91.7
Gulf Oil Corporation	430.9	430.2
Ohio Oil Co	110.6	139.7
Phillips Petroleum Co	145.3	174.4
Pure Oil Co	215.4	157.2
Richfield Oil Co. of California	131.9	52.6
Shell Union Oil Corporation	486.4	358.0
Standard Oil Co. of California	604.7	579.5
Standard Oil Co. of Indiana	[1]825.0	693.5
Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey	1,767.3	1,894.9
Socony Vacuum Oil Co	[1]914.1	789.7
Texas Corporation	609.8	473.7
Tide Water Associates Oil Co	251.4	182.8
Union Oil Associates	240.0	151.6
OTHER CHEMICALS, SOAP, ETC.
Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation	277.2	217.5
Corn Products Refining Co	126.7	50.3
Du Pont de Nemours & Co	541.9	666.7
Koppers Co	143.8	177.3
Procter & Gamble Co	109.4	127.0
Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation	306.6	336.5
Subtotal	8,603.6	7,907.8
COAL
Consolidation Coal	94.0	34.8
Glen Alden Coal Co	[1]300.0	151.3
Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Corporation	129.0	92.9
Pittsburgh Coal Co	171.5	142.2
Subtotal	694.5	421.2
FOOD PRODUCTS, DRUGS, TOBACCO, ETC.
DAIRY PRODUCTS
Borden Co	174.0	120.1
National Dairy Products Corporation	179.9	192.0
FRUIT
United Fruit Co	226.0	184.9
MEAT
Armour & Co	452.3	317.1
Swift & Co	351.2	321.3
Wilson & Co	98.0	79.1
SUGAR
American Sugar Refining Co	157.1	117.6
TOBACCO
American Tobacco Co	265.4	271.6
Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co	150.3	170.5
Lorillard (P.) Co	110.0	58.9
Reynolds Tobacco Co	163.1	153.9

[Footnotes at end of table]

The 175 largest nonbanking corporations in the United States—Continued

	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1929 (millions)	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1935 (millions)
FOOD PRODUCTS, DRUGS, TOBACCO, ETC.—Continued
OTHERS
National Biscuit Co	$133.2	$124.5
Subtotal	2,460.5	2,111.5
GLASS
Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co	101.6	109.6
LEATHER
International Shoe Co	111.3	83.1
LUMBER
Long-Bell Lumber Corporation	116.1	67.5
MERCANTILE
Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co	132.7	184.2
Kresge Co	109.5	118.5
Macy, R. H., & Co	[1] 97.0	90.5
Marshall Field & Co	142.7	97.0
Montgomery Ward & Co	187.5	168.6
Sears, Roebuck & Co	251.8	234.0
Woolworth & Co	165.4	192.2
Subtotal	1,086.6	1,085.0
METAL PRODUCTS
AUTOMOBILES
Chrysler Corporation	209.7	193.5
Ford Motor Co	761.0	681.5
General Motors Corporation	[1] 1,400.0	1,414.0
Studebaker Corporation	134.2	30.2
ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT
General Electric Co	491.6	398.1
Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co	253.9	194.4
MACHINERY
Deere & Co	84.7	79.6
International Harvester Co	334.0	365.2
United Shoe Machinery Corporation	94.1	96.3
OTHERS
American Can Co	191.3	209.0
American Car & Foundry Co	119.5	93.1
American Locomotive Co	106.2	84.2
American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation	199.4	159.1
Baldwin Locomotive Works	98.8	69.6
Crane Co	115.9	95.1
Subtotal	4,644.3	4,134.9
METALS
ALUMINUM
Aluminum Co. of America	234.7	222.9
COPPER AND LEAD
American Smelting & Refining Co	241.0	173.7
Anaconda Copper Mining Co	680.6	581.5
Kennecott Copper Corporation	337.8	323.5
National Lead Co	108.4	104.0
Phelps Dodge Corporation	124.7	185.1
IRON AND STEEL
American Rolling Mill Co	104.3	42.7
Bethlehem Steel Corporation	861.6	673.0
Cliffs Corporation	98.0	102.2
Crucible Steel Co. of America	124.3	109.1
Inland Steel Co	103.2	118.3
Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation	222.0	184.9
National Steel Corporation	120.8	180.5
Republic Iron & Steel Co	331.7	297.4
United States Steel Corporation	2,286.1	1,822.4
Wheeling Steel Corporation	127.9	113.0
Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co	235.7	207.4
Subtotal	6,282.8	5,441.6
PAPER
Crown Zellerbach Corporation	117.7	101.3
International Paper & Power Co.[2]	767.1	828.2
Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co	90.3	78.2
Subtotal	975.1	1,007.7

[Footnotes at end of table]

The 175 largest nonbanking corporations in the United States—Continued

	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1929 (millions)	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1935 (millions)
PUBLIC UTILITIES
COMMUNICATIONS
American Telephone & Telegraph	$4,228.4	$4,901.5
International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation	535.2	513.7
Western Union Telegraph Co	359.2	382.7
ELECTRICITY AND GAS
American Water Works & Electric Co	408.3	434.6
Associated Gas & Electric Co	900.4	1,016.7
New England Gas & Electric Association	108.7	108.5
Cities Service Co	989.6	1,250.3
Consolidated Edison Co. of New York	1,171.5	1,376.9
Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore	135.9	160.1
Detroit Edison Co	296.1	327.1
Duke Power Co	212.1	213.5
Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston	156.3	181.8
Electric Bond & Share Co	1,002.6	551.9
American Gas & Electric Co	431.0	467.6
American Power & Light Co	754.1	795.9
Electric Power & Light Corporation	[4] 839.7	683.8
National Power & Light Co	[4] 575.3	586.5
Commonwealth Edison Co	[1] 440.0	448.3
Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co	192.1	211.3
Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois	190.0	226.0
Koppers Co. Group:
Brooklyn Union Gas Co	123.7	121.8
Eastern Gas & Fuel Association	167.1	227.9
Lone Star Gas Corporation	127.7	158.5
North American Co	908.7	891.3
North American Light & Power Co	320.1	328.7
Pacific Gas & Electric Co	454.0	725.8
Pacific Lighting Corporation	240.5	261.0
Southern California Edison Co., Ltd	340.6	393.8
Stone & Webster, Inc	474.3	397.5
United Corporation Group:
Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation	671.2	703.9
Commonwealth & Southern Corporation	1,133.7	1,173.8
Niagara Hudson Power Corporation	756.9	648.0
Public Service Corporation of New Jersey	634.6	694.0
United Gas Improvement Co	802.0	802.0
United Light & Power Co	597.3	597.3
Utilities Power & Light Corporation	401.8	404.7
Subtotal	22,040.7	23,368.7
RAILROADS
Alleghany Corporation:
Erie R. R. Co	601.3	620.6
Kansas City Southern Ry. Co	149.4	137.9
New York, Chicago & St. Louis R. R. Co	291.1	286.9
Wheeling & Lake Erie Ry. Co	109.8	105.1
Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry	1,135.4	1,272.2
Atlantic Coast Line R. R. Co	390.4	368.2
Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co	1,040.8	1,199.6
Chicago & Alton R. R. Co	172.4	85.1
Western Maryland Ry. Co	175.1	171.7
Chicago & Eastern Illinois Ry. Co	101.5	83.8
Chicago Great Western R. R. Co	149.9	145.7
Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific R. R. Co	787.0	741.0
Chicago & North Western Ry. Co	741.6	672.2
Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Ry. Co	512.0	529.5
Chicago Union Station Co	96.8	88.9
Delaware & Hudson Co	110.7	113.4
Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R. Co	223.6	215.3
Denver & Rio Grande Western R. R. Co	227.5	243.1
Florida West Coast Ry. Co	130.6	133.4
Great Northern Ry. Co	852.1	856.6
Northern Pacific Ry. Co	813.9	834.9
Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. Co	712.0	667.8
Spokane, Portland & Seattle Ry	172.7	156.1
Missouri-Kansas-Texas R. R. Co	320.2	261.3
New York Central R. R. Co	2,250.0	2,240.4
New York, New Haven & Hartford R. R. Co	600.7	587.9
Boston & Maine R. R. Co	278.8	330.0
Pennsylvania R. R. Co	2,600.0	2,724.3
Lehigh Valley R. R. Co	251.2	243.1
Norfolk & Western Ry. Co	542.3	529.7
Wabash Ry. Co	350.3	344.3
St. Louis-San Francisco Ry. Co	473.8	462.1
St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co	146.7	139.4
Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co	295.8	291.9
Southern Pacific Co	1,175.9	1,211.7
Southern Ry. Co	680.2	624.2
Union Pacific R. R. Co	1,208.0	1,172.6
Illinois Central R. R. Co	722.3	716.6
Virginian Ry. Co	160.5	165.4
Western Pacific R. R. Corporation	171.8	166.9
Subtotal	21,926.1	21,939.8

[Footnotes at end of table]

The 175 largest nonbanking corporations in the United States— Continued

	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1929 (millions)	Gross assets on or about Dec. 31, 1935 (millions)
REAL ESTATE
U. S. Realty & Improvement Co.	$128.4	$29.4
RUBBER
B. F. Goodrich Co.	163.6	124.0
Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.	161.6	139.2
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.	243.2	192.3
United States Rubber Co.	307.8	159.3
Subtotal	876.2	614.8
TEXTILES
American Woolen Co.	113.9	71.6
TRACTION
Boston Elevated Ry. Co.	121.1	127.5
Brooklyn & Manhattan Transit Co.	288.5	335.8
Chicago Railways Co.	118.9	123.9
Hudson Manhattan R. R. Co.	139.7	135.5
Interborough Rapid Transit Co.	458.6	557.0
Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co.	105.7	98.2
Third Avenue Ry. Co.	95.1	87.4
Subtotal	1,327.6	1,465.3
TRANSPORTATION
Pullman, Inc.	281.5	276.2
Total	72,620.8	70,822.5

[1] Estimated.
[2] Combined assets of predecessors.
[3] Includes utility properties.
[4] 1930.

The relationships of the total assets of the previously listed companies to the national and corporate wealth is indicated by the following tabulation:

Relationship of assets of 175 major nonbanking corporations to corporate and national wealth

	Jan. 1, 1930	Dec. 31, 1936
Assets of 175 major nonfinancial corporations	$72,620,800,000	$70,822,500,000
Wealth of nonfinancial corporations	$135,000,000,000	$120,000,000,000
Percent 175 corporations	53.8	58.7
National wealth	$385,000,000,000	$320,000,000,000
Percent 175 corporations	18.9	22.1

From the above it is apparent that there is a decided concentration of assets in the hands of 175 major nonfinancial corporations, and there is no indication that the trend toward further concentration will not continue.

The relationship of the companies listed to our everyday living is sometimes difficult to comprehend. Figures alone do not tell the complete story.

PEOPLE COMPELLED TO PATRONIZE LARGE CONCERNS

These great companies represented in the previous list form the very framework of American industry. The individual must come in contact with them constantly. He may own an interest in one or more of them. He may be employed by one of them. At least he is continually accepting their services. If he travels any distance, he is almost certain to ride on one of the great railroad systems whose engines have been constructed by the American Locomotive Co. or the Baldwin Locomotive Works. The car in which he rides was probably made by the American Car & Foundry Co. or one of its subsidiaries, unless he is enjoying the services of the Pullman Co. The rails were supplied by one of the major steel companies. If he travels by automobile, probably the car was manufactured by General Motors, Chrysler, or Ford, and his tires supplied by Firestone, Goodrich, Goodyear, or United States Rubber Co. Even if the individual stays in his own home in comparative isolation and privacy, his electricity and gas are probably furnished by one of the major public-utility systems, the aluminum in his kitchen utensils by the Aluminum Co. of America, his electric refrigerator by General Motors, General Electric, or Westinghouse, and the chances are the Crane Co. has supplied his plumbing fixtures and the American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation his heating equipment. He usually buys some of his groceries from the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., a company that in 1930 expected to sell one-eighth of all the groceries in this country. The cans which contain his food may have been made by the American Can Co. or Continental Can Co. His sugar was refined by one of the major companies, such as American Sugar Refining Co.; his meat was probably prepared by Swift, Armour, or Wilson; and his crackers put up by the National Biscuit Co. The newspaper he reads may be printed on International Paper Co. paper, and the radio he uses will almost of necessity be made under the license of the Radio Corporation of America. If he goes to a "movie", he probably will see a Paramount, Fox, or Warner Bros. picture taken on Eastman Kodak film in a theater controlled by one of these producing groups. If he smokes cigarettes, he will usually find himself smoking one of the many brands put out by one of the Big Four tobacco companies.

In studying the growth of the corporate system and the concentration of wealth in corporations there are other phases that may be considered.

CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH SILENT PROCESS

The concentration of wealth in a few corporations is a silent process. Generally little public attention is focused in the gradual acquisition of one corporation by another, and the objectives that individuals may have in building and expanding these major corporations are not realized until the results have been accomplished. It is the essence of evolutions of the more silent sort that they are not recognized until they are far advanced. This was the case with the so-called industrial revolution, and is the case with the corporate revolution through which we are at present passing.

CONTROL BY MINORITY OF INTEREST

Frequently in these major corporations ownership is so widely scattered that working control can be maintained with but a minority interest. Separation of ownership and control becomes almost complete, and not even a substantial minority interest exists, as in the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. In the case of both minority control and management control the separation of ownership from control has taken place, and a large body of security holders has been created who exercise virtually no control over the wealth which they or their predecessors in interest have contributed to the enterprise.

The corporate system further commands attention because its development is progressive as its features become more marked and as new areas come, one by one, under its sway. Economic power in terms of control over physical assets is apparently responding to a centripetal force tending more and more to concentrate in the hands of a few corporate managements. At the same time beneficial ownership is centrifugal, tending to divide and subdivide, to separate into smaller units. In other words, ownership continually becomes more dispersed—the control and power formerly joined to it, increasingly concentrated.

SUMMARY

Summarizing this section dealing with concentration of assets in nonbanking corporations, the following conclusions may be drawn:

First. There exists a decided concentration of nonfinancial corporate wealth in the major corporations.

Second. The assets of the 175 companies out of a total of 300,000 represent approximately one-fifth of the national wealth and one-half of nonfinancial corporate wealth.

Third. The control exercised by the 175 corporations extends beyond the assets owned due to the number of smaller corporations and others who buy from and sell to them.

Fourth. The trend continues toward further concentration in this field.

Fifth. The control of this wealth is in the hands of less than 2,000 active directors and officers.

Sixth. The assets of the 175 major corporations extend into every State in the Union and directly affect the economic welfare of every section of this country.

CONCENTRATION OF BANKING RESOURCES IN LEADING COMMERCIAL BANKS

As of June 30, 1936, there were 15,988 State and National banks with total resources in the amount of $67,525,335,000. Through the control exercised by these banks over the credit facilities of the country, their importance in our economic life cannot be overemphasized.

In the first division of this study the concentration of assets in the hands of 175 major nonfinancial corporations was shown. Here it was indicated that a very decided concentration of wealth exists since 175 corporations out of a total of about 300,000 control more than one-half of nonfinancial corporate wealth.

The purpose of this division of the study is to ascertain the extent to which the sixty-seven billions of banking resources of this country are concentrated in the hands of leading banks.

Moody's Manual for Banks for 1937 reports the resources of each of the larger banks. From a review of this tabulation it is apparent that there is a decided concentration of banking resources in the larger commercial banks. From this list the 24 largest banks were selected, each reporting resources in excess of $350,000,000. In the study of corporations, the tabulation was prepared showing assets as of January 1, 1930, and December 31, 1936. A similar tabulation was prepared for the banks as shown on the following page, showing the resources of each bank and totals as of December 31, 1929, and December 31, 1936, and the number of officers and directors as at December 31, 1936.

List of banks in the United States with resources in excess of $350,000,000 in the order of their size at Dec. 31, 1936

	Officers	Directors	Resources Dec. 31, 1929 (millions)	Resources Dec. 31, 1936 (millions)
1. Chase National Bank (New York)	63	25	$1,714,829	$2,562,182
2. Guaranty Trust Co. (New York)	42	23	2,017,119	2,086,979
3. National City Bank (New York)	86	19	2,206,241	1,904,800
4. Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association	20	25	1,055,113	1,430,337
5. Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co	29	21	1,176,603	1,232,513
6. Bankers Trust Co. (New York)	34	20	817,977	1,079,173
7. First National Bank of Chicago	45	25	365,559	991,280
8. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. (New York)	34	23	709,259	979,309
9. First National Bank of Boston	28	25	703,347	756,202
10. Manufacturers Trust Co. (New York)	20	25	508,226	748,564
11. Irving Trust Co. (New York)	27	23	865,980	728,677
12. Chemical Bank & Trust Co. (New York	32	20	423,172	686,676
13. Security First National Bank (Los Angeles)	44	25	610,683	649,173
14. First National Bank of the City of New York	9	10	568,425	648,019
15. Bank of the Manhattan Co	30	14	506,939	570,538
16. J. P. Morgan & Co., Drexel & Co.	[1]19	19	[2]	550,338
17. Philadelphia National Bank	13	24	358,423	497,392
18. New York Trust Co	15	19	401,665	444,556
19. National Bank of Detroit	15	14	[3]	442,803
20. Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh	10	14	217,786	386,913
21. Mellon National Bank (Pittsburgh)	7	23	192,501	380,895
22. Cleveland Trust Co	38	25	316,508	380,070
23. Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. (New York)	16	15	298,483	360,262
24. Northern Trust Co. (Chicago)	33	8	60,395	355,701
Total	678	484	16,164,233	20,853,352
Comparable figures 21 banks [4]			16,094,838	19,504,510
Total resources, all banks			72,038,566	67,525,335
Percent of total resources in 21 large banks			22.34	28.88

[1] Partners.
[2] No report made public.
[3] Organized Mar. 24, 1933.
[4] Eliminating J. P. Morgan & Co., National Bank of Detroit, and Northern Trust Co., Chicago.

It will be noticed that the resources of the 24 banks increased more than four and one-half billion dollars during the depression. These 24 largest banks are located—13 in New York City, 2 in California, 3 in Illinois, 1 in Massachusetts, 3 in Pennsylvania, 1 in Michigan, and 1 in Ohio.

The relationship of these banks to all banks and banking resources as of June 30, 1936, is shown as follows:

Relation of 24 largest commercial banks to all commercial banks

Class of banks	Number of banks	Total resources	Percent of total
1. Resources exceeding $350,000,000	24	$20,853,352,000	30.88
2. All other banks	15,964	46,671,983,000	69.12
3. Total	15,988	67,525,335,000	100.00

From the above summary it is shown that over 30 percent of all commercial banking resources is in the hands of 24 banks out of a total of 15,988, or less than sixteen-hundredths of 1 percent of all banks. Reference to the previous tabulation indicates there was a trend toward increased concentration of banking resources for the period 1930–36.

As in the case of corporations the banking control exercised by these banks extends beyond the resources in their own hands since many of the smaller banks have banking relationships with the larger banks and are subject to their control in many ways.

These 24 banks are controlled by 484 directors, but from a practical standpoint, as in the case with boards of directors of other corporations, many directors are not generally active in the affairs of the banks.

The above number is also reduced to duplications resulting from interlocking directorates. Therefore it may be assumed that the actual control of these banking resources is concentrated in the hands of a relatively few men.

The relationships among the 24 leading banks were studied and it was found that further concentration exists in this group, as evidenced by interlocking directorates.

In order to show the trend of banks and banking resources from 1919 through 1936, a statistical table was prepared. This table shows that from the peak year of 1921 the number of banks decreased one-half, while banking resources increased from $49,721,000 to $67,525,000, and that the resources of the average bank increased from $1,612,000 to $4,223,000.

TWENTY-FOUR BANKS HAVE ENORMOUS POWER

From the preceding data it is apparent that (1) there is a concentration of banking resources in the 24 leading commercial banks, (2) that there is a further community of interest as indicated by the interlocking directorates in the leading banks, (3) that there is a well-established trend toward fewer and larger banks, and (4) that the trend is more rapid and consistent with banks than with nonfinancial corporations.

INTERLOCKING DIRECTORS OF THE 24 BANKS

Thomas W. Lamont is a director in both J. P. Morgan Co. and Guaranty Trust.

George Whitney is a director in both J. P. Morgan Co. and Guaranty Trust.

S. Parker Gilbert is a director in J. P. Morgan Co. and the Bankers Trust.

Arthur M. Anderson is a director in J. P. Morgan Co. and New York Trust Co.

Harry P. Davison is a director in J. P. Morgan Co. and New York Trust Co.

Cornelius Vanderbilt is a director in the Chase National Bank and the Central Hanover.

Robert W. Goelet is a director in the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. and the Guaranty Trust.

A. P. Giannini is a director in the National City Bank and the Bank of America.

A. J. County is a director in the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. and the Philadelphia National.

Arthur V. Davis is a director in the Mellon Trust Co. and the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh.

Charles Frick is a director in the Mellon Trust Co. and the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh.

Roy A. Hunt is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

Benjamin F. Jones, 3d, is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

James H. Lockhart is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

John M. Lockhart is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

Richard K. Mellon is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

William L. Mellon is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

Paul Mellon is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

David A. Reed is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

William C. Robinson is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

George E. Shaw is a director in the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh and the Mellon Trust Co.

Number of banks and total resources by years from 1919 to 1936

Year	Total number of banks			Total banking resources (millions)			Average resources per bank (thousands)
	State	National	Total	State	National	Total
1919	21,028	7,785	28,813	$25,906	$20,800	$46,766	$1,623
1920	21,923	8,030	29,953	29,191	22,197	51,388	1,716
1921	22,705	8,143	30,848	29,413	20,308	49,721	1,612
1922	22,302	8,197	30,499	28,809	19,815	48,624	1,594
1923	22,084	8,229	30,313	32,081	21,613	53,694	1,771
1924	21,350	8,115	29,465	33,641	22,063	55,704	1,891
1925	21,122	8,016	29,138	36,679	23,832	60,511	2,077
1926	20,289	8,000	28,289	39,106	24,894	64,000	2,262
1927	19,597	7,828	27,425	40,047	25,699	65,746	2,397
1928	18,965	7,734	26,699	41,866	27,574	69,440	2,601
1929	18,357	7,575	25,932	43,645	29,022	72,667	2,802
1930	17,298	7,316	24,614	44,690	27,348	72,038	2,927
1931	15,865	6,935	22,800	42,686	28,126	70,812	3,106
1932	13,882	6,373	20,255	38,468	24,662	63,130	3,117
1933	11,513	5,887	17,400	31,727	22,302	54,029	3,105
1934	10,903	5,422	16,325	32,621	23,902	56,523	3,462
1935	10,742	5,431	16,173	34,372	26,061	60,433	3,737
1936	10,614	5,374	15,988	37,822	29,703	67,525	4,223

The possible effect on our economic system of this concentration of the control of credit has from time to time engaged the study of many men prominent in the affairs of our Nation, and the following excerpts are taken from various writings and reports.

In 1909 Woodrow Wilson, in his New Freedom, maintained that as a result of the concentration of the credit system in the hands of the few, we had become "the most highly controlled and dominated Government in the civilized world." This subject was commented on from time to time by men prominent in public affairs, and as a result of these comments, and the general situation existing, Congress appointed the Pujo investigating committee in 1912 with Samuel Untermyer as counsel. After extended investigation this committee issued its report analyzing the financial control of the Nation as the committee then saw it. It directed attention to the First National Bank of New York; National City Bank of New York; Lee Higginson & Co., of Boston; Kidder-Peabody & Co.; and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as the most active agents in bringing about concentration of credit control.

According to this committee, the internationally known banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was head and shoulders above the other giants of finance. Following the investigation the committee issued charts showing that the firm members of Morgan & Co. and its allied banks held at the time of the hearings—

(1) One hundred and eighteen directorships in 34 banks and trust companies, having total resources of $2,679,000,000 and total deposits of $1,983,000,000.

(2) Thirty directorships in 10 insurance companies having total assets of $2,293,000,000.

(3) One hundred and five directorships in 32 transportation systems having a capitalization of $11,784,000,000; total mileage of 150,200.

(4) Sixty-three directorships in 23 producing and trading corporations having a total capitalization of $3,339,000,000.

(5) Twenty-five directorships in 12 public utility corporations having a total capitalization of $2,150,000,000.

The committee's report and recommendations created a stir, but of the specific recommendations enacted the restraint of interlocking directorates was the most important. As a result, on January 1, 1914, Morgan & Co. announced their retirement from a number of directorates. As a result of this investigation, the previous work of the National Monetary Commission formed a basis for the Federal Reserve Act, passed in 1914. Some of the proponents of the Federal Reserve System at that time wanted one central bank. Because, however, of the fear of centralization, 12 Federal Reserve banks were thought to be best, and these were created. Each of these banks has most of the attributes of a central bank. Such a decentralized system, it was thought, would tend to divest the Money Trust in Wall Street of much of its power. Experience has shown, however, that the Federal Reserve System has not arrested the movement toward concentration of credit control.

This view was also expressed in 1930 by Congressman McFadden, chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, who said:

> We find that the concentration of Nation-wide banking assets under the control of these big banks (possibly in New York and Chicago) or their affiliates has become so important as to overshadow the entire Federal Reserve System of operations. One naturally begins to wonder whether or not some of these larger banks or groups may not entirely dominate the election of officers and directors of many of the Federal Reserve banks and so be a factor in the determination of changes in the Federal Reserve policies which are made from time to time by the Federal Reserve Board.

From the date of the Pujo investigation until 1930 concentration continued. So at the beginning of 1930, 250 banks held resources of $33,400,000,000 out of total bank resources in this Nation of $72,000,000,000. Thus, 1 percent of the banks of the country directly controlled more than 46 percent of the total national resources. (Testimony of John W. Pole, Comptroller of the Currency.)

At the beginning of 1930, 24 New York banks, or less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the total, had combined resources of about $10,800,000,000, or 15 percent of the total resources of the banks of the Nation, while their capitalization of nearly $700,000,000 is almost comparable in total to that of 20,000 country banks situated in towns of 10,000 population or less. (Grief B. Hazlewood, president, American Banking Association.)

Concentration recently had been greatly advanced through the rapid consolidation of the key banks in the country, through the development of chain and branch banking, investment trusts, industrial activities of private banks, and other means. The unit bank is fast fading from the scene, and America bids fair sooner or later to follow the example of Canada, England, and other countries in the concentration of all banking power in the comparatively few gigantic central banking institutions. (Joseph Lawrence, Banking Concentration in the United States, 1931.)

SUMMARY

This section of the study may be summarized as follows:

(1) Twenty-four leading banks control approximately one-third of all banking resources.

(2) The control of the 24 banks is in the hands of 484 directors, many of whom are not normally active in the affairs of the banks.

(3) There is a community of interest between certain groups of the leading banks, as evidenced by interlocking directorates.

(4) In the period from 1930 to 1936 there was an increased concentration of banking resources in the major banks.

(5) During the period from 1921 to 1936 the total number of commercial banks decreased from 30,848 to 15,988, while resources increased from $49,721,000 to $67,525,000. The resources of the average bank increased from $1,612,000 to $4,223,000 during this period.

THE CONCENTRATION OF CONTROL OF WEALTH IN LEADING BANKS

This last division of the study has been for the purpose of ascertaining if there is an interlocking of control between the largest banks and the major corporations, savings banks, insurance companies, and others, indicating a further concentration of the control of a large and important part of our national wealth.

Since banks exercise so much control over the credit facilities of the country, the importance of any existing interlocking control and community of interest between banks and large corporations, financial institutions, and others is readily apparent.

In this study the two following divisions of the subject have been covered:

A. Concentration of corporate wealth in major corporations.

B. Concentration of banking resources in largest commercial banks.

In the first division it was shown that there now exists a very definite concentration of the nonfinancial corporate wealth in the hands of the largest corporations, 175 of them controlling directly more than half of the nonfinancial corporate wealth of the Nation and about one-fifth of the national wealth, and it was indicated that the control exercised by these corporations extends beyond the assets owned by them. In the second division of this study it was shown that 24 banks of a total of 15,988 control more than 30 percent of the banking resources of the country, indicating a very definite concentration of banking resources. In the case of banks it was also indicated that the control exercised by these banks extends beyond their own resources. In both cases it was apparent that the trend toward larger units and further concentration of wealth and banking resources has continued up to a recent date, and that there is no indication that this trend will not continue, and with it there is reason to believe that there will be a wider separation of ownership and control.

Insurance companies and savings banks were not studied in any detail, since it was apparent from a preliminary review that there is a very definite concentration of resources in the large insurance companies and savings banks.

The control of corporate wealth may be exercised through (1) majority ownership, (2) dominant minority interest, (3) management.

In most cases control is represented by dominant members of the boards of directors. This study deals with the control, or potential control, exercised through interlocking directorates between the leading banks and others.

In order to ascertain interlocking directorates, the directors of the 24 leading banks were listed. The directorships held by these individuals in major corporations and financial institutions were secured from Poor's Directory of Directors and the major connections tabulated. A complete list would include many hundreds of corporations, both large and small.

For the purpose of this study, 100 of the major corporations, savings banks, and insurance companies having interlocking directors were selected as being representative of the various fields of industry and finance. This tabulation cannot be printed without a special permit. This tabulation furnishes the names of the companies, the total number of their directors, the number of interlocking directorates between them and the 24 largest banks, and their assets as of January 1, 1930, and December 31, 1935.

It discloses that the directors of the Chase National Bank are also directors in 39 of the 100 largest corporations, and has 57 directors on the boards of the 39 large corporations. It discloses that 46 of the directors of the Guaranty Trust Co. are directors in 31 of the 100 largest corporations; that 24 of the National City Bank directors are also directors in 18 of the 100 largest corporations, and similar information for the other 24 banks.

These companies were then classified by groups and tabulated in order to show the assets or resources of companies by industries, and so forth, and the relative proportion of interlocking directorates of each group. This summary is shown as follows:

Summary by industries of 100 corporations having interlocking directorates with 24 largest banks

Name of industry	Directors	Bank connections	Number of companies	Assets
				Jan. 1, 1930	Dec. 31, 1935
Automobiles and tires	87	19	5	$2,164,300,000	$2,012,500,000
Amusements	65	10	5	856,000,000	573,000,000
Chemicals and oils	89	15	6	2,194,500,000	2,171,900,000
Electric equipment	36	19	2	745,500,000	892,500,000
Foods and mercantiles	194	36	14	1,944,800,000	1,631,400,000
Steels	70	16	5	3,649,800,000	2,930,400,000
General industrials	202	47	15	1,956,500,000	1,830,400,000
Financial corporations	258	64	13	10,375,500,000	14,119,300,000
Metals	121	27	7	1,909,100,000	1,801,300,000
Public utilities	119	35	9	8,441,900,000	8,555,800,000
Railroads and transportation	218	82	15	14,091,500,000	14,389,400,000
Telephone and telegraph	84	33	4	5,255,100,000	5,924,100,000
Total	1,543	403	100	53,584,500,000	56,532,000,000

COMMUNITY OF INTEREST BETWEEN LARGE BANKS AND MAJOR CORPORATIONS

From the previous tabulation it is apparent that there is a definite community of interest between banks and the major corporate units of the country, since in practically every major unit of industry and finance there is a relationship existing through interlocking directors. The full extent of the relationship and community of interest is not completely revealed by interlocking directors alone. Officers of a company may often be representatives of banks and not appear on a list of the board of directors of either. By this means a very active control may be exercised. Also officers or employees of banks who are not directors may appear either as a director or officer of a company and thereby be in a position to exercise some control over industry. Control may be exercised through other relationships which if known would only emphasize the conclusions reached from this study. With the concentration of wealth in major corporations and financial institutions and of banking resources in leading banks, and these groups closely allied through interlocking directorates, it is not difficult to understand the control that a comparatively small group of men may exercise over the wealth and economic life of this country.

THE 100 MEN WHO CONTROL LARGE PART OF CORPORATE WEALTH

From the data reviewed a list of 100 of the prominent men of the country who are the interlocking directors has been prepared. This list covers directors of the 24 leading banks who are directors of one or more of the 100 companies or financial institutions and are a typical cross section of the men who are in a position to control a large portion of our national wealth. The extent and magnitude of this control and the part that these men play in the economic welfare of the people of this country is difficult to fully comprehend. A list of these 100 men, with their banking directorships, is as follows:

Winthrop W. Aldrich, Chase National Bank.
Arthur M. Anderson, New York Trust Co., J. P. Morgan & Co.
A. Watson Armour, Northern Trust Co. (Chicago).
Sewell L. Avery, Northern Trust Co. (Chicago).
M. H. Aylesworth, Irving Trust Co.
George F. Baker, First National Bank of New York.
Newton D. Baker, Cleveland Trust Co.
Steven Baker, Bank of the Manhattan Co.
Francis D. Bartow, J. P. Morgan & Co.
Sosthenes Behn, National City Bank.
Edward E. Brown, First National Bank (Chicago).
Francis H. Brownell, Chase National Bank.
Mortimer N. Buckner, New York Trust Co.
Ralph Budd, First National Bank (Chicago).
Newcomb Carlton, Chase National Bank.
Thomas L. Chadbourne, Manufacturers Trust Co.
Edward H. Clark, Irving Trust Co.

Henry J. Cochran, Bankers Trust Co.
Frank D. Comerford, First National Bank (Boston).
Albert J. County, Chemical Bank & Trust Co., Philadelphia National Bank.
David A. Crawford, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.
Harry W. Croft, Mellon National Bank.
Walter J. Cummings, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.
Bertram Cutler, Chase National Bank.
Arthur V. Davis, Mellon National Bank, Union Trust Co. (Pittsburgh).
Francis B. Davis, Jr., New York Trust Co.
John W. Davis, Guaranty Trust Co.
George W. Davison, Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.
Henry P. Davison, J. P. Morgan & Co., New York Trust Co.
Henry W. deForest, Guaranty Trust Co.
Carl A. deGersdorf, Chemical Bank & Trust Co.
William Dexter, First National Bank (Boston).
Franklin D'Olier, Chase National Bank.
Lawrence A. Downs, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.
Edward A. Duffield, Guaranty Trust Co.
Frederick H. Ecker, Chase National Bank.
Frederick J. Fisher, National Bank of Detroit.
Leon Fraser, First National Bank (New York).
Walter E. Frew, Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co. (New York).
George Peabody Gardner, First National Bank (Boston).
Artemus L. Gates, New York Trust Co.
Paolino Gerli, Manufacturers Trust Co.
Amadeo P. Giannini, Bank of American National Trust & Savings Association; National City Bank.
Harvey Dow Gibson, Manufacturers Trust Co.
Walter S. Gifford, First National Bank (New York City).
S. Parker Gilbert, J. P. Morgan & Co., Bankers Trust Co.
Eugene G. Grace, Guaranty Trust Co.
Joseph P. Grace, National City Bank.
Edward B. Greene, Cleveland Trust Co.
William Steele Gray, Jr., Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.
Robert W. Goelet, Chemical Bank & Trust Co.; Guaranty Trust Co.
James G. Harbord, Bankers Trust Co.
William A. Harriman, Guaranty Trust Co.
John A. Hartford, Guaranty Trust Co.
David F. Houston, Guaranty Trust Co.
Percy H. Johnston, Chemical Bank & Trust Co.
J. L. Johnston, Manufacturers' Trust Co.
Thomas W. Lamont, J. P. Morgan & Co.; Guaranty Trust Co.
Halfdon Lee, First National Bank (Boston).
Russell C. Leffingwell, J. P. Morgan & Co.
E. Eugene Loomis, New York Trust Co.
Lenore F. Loree, Chase National Bank.
Alvan Macauley, National Bank of Detroit.
Thomas N. McCarter, Chase National Bank.
Harold F. McCormick, First National Bank (Chicago).
Donald R. McLennan, Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.
George McNeir, Bank of the Manhattan Co.
J. P. Morgan, J. P. Morgan & Co.
Richard K. Mellon, Mellon National Bank; Union Trust Co. (Pittsburgh).
William L. Mellon, Mellon National Bank; Union Trust Co. (Pittsburgh).
Thomas I. Parkinson, Chase National Bank.
James H. Perkins, National City Bank.
Thomas N. Perkins, First National Bank (Boston).
J. Howard Pew, Philadelphia National Bank.
William C. Potter, Guaranty Trust Co.
Herbert L. Pratt, Bankers Trust Co.
Seward Prosser, Bankers Trust Co.
John J. Raskob, Bankers Trust Co.
Jackson E. Reynolds, First National Bank (New York City).
Andrew W. Robertson, Chase National Bank.
Henry M. Robinson, Security First National Bank (Los Angeles).
Alfred P. Sloan, National Bank of Detroit.
Matthew S. Sloan, Irving Trust Co.
Solomon A. Smith, Northern Trust Co. (Chicago).
Robert C. Stanley, Chase National Bank.
Philip Stockton, First National Bank (Boston).
Silas H. Strawn, First National Bank (Chicago).
Gerard Swope, National City Bank.
Myron C. Taylor, First National Bank (New York City).
George N. Tidd, Irving Trust Co.
A. A. Tilney, Bankers Trust Co.
Cornelius Vanderbilt, Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.; Chase National Bank.
Harold S. Vanderbilt, First National Bank (New York City).
Samuel M. Vauclain, Philadelphia National Bank.
James P. Warburg, Bank of the Manhattan Co.
Samuel A. Welldon, First National Bank (New York City).
George Whitney, J. P. Morgan & Co.; Guaranty Trust Co.
Richard Whitney, Corn Exchange Bank & Trust Co.
John P. Wilson, First National Bank (Chicago).
William Woodward, Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co.

The concentration of wealth in large corporate units and the ultimate control of this wealth by a few individuals have merited for some time the interest and study of men prominent in the affairs of the Nation. The following statements by Woodrow Wilson indicate the general tenor of a great mass of material on this subject, a portion of which may be obtained from the reference material listed in the first division of the study:

It is true that while most men are thus submerged in the corporation, a few, a very few, are exalted to a part which, as individuals, they could never have warranted. To the great organizations of which they are the heads, a few are able to play a part unprecedented by anything in history in the control of the business operations of the country, and in the determination of the happiness of great numbers of people.

American industry is not free, as it once was free; American enterprise is not free; the man with only a little capital is finding it harder to get into the field, more and more impossible to compete with the big fellow. No man can deny that the lines of endeavor have more and more narrowed and stiffened. No man who knows anything about the development of industry in this country can have failed to observe that the larger kinds of credit are more and more difficult to obtain unless you obtain them upon the terms of uniting your efforts with those who already control the industries of the country.

The dominating danger in this land is not the existence of the great individual combinations—that is dangerous enough in all consciousness—but the combination of the combinations—of the railroads, the manufacturing enterprises, the great mining projects, the big enterprises of the development of natural water power in the country, banded together in the personnel of a series of boards of directors into a "community of interest" more formidable than any conceivable single combination that dare appear in the open.

MONOPOLY OF BIG CREDITS

The great monopoly in this country is the monopoly of big credits. So long as that exists our old variety of freedom and individual energy of development are out of the question. A great industrial nation is controlled by its system of credit. Our system of credit is practically concentrated. The growth of the Nation, therefore, and all our activities are in the hands of a few men who, even if their action be honest and intended for the public interest, are necessarily concentrated upon the great undertakings in which their own money is involved and who necessarily by the very reason of their own limitations chill and check and destroy genuine economic freedom. This is the greatest question of all, and to this statesmen must address themselves with a determination to serve a long future and the true liberties of men.

SUMMARY

From the study of interlocking control between banks and industry the following conclusions may be reached:

First. There exists a definite community of interest and interlocking control between banks and industry.

Second. Of a total of 1,543 directorships in the 100 major corporations, there are 403 connections with the 24 banks through interlocking directorates.

Third. Of a total of 488 directorships in the 24 leading banks, there are 403 connections with the 100 corporations through the interlocking directorates.

Fourth. Of the 403 interlocking directorships between the 100 corporations and 24 banks, 230 are held by directors of 7 banks and 103 by directors of 2 banks.

Fifth. The 100 major corporate units having interlocking directorates represent concentration of wealth in their respective fields.

Sixth. Interlocking control is represented by the men holding the 403 interlocking directorates. One hundred men of this group represent the more important interlocking directorates and the potential control of a large part of our national wealth.

CONSPIRACY TO CONTROL RETAIL DISTRIBUTION

About 2 years ago I was appointed chairman of a special congressional investigating committee for the purpose of investigating large-scale buying and selling, which included, of course, national corporate chain stores. Our committee worked less than a year, but disclosed shocking and astounding information to the effect that a few men had conspired among themselves to obtain control of retail distribution in this Nation. Eventually they expected to make the public pay, and pay dearly; their methods and policies would line their own pockets with gold. This committee discovered and reported to Congress that certain laws would have to be passed or the independent merchant in this country could no longer survive. Every recommendation of this committee was included in the so-called Robinson-Patman bill and enacted into law June 19 of last year. This law applies to interstate commerce. Twenty-five State legislatures have already passed similar laws to apply to intrastate commerce. The disclosures were so startling that Mr. Justice Roberts, a few days ago, quoted some of them in support of the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States upholding the Louisiana chain store tax law. Our fight for the independent merchant is not over; it must continue in order to save independent business. The people are interested as they have never been before. Public sentiment controls, and never again should we permit misleading and untruthful statements tending to sell the people on fallacious theories destructive to their welfare to go unchallenged and unanswered. As the printing press freed people from bondage and promoted culture and civilization, our modern means of communication permit a wide and quick dissemination of information that will free us from the cruel, cold, heartless grip of monopoly in any line of business.

REMEDY

We cannot cure this situation overnight. It can be cured gradually. Definite steps should commence immediately in the direction of depriving a few of the unfair privileges that they enjoy and permit more people to enjoy privileges that should be available to all.

I suggest the following:

First. That the stock in the 12 Federal Reserve banks should be owned by the Government; branch or chain banks prohibited; permit local citizens to purchase units of such chain and branch banks; permit the Government's credit to be used by all banks for the benefit of all the people instead of using it as it is now used, principally by a few large banks for the benefit of a few people.

Second. Cause all Government securities to be purchased by the Federal Reserve banks, and prevent inflation by raising the reserve requirements of the banks at the same time such securities are purchased. This cannot be done quickly, but it can be done gradually, and the taxpayers saved almost a billion dollars a year in interest which they are now paying.

Third. Encourage local business, locally owned and owner operated, and discourage absentee ownership of local business.

Fourth. Under no circumstances permit the credit of the Nation to be farmed out to private corporations as it is today.

Fifth. Limit salaries and bonuses of executives of large corporations.

Sixth. Break up all monopolies, encourage fair prices and good wages, and preserve competition.

Seventh. Every law passed by Congress or State legislature should recognize that there are approximately 36,000,000 people dependent upon production on the farms, in the orchards, in the mines, on the ranches, and in the forests for a livelihood; that they must receive fair prices or their purchasing power will be destroyed, which will cause other groups and classes to suffer; that approximately 40,000,000 people are dependent upon wage earning for a living; that they must receive a fair wage or their consuming power will be destroyed, which will cause other classes and groups to suffer; that 11,000,000 people are dependent upon transportation and communication for a livelihood, and they are entitled to a fair profit; that 18,000,000 people are dependent upon distribution for a livelihood, and they are entitled to a fair profit; that millions of people are dependent upon the professions for a livelihood, and they are entitled to a fair return for services rendered; that prosperity cannot commence from the top—it must commence from the bottom. If the masses are prosperous, the Nation is prosperous. It should be remembered that you cannot fatten the herd just by feeding the bull.

Eighth. Tax-exempt, interest-bearing bonds should be eliminated. They represent the principal means of tax avoidance. They cause the rich to be richer and the poor to be poorer. They permit the wealthy to escape taxation entirely and cause the poor to pay taxes upon what they owe and upon what they consume in order to support the different Federal, State, and other governments.

Ninth. We should know who our creditors are. Who owns our national debt? Who is escaping taxation in this way? Is it not right for the Government, the same as an individual, to know whom it owes? It is reasonable to request that this information be known. Its disclosure will be helpful in framing tax-avoidance laws and for other purposes.

PRESENT ADMINISTRATION COMMENDED

I commend the present administration for its efforts and accomplishments, which are so helpful to the general welfare of the people. No previous administration has helped the poor, the wage earners, the farmers, the small-business man, and the average citizen as much as this administration. No administration in the past has recognized the duty of the Government to protect the weak against the strong as this one has, and something has been done about it.

By unanimous consent the pro-forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS

UNITED STATES HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

For the maintenance of the office of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands as authorized by subsection 4 of section 7 of the act approved March 24, 1934 (48 Stat. 456), including salaries and wages; rental, furnishings, equipment, maintenance, renovation, and repair of office quarters and living quarters for the High Commissioner; supplies and equipment; purchase and exchange of lawbooks and books of reference, periodicals, and newspapers; traveling expenses, including for persons appointed hereunder within the United States and their families, actual expenses of travel and transportation of household effects from their homes in the United States to the Philippine Islands, utilizing Government vessels whenever practicable; operation, maintenance, and repair of motor vehicles, and all other necessary expenses, $140,500, of which amount not exceeding $7,800 shall be available for expenditure in the discretion of the High Commissioner for maintenance of his household and such other purposes as he may deem proper: Provided, That the salary of the legal adviser and the financial expert shall not exceed the annual rate of $8,000 and $7,500 each, respectively: Provided further, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5), shall not apply to any purchase or service rendered under this appropriation when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed the sum of $100.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I observe that in the item for the Bureau of Insular Affairs, the committee has reduced the salary of the legal and financial advisers in the Philippine Islands from $12,000 and $10,000, respectively, to $8,000 and $7,500, respectively. It occurs to me that this reduction might have come with better grace had it been made in 1933, when Congress was economy-minded, when we were slashing Federal salaries. I doubt whether this decrease is justified at the present time, although I shall not make any effort to amend the bill to restore the original item. What I do want to allude to this afternoon is the newspaper report this morning that Mr. James Alley, the general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has resigned. It was my good fortune to know Mr. Alley in a limited way through his appearances before the Committee on Banking and Currency. I found him to be a very dignified, reticent sort of person, but with that kind of calm self-assurance that is founded upon knowledge and ability. He really was an outstanding servant of this great Government of ours, and his departure constitutes a genuine loss.

I do not know why Mr. Alley resigned, but reflecting upon his resignation I may say that as a general thing, judging from whatever observations I have made, good men are resigning from the service today because of the insecurity of their jobs and their future by virtue of the emotional actions of Congress. It is not so long ago that we penalized Mr. Hopkins by reducing his salary and later reinstating it. It is not so long ago that the Congress reduced from $12,000 to $10,000 the salary of Mr. Fechner, who directs the destinies of the Civilian Conservation Corps. This is a job, incidentally, that is the equivalent in responsibility to any job in any private corporation in this entire country. It is not so long ago that another body—it has not finished its labors yet—at least suggested that the salary of the Director of the Social Security Board be reduced from $9,500 to $9,000. Whether it was punitive in its purpose or not I cannot say, but I do feel that we cannot go on forever penalizing good men who come into the Government service. We cannot forever go on in hysterical fashion and imbue them with the idea that their jobs and their salaries are insecure and that the proper thing for them to do is to forsake the Government service and go back into private industry. That is the reason there are resignations of many good men from the Government service. How are we ever going to articulate our capacity for self-government and democracy and procure for this Government the best service that men can render unless we have good directing heads? I sincerely trust that we shall get over this emotional strain of ours and see that the men who are in places of responsibility giving executive direction to the functions of Government are secure in their positions, and their salaries so that they can freely, with untrammeled minds, give the best they have to their country. While I know nothing about the merits of the instant case I do believe that we ought to be more careful about indiscriminately cutting salaries than we have been in the past. High-grade personal service can always find a ready market and there is no reason to believe that men will or should remain in the service of the Nation unless that Nation expressed its appreciation by affording them some degree of security.

[Here the gavel fell.]

By unanimous consent the pro-forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

CORPS OF ENGINEERS

RIVERS AND HARBORS

To be immediately available and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, and to remain available until expended:

For the preservation and maintenance of existing river and harbor works, and for the prosecution of such projects heretofore authorized as may be most desirable in the interests of commerce and navigation; for survey of northern and northwestern lakes and other boundary and connecting waters as heretofore authorized, including the preparation, correction, printing, and issuing of charts and bulletins and the investigation of lake levels; for prevention of obstructive and injurious deposits within the harbor and adjacent waters of New York City; for expenses of the California Debris Commission in carrying on the work authorized by the act approved March 1, 1893 (U. S. C., title 33, sec. 661); for such works, hereby authorized, as may be necessary for the protection of the town of Collinsville, Ala.; for removing sunken vessels or craft obstructing or endangering navigation as authorized by law; for operating and maintaining, keeping in repair, and continuing in use without interruption any lock, canal (except the Panama Canal), canalized river, or other public works for the use and benefit of navigation belonging to the United States; for payment annually of tuition fees of not to exceed 35 student officers of the Corps of Engineers at civil technical institutions under the provisions of section 127a of the National Defense Act, as amended (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 535); for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors; and for printing, including illustrations, as may be authorized by the Committee on Printing of the House of Representatives, either during a recess or session of Congress, of surveys authorized by law, and such surveys as may be printed during a recess of Congress shall be printed, with illustrations, as documents of the next succeeding session of Congress, and for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats, for official use, not to exceed $197,971: Provided, That no funds shall be expended for any preliminary examination, survey, project, or estimate not authorized by law, $128,000,000: Provided further, That from this appropriation the Secretary of War may, in his discretion and on the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers based on the recommendation by the Board for Rivers and Harbors in the review of a report or reports authorized by law, expend such sums as may be necessary for the maintenance of harbor channels provided by a State, municipality, or other public agency, outside of harbor lines and serving essential needs of general commerce and navigation, such work to be subject to the conditions recommended by the Chief of Engineers in his report or reports thereon: Provided further, That no appropriation under the Corps of Engineers for the fiscal year 1938 shall be available for any expenses incident to operating any power-driven boat or vessel on other than Government business: Provided further, That not to exceed $3,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be available for the support and maintenance of the Permanent International Commission of the Congresses of Navigation and for the payment of the actual expenses of the properly accredited delegates of the United States to the meeting of the congresses and of the commission.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 6, line 21, strike out "$128,000,000", and insert in lieu thereof "$113,000,000."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I have made this motion in order to try and save a little bit out of this large appropriation. In the first place I call attention to the hearings, at pages 44 and 45. It appears that we are spending for inland waterways $52,000,000, and that the traffic there is 33,000,000 tons. For seacoast harbors we are spending a total of approximately $29,000,000 and the traffic there is 370,000,000 tons. In particular we are spending $27,000,000 for the Mississippi River between the Missouri River and Minneapolis to support a traffic burden of 1,500,000 tons. On the Missouri River from its mouth to Kansas City we are spending $400,000, having previously spent $69,000,000, and the traffic is 487,000 tons with the project nine-tenths completed. We are spending $7,000,000 on the upper Missouri from Kansas City to Sioux City with traffic of only 1,080,000 tons.

In all we have spent $60,000,000 on this project. These expenditures are altogether out of line with the services that may be rendered. We should not spend so much money on these unproductive waterways.

This bill calls for upwards of $195,000,000, an increase of approximately $3,605,000 over last year. May I say that the regular departmental appropriations thus far that have passed the House, exclusive of the bonus, amount to $570,000,000 more than last year. The total is $6,493,000,000. Last year the total was $5,920,000,000. The appropriations altogether this year that have passed the House amount to $9,302,000,000 and last year, exclusive of the bonus, they were $9,000,000,000. With the bonus they ran over $10,000,000,000 last year.

Appropriations in second session of Seventy-fourth Congress and first session of Seventy-fifth Congress passed by House, June 15, 1937

	Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, 1937	Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, 1938
Independent offices	$1,060,000,000.00	$1,140,000,000.00
Independent offices (bonus deficiency)	1,874,751,000.00
Agriculture	805,000,000.00	945,000,000.00
Treasury-Post Office	2,701,000,000.00	2,969,000,000.00
Navy	530,000,000.00	528,000,000.00
State, Justice, Commerce, and Labor	117,000,000.00	121,000,000.00
Legislative	25,400,000.00	24,000,000.00
Interior	116,560,195.00	124,871,264.85
Interior (reappropriation)		30,000,000.00
War Department:
Military	388,500,000.00	416,000,000.00
Nonmilitary	191,729,685.00	195,335,063.00
Total	7,809,940,880.00	6,493,206,327.85
Relief and P. W. A.	2,675,397,537.96	1,770,000,000.00
Do		135,000,000.0
Total	10,485,338,417.96	8,398,206,327.85
In addition, a deficiency for 1936 of	368,234,000.00
In addition, a deficiency for 1937 of		899,052,596.95
Total	10,853,572,417.96	9,297,258,924.80
District of Columbia, Federal contribution	5,000,000.00	5,000,000.00
Total	10,858,572,417.96	9,302,258,924.80
Bonus	1,874,751,000.00
Last year, without bonus	8,983,821,417.96

So you see that, without the bonus, we have already appropriated more money than last year by $318,437,000.

It is apparent that we are running out of hand with our appropriations and that we are getting to the point where we ought to come to our senses and stop this spending. I have offered the amendment to cut out a very moderate amount from these exorbitant apppropriations for nonproductive waterways. I hope the committee will adopt the amendment and save this very moderate amount and, in this connection, may I say also that the committee has saved approximately $47,000 under the Budget and we ought to go a good deal further than that.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does the gentleman know of any factor or influence that has been more disturbing to the earnings of our railroads than the operation of the Mississippi River-Warrior service that has been subsidized all the way through by Government contribution?

Mr. TABER. It has almost destroyed some of the middle western railroads and put them out of business. There has been no profit in the final analysis to the shipper.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH and Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] rise?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] rise?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER], a member of the subcommittee, is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. The Chairman rules me out every time, and I thank the gentleman for giving me this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say for the benefit of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] that he inquired of the gentleman for what reason he rose in order to find out whether or not he was going to offer an amendment as a substitute and, if so, the Chair would have recognized the gentleman. In view of that fact, it was the duty of the Chair to recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER], chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RICH. It pleases me to have the Chairman chastise me. He is a fine fellow; but many times this afternoon I tried to get recognition but could not. I have a speech I want to make, but I cannot make it today. You see what time it is now, and the time is growing later every minute. I am going to ask for time to speak sometime in the future.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York is a step in the right direction.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. The gentleman was recognized to speak in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] but he is now speaking in favor of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] rose in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and will proceed in order.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Colorado a few moments ago stated that the Inland Waterways Corporation was an organization established by a former Republican administration. I condemn the action of the former Republican administration in establishing the Inland Waterways Corporation. But if the Members on this side of the House are as emphatic in their condemnation of the Inland Waterways Corporation as I am, they will help the gentleman from New York by adopting the amendment, which will cut down the appropriation for the Inland Waterways Corporation.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the members of the Committee will vote in favor of the amendment. If by your action you do not cut this out, then you approve of the Inland Waterways Corporation that was established by a Republican administration. I want to see whether you approve of the Government going into business or whether you are going to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] which will cut out the amount appropriated in this bill for the Inland Waterways Corporation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I ask the members of the Committee to vote down the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PETERSON of Florida: Page 7, after line 16, add a new paragraph, as follows:

"For experimental cut, Big Pass-Clearwater, Fla., in connection with survey authorized by the Rivers and Harbors Act approved August 30, 1935, $21,000: Provided, That local interest shall contribute not less than $10,000 toward such project."

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, the cut will cost only $31,000. Jetties would cost something over $800,000, jetties of another type $175,000. The question of maintenance has been the main question. If under the survey this experimental cut is made it may show conclusively there are no jetties needed, and may ultimately save the $175,000.

I hope the chairman of the committee will not insist on the point of order and I hope the House will adopt this amendment, as it is very important to this community, which is growing to take care of a large amount of traffic, pleasure craft, and fishing boats. This improvement will be of untold benefit to the community.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER] insist on his point of order?

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, it is very, very hard for me to insist on a point of order against an amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida, but there are certain circumstances involved which force me to insist on the point of order.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order the gentleman from Pennsylvania has not stated a point of order. The gentleman has simply stated he makes a point of order, and has not outlined it.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the point of order is that the matter covered by the proposed amendment is not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Florida desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1935 authorized a survey. This provides an appropriation for the purpose of carrying out that survey.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman cite the page?

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. I do not have it handy, but it is in the act. There is no dispute about that. It is authorized under Clearwater Harbor, Big Pass, and Little Pass.

I have specifically set forth an amount and have included in the amendment the verbiage "experimental cut." My theory is that in authorizing a survey you can authorize a cut just as well as you can authorize borings, or set forth the line on which the project shall go, or ascertain the cost by going through the various types of stone. The question to be determined by this survey is whether a cut there would silt and fill in, or whether it could scour itself.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will be glad to hear from the gentleman from Florida, Mr. Green, particularly with respect to the present authority existing for the amendment.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, under the 1935 Rivers and Harbors Act there was a survey item included for this harbor. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida, Mr. Peterson, may well be interpreted as a portion of the work of that survey. In this respect it is not legislation on an appropriation bill, and the amendment is in order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MCCORMACK). The Chair is ready to rule:

Section 3 of the act of August 30, 1935, gives to the Secretary of War—

> Authority to cause preliminary examinations and surveys to be made at the following-named localities, the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such purposes: Provided, That no further examination, survey, project, or estimate for new works other than those designated in this or some prior act or joint resolution shall be made: Provided further, That after the regular or formal reports made as required by law on any examination, survey, project, or work under way or proposed or submitted no supplemental or additional report or estimate shall be made unless authorized by law: And provided further, That the Government shall not be deemed to have entered upon any project for the improvement of any waterway or harbor mentioned in this act until the project for the proposed work shall have been adopted by law.

The provision which the Chair has just read authorized preliminary examinations and surveys, and specifically provided:

> That the Government shall not be deemed to have entered upon any project for the improvement of any waterway or harbor mentioned in this act until the project for the proposed work shall have been adopted by law.

No law having been cited by the gentleman from Florida showing that Congress has adopted any program as the result of the recommendations of the Secretary of War by reason of the authority vested in the Secretary and contained in the section to which the Chair has referred, the Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

FLOOD CONTROL

> Flood control: For the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes, in accordance with the provisions of the Flood Control Act, approved June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1570–1595), including printing and binding and office supplies and equipment required in the Office of the Chief of Engineers to carry out the purposes of this act, the purchase (not to exceed $47,250) of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats for official use, and not to exceed $500,000 for preliminary examinations and surveys of flood-control projects authorized by law, $30,000,000: Provided, That $500,000 of this appropriation shall be transferred and made available to the Secretary of Agriculture for preliminary examinations and surveys for run-off and water-flow retardation and soil erosion prevention on the watersheds of flood-control projects authorized by law, including the employment of persons in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, purchase of books and periodicals, printing and binding, rent in the District of Columbia, the purchase (not to exceed $30,000) of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats, and for other necessary expenses.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

> Amendment offered by Mr. ELLENBOGEN: On page 8, line 3, strike out "$30,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof, "$40,000,000."

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, this proposed amendment increases the appropriation for flood control under the omnibus Flood Control Act of 1936 from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

I call the attention of the Members to the fact that this amendment, while an increase of $10,000,000 is a very modest one.

I say to you without hesitation that the recommendations of the Budget Bureau for flood control are not adequate. We are not satisfied with the recommendation of the Budget Bureau, and the people of the United States are not satisfied with it. They are not satisfied with the recommendation of the Budget Bureau with regard to appropriations for the construction of dams and reservoirs to stop these disastrous floods. We must preserve the lives and the property of the people. That is a fundamental function of the Government. You are going to appropriate this year $7,000,000,000, and out of the $7,000,000,000 it is proposed to appropriate not more than $30,000,000 for flood control—and that in the face of the tremendous floods, the greatest in history, in the Ohio River Basin this year and last year.

Those floods, or particularly the one this year, showed that the Ohio River Basin was flood emergency area no. 1. That is true because the flood was carried down the Mississippi River without doing any great damage, whereas the people living in the Ohio Valley suffered the greatest loss in all history. If you will take those floods of March 1936 and of January 1937 you will find that 300,000 people were driven from their homes, and that the property losses amounted to not less than $750,000,000. You will find that every year in the so-called mild floods, the damage runs in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

In that basin there are 6,000,000 people. This is a matter that does not concern just one State. For instance, the reservoirs that are listed in the Army engineers' report for the protection of Pittsburgh, also protect a much greater area—the States of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois, Tennessee, and Mississippi. This project contributes to the protection of every State that borders the Mississippi.

I want to stress the fact that the Ohio River Valley Basin project is one that we have planned, surveyed, and resurveyed, until we are sick of surveys in the Pittsburgh area. In the Pittsburgh area, those surveys have been going on for 30 years. Then these projects were finally authorized in a great piece of legislation that Congress passed last year. It has been represented to you over and again that the surveys are complete, and that the construction can be started on some of those dams immediately, while on other dams the work can be commenced within a few months. The work can be started on all the dams in the Pittsburgh territory within the next fiscal year.

The State of Pennsylvania and the State of New York are the only States in the Union that have already fully met the requirements of the law. I would like to call to the attention of this great committee the provision on page 18 of the act passed last year—the Flood Control Act, 738—in which the Pittsburgh projects are outlined. I call your attention to this part of it: "Estimated construction cost, $20,646,000; estimated cost of lands and damages, $34,569,000." The Pittsburgh projects are, perhaps, the only ones where the cost of the land purchase and damages is nearly double the cost of construction. Under this law it is our State and our local agencies which must pay the cost of the land and damages. The Federal Government undertakes to pay the cost of construction only. I believe that is wrong; I, for one, believe that the Federal Government should pay all of it. However, the law is to the contrary, and Pennsylvania stands ready to pay nearly double what the Federal Government will pay, provided the Federal Government will appropriate money for the construction of the dams and reservoirs. That certainly is more than evidence of good faith. An appropriation of $5,000,000 has already been made by the State Legislature of Pennsylvania, and a constitutional amendment has been passed at one session of the State legislature, and will undoubtedly pass in the next, providing for an appropriation of $50,000,000 by the people of Pennsylvania, so that they can meet whatever is required of the State in the coordinated Federal-State program.

I want to include in the RECORD, if I may, a statement of the estimated construction cost of the dams that are now being considered by the Army engineers, as first outlined, amounting to $44,250,000.

Estimated costs of construction of projects in upper Ohio River Basin

Tionesta Creek Dam	$5,000,000
Crooked Creek Dam	4,500,000
Red Bank Creek Dam	5,000,000
Loyalhanna Creek Dam	2,500,000
Johnstown Dam	14,500,000
Mahoning Creek Dam	5,000,000
French Creek Dam	1,750,000
Conemaugh River Dam	6,000,000
Total	44,250,000

The Bureau of the Budget has recommended to this Congress and this committee an appropriation limited to $30,000,000. That would give to the Pittsburgh district only $5,000,000.

The schedule that has been prepared by the local engineers, in cooperation with the Army engineers, shows that we use during the next fiscal year in the construction of the Pittsburgh projects not $5,000,000, but $10,500,000, or a little more than double this amount. If you appropriate only $30,000,000, the Pittsburgh district cannot get $10,000,000. That is the situation as it stands today.

Estimated expenditures which can be made during next fiscal year

Tionesta Creek	$2,000,000
Crooked Creek	2,000,000
Red Bank Creek	1,500,000
Loyalhanna Creek	1,000,000
Johnstown	2,000,000
Mahoning Creek	750,000
French Creek	500,000
Conemaugh River	500,000
Further studies and investigations	250,000
Total	10,500,000

Now, these are appropriations that should not be delayed. They should be made now. So far as highway construction is concerned, and many other appropriations that we could use, they could be postponed to next year. If the Appropriations Committee wants to save money, let them save it somewhere else, and not on the flood-control projects.

I hope you will give us the money with which to protect the lives and property of the people, because that is the fundamental and primary purposes of government. You are a great committee, and you are the judges of the way Congress shall appropriate money, and not the Bureau of the Budget. The President only makes his recommendations, and the responsibility lies with Congress. I submit to you that you will not meet your responsibility if you limit this appropriation to $30,000,000. You will have to give us at least twice that much. I do hope that the committee will not consider the appropriations for flood-control projects in the same light the Appropriations Committees generally look at expenditures. Of course, you want to save money, and you are to be commended for that, but this is a place where saving means losing. Saving money on these flood-prevention measures means wasting money. If you could save $100,000,000 or $300,000,000 by making an appropriation of $10,000,000, that would be saving money—and not wasting money.

I want to say in all sincerity that I am not appearing before you gentlemen for the purposes of the record. I am not appearing before you gentlemen to enable me to say to my constituents that I have been before the committee, but failed in my efforts, but I am appearing before you gentlemen because I think this is a matter of life and death to several million residents in the Ohio River Basin and along other river basins in the United States. I do hope that you gentlemen will not look at this from the viewpoint of providing for an ordinary expenditure, because these are not ordinary expenditures.

Our people are desperate. They cannot carry on their business, or carry on their daily lives, unless you protect them. As I have said, $30,000,000 will not do it. Now, let us not wait until next year. We hope we will not have another flood for many years, but who knows when it may occur. Will you assume the responsibility for next year, for 1939 and for 1940? If we have another flood, and you do not appropriate the necessary money, you cannot protect those people. That is the problem you are facing. It is not a question of the construction of a highway here or there, but it is a question of saving the lives and property of these people.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MARTIN of Colorado as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. ELLENBOGEN: On page 8, line 3, strike out "$30,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$50,000,000."

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, with reference to my pending substitute to increase the flood-control appropriation from $30,000,000 to $50,000,000, I may say I have been greatly disturbed, in fact, more disturbed than by any other development during this Congress, by the evident let-down or slump in the prosecution of a national flood-control program. Ever since the President made his historic speech at the dedication of the Fort Peck Dam in 1934 in which, insofar as he could, he committed this Government to a policy which would conserve, as he put it, every drop of water which ran to waste into the sea through the Mississippi and all its great tributaries, the country has been promised, and has anticipated, a national flood-control policy and program, and it has the right to expect from Congress the means to carry out this program on a scale commensurate with its magnitude and importance.

Following the President's speech at the Fort Peck Dam, the Mississippi River Valley Committee of the National Resources Board published in an exhaustive report a preliminary survey of the Mississippi and all its tributaries, including all or parts of 31 States, in which they outlined a series of projects necessary to carry out this program insofar as the great Mississippi Basin is concerned. It has been roughly estimated that that program would cost five or six billion dollars.

To give you a rough idea of the immense area of the Mississippi Basin, in which occurs nearly all the destructive floods in the United States, it extends from western Montana eastward into and including the western third of Pennsylvania, and its southeastern boundaries are to be found in Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas, and the Virginias. It drains the Tennessee, the Ohio, the Illinois, the Wabash, the Missouri, the Yellowstone, the Platte, the Arkansas, the Red Rivers of the north and south, the White, and many other nationally known streams which are tributary to those I have named. In short, the flood problem of the Mississippi Basin is very largely the flood problem of the United States.

Growing out of the Mississippi Valley Committee report, at the last session of the Seventy-fourth Congress, the Congress passed its first national flood-control act, and for the first time in American history flood control was declared to be a national policy, and in that act it authorized the construction of 270 projects scattered out over 31 States of the Union at a cost of only $320,000,000, and I emphasize the amount only, because I consider that a very moderate start toward the execution of a program which it was estimated would ultimately cost five or six billion dollars. That bill was praised to the skies. No project got into that bill which had not been studied and authorized by the Army engineers. I know that Senate leaders of my party pleaded to get projects into the bill and threatened that they would defeat the bill if they did not get them in, but they were turned down because the Army engineers had not as yet approved them. It was said there was no pork in the bill, no logrolling, and that the bill had been carefully worked out as the first step in a policy of national flood control.

And now in this bill I find only $30,000,000 provided, and there is named in it just four projects out of the 270 that will get $17,500,000 out of the $30,000,000, leaving only $12,500,000 for the other 266 projects, and I ask the Members of this House when they expect they are going to get any flood projects in their districts if the program is going to be carried out on any such limited basis?

Members have stated in justification of the small initial appropriation to begin construction under the Flood Control Act of 1936 that it is not desired to appropriate an excessive amount of money at the outset and that we should only appropriate what is needed and can be used. The answer to that is the statement of the Chief of Engineers as quoted in the report of the Committee on Appropriations accompanying this bill, that "definite plans have been prepared and assurances of local cooperation received from projects totaling a cost of $150,000,000", to meet which we are appropriating only $30,000,000.

However, I do not want to leave the impression that the Committee on Appropriations is underwriting this grossly inadequate appropriation, because the committee itself, on page 7 of the report, following its quotation of the statement of the Army engineers, says:

> Because of that (readiness to begin execution of $150,000,000 of construction) and the almost certain recurrence with always the possibility of unprecedented proportions of these ravaging floods, the Budget estimate quite obviously is not adequate. Expedition is vital to the protection of property and the lives of millions of citizens in river basins from New England to the Gulf, from the Atlantic to the sources of the western tributaries of the Mississippi, and in other far-western areas.

But the committee felt unwilling to go beyond the amount estimated by the Bureau of the Budget, and says frankly that "without a larger direct appropriation recourse will need to be made to relief funds in order to make more rapid headway with the work Congress has authorized." This, no doubt, refers to the earmarking of $45,000,000 for flood control in the work-relief bill during the consideration of that bill in the Committee of the Whole House, but withdrawn by flood-control advocates before the bill was reached for final passage, as the result of some sort of an understanding between those Members and the administration, that where relief workers were available such work would be used on flood-control projects and that this might even exceed the sum of $45,000,000. The difficulty, as I see it, involved in this anticipated supplement to the $30,000,000 will be the greatly reduced number of relief workers during the next fiscal year and the lack of relief workers in close proximity to large flood-control projects. There are probably very few flood-control projects of any magnitude which will find available in convenient proximity any sufficient number of relief workers. Probably here and there this will occur, such as in the case of levee and such work in the vicinity of towns and cities.

No matter what is done in the way of such supplementing of the appropriation carried in this bill, it cannot obscure the fact that after years of planning on a national scale, until flood control, with its related objectives of soil and water conservation had assumed the proportions of the major national program for the conservation and upbuilding of the soil and water resources of the country, its major resources, and with these plans now written into law, we have begun with an initial appropriation which is simply trivial in comparison with many things for which we are appropriating money.

I have been much impressed by the foreword of the report of the Mississippi Valley Committee: "Make no little plans. They have no magic to stir men's souls." In the flood-control bill we have made no little plan, but when it comes to the execution of the plan the mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse.

Mind you, here is the disturbing thing, to my mind, about the obvious slump in the national flood-control program. It was not conditioned upon the economy drive, it was not conditioned upon the development of the falling off of Federal revenue in the last few months. These Budget figures were worked out before the first of the year. For some undisclosed reason there is virtually a temporary abandonment of an adequate flood-control program. The committee report admits this. These figures, this $30,000,000, were worked out before the first of the year, before there was any hint of an economy drive or before there was any falling-off of revenue.

This amendment of mine provides for $20,000,000 more. How little that is! How little is $50,000,000! We would be 100 years on the job under any such appropriation as this bill carries. Why, the stuff would wear out and wash away in that time! The pyramids of Egypt would be turned to dust before we could get this great Mississippi Valley program completed under such an appropriation as this. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, and ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, in order that we may understand the effect of an appropriation for projects in the Copeland Act on the future of flood-control reservoirs, I should like to call the attention of the House for a few minutes to the condition of the law with reference to flood control. I think the appropriation of money for expenditure under the Copeland Act, the act of June 22, 1936, except for levees, is establishing a bad precedent and one that will destroy our chances to obtain reservoir control in most sections of our Nation. The $30,000,000 recommended should not be increased at this time until the law providing for the building of reservoirs is amended so that local contribution may not be required in the building of reservoirs.

The people who know me, who have served here with me, I think, will agree that I am as much interested in flood control and in the establishment of a workable flood-control plan and a workable flood-control law as is anyone.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Let me proceed for just a minute.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Would the gentleman yield if I could get him an additional minute?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. The gentleman realizes I know that the other body has struck out of the relief bill a provision that would allow reappropriation to continue flood control, for instance, in the Connecticut Valley and the Merrimac Valley, my own valley, and also in California and other places. I hope the Members will join with us in continuing that. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have another minute.

Mr. MILLER. There has been a great deal of talk here today about the flood-control program and why we do not have a coordinated program. There are reasons why we do not have a coordinated program, and we cannot have it until the Committee on Flood Control gives attention to the modification and amendment of the existing law in reference to reservoirs. Under the act of 1928, as amended by the Overton Act, applicable to the Mississippi River and the area within the backwaters, we have a program on the Mississippi and that work is progressing. In this territory the only feasible plan is the levee and diversion or floodway plan. The law requires local interests to furnish the right-of-way for levees and to maintain and operate them when built. That is just and reasonable, because the benefit from levees is largely local. When it is necessary for a diversion channel or floodway to be provided the United States Government furnishes the land without cost to the local interests. The law as applicable to the Mississippi River and backwater area is just because the only flood-control works in that area are levees and floodways. We can safely proceed in that area under the existing law and the committee might well raise the amount of $22,500,000 for work under the general Flood Control Act, the act of 1928, as amended.

But this appropriation of $30,000,000 is under the act of June 22, 1936, the so-called omnibus act, or Copeland Act.

Now, the trouble with that act is that before a reservoir can be built, the local interests shall provide, without cost to the United States, all lands, easements, and rights-of-way necessary for the construction of the project; shall hold the Government free from any damages, and maintain and operate the works after completion.

Levees can be built under this act because of the local benefits arising from them, but benefits from reservoirs are not local but general, and there is no reason why local interests should be required to furnish the rights-of-way for reservoirs or do anything else, because the real benefit arises downstream many miles from the site of the reservoir.

It may be argued that the provisions of the Mississippi Flood Control Act of 1928, as amended, are the same as the act of June 22, 1936, the Copeland Act. They are practically the same insofar as the furnishing of rights-of-way, lands, and easements, and the operation of the projects are concerned. However, this equality and sameness is only on paper. From a practical viewpoint, there is a vast difference, because we on the tributaries of the Mississippi can only have adequate relief through reservoirs, supplemented by levees, while the property owners of the alluvial valleys can have relief by levees and floodways, and such reservoirs as are built on the tributaries add to the security of those in the alluvial valleys. Therefore we should not be required to furnish the rights-of-way for reservoirs, but no reasonable objection can be made to furnishing the rights-of-way for levees. The Copeland Act should be amended and require the Government to furnish rights-of-way, lands, and easements for reservoirs the same as is done when a floodway or diversion channel is built in the alluvial valley. By so doing justice will in fact be done all sections, not only on paper but in actual operations and practice.

Until that is done we are not going to have anything like a fair flood-control system. I dislike to see money continually fritted away by this Congress when we know what the trouble is. We know how to remedy it and we know how to meet the situation. It can be met by either repealing sections 2 and 3 of the Copeland Act or by a separate act modifying them insofar as reservoirs are concerned. When that is done then we will be rendering justice.

There is not any substitute for common sense. If there is, I have failed to find it in the few years I have been around here. The Government is not justified in spending a large sum of money on any project and then walking off and leaving that project to be taken care of by local interests. You cannot proceed under the Copeland Act except in building levees. It is simply not workable for the tributaries. I would fight for an appropriation much greater than $50,000,000, I will say to the gentleman from Colorado, if he will help me pass a flood-control bill which I introduced here today and which will make it possible for reservoirs to be built.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. I would gladly join the gentleman in changing the Copeland Act; but why should we wait until it can be changed when the Chief of Army Engineers says he has $150,000,000 worth of projects where the localities are willing to meet their responsibility and make the appropriation?

Mr. MILLER. The Chief of Engineers, in the hearings, did make the statement that there was approximately $150,000,000 that he thought local interests could and would qualify for; but let me call the gentleman's attention to this fact: There may be communities that can furnish the right-of-way for reservoirs, but I doubt it. I do know they ought not to be compelled to do it; and when we permit such action we will kill forever any chance to amend the law and will never have a uniform, practical system. Do you want a hodgepodge set of flood-control improvements in this country under one act and a different set under another act? I am talking about the practical application of the law, not to its seeming uniformity on paper, and I am trying to protect all alike, and I hope no community will bond itself for its contribution for reservoirs. My country is not able to do so, and I do not want you to do so. The amount provided is ample for levees. We have already spent in this country millions and millions of dollars, and yet we have not accomplished anything except along the Mississippi River, and that accomplishment has been because of a system applicable only to the Mississippi River and rivers within the backwater area.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Let me proceed just a minute, please.

The gentleman from Colorado said he was alarmed at the break-down or apparent slackening of the activity for flood control. I am, too. Everybody else is. I do not know what has happened, but by the introduction of a bill today, H. R. 7529, I am giving this House an opportunity to show whether or not you believe in the Army engineers' method of controlling the floodwaters of the Ohio, the Missouri, the Arkansas, and the White Rivers and in the Mississippi River Basin. The Army engineers have pointed out in a report which they made to the Committee on Flood Control, through the President of the United States, which now appears as Committee Document No. 1, Seventy-fifth Congress, how that can be done. It will cost some money; yes. It will cost around $500,000,000 to do the work, but the damage this year in the Ohio Valley, the White River, the Arkansas, and others was more than $500,000,000 itself.

Now, what I am appealing to you for is this: First, let us amend the law. Let us write a flood-control program. We have a Flood Control Committee that is capable of it. Judge Whittington is one of the ablest men in the House of Representatives or anywhere else. Other members of the committee are perfectly able to do it. The only thing is we have just been coasting along, following the course of least resistance in these matters. Content with paper uniformity and not practical justice to all. Whenever we will do that, then we will have a program, whereby we can appropriate $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 a year until completed.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I am in favor of the gentleman's bill, but he has just introduced it. Obviously it is too late to have any effect on the pending bill. We may never get it. I think the gentleman ought to go along with us on this small increase in this appropriation. Let me say there will be plenty of time and places to spend it.

Mr. MILLER. I think it will be a bad precedent, until the law is amended to afford practical uniformity and justice. That is the reason for my opposition to the amendment.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the substitute amendment and to the amendment.

Suffice it to say in a few minutes that I feel that the committee agrees that the provision made in the pending bill is adequate for the time being. The Army engineers told us over the table that they had projects and that there were States already equipped with laws to cooperate with the Federal Government to the extent of utilizing $60,000,000—maybe more. All that we are interested in at the present time is, I may state to the gentleman from Arkansas, that we are equipped to use successfully and efficiently $30,000,000.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. One hundred and fifty million dollars.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. I did not say that.

Mr. ELLENBOGEN. That is what the record shows.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Maybe they could use $150,000,000.

Permit me to say in this connection, Mr. Chairman, that we have made progress, for this is the first program we ever had. I do not say that I agree with the Copeland law 100 percent, but we have made progress. This is the start of the program. We shall be back here in January. If we need further money to carry on flood control we will be ready to grant that money. I shall be a member of the deficiency committee and I will support it.

I ask for a vote on the substitute amendment.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, this bill carries a total of $195,375,000. Throughout the 5 hours we have considered this bill most of the debate has centered around the subject of flood control. I think this is an indication of what the people of the country think of this particular problem. It is one of the most important matters that has come before the House.

The committee recommends $30,000,000 for flood control. In their report they say that this sum is insufficient, that really a larger amount should be appropriated. Answering the gentleman from Arkansas I refer him to page 75 of the hearings where General Markham stated:

> We say that we have our preparations either all complete or nearly complete with local cooperation assured for a total of $150,000,000.

My own State of Pennsylvania alone has appropriated directly the sum of $5,000,000 for flood-control work. In addition they have made preparations for a bond issue of $50,000,000. The Government of the United States, through the Committee on Appropriations on this War Department bill, brings in a report recommending only $30,000,000 for the entire country whereas the lone State of Pennsylvania is ready to spend $55,000,000 on this work. Any person who reads the report of the committee and the testimony of the Army engineers will see that the committee bowed down to the wishes of the Budget Bureau, which made its recommendations long before the flood of 1937 occurred. I know that the Members would appreciate the necessity for adequate flood control had they only been present in some of the cities where these terrible catastrophes occurred, where damage to the extent of $200,000,000 was done within the period of a week, where thousands of families were made homeless and had to see their homes float down the river, where businesses were ruined and people bankrupted, where we stand in constant fear of this peril. We have had 75 floods in our district in the Ohio Valley within the last 50 years. They will continue, yet the gentleman from Arkansas wants to put it off for a longer period of time. It is unconscionable that this Congress should appropriate only $30,000,000. I venture to say there is no object for which the people of the country would be more eager to appropriate $100,000,000 than that of the control of floods. I trust that the Committee this afternoon will approve the substitute amendment appropriating $50,000,000 for flood control.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN of Colorado) there were—ayes 21, noes 49.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ELLENBOGEN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ELLENBOGEN) there were—ayes 17, noes 51.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FERGUSON: Page 8, after line 13, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"The act entitled 'An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes', approved June 22, 1936, is hereby amended by adding to the first paragraph of section 5, a proviso reading as follows:

" 'Provided further, That the Secretary of War is authorized to receive from States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies, such funds as may be constributed by them to be expended in connection with funds appropriated by the United States for any authorized flood-control work whenever such work and expenditure may be considered by the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, as advantageous in the public interest, and the plans for any reservoir project may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, be modified to provide additional storage capacity for domestic water supply or other conservation storage, on condition that the cost of such increased storage capacity is contributed by local agencies and that the local agencies agree to utilize such additional storage capacity in a manner consistent with Federal uses and purposes: And provided further, That when contributions made by States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies, are in excess of the actual cost of the work contemplated and properly chargeable to such contributions, such excess contributions may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, be returned to the proper representatives of the contributing interest.' "

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is legislation.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the gentleman withhold his point of order?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, it is legislation upon an appropriation bill and is not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. TABER. No. I insist on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma desire to be heard?

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, may I say this amendment permits the Federal Government to accept contributions in the construction of projects authorized under the Copeland bill. There is some question whether the War Department can accept contributions, and in connection with one of these projects that will be constructed out of the appropriation carried in this bill the State of Oklahoma wants to contribute $2,000,000 toward the construction of the project.

This amendment would make it possible for the Secretary of War to accept the $2,000,000. I have here a letter from the Secretary of War stating his belief in the necessity of legislation in order that the Secretary of War may accept these funds.

In this time when we are looking toward State cooperation in the construction of public works I had hoped that no Member would make a point of order, but since the point of order has been made I may say it should not be sustained because this amendment does clarify the legislation under which the money will be expended as appropriated in this bill.

Since this amendment is so obviously necessary, and since it will not cost the Federal Government any additional funds, I can state to the Committee that every member of the subcommittee in charge of this bill, both Republicans and Democrats, and the chairman of the Appropriations Committee have told me they have no objections to the amendment and will accept it. In addition to that, I have discussed the amendment with the chairman of the Flood Control Committee, of which I am a member, and he has no objections to this amendment.

Since this is the legislative committee that will be affected, I cannot see how any Member of the House could fail to appreciate the necessity of this amendment.

I hope the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] will withdraw his point of order before this bill is returned to the House and allow the Committee to accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Clearly the amendment offered by the gentleman is legislation on an appropriation bill and, a point of order being made and insisted on, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein the letter to which I referred.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will have to obtain that permission in the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Flood control, Mississippi River and tributaries: For prosecuting work of flood control in accordance with the provisions of the Flood Control Act, approved May 15, 1928 (U. S. C., title 33, sec. 702a), as amended by the Flood Control Act approved June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1508), and for the purchase of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats, for official use, not to exceed $56,300, $22,500,000.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am reluctant to trespass upon the time of the House at this late hour and yet I do wish to make an observation upon this matter of flood control as it affects the Illinois River.

I have the greatest respect for the Army engineers but that respect does not impel me to believe that they are infallible. I say this even though I am not an engineer myself. Too often laymen are inclined to accept the pronouncements of lawyers on the law or engineers upon engineering matters as the last and infallible word, and I do not subscribe to that viewpoint. There is, after all, much logic in the story of the flippant young man who was criticizing a painting without knowing that the artist stood right behind him. After listening for a bit, the artist upbraided him for his criticism and asked him how he knew the painting was defective when he was no artist. To that the flippant person said, "I'm no hen either, but I know when an egg is rotten." In that vein, may I say that I am no engineer but still presume to know when some things recommended by engineers are bad.

Under the Copeland Act of 1936 it was proposed, as a flood-control measure, that the levees along the Illinois be set back at an initial cost of $4,000,000. I am satisfied that before that job could be completed, it would cost more than $10,000,000. To me it appeared like a waste of the taxpayers' money because sooner or later, in order to provide adequate outdoor facilities and fishing and hunting privileges for the millions of folks in the State of Illinois, the areas enclosed by the levees which the engineers proposed to set back would have to be converted into hunting and fishing preserves and refuges. But the engineers proposed to proceed with the work.

I, for one, felt convinced that it would be a mistake and said so with whatever emphasis I could, and enlisted the interest of various agencies in the matter that no such setback program would be undertaken until the whole matter had been restudied and the people of Illinois given an opportunity to speak on this subject. After all, we still have some rights in this land.

Providing adequate fishing and hunting facilities for the people is much more than a mere fancy. If it is true that we are standing on the threshold of an age of leisure for our people, then there must be a constructive outlet for that leisure as a moral equivalent for work, and the most constructive and practical outlet for those energies can be found in outdoor pursuits.

I therefore felt that these bottom lands along the Illinois River must be taken over by purchase or abandonment and title vested in the people, for their perpetual use and enjoyment. At once, the drainage landowners were taking me to task and directing resolutions to the Army engineers and the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to protest against such a proposal.

Let us then examine the premises in this matter. On page 298 of the hearings you will find the statement by Mr. Robert Kingery, chairman of the Illinois Planning Commission, in which he comments upon my proposal by saying that "a substantial acreage should be abandoned for agricultural use." Yet under the Copeland Act it was proposed to go ahead with an expensive program of setting back these levees.

On page 356 of the hearings you will find a statement from the letter of Dr. Frison, of the Natural History Survey of Illinois, to the effect that—

The reclamation of much of this bottom land was based upon the assumption that the land would produce more when devoted to an intensive type of agriculture. I believe I am correct in stating that there are few drainage districts in the area which have successfully proved this point.

Yet under the Copeland Act it is proposed to spend millions of public funds to set back the levees enclosing the areas alluded to.

Finally, if you will examine the tables on page 367 of the hearings, you will note the recommendations made by the Illinois Waterways Division as to whether these districts should share in emergency funds that had been appropriated by the Illinois Legislature.

Note the comments in this table on various districts. It states, for instance, that this district is "economically unsound." In that district "financially unsound." In another they say, "District should be abandoned for benefit of river." In still another case they say, "District has been refinanced by R. F. C. Cost of improvements entirely too high. Past history bad." Yet under the Copeland Act it is proposed to go blithely forward with public funds and set the levees back at terrific expense, when the whole areas should be abandoned and restored to wildlife.

What more is needed to indicate that the engineers too often see through engineering eyes alone, untempered by other considerations. And, if that be the case, we must exercise the greatest caution in blandly approving flood-control projects until the social and economic as well as the engineering aspects have been fully disclosed.

The Clerk read as follows:

For maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal: Salary of the Governor, $10,000; purchase, inspection, delivery, handling, and storing of materials, supplies, and equipment for issue to all departments of the Panama Canal, the Panama Railroad, other branches of the United States Government, and for authorized sales; payment in lump sums of not exceeding the amounts authorized by the Injury Compensation Act approved September 7, 1916 (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 793), to alien cripples who are now a charge upon the Panama Canal by reason of injuries sustained while employed in the construction of the Panama Canal; in all, $8,519,000, together with all moneys arising from the conduct of business operations authorized by the Panama Canal Act.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, in order to keep the record straight, and referring to the remarks of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER], wherein he stated that one rule obtained with reference to flood-control work along the Mississippi River and another with reference to the Omnibus Control Act, I am sure the gentleman will correct his remarks in this respect because section 3 of the Omnibus Control Act is identical with section 8a of the Mississippi River Flood Control Act, both acts requiring local interests to furnish rights-of-way for levees and river walls. Both acts, with the two exceptions mentioned, require the local interests to provide rights-of-way and lands for reservoirs. In the Omnibus Flood Control Act there was a reservoir exempted that was started under the public works. In the Mississippi River Act there was a reservoir exempted that was started under the Public Works Administration. But with the exception of the large floodways, the provisions and the requirements of the two acts are not only similar but they are identical and the same yardstick applies to both. I did not want the occasion to pass here without the Congress and the country knowing that there is no conflict between the two acts with respect to local contribution, and that the requirement of both acts as to levees, river walls, and reservoirs is the same. The same yardstick applies in the two acts.

The pro-forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

For civil government of the Panama Canal and Canal Zone, including gratuities and necessary clothing for indigent discharged prisoners, $1,131,760.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 8, line 9, for the purpose of offering the amendment which I have heretofore submitted.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FERGUSON: Page 8, after line 13, insert as a new paragraph:

"The act entitled 'An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control and for other purposes,' approved June 22, 1936, is hereby amended by adding to the first paragraph of section 5, a proviso reading as follows:

"'Provided further, That the Secretary of War is authorized to receive from States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies, such funds as may be contributed by them to be expended in connection with funds appropriated by the United States for any authorized flood-control work whenever such work and expenditure may be considered by the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, as advantageous in the public interest, and the plans for any reservoir project may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, be modified to provide additional storage capacity for domestic water supply or other conservation storage, on condition that the cost of such increased storage capacity is contributed by local agencies and that the local agencies agree to utilize such additional storage capacity in a manner consistent with Federal uses and purposes: And provided further, That when contributions made by States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies, are in excess of the actual cost of the work contemplated and properly chargeable to such excess contributions may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, be returned to the proper representative of the contributing interests.'"

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, does this go back to the original amendment that the gentleman from Oklahoma offered? May I inquire as to what took place in the meantime? I thought the gentleman from New York made a point of order against it.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House, with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MCCORMACK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 7493, had directed him to report the same back to the House, with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. TABER. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TABER moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to that committee to report the same back forthwith with a reduction of 10 percent in the total amount.

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The motion to recommit was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken and the bill was passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF VIRGINIA DARE

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a House concurrent resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 17

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That a joint committee consisting of five Members of the Senate, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and five Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, shall represent the Congress of the United States at the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare (the first child of English parentage to be born on the American Continent), and the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the disappearance of Sir Walter Raleigh's Colony (known in history as "The Lost Colony"), to be held at Roanoke Island, North Carolina, on August 18, 1937. The joint committee shall select a chairman from among its members.

SEC. 2. The necessary expenses of the joint committee herein authorized not exceeding $1,000, shall be paid one-half out of the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives on vouchers authorized by the joint committee and signed by the chairman thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I certainly shall not object, I hope that when the members of the committee which will be appointed go down to North Carolina they will invite us all to go fishing down there.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SNYDER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who have talked on the bill (H. R. 7493), making appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for civil functions administered by the War Department, and for other purposes, may have five legislative days within which to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD on that subject.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know when the special orders are coming up today.

The SPEAKER. The legislative business has been concluded. If there is objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma, the special orders will be called.

Mr. RICH. I certainly would not object to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma, but I have been trying for 2 weeks to get 15 minutes. I just wondered when the Speaker of the House and the majority leader were going to give us that time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

FARM-TENANT LEGISLATION

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I have asked for this brief time to announce that the Democratic steering committee of the House has had a rather lengthy session this afternoon. The meeting was called primarily for the purpose of discussing the proposed farm-tenant legislation now pending in both Houses of Congress.

Hon. Marvin Jones, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture of the House and author of the Jones farm-tenant bill that has been reported out of the Committee on Agriculture, was invited to appear before the committee and explain the salient features of his bill.

The committee also invited Hon. JOHN H. BANKHEAD, author of the Bankhead farm-tenant bill now being considered before the Senate committee. Both of these distinguished gentlemen appeared before our committee this afternoon and explained in some detail the provisions of these measures of so vital importance to the landless farmers of the country.

Although it has been generally assumed that a wide difference of opinion exists between these two distinguished leaders who are sponsoring this important legislation, the committee found this to be untrue. The committee found, I am glad to say, that the opposite is true. Both Congressman JONES and Senator BANKHEAD showed a cooperative spirit and assured the committee that they are anxious that this legislation pass during the present session of Congress.

After hearing both gentlemen discuss the merits of their respective bills and after members of the committee discussed the entire subject of this legislation at some length, the committee went on record unanimously favoring such legislation and urging that a farm-tenant measure be enacted at the present session of Congress. The House steering committee pledges its loyal and enthusiastic support to this legislation of so vital importance to the farmers of the Nation.

It will be recalled that in the last session there were hearings on this legislation before the Committee on Agriculture of the House, as well as before the Senate committee. There was much sentiment and agitation in both Houses of Congress for the passage of such a bill during the last session of Congress, but because of the fact that the committees having jurisdiction over same in the House and Senate could not agree upon the details of a bill no farm-tenant legislation was had, and we went home empty-handed so far as our long-suffering landless farmers are concerned.

The purpose of the meeting of the Democratic steering committee of the House this afternoon and in inviting the two leaders of this movement in Congress to appear was to see if there could not be worked out a compromise or at least an agreeemnt that this Congress will not adjourn without keeping faith with the people in the passage of this all-important legislation. I feel hopeful that the meeting of our committee today has been a turning point in the fight to enact farm-tenant legislation during the present session of Congress and that the giant obstacles that we have heard so much about were not mountains but mere molehills. As chairman of the Democratic steering committee of the House, I desire here and now to pledge Chairman JONES, who has rendered invaluable service in his efforts to promote this constructive and humane legislation, our united and enthusiastic support.

It is needless for me to say, Mr. Speaker, that we will never be able to have a happy, prosperous Nation until we become a Nation of home owners. The gradual increase of farm tenantry, especially throughout the South, over a long period of years, has become alarming. The fact that 60 to 75 percent of the farmers of the South, through no fault of their own, do not own the farms on which they manage some way to exist, is appalling. Under present conditions, prices of farm commodities, high interest rates, and the impossibility of borrowing money make it practically impossible for them to become home owners. This situation is constantly growing worse. It is causing the development of a roving population who do not know one year where they will be the next. It has the effect of breaking up home ties, of interfering with school work of children, and of demoralizing the hundreds of thousands of landless farmers who are eking out a bare existence. This growing army of homeless people have a right to live under their own roofs, sit by their own firesides, and become permanent citizens of the communities in which they reside. [Applause.]

It will be recalled that the last national Democratic convention went on record pledging the country, if retained in power, that this legislation would be enacted. The farm-tenancy problem was an issue in the campaign. President Roosevelt in more than one speech pledged himself and his administration to this legislation. During his first administration he appointed a committee to go into the study of this important problem facing us, and the country was assured over and over that a farm-tenant bill would be enacted into law. Only a few days ago the President gave out a statement to the effect that he still desires Congress to keep faith with the landless farmers of America, and I just want to say that Congress cannot afford to adjourn and go home without at least making a start on this important program.

At a future date I expect to address the House on the details of this legislation. Neither the bill in the House nor that before the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry in the Senate is entirely satisfactory to me, and I reserve the privileges of offering suggestions and proposing amendments to either bill when it reaches the floor of the House. But I do want to impress upon Members the importance of the early consideration of this measure, and I sincerely hope that Chairman JONES, who has been diligent, patient, and enthusiastic in his support of this legislation will be able to get a rule at an early date for the consideration of his bill now on the House calendar. [Applause.]

CONSERVATION CORPS

Mr. RAMSPECK submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 6551) to create a Civilian Conservation Corps, and for other purposes.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of national old-age pensions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

OFFICIAL PAPERS OF THE TERRITORIES OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LAMBETH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file a supplemental report from the Joint Committee on Printing on the bill (S. 2242) to further amend the act entitled "An act to authorize the collection and editing of official papers of the Territories of the United States now in The National Archives", approved March 3, 1925, as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made this afternoon and to include therein a table showing appropriations to this date and comparative tables for last year.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a very brief quotation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mrs. O'DAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert therein a speech made by the Postmaster General at a women's dinner last week in Syracuse, N. Y.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from the Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, under a special order of the House, I had permission to address the House tonight for 15 minutes. I think the time is too late, and I do not want to penalize the Members of the House by sitting here any further, and I ask unanimous consent that after disposition of the business on the Speaker's table and the business of Calendar Wednesday I may address the House for 15 minutes tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. The Chair may state to the gentleman from New York that it is not probable the House will be in session very long tomorrow.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. In view of the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request.

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, according to my watch it is now after 6 o'clock and I am certainly not going to impose upon the membership of the House at this time, but I am going to ask, Mr. Speaker, that next Monday, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and when the majority leader and the Speaker of the House see fit to give me 15 minutes, if it is prior to 6 o'clock, I may have that much time to address the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that so far as the Chair is concerned, that is a matter that is not within his control.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of the legislative business of that day, he may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that immediately following the special order of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Rich, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I may say to the membership of the House that I have a proposition to submit to the House about the Post Office Department——

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from Massachusetts has been after me for 3 weeks because he wants to follow me and I am pleased to have him do it.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts, under a previous order of the House heretofore entered, is entitled to recognition for 15 minutes. The gentleman from Massachusetts has indicated he does not desire recognition at this time.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. GREEN], under a previous order of the House, is entitled to recognition for 30 minutes.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House: In the short while allotted to me this afternoon, 30 minutes, it would be impossible for me to answer questions of my colleagues and at the same time place before you the information which is desired; therefore, I request that I not be interrupted during the course of my remarks. At a future date, it is my intention to again address you on the subject of the Florida canal at which time it will be a pleasure to yield to my colleagues for questions.

On the evening of the 12th of this month I talked to the American people on this subject. This speech was broadcast over the National Broadcasting System, from Station WMAL, Washington, D. C. I shall print it in my remarks today and ask my colleagues to read it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to call to the attention of the House the present status of the Florida canal. It is not my intention to discuss this subject at length at this time, but I do feel that it is appropriate that your attention be directed to the fact that this project, pursuant to the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1930, has now been examined and surveyed by the Chief of Engineers as a river and harbor item, and that the Chief of Engineers, through the Secretary of War, has made his report to the Congress, under date of April 1, 1937. In that report, the Chief of Engineers finds that the project is economically justified and recommends its completion.

In accordance with the regular procedure followed by all river and harbor projects, this matter was referred to the Rivers and Harbors Committee, and that committee has held exhaustive and lengthy hearings and has made an unusually thorough examination of this great public work, covering all its phases.

The committee held hearings for more than 21 days, during which it heard the Chief of Engineers and officers of the Corps, the Chief of the United States Geological Survey, and a large number of other witnesses, including a number who offered objections to the construction of the canal.

The committee has completed its work, and has reported its findings to the House, recommending the authorization of this project. The committee report states:

> Your committee recommends that its completion be now authorized.
>
> In conclusion it may be said that your committee, after an unusually extensive examination of all phases of this project, concludes that the opposition is not well founded; that the project is of unusual merit; that its economic justification is beyond question; that its benefits will increase with time and will accrue to a larger portion of our country and its population than those of almost any other Federal public work; and that its construction is needful and in the public interest.

I very earnestly wish every Member of the House to know that this committee report has been made and is now available for examination and study, and I trust the Members of the House will carefully examine it and learn for themselves the reasons why the committee has arrived at these conclusions and made this recommendation. At another time I shall seek an opportunity to speak again of this project in more detail, and I feel that if, during the interim, the House will inform itself from the report of its own committee as to the facts, we shall all be in a better position to discuss and act upon it.

I do want to point out at this time, however, two things: First, this House has, in the past, insisted that this project, in common with all other river and harbor projects, should proceed in an orderly fashion through a due course of processing before being taken up for action by the House. In other words, that it should appear here in the course of regular and orderly legislative procedure. Many Members of the House, in the past, both explicitly and implicitly, have taken the attitude that they would not object to the Florida canal in principle if it could be proven to be economically justified and in the public interest, but that it must first be submitted to the processing of the regular legislative machinery. Now, all this has been done. The project has been completely processed in the regular way, and when it comes up for discussion and action, it will stand upon the same basis as any other river and harbor project. It will not be necessary for the House to consider and base its action upon ex-parte statements, but the House will have before it, for its information, the report of the Chief of Engineers and the report and recommendation of the Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The second item which I desire to point out to the House today is the fact that what is being sought at the present time is nothing more than an authorization by Congress of the completion of this work, now declared by your committee to be needful and in the public interest, and upon which millions of dollars of Federal funds have already been expended through the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers in getting it well under way. No appropriation is sought at this time, but when the appropriations are sought, they can be made to conform to the financial situation and the spending policy of the Government at the time. Your committee has plainly stated in its report its opinion that the authorization of this project at the present time is in entire accord with a sound fiscal policy. It will take a number of years for actual construction of the canal, and the rate of construction and rate of spending is a matter which we can determine in the light of conditions from time to time.

I should like to make it plain to everyone just what this project is and what it is designed to accomplish. On this point the committee sets forth in its report the following:

This project is designed primarily to facilitate, safeguard, and cheapen the commerce between the Mississippi Valley and Gulf States on the one hand and the States of the Atlantic seaboard on the other, and to serve as an important element in the national defense by safeguarding the transportation of water-borne troops, munitions, and supplies in time of war, and to serve as a connecting link between the intracoastal waterway system of the Atlantic seaboard and that of the Gulf of Mexico.

As a barge canal, to serve the last-named purpose, the project has been the subject of surveys and examinations by the Corps of Engineers from time to time over a period of more than 100 years. As a ship canal it has been under examination and survey over the past 10 years.

A comprehensive report of the Chief of Engineers upon the matter has been submitted by the Secretary of War to the Congress, under date of April 1, 1937 (H. Doc. No. 194, 75th Cong., 1st sess.), in which he finds the project to be economically justified and recommends its construction. Your committee is of the opinion that few, if any, river and harbor projects have ever been accorded more exhaustive study and discussion.

Your committee held public hearings on this project over a period of approximately 3 weeks, at which there appeared the Chief of Engineers and other Army engineer officers, representatives of the United States Geological Survey, Representatives in Congress from the State of Florida, and numerous proponents and opponents of the project.

Your committee also received and considered in executive session communications regarding the national-defense value of the project from the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, and oral testimony on the same phase of the matter by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, United States Army, retired, former Chief of Staff of the Army, and Rear Admiral F. B. Bassett, United States Navy, retired, former Chief Hydrographer of the Navy.

I think it is important that we review the history of the Florida canal so that we may be entirely familiar with just what has happened in this matter to date.

When I came to the Congress 13 years ago, I then firmly believed in this project. I introduced a resolution for the preliminary survey of this project. This was included in the 1927 rivers and harbors bill and became a law. Later I introduced a bill for detailed physical survey of this project. It was included in the 1930 Rivers and Harbors Act and became a law. H. R. 6150, introduced by me at the present session, is the subject of the report before us now. Based upon this legislation, surveys leading to the report before us were made; however, I cannot do better than quote the statement of the committee on this point, which is as follows:

(1) History of the project: In compliance with the provisions of the River and Harbor Acts approved January 21, 1927, and July 3, 1930, and upon the recommendation of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, the Chief of Engineers ordered a survey of the project as a ship canal by a special board of Army engineers on January 25, 1932.

A preliminary report of this special board was made under date of June 3, 1933, and made available to the Federal Administration of Public Works which had under consideration at that time an application from the Ship Canal Authority of the State of Florida to construct the canal as a Federal project by means of a loan and grant from that agency. This preliminary report of the special board and the report of the Engineering Division of the Administration of Public Works dealt with the project as a lock canal. The Engineering Division of the Administration of Public Works, under date of October 19, 1933, made a report finding "that the project covered herein constitutes a public necessity and is of real social value * * * that the project is economically sound. It is recommended that the loan, with or without the grant, be made."

In December 1933 the special board of Army engineers made its report, finding that while the benefits of a lock canal would be great and far reaching, these were not sufficient to justify the cost of a canal of that type.

To review these two reports and to make such further independent study of the project as it might deem proper, the President caused to be appointed an interdepartmental board of review consisting of two engineers representing the Administration of Public Works, two Army Engineer officers representing the War Department, and a fifth engineer, from civil life, selected by the other four. This board, in its reports under date of June 28, 1934, and September 15, 1934, respectively, recommended for the consideration of the President a sea-level canal as being economically justified by its benefits to the Nation, but advising him that it did not appear that cash tolls could be collected from shipping using the canal to an extent beyond 40 percent of the actual transportation savings, and that the amount represented by this 40 percent would not form a satisfactory basis for liquidating a construction loan.

Under date of August 30, 1935, acting with the authority vested in him by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, the President authorized the sea-level project recommended by the interdepartmental board and allocated toward its construction $5,000,000. Proceeding under this authorization and allotment and two subsequent allotments of $200,000 each, the Secretary of War, through the Chief of Engineers, began the work of construction, which was continued until the exhaustion of funds in the summer of 1936, by which time there had been completed the excavation of approximately 13,000,000 cubic yards of material, the clearing of about 4,700 acres of right-of-way, the partial construction of one of the bridges, and the provision of shelter for the force engaged on the work.

To cooperate with the Federal Government, the State of Florida, by an act of its legislature, has created the Ship Canal Navigation District with power to issue bonds in the amount of $1,500,000 and to levy taxes for the payment of the same for the purpose of acquiring and donating to the Federal Government all necessary rights-of-way. These bonds and taxes have been voted by the freeholders of the district. A large portion of the bonds have been sold and the proceeds used to convey many thousand acres of right-of-way to the Federal Government.

The State road department has undertaken the obligation of maintaining all highway bridges crossing the canal.

On April 16, 1936, the Chief of Engineers appointed a special revisory board of Army engineer officers for the purpose of reviewing all previous reports and for making such further studies as might appear requisite or desirable. This revisory board reported under date of November 1, 1936—

"That the benefits to the general public that may be expected from the construction of a sea-level ship canal across Florida, with adequate dimensions and facilities, are fully commensurate with the expenditures involved, and that material collateral damages to agriculture, forestry, and water supply will not result from its construction."

That board recommended the completion of the project with a minimum depth of 33 feet and a minimum width of 250 feet.

The Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors reviewed this report and, under date of February 24, 1937, reported to the Chief of Engineers that the canal should have a minimum depth of 35 feet and a minimum width of 400 feet, with a width of 600 feet throughout a large part of its length. This Board based the estimated benefits of the project upon the existing traffic of 1935 without reference to probable future growth. Upon such a basis, it found that the cost of a canal with the greater widths and depths which it adopted was disproportionate to its benefits. The senior member of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, being called before the committee, stated that there is no material difference between the views of the Board and those reported by the Chief of Engineers so far as the great economic value of the project is concerned; that due to the tremendous traffic anticipated, the Board had thought it better to construct the canal at the outset of somewhat larger dimensions than those finally decided upon by the Chief of Engineers as being adequate; that, allowance being made for the lower cost of the lesser dimensions and for the traffic growth reasonably to be anticipated, the project is fully justified.

The Chief of Engineers reviewed all the previous reports, including the report of the revisory board and the report of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. His report, under date of April 1, 1937, was transmitted to the Congress by the Secretary of War, under date of April 3, 1937 (H. Doc. 194). The Chief of Engineers finds that a canal with a minimum depth of 33 feet and a width of 400 feet throughout, at an estimated cost of $197,921,000, will be ample to meet the traffic requirements; that the existing traffic which will use the canal is more than twice that passing through the Panama Canal or Suez Canals; and that the transportation benefits to be derived fully justify the canal on the basis of this existing traffic, with a continuously increasing justification in step with future traffic growth. He recommends completion of the project of the dimensions last stated.

One of the phases of every project, and especially projects of great magnitude which it is always helpful to scrutinize, is the public demand for it. I think that the taxpayer, and the people of this country generally, may well be consulted. The following is what the committee finds with regard to this important aspect:

(2) Public demand for the project: Evidence submitted to your committee shows a widespread public support for the project. This includes the endorsement of the Governors of a large number of States, representatives of organized labor, civic and commercial bodies, and national associations, especially those located in or representing the Mississippi Valley and Gulf States and those on the Atlantic seaboard. The evidence also includes objections to the project from some communities in southern Florida, from a number of railroads, and from certain shipping companies, as well as from organizations interested in wildlife and ecology. With the exception of the railroad and steamship companies, these objections are stated to be based solely upon a fear that the construction of the canal will damage agriculture, plant, and bird life of Florida through overdrainage of its fresh-water supply.

The project is actively supported by an official act of the Legislature of the State of Florida, the Governor, both Senators, and three out of five Representatives from that State, including the Representatives from the districts through which the canal runs. The Secretary of the Navy has advised the committee that the project will be of material aid in the national defense.

Few people realize the tremendous area of the territory which will be benefited by the canal. In its report the committee states:

(3) Tributary area: Evidence submitted to your committee and the report of the revisory board show that—

"the area within the United States which should benefit directly by reduced transportation costs if the canal is constructed extends along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and well into the interior, especially in the Central and Southwestern States. This area includes about 45 percent of continental United States, with 74 percent of the population." * * *

It is not probable that any such distribution of benefits over the Nation as a whole can be shown by any other Federal project.

Just as the territory served by the canal is great, so are its benefits of tremendous size and importance to this country, not only in dollars and cents, but in indirect collateral benefits which are incalculable but nevertheless real. The committee finds:

(4) Benefits: The Chief of Engineers reports that the direct annual benefits of the canal to traffic existing in 1935, had the project been completed at that time, would have been $8,741,000. He states:

"The great development in the Gulf States in recent years is certain to continue for many years to come, with a considerable, though necessarily indeterminable, expansion of general commerce between the Gulf and Atlantic seaboards. While the oil movement may approximately stabilize in the next several decades, I believe that a sustained and substantial increase in the general commercial use of the canal is a safe anticipation."

Evidence submitted to your committee affords ample foundation for the conclusion that the above statement of direct annual benefits is highly conservative, and that it will substantially increase from year to year over a long period. In addition to these direct benefits, there are undoubtedly collateral benefits which give additional value to the project. Among these are the stimulation of trade, the exchange of commodities which do not move at present because of uneconomic transportational facilities, and a very great and real value in the increased safety to life and property afforded by ship transit by way of this protected route, as opposed to exposure to the extreme seasonal hazards incident to violent hurricanes in the Straits of Florida. By connecting the intracoastal canal system of the Atlantic seaboard and that of the Gulf of Mexico, upon each of which many millions of dollars have been expended by the Federal Government, this canal will serve to complete these systems and substantially enhance the value of both.

There has been a great deal of discussion of the cost of this project. The Chief of Engineers has stated that the estimate of the cost of this project, because of the very simple nature of the work involved, renders the figures more than usually safe and prudent. With regard to this point, the committee finds as follows:

(5) Cost estimates: The Chief of Engineers has stated to your committee that he believes his estimates of cost to be prudent and conservative. He has shown that they include unusual margins of safety, and are based upon extensive experience and cost records related to similar work; that the project involves no new or untried types of operation, construction, or equipment; and that the conditions obtaining and the very nature of the project are such as to lend an increased margin of safety to these estimates.

There is one point which I desire to stress at length. That is the fact developed by the Chief of Engineers and concurred in by your committee, that the Florida canal is not only economically justified by all the tests which are usually applied to river and harbor projects, but that it is justified to an unusual degree. It is not only just a good project and a justifiable project, but it is in the very highest bracket of projects which pay large dividends in public service. The committee report states:

(6) Relative economic value: The Chief of Engineers has stated to your committee that the reasonably to be anticipated annual minimum direct benefits of this project to shipping at the time of its opening will be $10,447,000, or something over 5 percent on its cost, and that these direct benefits will increase with the years. Offsetting these minimum annual benefits, the Chief of Engineers estimates a total annual charge, including interest (at 3½ percent), operation, maintenance, and depreciation, of $8,641,000, or an annual surplus beginning with $1,806,000 and increasing yearly thereafter. He has also stated that the entire cost of the project, with interest, will in all probability be repaid to the Federal Government by transportation benefits in less than 36 years, and possibly within a substantially shorter period. The relative economic value of this canal is seen to be great when compared with that of many worthy and justifiable river and harbor projects heretofore constructed at Federal expense. The initial ratio of annual charges to annual benefits of certain of these as compared with this canal are shown, as follows:

Name of project and ratio of annual charges to annual benefits

Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal	1 to 1.21
Delaware River (Philadelphia-Trenton)	1 to 1.20
Delaware and Chesapeake Canal	1 to 1.05
Upper Mississippi River improvements	1 to 1.01
Missouri River	1 to 1.00

One phase of this project which merits special consideration from Congress is its tremendous value in the national defense. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former Chief of Staff of the United States Army, has stated that the national-defense value alone would entirely justify the building of this project by the Federal Government. A little consideration by those who are acquainted by experience with the tremendous difficulties we had with transportation during the World War will convince them that this is true. On this point the committee finds:

(7) Value to the national defense: In the event of war, with the theater of operations on either the Atlantic or Pacific coast, transportation problems of the Nation would involve the transport of immense quantities of troops, munitions, raw materials, and supplies from the region between the Alleghenies and the Rockies to either or both coasts. The experience in this regard of our World War participation demonstrates that peacetime facilities and equipment of the railroads cannot adequately meet such a demand, and that a large part of this movement must necessarily be by water. The committee has had evidence presented to it which demonstrates conclusively that as a protected route for the movement of troops, munitions, and supplies between the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic seaboard, and as a safe alternate route to the Panama Canal, compared with the potentially hazardous route via the Windward Passage, ordinarily used, the Atlantic-Gulf ship canal will serve as a major element of national defense in time of war.

Now, I desire to say a word with regard to the opposition to this project. Every Member of this House knows that there has never been a great river and harbor project designed to facilitate water transportation and thereby to reduce freight rates, that has not been constantly and violently opposed by the railroads and the established shipping interests. The Florida canal has been no exception to this. The railroads and the great oil companies and their associated interests have bitterly contested the Florida canal from its inception. The very magnitude and intensity of their effort should be proof enough to Congress that the Florida canal will bring about tremendous and far-reaching economies in transportation—economies which are not desired by these opposing interests.

Working through every possible private and public source at their command they have attempted, and no doubt will continue to attempt, to coax Congress and the people of the United States away from this idea. But, fortunately, the examination by the War Department and the examination by the Rivers and Harbors Committee has stripped from the face of this opposition the veil of pretended public interest, and it stands revealed for what it is, that is, the same reactionary and selfish corporate interests which have always set themselves against great public works. They have never hesitated to use false propaganda and misstatements, and they have endeavored by a campaign of fear to frighten the people away from this great undertaking. But, fortunately for the public interest and for the Congress, the Rivers and Harbors Committee has been able to deal exhaustively and dispassionately with this phase of the project, and has rendered, in detail, its opinion which I commend to the attention of every Member of this House. In its report the committee states:

8. Opposition to the project: Opponents of the project have, by appearance before your committe and by testimony submitted in writing, presented argument and views in opposition to those of the Chief of Engineers and other authorities recommending construction of the canal. Nine days of hearings were occupied in taking opposition testimony, to which your committee has given careful consideration. The opposition may be generally divided into two groups: Certain railway and steamship operators, and certain communities in southern Florida. Among the railroad companies which oppose the project are the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the Seaboard Air Line Railway Co., the Florida East Coast Railway Co., and the Southern Railway System. The Association of American Railroads also made appearance in opposition. No steamship-operating companies were represented at the hearings, but letters and comments filed with the committee indicate a measure of opposition, including that of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., and the Standard Vacuum Transportation Co. Communities of southern Florida in opposition included Bradenton, Fort Myers, and Miami. All opposing witnesses from the State represented communities distant 50 miles or more south from the canal. In addition to the opposition indicated, your committee heard protesting argument by a representative of the National Association of Audubon Societies. The Honorable J. HARDIN PETERSON, Member of Congress, representing the First District of Florida, appeared in opposition.

The principal arguments raised in opposition to the project may be listed as follows:

(a) That the estimated benefits of the project are more theoretical than real.

The assertion was made that the loss of time to ships because of the alleged necessity for slow speed in the canal, and the ordinary hazards incident to navigation of restricted waters, would more than offset the saving in time estimated by the Chief of Engineers. It was also argued that certain minor items of benefit to local commerce, as well as certain items of through commerce, credited to the project by the revisory board of Army Engineers, would not materialize. Your committee has carefully considered these questions and concludes that the evidence submitted by the Chief of Engineers and the Army Engineer boards, and by navigation experts, prove the objections cited to be not well founded.

(b) That the Chief of Engineers' estimate of traffic which will transit the canal is too great; that, in fact, many ships will not use the canal.

There are in evidence before your committee letters from a number of steamship companies which indicate that they would not use this waterway. On the other hand, there are, in a number of cases, letters from the same companies, written at a different date, stating that they would use the canal with substantial savings. In view of the fact that manifestly the canal will shorten the distance between Gulf and Atlantic ports by approximately 400 miles, and in view of the testimony presented by the Chief of Engineers and the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, and by navigation experts, that the canal will afford an unusually expeditious, safe, and convenient waterway for practically all vessels sailing to and from the Gulf of Mexico, your committee finds it impossible to agree with the nonuse theory, and concludes that the estimates of traffic of the Chief of Engineers are conservative, representing probably a minimum of commerce which would benefit by the project.

(c) Witnesses in opposition have argued that, regardless of the existing traffic available to the canal, that because of the present preponderance of petroleum cargoes in that traffic, it will tend to substantially decline with the passage of time due to the alleged approaching exhaustion of petroleum reserves.

Evidence submitted by the Chief of Engineers and petroleum experts indicates that there is no reason to expect even a stabilization of this petroleum movement for many years to come, and that regardless of this commerce, the general factors operating to increase the population and the growth of industry, agriculture, and general commerce in the territory tributary to the canal, are such that every reasonable expectation points to a gradual increase of the total canal traffic over an indefinite period of years. Your committee, therefore, concludes that this traffic is a growing one and that anticipations based upon a prudent assumption of the rate of such growth, as stated by the Chief of Engineers, form a safe premise from which to judge the benefits of the undertaking.

(d) That in the future the speed of ships will be so much greater than at present, that savings due to the shortened distance afforded by the canal will materially shrink, when, and if, that situation should obtain.

Your committee has given careful consideration to this point and finds that the evidence submitted by the Chief of Engineers and other Army Engineer officers, and by marine architects and navigation experts, shows clearly three things: First, that it is practically certain that, due to the very great increase in cost of constructing and operating higher-speed ships, a balance has possibly already been struck; second, that, granting the contrary, the value of time saved will be enhanced to such a degree that even in the case of faster ships, the savings afforded by the canal would still cause it to be generally used; third, that, over a long period of years, there appears no reasonable probability that the average speed of the fleet conveying the commerce under consideration will increase sufficiently to materially lessen the savings afforded by the canal, and that, in any event, the growth of the volume of this traffic will much more than offset any decrease in savings which might result from this factor.

(e) That cost estimates of the project are too low.

It was contended by certain witnesses in opposition that the Chief of Engineers has erred in his estimates of cost, and that the project, as planned by him, would actually cost much more than the total of his estimate. The Chief of Engineers, the Assistant Chief of Engineers, Lt. Col. Brehon B. Somervell (in charge of the construction work), and other engineering authorities developed in great detail this phase of the project before your committee. Their evidence shows clearly that the estimates under consideration are based upon extensive experience and proven methods and machines; that they involve no hypothetical consideration, and that they include unusual margins of safety. Your committee concludes that the estimate submitted by the Chief of Engineers is soundly and prudently developed and represents a maximum of cost.

(f) That hazards to navigation afforded by the canal are too great.

This point was presented in argument by opposition witnesses. Your committee finds no supporting evidence. On the other hand, the testimony of the Chief of Engineers and other Army engineer officers, pilots, and navigation experts, is unanimous to the effect that the project, as planned and recommended by the Chief of Engineers, is not only free from all but the normal hazards to navigation but, compared with other canals and waterways now in use throughout the world, will be conspicuous for its safety and convenience.

(g) That the construction of the canal will be injurious to the agriculture and plant life of Florida through adverse effects on the underground fresh-water supply of the State.

Exhaustive hearings were held by your committee as to this important matter, during which those holding this view developed at great length and detail their argument to support it. Likewise, the Chief of Engineers, the officers of the corps, and their associated geological and engineering experts, demonstrated the facts and reasons upon which the Chief of Engineers has reported that he is "of the opinion that a sea-level canal will not to any consequential, or vitiative, degree influence the ground-water levels of the State, or result in serious intrusion of salt water." Among these were Mr. Sidney Page, formerly Chief of the Division of Geology of the United States Geological Survey, and Mr. Malcolm Pirnie, water-resources expert for numerous municipalities of central and southern Florida, both of whom, it was shown, had conducted an intensive study of this question extending over more than 3 years. These witnesses presented convincing evidence of facts which preclude the possibility of any damage whatever to either the water resources or the agriculture of any part of the State of Florida resulting from the construction of the canal at sea level. Mr. Page stated:

"There is nothing mysterious about the ground water of Florida and nothing mysterious as to what will happen when a sea-level canal is constructed * * *.

"The long-continued and excellent work of the United States Geological Survey, coupled with the intensive work and special investigation of the Army engineers, has made possible the delineation on the map of the extent and nature of the underground reservoir. * * *.

"There has been much loose talk of damage to ground-water levels * * *.

"A committee of able men from the Department of Agriculture have held that the findings of the revisory board are sound; that vegetation is not related to the water table, except in swamp areas, which, if drained, will greatly improve agricultural conditions * * *.

"We know that the canal cannot be salt water * * *.

"It is a striking fact that an immense area of Florida on the surface is exceedingly wet * * * surplus water exists in immense quantities, water which does not enter the underground reservoir because the land is saturated to capacity * * *.

"The terrain along the canal is given over to forest and scrub oak, with a few farms * * *.

"We think the water table will be affected from practically nothing at a distance 10 to 15 miles from the canal to the canal, where it will fall to sea level * * * as a matter of fact, it will not affect the vegetation immediately adjacent the canal * * *.

"Miami, Tampa, or Palm Beach, or any of those cities, will be no more affected than digging a foundation in New York would affect the water supply of Washington, D. C." * * *.

Your committee also considered the report of the Special Board of Geologists and Army Engineers (S. Doc. No. 147) appointed to study this question. Among the conclusions of this Board are the following:

"The canal cut, insofar as its effects on the water reservoir are concerned, will be but a 'nick' in the western coast line of the peninsula * * *.

"The Ocala limestone will not be cut beyond the vicinity of Silver Springs. The artesian reservoir will not be cut anywhere * * *.

"The pursuit of agriculture and the growth of vegetation, even in the area contiguous to the right-of-way where the ground-water table will be lowered by the canal cut, will not be affected * * *."

Your committee also considered the report of the revisory board of Army engineers (H. Doc. No. 194), which concludes that:

"* * * material collateral damages to agriculture, forestry, and water supply will not result from its construction * * *."

Your committee also considered the report of the special committee of experts from the Department of Agriculture, appointed to study this question, the conclusions of which are substantially in accord with those of the revisory board.

Your committee called and heard the Director of the United States Geological Survey, Dr. W. C. Mendenhall, who stated:

"I have not heard * * * anybody who is a student of ground-water conditions in Florida express an opinion that southern Florida, Miami, or Tampa, would be affected in the slightest by the cutting of the canal. I certainly do not believe it, and no member of the staff believes it * * *.

"You will not get a desert in Florida, because you have too much rainfall. All of the surface vegetation, of course, is supported by the surface rainfall of 50 or 60 inches * * *."

The Chief of Engineers, the Director of the United States Geological Survey, the representatives of the Department of Agriculture, and all other departmental representatives are in entire agreement that there is no possibility that the construction of the canal at sea level will affect in any way the agriculture or plant life of any portion of the State of Florida. They are also in agreement that the only effect can be a certain lowering over a limited area of the ground-water table, already far below the surface, as would be the case in the cutting of any sea-level channel in any part of the country; that this effect will not in any way reduce the available water resources of any of this region and will not constitute damage except as to the possible necessity for deepening certain nonartesian surface wells in the canal zone, and that such damage, if it should materialize, would be inconsequential.

After a very careful consideration of all the evidence submitted, both pro and con, your committee concludes that the findings of the Chief of Engineers in this matter are correct and supported by ample data, evidence, and authoritative opinion. It regards the assertions that ground-water supplies in southern Florida will be adversely affected to be wholly beyond the realm of reason.

(h) That the construction of the canal is opposed to a sound fiscal policy of the Federal Government.

This contention has been made by several opposing witnesses. Your committee is of the opinion that the policy of the construction by the Federal Government of river and harbor projects and improvements for navigation in general, when these are found to be in the public interest and to be economically justifiable, will always form a basic element in any sound fiscal policy, and that this view is supported by the expressed legislative judgments of the Congress throughout our history. The authorization of the Atlantic-Gulf Ship Canal is governed by that policy. The work, already well begun, will necessarily require a number of years. Your committee recommends that its completion be now authorized.

Mr. Speaker, I again most earnestly urge the entire membership of the House to take the time to read not only this report of the Rivers and Harbors Committee but to study the evidence upon which it is based as set forth in the hearings.

It is a noteworthy fact that your committee has in the past diligently followed the recommendation of the Army Engineers in all river and harbor improvement projects. We have consistently approved their recommendations and reported favorably to the Congress their recommendations. In turn the Congress has in the past, I believe without exception, written into law every one of their favorable recommendations. I urge that similar action be taken on the Florida canal.

During the course of committee hearings something was said concerning the possible decrease and increase of oil tonnage in the South. This tonnage, of course, is tonnage—practically all of it—which will pass through the Florida canal when completed. For the information of the House I include herewith the brief statement taken from a recent issue of the Manufacturers' Record, as follows:

63 PERCENT OF NATION'S PROVEN OIL RESERVES IN THE SOUTH

An increase of 886,000,000 barrels of petroleum in the proven reserves of the United States on January 1, 1937, over the January 1, 1935, figure is estimated by the American Petroleum Institute. During this 2-year period approximately 2,044,000,000 barrels were produced, but discovery of new pools and development of old ones have covered this and the total reserves of the country are placed at 13,063,000,000 barrels, of which 8,242,000,000 barrels, or 63 percent, are in the southern oil-producing States.

The increase in the South since the last estimate 2 years ago is 1,032,000,000 barrels, compared with a decline of 146,000,000 barrels in the oil regions of the rest of the country, principally California.

"These figures", the president of the A. P. I., Mr. Axtell J. Byles, explained, "do not mean that the country has available only 13,063,000,000 barrels of oil, but that it has proved reserves up to that amount. * * * The probability is that these proven reserves constitute only a small portion of the supply which will be made available. But these reserves do assure that there is no imminent danger of shortage."

Following is a table showing the distribution of reserves in southern fields:

Proven petroleum reserves, Southern States

(As estimated by the American Petroleum Institute for Jan. 1, 1937)

	Barrels
Arkansas	84,000,000
Kentucky	39,000,000
Louisiana	524,000,000
Oklahoma	1,141,000,000
Texas	6,422,000,000
West Virginia	32,000,000
Total	8,242,000,000
Total, United States	13,063,000,000

The American Petroleum Institute is authority for the above statistics, and it is noteworthy that the South supplies two-thirds of the country's petroleum energy and that it has an estimated investment of $6,000,000,000 in southern oil reserve and production enterprises. This tonnage—the bulk of it—will find its way through the Florida canal. The canal will save in distance approximately one-fourth of the time between New York and New Orleans, which is about 2½ days' round trip between these two ports. Of course, this saving will exist to other ports between these two ports. There will be a 2 days' saving, round-trip average, from Gulf ports to United States Atlantic and European ports. A careful study of the project indicates that it will benefit a greater area of the United States than any other project in the country. Practically speaking, its benefits will apply to the United States as follows:

	Percent
Population	74
Number farms	70
Acreage farms	73
Income farms	72
Manufactures	73
Wholesale and retail trade	84
Forests	53
Minerals	82
Finances	84

No other American project can show anything like half these benefits; therefore, Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, it is truly a national project and cannot be considered as a local or sectional project.

My prime interest in this project has always been to bring about a reduction to the shippers and consumers of transportation charges. Particularly my interest is to lower this charge to the farmers and fruit growers of Florida who are struggling against great odds for their own existence. In my State we produce each year hundreds of thousands of crates of vegetables and fruits which rot on the ground because the transportation charge to the consuming market is prohibitive. While these edible fruits and vegetables are decaying and rotting on the ground consumers in the various parts of the country in America are in need of and in want of these very products. Through the extortionate freight charge they are denied these fruits and vegetables which are their necessities of life. This same condition obtains in the shipment of nonperishable products, such as oil, gasoline, lumber, naval stores, cotton, tobacco and bacon; in fact, all commodities. After the freight is paid, in many instances the producer does not have half of the cost of production, and, at the same time, the consumer has been compelled to pay a price which is extortionate. For the information of the committee, I include herewith a short letter just received by me from the Honorable I. T. Fugate, of Williston, Levy County, Fla., as follows:

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF LEVY COUNTY, FLA.,
Williston, Fla., April 24, 1937.

Hon. R. A. GREEN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I note the fight by the railroads on continuing completion of the Florida cross-State canal. I want very much to see this canal completed, for the reason we need cheaper transportation rates for Florida commodities, especially watermelons, and I believe completing the canal will help in reducing rates by giving us water transportation.

While it is true that if the canal is built it would be 18 miles from us to the closest place on it, we have good roads and could easily truck our produce to it. This is much nearer than trucking it to Jacksonville, which is over a hundred miles distant, in order to get water transportation.

Two years ago I planted 30 acres of melons; I harvested and shipped around 20,000 large melons, which was more than 20 minimum cars of large melons. There was left in the field more than 20 cars of large melons. The price received above the transportation charges did not warrant shipping these. Just for hauling these melons to the markets the railroads received more than 20 cents per each melon shipped, while I, the grower, with the investment in the land and fencing, paying taxes on same, the expense of preparing the land, the fertilizer, cost of distributing the fertilizer, etc., making the crop, harvesting it, and trucking the melons to the railroad cars, equipping the cars with excelsior, paper, etc., and loading and packing the melons in the cars, received the insignificant sum of a fraction over 3 cents per each melon shipped. These statements can be verified by actual paid freight bills and returns from the sale of the melons.

I hope you will continue to fight for the canal. Its completion means the relief to us farmers, and we are behind you 100 percent in this great project. We feel that water damage is only a scarecrow. We have utmost confidence in General Markham's report.

It has been in the past, and now is as far as I know, a requirement of the railroads that shippers of melons must have a bond guaranteeing prepayment of freight charges or else they must pay them before melons move. This is another hardship to growers, as we must ship to houses having bonds or let brokers who have bonds handle them for us. Only a very few of us growers are able to have a bond.

I am a member of the Southwestern Melon Growers Association, whose head office is in Adel, Ga.; and thinking that perhaps it might be of some help to you, I am enclosing a copy of my letter to them in regard to this, which I trust will be of some use to you in your fight for this great project. I hope that they will take immediate action on it, as suggested by me.

With every wish for your success in this matter, I am

Yours truly,

I. T. FUGATE.

You will note in this letter that Mr. Fugate mentions that he produced watermelons which brought him only 3 cents each. At the same time the railroad obtained 20 cents for carrying it to its destination. In that instance Mr. Fugate prepared the soil, bought the seed and planted it, fertilized it, cultivated it, hauled it to the railroad and packed it in the freight car, and received 3 cents for it. After the brokerage man and railroad and retail man finally handled it the consumer probably paid 50 cents for it. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, is it not an outrage that the farmer, who did all the labor and practically all of the performance concerning this melon, should receive the pitiful amount of 3 cents? Now, this is the reprehensible situation which the Florida Canal, when constructed, will correct. It will correct it not only for Florida but more or less for three-fourths of the population of our country.

No; I am not making any fight on the railroads and the construction of this canal will not be an injury to the railroads leading into Florida. The fact of the matter is, upon the resumption of construction of this canal, the business of these railroads will increase. It will continue to increase all through construction and after completion. Within 3 years after the canal is completed every railroad in Florida and every one leading into Florida will more than double its business. They will profit and pay dividends to the stockholders. Railroad employees will be benefited because more of them will be employed. The canal is a great project which will carry benefits without damage.

For the information of the House I include herewith a short communication just received by me from Hon. John L. Bogert, editor of the Marine News:

THE NEW YORK MARINE NEWS CO., INC.,
New York, May 18, 1937.

Hon. LEX GREEN,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. GREEN: With rail charges for grain haulage 13.9 mills per ton-mile from Yankton, S. Dak., to Duluth, and water rates but 2.6 mills per ton-mile on the New York State Barge Canal, it is imperative to utilize the all-water route down the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers to New Orleans and thence up the coast to Atlantic ports. A canal across Florida becomes a necessity, since river barges cannot go to sea around Florida, and transshipment at New Orleans uneconomic. A canal shortens the haul 400 miles and links up the Gulf and Atlantic intracoastal waterways.

Very truly yours,

JOHN L. BOGERT, Editor.

I shall not go into the national-defense evidence as it was produced before our committee, because it was an executive session. However, the great asset along this line was pointed out by the eminent witnesses who appeared before the committee. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former Chief of the Staff of the United States Army, and Admiral F. B. Bassett, United States Navy, retired, I consider the best authority in the country relative to national defense, testified. It is also significant that the Secretary of the Navy, the Honorable Claude Swanson, in a communication to your committee, stressed the importance of completion of this project as a great arm of national defense to our Government.

The elimination of storm hazards was very appropriately brought out in testimony before the committee. The elimination of storm hazards and national defense alone warrant our favorable action and the completion of the canal.

As an unemployment relief project the Florida canal is most worthy of our favorable consideration. We are forced to spend billions of dollars for the relief of the unemployed. About 75 percent of the money expended on this canal will go directly and indirectly to the relief of labor. If we admit that only 50 percent will go to labor, and that the canal will cost even $200,000,000, then this would leave a net cost to the Government of only $100,000,000. It is wiser and more prudent for us, who have the responsibility during these trying hours, to invest the Government's money in projects of a permanent nature than to idly expend vast sums for unworthy projects. This canal represents a permanent investment for every succeeding generation and it will carry benefits to every succeeding generation. Ten or twelve million dollars annually will be saved the consumers of America in transportation costs. Now, may I ask you, is it not wiser for us to invest public funds in projects of permanent duration and permanent benefit to the American people than to idly squander and expend the public funds on projects of a temporary and nonstable nature? I urge your favorable action and I believe you will vote to authorize completion of the canal.

THE CANAL ACROSS FLORIDA

RADIO SPEECH OF HON. LEX GREEN, OF FLORIDA, DELIVERED OVER NATIONAL BROADCASTING SYSTEM, STATION WMAL, WASHINGTON, D. C., JUNE 12, 1937

Good evening, ladies and gentlemen.

I am deeply grateful to the National Broadcasting Co. for this opportunity this evening to be whisked into your homes all over the country for a little chat with you—it is a chance I have been looking forward to for a long time.

You know, here in Congress, it is mighty hard, as a rule, to be able to get true facts across to the real government of the country—because it's the people, after all, who are the real government of the country—and sometimes it's pretty discouraging. There is so much happening in national affairs every day, and there are so many conflicting interests, with tremendous power and financial resources, always at work to becloud or disguise or misconstrue every situation. It's all very well to make speeches on the floor of the House of Representatives, but many of those speeches are only lost in the thick pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

And so tonight, for just a few minutes, I am mighty glad to have a chance to step into your homes with you, so that we can talk over one of the greatest national projects in the history of the country—one of those projects that big, selfish interests have been trying to assassinate, for their own private reasons, for years—the Florida ship canal.

You have heard a great deal about the Florida ship canal and you read much in the newspapers. You have been told many fearful stories about ruining Florida's citrus crop and contaminating the water supply around Miami. You've heard that ship lines say that they won't use it even if it is built and a lot more details of the same kind.

That is just what I want to talk about tonight.

But, first of all, let us look back a little and just see what has happened to this canal in the past.

To begin with, that short cut across the Peninsula of Florida for more than a century has been catching the imagination of every man, woman, and child in the civilized world who has studied a map of the United States. It is so obvious as you look at the Nation's coast line that it is impossible to ignore it. More than 100 years ago President Andrew Jackson first proposed it, and ever since that time there have been efforts and proposals, now and again, to make it a reality.

But it took President Roosevelt finally to put imagination into practical terms. He investigated previous studies and surveys made during recent years, and he decided there was no use in just continuing to dream of this very obvious national asset; the thing to do was to find out what sort of a canal should be built, where it should be built, and then to go ahead and build it. Now, right here, let us clear up one important bit of false paint that the selfish interests have tried to smear on the canal.

This is not a Florida project. It is a great national enterprise—proposed for the immediate and concrete benefit of the entire Nation. Florida will, like other States, profit greatly by this project, but the chief beneficiaries will be the people living in the vast area between the Rocky Mountains and the Alleghenies and those along our Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf of Mexico. The real benefits are those that will go to the workingman in Pennsylvania, in Maryland, in New York, and to the farmer and the grower in Missouri, in Kansas, and Oklahoma, and to the producers and consumers in Texas, Tennessee, and Alabama, and all the other States of the Union.

Now, let us see why this is.

Much of the traffic through the canal will consist of wheat and raw materials. This means that ships carrying these cargoes from the Mississippi Valley and the ports on the Gulf of Mexico to our people living along the Atlantic seaboard will save 400 miles on the journey, and that means cheaper food and cheaper wearing apparel to you and to me. Much of the traffic consists of petroleum. That means a cheaper gasoline to operate our automobiles. It's the mother and father in some little eastern town who take their children out for a Sunday afternoon jaunt in the automobile who really profit. They are the ones who draw the dividends.

Now we see why the ship lines and the tanker lines and the oil companies say they aren't interested in the canal.

Who gets those savings that the canal will make possible? Does the oil company or the shipping company get them? Not at all.

Competition is keen in shipping business. It is a dog-eat-dog arrangement. The minute the cost of transportation of any commodity is cut a half a cent a pound the price to the consumer is cut a half a cent a pound.

You can't expect the oil companies and the shipping companies to become enthusiastic over something that won't mean a dime of profit to them.

And then there are the railroad interests. For scores of years they have held a happy monopoly on the Nation's transportation business.

In wintertime, for instance, our Southern and Southwestern States raise fresh vegetables and ship them to the northern and eastern centers of population. But those vegetables are perishable and many of them must seek the shortest possible means of transportation to market.

But along comes this Florida canal, and it cuts more than a day off the time of transit from the farmer to the market. That means that in a vast area of our country the farmer will be able to ship by water and pay only a fraction of what rail shipping would cost him, and have his products reach the consumer as fresh as if he had shipped them by rail. The housewife will find the cost of living, instead of going up, as it has been doing, goes down.

But the railroads—they don't like it, of course. It means that that nice strangle hold they have enjoyed for years on the shipping of a large number of commodities is suddenly broken.

They go immediately to the oil companies—and don't forget they are the very best customers the oil companies have, because they buy millions of dollars' worth of oil every year to fuel their engines. They say to the oil companies:

"Now, look here; if this Florida canal goes through, it's going to cut down our business pretty badly. That will mean we'll buy less oil from you than we used to. Profits we have been making and profits you've been making will be going to a lot of farmers and housewives and such people. We've got to stop it."

The oil companies, as we have already seen, haven't anything to gain from the canal, financially, because their savings, due to the canal, will be all passed on to the general public. So they go along with the railroad interests and help to try to prevent the housewife and the farmer and the laboring man from finding out just how much the canal will mean to them in personal and individual benefits.

But now let's get back to a general review of the situation.

The President appointed a special board to study this canal situation from A to Z. That board came back and reported that the canal would be of untold benefit to the American people, that it would be a boon to business and agriculture and the consumer, and that it ought to be built.

That frightened the Railroads and the Oil Trusts, and they suddenly began spending money, big money, to try to coax business and agriculture and the consumer away from the idea.

Some millionaires in Miami, who were closely tied up with the railroads and the oil companies, went to work with the campaign of ghost stories about ruining the water supply of Florida and destroying the citrus crops.

Then the President appointed a special board of engineers and water experts to find out the truth of that situation. That board came back with a report that the stories were fantastic and that it was absolutely impossible that the water supply of south Florida could be injured in any way, and that it was even more impossible that any vegetation of any kind in the State could be hurt.

The President allocated $5,400,000 of Works Progress Administration funds and the canal was started. But the millionaires and their lobbyists had plenty of influence. What happened?

The lobbyists set up a hue and cry that such a big project as this one ought to be first formally authorized by Congress; that the Army engineers ought to make a survey of it, and report on it officially to Congress, and that the House Rivers and Harbors Committee ought to hold formal hearings on it.

So that is exactly what happened.

Congress turned the matter over to the Army engineers and they made a report. That War Department report literally took the wind out of the opposition. It was sweeping and unqualified. It said the canal would cost about $197,000,000 and that it would pay for itself in benefits to people like you and me—sitting here in this little chat—in a very, very short time.

And about the water supply—it said that ghost story was just a ghost story and nothing more. It said there couldn't be the slightest damage of any kind to Florida's water supply or to any of the vegetation or agriculture of that State.

Then the House Rivers and Harbors Committee held hearings. It went into every possible phase of the canal. It spent weeks listening to wild tales of hired experts, paid by the railroads and the oil interests, to testify. Then it listened to absolutely impartial engineers of the United States Army and representatives of the Government departments, who had been over the ground, who had made the surveys, and who knew what they were talking about. Early this week the committee made its report to the House of Representatives. That report said, in conclusion:

"Your committee recommends that its completion be now authorized. After an unusually extensive examination of all phases of this project, your committee concludes that the opposition is not well founded; that the project is of unusual merit; that its economic justification is beyond question; that its benefits will increase with time and will accrue to a larger portion of our country and its population than those of almost any other Federal public work; and that its construction is needful and in the public interest."

That is the verdict of an impartial committee of the House of Representatives, which has studied this question fairly and exhaustively, and has now recommended that Congress authorize the completion of this great national enterprise.

The Florida ship canal in going to become a reality. The housewife and the small-business man and the farmer may not be very highly regarded by the millionaire oil trusts and the railroad kings but this is not a government of millionaire interests. The Government is the people and this project that means millions upon millions of dollars each year saved to the people will now be made possible.

(Mr. GREEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain excerpts from a committee report and two or three other short items of extraneous matter, and also a radio address delivered by him on the subject of the Florida Canal.)

The SPEAKER. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. DICKSTEIN] is entitled to recognition for 15 minutes.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes on next Monday after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and the business on the calendar for that day, and also following the special orders heretofore entered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED

Bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 178. An act for the relief of the estate of J. D. Warlick; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 187. An act providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

S. 369. An act to allow credit to homestead settlers and entrymen for certain military service; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 432. An act to add certain lands to the Cache National Forest; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 947. An act to provide national flags for the burials of honorably discharged former service men and women; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1040. An act placing provisional officers of the World War in the same status with emergency officers of the World War and extending to them the same benefits and privileges as are now or may hereafter be provided by law, orders, and regulations for said emergency officers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1044. An act for the relief of Thomas W. Seay; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1375. An act to provide for the punishment of persons transporting stolen animals in interstate commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 2097. An act providing for the advancement on the retired list of the Army of John E. Ketchum; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2408. An act for the relief of John H. Balmat, Jr.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 2531. An act to authorize the transfer of certain military reservations to other agencies of the Government and to the people of Puerto Rico, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. J. Res. 67. Joint resolution conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the estate of John F. Hackfeld, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

S. J. Res. 68. Joint resolution providing for the appointment of a National Unemployment and Relief Commission; to the Committee on Labor.

S. J. Res. 148. Joint resolution to provide for payment for nine airplanes obtained from the Stinson Aircraft Corporation by the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 1 minute p. m) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, June 16, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON FLOOD CONTROL

The Committee on Flood Control will continue hearings on Wednesday, June 16, 1937, at 10 a. m., on emergency and priority projects in the lower Ohio Basin.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

There will be an open hearing before the full Committee on Naval Affairs on Wednesday, June 16, 1937, at 10:30 a. m. for the consideration of S. 2193, to authorize the construction of certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will continue public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, Wednesday, June 16, 1937, at 10 a. m., on H. R. 5719, known as the water carrier bill.

COMMITTEE ON PENSIONS

The Committee on Pensions will hold a hearing at 10 a. m., Wednesday, June 16, 1937, on H. R. 6294, a bill granting pensions and increases of pensions to needy war veterans.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization in room 445, House Office Building, at 10:30 a. m., on Wednesday, June 16, 1937, for public consideration of H. R. 7206 and H. R. 4353, H. R. 4354, H. R. 4355, H. R. 4356 (Starnes); also H. R. 2002.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce will resume hearings at 10 a. m., Wednesday June 16, 1937, on H. R. 6968, to amend the Securities Act of 1933.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

663. Under clause 2 of rule XXIV a letter from the Acting Secretary of Navy, transmitting the draft of a bill to provide for the reimbursement of certain enlisted men and former enlisted men of the Navy for the value of personal effects lost while engaged in emergency relief expeditions during the Ohio Valley flood in January and February 1937, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII.

Mrs. O'DAY: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 7077. A bill to provide for the distribution to each naturalized citizen at the time of issuance of his certificate of citizenship of a copy of The Story of the Constitution; with amendment (Rept. No. 1022). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. H. R. 4087. A bill to reduce by 100,000 the number of 50-cent pieces authorized to be coined in celebration of the opening of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, and to authorize the coinage of not to exceed 100,000 50-cent pieces in celebration of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge; with amendment (Rept. No. 1024). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CROWE: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 7017. A bill to amend section 4450 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of May 27, 1936 (49 Stat. 1380, 1383; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 239); without amendment (Rept. No. 1025). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WALLGREN: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 6149. A bill for the protection of the northern Pacific halibut fishery; with amendment (Rept. No. 1026). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. RAMSAY: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 4721. A bill relative to pleading and practice in civil and criminal causes in the district courts of continental United States; with amendment (Rept. No. 1027). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 3162. A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment on any and all claims which the Uncompahgre (Tabegauche), Uintah (Uinta), and White River (Yampa and Grand River) Bands of the Ute Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1028). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho: Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation. H. R. 5853. A bill to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects; with amendment (Rept. No. 1029). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. House Joint Resolution 366. Joint resolution providing for the preparation and completion of plans for a comprehensive observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington as first President of the United States and authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate therein; with amendment (Rept. No. 1030). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mrs. O'DAY: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 3746. A bill for the relief of Ettore Cordovado; without amendment (Rept. No. 1021). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mrs. O'DAY: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 5565. A bill to authorize the cancelation of deportation proceedings in the case of Joseph Pellon; without amendment (Rept. No. 1023). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McREYNOLDS: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. R. 7387. A bill for the relief of Cecile C. Cameron; without amendment (Rept. No. 1031). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the consideration of the bill

(H. R. 5274) for the relief of the widow, children, and dependant relatives of Maciej Wroblewski, and the same was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HARTLEY: A bill (H. R. 7528) to establish special rates of postage for samples of merchandise; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MILLER: A bill (H. R. 7529) authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. KNUTSON: A bill (H. R. 7530) to make the 15th of June in each year a legal holiday; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GASQUE: A bill (H. R. 7531) to afford protection of pension benefits to peacetime veterans placed on the pension rolls after March 19, 1933, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLANNAGAN: A bill (H. R. 7532) to provide an adequate and balanced flow of tobacco in interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. RAMSPECK (by request): A bill (H. R. 7533) to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to continue the existing system of classification and pay of positions of lighthouse keepers; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. IZAC: A bill (H. R. 7534) to protect the telescope and scientific observations to be carried on at the observatory site on Palomar Mountain by withdrawal of certain public land included within the Cleveland National Forest, Calif., from location and entry under the mining laws; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SAUTHOFF: A bill (H. R. 7535) to protect the public health by regulating the importation of dairy products into the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KELLY of New York: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 413) to permit the transportation of passengers by Canadian passenger vessels between ports or places in the United States on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FLEGER: A bill (H. R. 7536) for the relief of Edwin B. Formhals; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HAVENNER: A bill (H. R. 7537) for the relief of certain stevedores employed on the United States Army transport docks in San Francisco, Calif.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 7538) for the relief of the mayor and city council of Baltimore; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. STACK: A bill (H. R. 7539) for the relief of Joseph A. Dunn (alias Joseph A. Daley); to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. TEIGAN: A bill (H. R. 7540) for the relief of U. S. Pratt and Della Pratt; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THURSTON: A bill (H. R. 7541) granting an increase of pension to Sarah J. Dodge; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2643. By Mr. DALY: Petition signed by 322 citizens and voters of the Fourth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, supplementing petitions presented May 25 and June 7, 1937, containing over 7,000 names, endorsing the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2644. By Mr. FORD of California: Resolution of the Pacific Coast Garment Manufacturers, endorsing such portions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1937 (H. R. 7200) as set up a uniform standard minimum wage and maximum workweek for all industry and the regulation of child labor; to the Committee on Labor.

2645. By Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON: Petition of W. S. Brickell, of Waxahachie, Tex., favoring the so-called agricultural adjustment bill now being considered by the Committee on Agriculture; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2646. Also, petition of Richard E. Burleson, teacher of vocational agriculture, Barry, Tex., favoring the so-called agricultural adjustment bill now being considered by the Committee on Agriculture; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2647. By Mr. RUTHERFORD: Petition of residents of Wayne County, Pa., protesting against the passage of House bill 3291; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2648. Also, petition of residents of Ulster, Bradford County, Pa., protesting against the President's proposal to change the Supreme Court; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2649. By Mr. SANDERS: Petition of the postal employees of Longview, Tex., urging passage of House bill 167, the longevity bill; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2650. Also, petition of certain residents of Smith County, Tex., opposing House bill 3291; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2651. Also, resolution adopted at the Eighteenth Annual Convention of the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs assembled in El Paso, June 3–5, 1937, urging the repeal of section 213 of the National Economy Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2652. By Mr. SPARKMAN: Petition of Frank Seals and various other citizens of Lawrence County, Ala., urging the enactment of the old-age pension bill as embodied in House bill 2257, introduced by Representative WILL ROGERS, of Oklahoma; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2653. Also, petition of J. R. Haddock and various other citizens of Lawrence County, Ala., urging the enactment of the old-age pension bill as embodied in House bill 2257, introduced by Representative WILL ROGERS, of Oklahoma; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2654. By the SPEAKER: Petition of All American Nationalist Party, Belle Plaine, Kans., with reference to changing the legal holiday of Hon. George Washington to February 11 yearly; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, 1937

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 15, 1937)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, June 15, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I feel that it is necessary that a quorum be present, and I ask for a roll call.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bankhead	Bone	Bulow
Andrews	Barkley	Borah	Burke
Ashurst	Berry	Bridges	Byrd
Austin	Bilbo	Brown, N. H.	Byrnes
Bailey	Black	Bulkley	Capper

Caraway	Hatch	McKellar	Schwartz
Copeland	Hayden	McNary	Schwellenbach
Davis	Herring	Minton	Sheppard
Dieterich	Hitchcock	Moore	Smathers
Donahey	Holt	Murray	Steiwer
Duffy	Hughes	Neely	Thomas, Okla.
Ellender	Johnson, Colo.	Norris	Thomas, Utah
Frazier	La Follette	Nye	Townsend
George	Lee	O'Mahoney	Truman
Gerry	Lewis	Overton	Tydings
Gibson	Lodge	Pepper	Vandenberg
Gillette	Logan	Pittman	Van Nuys
Glass	Lonergan	Pope	Wagner
Green	Lundeen	Radcliffe	Walsh
Guffey	McAdoo	Robinson	Wheeler
Harrison	McGill	Russell	White

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] are absent from the Senate because of illness.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is absent because of a death in his family.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained on important public business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

CLAIM OF ROBERT A. WATSON—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 81)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying bill, referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed, as follows:

To the Senate:

I return herewith, without my approval, Senate bill 733, "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment on the claim of Robert A. Watson."

This bill proposes to confer on the Court of Claims jurisdiction over the claim of Robert A. Watson against the United States "for damages arising out of his purchase of 3,500 tons of sugar in the Argentine Republic in June 1920, and his importation of such sugar into the United States subject to the direction of the Department of Justice." The bill further proposes to bar the United States from availing itself of the defense that the Department of Justice acted without legal authority in issuing directions or fixing restrictions with regard to such importations.

The records show that Mr. Watson has been asserting a claim against the United States in an amount exceeding the sum of $700,000, as a result of certain importations of sugar from the Argentine Republic into the United States which resulted in losses to him.

In 1920 there was a shortage of sugar in the United States. The Department of Justice, which was charged with the enforcement of the antiprofiteering provisions of the Food Control Act, approved the plans of a number of dealers, among them Mr. Watson, to import sugar from the Argentine, agreeing that if the merchandise were resold at prices and in the manner approved by departmental representatives, no prosecutions would be instituted in respect of such transactions under the above-mentioned statute.

It appears that Mr. Watson thereupon imported approximately 3,500 tons of sugar and that as a result of an unexpected fall of prices, he was constrained to dispose of the merchandise at a loss. The records indicate that he asserts that a subordinate of the Department of Justice had entered into an oral understanding with him to find purchasers for the sugar upon its arrival in this country, and that he failed to fulfill this obligation.

It is quite evident that Mr. Watson imported the sugar as a business matter and assumed the usual hazards of such a venture. The object of his conferences with a representative of the Department of Justice appears to have been to obtain an assurance that if he complied with certain restrictions and did not resell the sugar at an excessive profit, he would not be subject to prosecution under the Food Control Act.

The bill proposes not only to permit Watson to sue the Government for damages said to have resulted from a breach of an alleged oral commitment of a very unusual and far-reaching character, claimed to have been made by a subordinate, but also to bar the Government from advancing the defense that its representatives had no authority to bind it in such manner.

I fail to find any moral obligation on the part of the United States to recompense Mr. Watson for his losses, or any reason for depriving the Government of a defense directed to the merits of the claim. The Attorney General and the Director of the Budget have informed me that after careful investigation they cannot recommend approval of this bill.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 15, 1937.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

MICHIGAN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

House Concurrent Resolution No. 43

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to adopt legislation providing for the granting of consent to the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority of Michigan to construct a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac

Whereas there are before Congress at the present time Senate bill no. 1104 and House bill no. 3413, providing for the granting of consent to the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority of Michigan to construct a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac; and

Whereas the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority of Michigan is very anxious at this time to have these bills passed, so they can go forward in shaping their plans for the construction of this proposed Mackinac Straits Bridge; and

Whereas it is deemed advisable at this time that strong efforts be made to have our Michigan Representatives and Senators in Congress to support these said mentioned bills: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the members of the Michigan Legislature hereby urge the Congress of the United States to adopt legislation providing for the granting of consent to the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority of Michigan to construct a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, to the President of the Senate and House of Representatives of Congress, and to the Michigan Members in the Senate and House of Congress.

Adopted June 9, 1937.

Mr. COPELAND presented resolutions adopted by Local Union No. 13, Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, of Utica; Dressmakers' Union, No. 22, I. L. G. W. U., of New York City; and the Central New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, all in the State of New York, favoring the enactment of the pending low-cost housing bill, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution adopted by United Centre Branch, No. 645, International Workers Order, of Bronx, New York City, favoring the enactment of the so-called Boileau bill, proposing to appropriate $3,000,000,000 for public works and relief, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution of Local Union No. 21, Bricklayers, Masons, and Plasterers' International Union of America, of Port Richmond, N. Y., favoring the continuation of the Public Works Administration and the enactment of the pending low-cost housing bill, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Maj. Ray H. Humphrey, D. S. C., Post No. 1449, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Endicott, N. Y., protesting against any reduction in governmental benefits for disabled veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the Attica (N. Y.) Chamber of Commerce, protesting against the enactment of House bill 185, known as the signal inspection bill, and also protesting against the enactment of a pending bill known as the national train limit bill, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. WAGNER presented a resolution adopted by the National Federation of Settlements at Bloomington, Ind., favoring the extension of the National Youth program and its development to include health service, practical and realistic education for a vocation and a living, and vocational placement, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

LOW-COST HOUSING

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I present and ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and appropriately referred several letters and resolutions endorsing the pending low-cost housing bill.

There being no objection, the letters and resolutions were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF SETTLEMENTS, INC.,
New York, N. Y., June 10, 1937.

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR WAGNER: I have the honor to transmit to you the enclosed resolutions passed by the Twenty-fifth Conference of the National Federation of Settlements at Bloomington, Ind.

Very sincerely yours,

LILLIE M. PECK, Secretary.

Resolution passed unanimously by the board of directors and the general session of the Twenty-fifth Conference, National Federation of Settlements, held at Bloomington, Ind., May 19–23, 1937

Whereas President Roosevelt estimates that one-third of the people of the United States are ill-housed, and this means that approximately 10,000,000 families live under conditions that endanger their lives and safety, and menace the well-being of all communities; and

Whereas public support of slum clearance and the rehousing of low-income wage workers is rolling like a tidal wave across the country and all forces working for public housing, Federal, State, and municipal authorities, organized labor, the churches (Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish), civic and social agencies, are united in the belief that a plan for providing Federal assistance to local housing authorities must be adopted by the Congress in the present session: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the National Federation of Settlements urges prompt and favorable action on the Wagner-Steagall public housing bill, a measure that is second to none in social importance, economic necessity, and the urgency of the people's need.

DRESSMAKERS UNION,
New York, N. Y., June 14, 1937.

Hon. ROBERT F. WAGNER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you will please find a copy of the resolution adopted at the meeting of our executive board held June 9, 1937.

Very truly yours,

CHARLES S. ZIMMERMAN,
Secretary-Manager.

Whereas housing conditions for workers have become intolerable in the cities and in many rural communities, so that large masses of people are often compelled to live in filthy, airless, and sunless shambles which impair their health and the physical and moral welfare of their children; and

Whereas experience in this and other countries has shown that no reliance can be put upon private enterprise working for private profit to alleviate or remedy these conditions; and

Whereas adequate housing for the people should be as immediate and direct a matter for public concern as education, public health, and public roads, etc.; and

Whereas the Wagner-Steagall housing bill, now before Congress, represents a vigorous effort to have the housing crisis met by vigorous action of the Federal Government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That Dressmakers Union, Local 22, I. L. G. W. U., in the name of its 30,000 members, declares itself in favor of the Wagner-Steagall housing bill and strongly urges its immediate passage by Congress.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6635) to dispense with the necessity for insurance by the Government against loss or damage to valuables in shipment, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 738) thereon.

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on Appropriations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6692) making appropriations for the Military Establishment for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 739) thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on June 15, 1937, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 665. An act for the relief of the estate of Everett P. Sheridan; and

S. 1112. An act awarding a Navy Cross to John W. Thomason and Robert Slover.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. DAVIS:

A bill (S. 2657) granting a pension to Mary Leslie Wunderlich; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2658) to amend the retirement laws affecting certain grades of Army officers; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HARRISON:

A bill (S. 2659) for the relief of Chester L. Carroll; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WALSH:

A bill (S. 2660) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to remove a floating drydock from the United States Naval Station, New Orleans, La.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BROWN of New Hampshire (for himself and Mr. HALE):

A bill (S. 2661) granting the consent of Congress to a compact entered into by the States of Maine and New Hampshire for the creation of the Maine-New Hampshire Interstate Bridge Authority; and

A bill (S. 2662) authorizing the Maine-New Hampshire Interstate Bridge Authority to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Piscataqua River at or near Portsmouth, State of New Hampshire; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado:

A bill (S. 2663) for the relief of George O. Willis; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mrs. CARAWAY:

A bill (S. 2664) to permit the temporary entry into the United States under certain conditions of alien participants and officials of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts silver-jubilee camp to be held in the United States in 1937; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 2665) to amend the act approved March 26, 1934; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. BARKLEY:

A bill (S. 2666) granting a pension to Dallie Baker; to the Committee on Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion by Mr. PEPPER, the Committee on Commerce was discharged from the further consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 166) providing for participation by the United States in the Pan American Exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., in the year 1939 in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of Hernando De Soto in Tampa Bay, and for other purposes, and it was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

AMENDMENT TO INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. WHEELER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 6958) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 37, line 18, after the word "reimbursable", to insert the following:

"Fort Peck, $100,000, reimbursable."

RELIEF APPROPRIATIONS—AMENDMENT

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I submit and ask to have printed and lie on the table an amendment which I intend to offer as a substitute for the committee amendment appearing on page 7, commencing in line 2, of the pending relief joint resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be received, printed, and lie on the table.

The amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. RUSSELL to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 361) making appropriations for relief purposes is as follows:

On page 7, lines 2 to 12, to strike out the matter proposed to be inserted by the committee amendment and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

"Provided further, That in the event the Congress or any Federal agency so authorized by act of Congress shall establish minimum rates of pay for persons employed by private employers in any occupation or occupations and shall establish differentials applicable to different localities or sections of the country in such rates of pay, thereafter no greater percentage differentials shall be applicable to the compensation of persons engaged upon projects under the foregoing appropriation than the average differentials so established by the Congress or such Federal agency, and in the event the Congress or such Federal agency shall establish such minimum rates of pay without any differential applicable to different localities or sections of the country there shall be no such differential in compensation applicable to persons engaged on projects under the foregoing appropriation."

PRINTING ADDITIONAL COPIES OF REPORT ON REORGANIZATION OF FEDERAL JUDICIARY

Mr. O'MAHONEY submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 17), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there shall be printed 50,000 additional copies of Senate Report No. 711, current session, on the bill (S. 1392) to reorganize the judicial branch of the Government, of which 10,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate document room and 40,000 copies for the use of the House document room.

AMERICA AND THE WORLD CHALLENGE TO DEMOCRACY—ADDRESS BY GEORGE W. ALGER

[Mr. AUSTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "America and the World Challenge to Democracy", delivered by Hon. George W. Alger, of New York, at the commencement exercises of the University of Vermont, June 14, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

WAGES AND INFLATION—ADDRESS BY LEON HENDERSON

[Mr. BLACK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address entitled "Can Wages Beat Inflation?" delivered by Leon Henderson on Saturday, Apr. 24, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. William P. Connery, Jr., late a Representative from the State of Massachusetts, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7493) making appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for civil functions administered by the War Department, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 17) authorizing the appointment of a committee to represent the Congress of the United States at the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the President pro tempore:

H. R. 1277. An act for the relief of William Hayes;

H. R. 2080. An act for the relief of Eleanora S. Richardson;

H. R. 2705. An act to provide for the manner of inflicting the punishment of death;

H. R. 2887. An act to amend the provisions of the pension laws for peacetime service to include Reserve officers and members of the Enlisted Reserves;

H. R. 2924. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of war, catastrophes of nature, and other causes;

H. R. 3203. An act for the relief of Rosalie Rose;

H. R. 3557. An act for the relief of the Coast Fir & Cedar Products Co., Inc.;

H. R. 4213. An act to amend the Inland Waterways Corporation Act, approved June 3, 1924, as amended; authorizing the Secretary of War to extend the services and operations of the Inland Waterways Corporation to the Savannah River;

H. R. 4575. An act for the relief of A. R. Netterville, Sr.;

H. R. 5721. An act to amend the Federal Register Act;

H. R. 5880. An act to amend Private Act No. 210, approved August 13, 1935, by substituting as payee therein the Clark Dredging Co. in lieu of the Bowers Southern Dredging Co.;

H. J. Res. 335. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to receive for instruction at the United States Military Academy at West Point Olmedo Alfaro, a citizen of Ecuador; and

H. J. Res. 339. Joint resolution granting permission to George E. Ijams, civilian employee of the Veterans' Administration, to accept and wear the decoration bestowed upon him by the Republic of France.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were each read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 5394. An act to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for, and the addition thereof to, the Yosemite National Park, in the State of California, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 7493. An act making appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for civil functions administered by the War Department, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

RELIEF APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 361) making appropriations for relief purposes.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, a number of amendments were passed over, and I suggest that the Senate recur to the first amendment passed over, which is on page 4, beginning in line 7.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 7, after the word "its", it is proposed to strike out "completion; and no non-Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted under this appropriation unless and until adequate provision has been made or is assured for financing such part of the entire cost thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds" and to insert "completion: Provided further, That after September 30, 1937, no new non-Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted under this appropriation unless and until (1) adequate provision has been made or is assured for financing such part of the entire cost thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds, and (2) at least 40 percent of the cost of the project is to be supplied from non-Federal funds, except that in any case in which the applicant for any such non-Federal project certifies in writing that it is unable to supply such 40 percent, the President is authorized, after investigation of the taxpaying capacity and credit of the applicant, to determine the maximum amount possible for such applicant to supply. The President shall furnish to the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, upon the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July 1938, a list of cases in which less than 40 percent of the cost of non-Federal projects was furnished by applicants, together with a statement of the amount furnished by the applicant in each such case", so as to read:

Provided, That no Federal construction project shall be undertaken or prosecuted under this appropriation unless and until there shall have been allocated and irrevocably set aside Federal funds sufficient for its completion: Provided further, That after September 30, 1937, no new non-Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted under this appropriation unless and until (1) adequate provision has been made or is assured for financing such part of the entire cost thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds, and (2) at least 40 percent of the cost of the project is to be supplied from non-Federal funds, except that in any case in which the applicant for any such non-Federal project certifies in writing that it is unable to supply such 40 percent, the President is authorized, after investigation of the taxpaying capacity and credit of the applicant, to determine the maximum amount possible for such applicant to supply. The President shall furnish to the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, upon the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July 1938, a list of cases in which less than 40 percent of the cost of non-Federal projects was furnished by applicants, together with a statement of the amount furnished by the applicant in each such case.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I send to the desk two amendments modifying the committee amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] to the committee amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 4, line 18, after the word "funds", it is proposed to insert "including money, material, and services."

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I inquire where does the insertion come in?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will again be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 18, after the word "funds", it is proposed to insert "including money, material, and services", so as to read:

and (2) at least 40 percent of the cost of the project is to be supplied from non-Federal funds, including money, material, and services, except that in any case in which the applicant for any such non-Federal project certifies in writing that it is unable to supply such 40 percent, the President is authorized, after investigation of the taxpaying capacity and credit of the applicant, to determine the maximum amount possible for such applicant to supply.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the amendment to the amendment?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, in explanation of the amendment I will state that it is simply to make certain the interpretation that the 40 percent to be provided by the sponsor could be provided in material or services as well as money. There was some doubt about it, and I desired to make that point certain.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The second amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In the committee amendment, on page 4, line 14, after "until (1)", it is proposed to insert "the Works Progress Administrator shall find and certify that", so as to make the sentence read:

Provided further, That after September 30, 1937, no new non-Federal project shall be undertaken or prosecuted under this appropriation unless and until (1) the Works Progress Administrator shall find and certify that adequate provision has been made or is assured for financing such part of the cost thereof as is not to be supplied from Federal funds.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, in explanation of the amendment to the committee amendment, it applies to language which was contained in the House text and is now set forth in the pending amendment. The Administrator expressed some doubt as to the attitude of the General Accounting Office with reference to that language and suggested that the General Accounting Office might desire to review the action of the Works Progress Administrator before proceeding with a project. I submitted the matter to the General Accounting Office, and it was suggested that, in order to avoid any doubt about the matter, the words proposed by me be inserted. That is the explanation of the amendment which I have just offered to the committee amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, with reference to the amendment itself as now amended, I ask the attention of the Senate for a short while. The purpose of the amendment, as is readily seen from its language, is to require a greater contribution by the local governments who are the sponsors of projects and to provide in the law a goal to which the Administrator can direct his efforts in securing contributions from sponsors.

First, I shall refer to a statement made by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] in the minority report filed with reference to this amendment, because in that report it is stated the amendment should not be adopted, but that we should trust the President. I think it unnecessary to make the statement, but for the RECORD I will say that I believe my record in the Senate during the last 4 years would make certain there could be no distrust on my part of the President of the United States, and certainly the President would never take the view that the Congress, the legislative body of the United States, in performing its duty and saying how much money shall be spent and how much money shall be contributed by local governments, seeks by that action to express any distrust of him.

The fact is I have voted for every relief bill. The minority report stated, I believe, that there were six or seven such measures. I not only voted for them, but Members of the Senate know that I actively supported every one of them. Those bills gave to the President lump sums without any restriction at all at first. Subsequently the Congress sought to place a ceiling upon the expenditures for certain purposes, and inserted into later bills the language carried in this joint resolution providing certain amounts for certain purposes. The Congress showed no distrust of the President by that action.

In the pending measure the Congress goes further, and, because of the situation which has developed throughout the country, where administrators have taken the position that if a man employed on a works project shall take private employment, his name shall be stricken from the roll and he thereafter shall be denied reemployment. Because of the belief of Congress that such action is wrong, the Congress has written in the joint resolution now before us, with the full approval of every member of the Appropriations Committee, language seeking to remedy that situation, which has been complained of by Members of the Senate on several occasions within recent weeks.

But, Mr. President, it does not follow that because all of us during the days of the depression voted for billions without seeking to place any restriction upon the manner in which they should be spent we should forever decline to perform the duty of the Congress. It is the duty of the Congress to levy taxes, and it is the duty of the Congress to say how those taxes, when collected, shall be spent, and to fix any conditions Congress may deem wise as to the manner in which they shall be spent.

I do not deny that I voted for relief bills during the depression. On the contrary, I assert that I voted for them. I am glad that I voted for them. Under similar conditions I would vote today for the same bills.

I served in the Congress during the war. I voted then for bills giving to President Wilson powers never before given to a President of the United States. I helped frame appropriation bills, and voted for them, giving to President Wilson sums for expenditure never before given to any President of this Nation.

After the war I served on a subcommittee which framed and introduced a measure repealing $15,000,000,000 which had been appropriated prior to the armistice for expenditure. When we repealed that appropriation it was not because of distrust of the President of the United States but because, under our form of government, the executive department is the spending department, and we believed that when the war was over we should repeal those appropriations and permit the departments in time of peace to present the budgets of the various departments and convince the Congress of the wisdom of the expenditure of the money for which they were asking. That plan was adopted and has been followed.

Now recovery has taken place. The emergency which caused us to give a lump sum to the President without seeking to provide how it should be expended has passed, and it has passed in great measure because of the legislation of this Congress and this administration during the past 4 years. We recognized that an emergency existed. We did not stop to ask what restrictions should be placed upon the expenditure of the lump sums we were appropriating. We appropriated money to save the homes and the farms of the people. We courageously and humanely sought to relieve suffering where it was found.

In appropriating money to save the homes in the city we provided funds to pay the past-due taxes to the cities, counties, and States of the country. In refinancing mortgages upon farms of the Nation we provided money to pay all past-due taxes to States and counties. As a result today States, counties, and cities find themselves in much better financial condition. The condition of the United States Government is one that certainly is entitled to some consideration at the hands of the Congress of the United States.

Look at the Treasury statements upon your desks this morning, and you find that by reason of the generosity of this Government in helping States, counties, and cities in their day of distress, today the Government has an indebtedness of more than $35,000,000,000. That money has been borrowed from the people of the United States. On June 30, 1936, $17,270,401,000 of the direct obligations of the Government—bonds, notes, and bills—were held by the banks of the Nation. This is approximately 50 percent of our debt. In addition, the banks held obligations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and other Government corporations on which the Government had a limited liability, as they were guaranteed by the Government. These amounted to a little more than half a billion dollars. The situation certainly is one which demands our attention; for it does not require the use of higher mathematics to show that a drop of five points in the value of the bonds held by the banks of the country would cause a loss to the banks of the country of approximately $1,000,000,000.

There is no alarm now, because under the efficient management of the Treasury, investors and banks still have confidence in the Government; but confidence in a debtor on the part of an investor must be based upon the ability of the debtor to balance his budget. It does not matter whether it be government, corporation, or individual; if one forever lives beyond his income, and makes no provision for the retirement of his indebtedness, his credit will go.

No man can think of balancing his budget in time of depression. As I have often said, in the case of an individual, when sickness comes to a home, it is necessary to incur unusual debts. It is necessary to have hospitalization and to employ doctors and surgeons. In such times we never hesitate. We never think of budgets. We then resort to the credit which has been established in normal times by reason of our prudence; and, drawing upon that credit, we seek to remedy the situation that confronts us. However, when the emergency is over, the prudent man seeks to save money from his income with which to pay the debts incurred during the emergency.

That time has come to the United States Government. The President of the United States, believing it, sent to the Congress only a few weeks ago a message calling to our attention the fact that if we appropriate $1,500,000,000 in this joint resolution, and make the other appropriations asked of the Congress in the regular appropriation bills, on June 30, 1938, the Government, without applying a single dollar to the reduction of its indebtedness, will have added to that indebtedness the sum of $418,000,000. If in times such as now exist in this country we cannot reduce the indebtedness incurred during the emergency—if we cannot even live within our income—I ask the Members of the Congress, when can we hope to do it?

Next year will be an election year. Demands will be made upon the Congress. The time then will not be so propitious as it is this year to bring about a balance of income and outgo. If we agree that it should be done, I ask, How can it be done? Are we going to be able to take $418,000,000 out of the regular appropriation bills pending before Congress? If not, where is there a chance to comply with the request of the President to balance the Budget unless it is done here? It can be done here, not by reducing the funds that are provided for hungry people but by asking only that the States, counties, and cities of the Nation which have been helped by us in their time of distress shall now cease to make demands upon the Government of the United States.

Now let us see what is their condition.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I do not wish to refuse to yield; but, if the Senator will permit me, I should like to go on and finish my statement on this one point.

Mr. MINTON. Very well.

Mr. BYRNES. I hold in my hand a pamphlet issued by the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., giving the market quotations of State and municipal bonds. The pamphlet shows the comparative figures for 1933 and 1936. I will take the case of any State of the Union. The showing made by this pamphlet is a great tribute to the recovery which has taken place under this administration.

Alabama, Birmingham: In December 1933, 4-percent bonds, due in 1950, sold at 81. In December 1936 they sold at 112¼.

Arizona: December 1933, bonds sold at 85. December 1936, they sold at 108¼.

Arkansas, Little Rock: In December 1933 a 4½-percent bond sold at 52. In December 1936 the same bond was selling for 105¼.

I could go through this list from one State to another, and it would be found that the average increase in the selling price of the bonds of the municipalities of the Nation is more than 33⅓ percent.

In this pamphlet there is a statement of 20 selected long-term bonds which shows that the average yield in 1933 for 20 of the large cities of the country was 5.18 percent, but now the price of these bonds has gone so high that the average yield is only 2.65 percent.

I have on my desk this morning's New York newspaper. It shows that the great State of Pennsylvania is selling its 1-year obligations at less than 1 percent—eighty-five one-hundredths of 1 percent. My own State is offering bonds, advertised in this morning's newspapers for the first time, at a price far above par; and the yield is much lower than formerly because of the increase in the price of the bonds.

In investigating this matter I discovered some interesting facts. I found that since 1933 the average rate at which our States could borrow, as indicated by the yield on outstanding issues, has declined from 5.42 percent to 2.71 percent, or just one-half. These figures are the average for 29 States, and are typical of the average for all States. It was impossible to ascertain the exact average for the other States. Figures that were available for some of the other States were not for the same year, 1933.

I ask permission to have printed in the RECORD the yield on State bond issues, showing the remarkable increase in the market quotations of State bonds.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

STATE BOND ISSUES

Since 1933 the average rate at which our States could borrow, as indicated by the yield on outstanding bond issues, has declined from 5.42 percent to 2.71 percent, or by just one-half. These are the averages for 29 States, and they can be taken as typical of the average for all States. For the rest of the States it has not been possible to find market figures, either because the same issue has not been outstanding for the entire period, or because on one of the dates there was no market quotation.

The individual issues are shown in the following table. All the issues shown are also included in the table "Individual bond issues." They have been listed separately here merely to give a clearer picture of the extraordinary improvement in the borrowing position of our States.

Yield on State bond issues

[April prices]

State	Issue	1933	1937
		Percent	Percent
Alabama	43, 1956	6.50	3.40
Arkansas	4½'s, 1945	16.00	4.20
California	Highway 4's, 1961	4.27	3.20
Idaho	Capitol Building 4¾'s, 1939	4.40	1.75
Illinois	4¾'s, 1943	4.60	2.50
Iowa	4½'s, 1942	4.47	2.25
Kansas	Bonus 4's, 1954	4.12	2.60
Louisiana	Highway 5's, 1950	9.49	3.70
Maine	Highway 4's, 1954	4.30	2.50
Michigan	Highway 4½'s, 1940	4.75	1.80
Minnesota	4¼'s, 1947	4.05	2.70
Mississippi	4½'s, 1953	6.12	3.15
Missouri	4½'s, 1944	4.25	2.50
New Jersey	Highway 4's, 1950	4.32	2.80
New Mexico	Highway 6's, 1939	6.50	2.00
New York	Cnl. 3's, 1959	3.60	2.21
North Carolina	4's, 1950	6.75	3.25
North Dakota	5's, 1959	6.25	4.00
Oregon	4's, 1951	6.00	3.00
Pennsylvania	5's, 1951	3.53	2.00
Rhode Island	4's, 1977	4.00	2.85
South Carolina	4½'s, 1953	6.25	3.25
South Dakota	5's, 1943	6.25	3.30
Tennessee	4½'s, 1967	6.37	3.30
Utah	5½'s, 1941	4.30	1.50
Vermont	4¼'s, 1949	3.40	2.25
Virginia	4's, 1962	3.80	2.49
West Virginia	4½'s, 1948	4.50	2.75
Wyoming	Highway 4's, 1950	3.96	1.50
Average		5.42	2.71

Mr. BYRNES. At the same time I ask permission to insert in the RECORD the quotations of the State and municipal bonds of the various States of the Union as of December 1933 and December 1936.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

State and municipal bonds, prices and yields, 1933–36

	Rate (percent)	Due	December 1933		December 1936
			Price	Yield (percent)	Price	Yield (percent)
Alabama highway	4	1950	81	5.80	112¼	2.90
Birmingham	4½	1957	70	7.15	119½	3.20
Mobile	5	1960	[1] 24		[1] 76
Arizona	3	1953	85	4.125	108¼	2.40
Phoenix	4½	1950	64	8.65	114¾	3.15
Arkansas refunding highway	4½	1958	([2] 2)	([2] 1)	97½	4.70
Little Rock	4½	1950	52	10.80	105¼	4.00
California	4	1961	99	4.05	126¾	2.55
Los Angeles	4¾	1960	89½	5.50	130¾	2.95
San Francisco	4½	1963	96	4.75	134	2.70
Colorado	5	1952/32	102	[4] 1.00	([3])	([3])
Colorado	2	1947	([3])	([3])	103¾	1.60
Denver	4	1944	101	3.90	117¾	1.50
Connecticut (no long-term debt):
Bridgeport	4½	1950	100	4.50	124	2.40
Hartford	4	1950	103	3.75	125	1.90
New Haven	4¼	1951	103	4.00	126¾	2.10
Delaware	4¼	1950	108½	3.55	126½	2.00
Wilmington	4½	1953	101½	4.40	130¾	2.25
Florida (no general obligation bonded debt):
Jacksonville	5	1950	96	5.35	125¼	2.75
Miami	5	1964	([3 6])	([3 6])	98¾	5.05
Tampa	4½	1950	50	11.20	99½	4.55
Georgia	4½	1944	105	3.70	118¼	1.65
Atlanta	4½	1956	107½	4.00	132½	2.40
Idaho	4¼	1945	101	4.15	116¾	2.10
Boise City	4¾	1941	100	4.75	111¾	2.00
Illinois	4	1959	100	4.00	130¾	2.25
Chicago	4	1947	83½	5.80	115¾	2.35
Indiana (no general obligation bonded debt):
Indianapolis	4½	1951	105	4.10	125¾	2.40
Iowa	4½	1942	107½	3.50	117¾	1.25
Des Moines	4¾	1952	99	4.35	125¼	2.30
Kansas	4	1950	101	3.90	122¼	2.10
Kansas City	4	1948	98	4.25	113¾	1.75
Kentucky (no general obligation bonded debt):
Lexington	4½	1951	102½	4.30	124¼	2.50
Louisville	4¼	1968	101	4.20	134	2.65
Louisiana Highway	5	1955	75	7.30	122½	3.35
New Orleans	4½	1950	84	6.05	116½	3.00
Maine	4	1954	106	3.60	129½	2.00
Portland	4	1945	100	4.00	117¾	1.75
Maryland	4	1949	108	3.35	123¼	1.90
Baltimore	4	1954	98	4.15	126	2.20
Massachusetts	3¼	1963	95½	3.50	123¼	2.10
Boston	4	1959	92½	4.50	121¾	2.70
Michigan highway	4	1944	100	4.00	118½	1.40
Detroit water (noncallable)	4½	1950	68		119¾	2.75
Detroit Street Ry. (noncallable)	4½	1950	61	9.10	116½	3.00
Detroit general purpose (noncallable)	4½	1950	[1] 49		115¼	3.10
Minnesota highway	3¾	1942	99	3.90	112½	1.40
Minnesota rural credit	4¾	1944	104½	4.20	121¾	1.65
Minneapolis	4	1950	96	4.35	118½	2.40
St. Paul	4	1943	97½	4.35	112¾	1.90
Mississippi	4½	1953	91	5.25	119½	3.00
Jackson	4½	1951	92	5.20	112½	3.40
Missouri	4	1944	101	3.90	117	1.60
Kansas City	4	1954	94½	4.40	118	2.70
St. Louis	4	1952	100½	3.95	124¼	2.15
Montana	4	1945/44	97½	[7] 4.30	113	[8] 2.10
Great Falls	4½	1950	84½	6.00	118½	2.85
Nebraska (no general obligation bonded debt):
Omaha	4	1950	97½	4.20	119¾	2.30
Nevada (no bonds in hands of public):
Reno	5	1948	99	5.10	119¼	3.00
New Hampshire	3½	1950	102½	3.30	119	1.90
Concord	4¼	1950	101	4.15	123¼	2.25
New Jersey	4	1950	98	4.15	122¼	2.10
Atlantic City	4½	1954	[1] 33		[1] 76
Elizabeth	4¾	1960	76	6.70	127½	3.10
Jersey City	4¼	1953	60	8.50	110¾	3.40
Newark	4½	1960	77	6.30	119½	3.30
Trenton	4	1949	77	6.35	110¾	3.00
New Mexico highway	6	1941	106	5.00	117½	1.90
Alberquerque	4½	1950	92	5.25	116½	3.00
New York	3¾	1960	98	3.35	120½	2.15
Albany	4	1945	99	4.10	117¾	1.75
Buffalo	3.40	1959	86	4.30	110	2.80
New York City	4	1980	81	5.05	125	2.97
Do	4¼	1981	84	5.15	131	2.98
Do	4½	1979	87½	5.20	135½	3.02
Niagara Falls	4¼	1948	95½	4.70	121¾	2.10
Rochester	4¼	1956	95	4.60	129½	2.35
Schenectady	4.30	1942	99½	4.40	115¼	1.40
Syracuse	4	1946	97½	4.25	118¼	1.90
Erie County	4	1958	91	4.60	115¾	3.00
Nassau County	4½	1950	82½	6.20	119½	2.75
Westchester County	3½	1949	75	6.00	109½	2.60
Port of New York Authority:
Holland Tunnel	4¼	[9] 1953	93½	[7] 4.75	116	[8] 1.45
George Washington Bridge	4½	[10] 1953	91	[7] 5.25	115	[8] .95
North Carolina highway	4½	1960	93	5.00	127	2.90
Charlotte	4½	1945	89	5.85	116	2.40
Durham	4½	1950	84½	6.00	117¾	2.90
Raleigh	4½	1950	65	8.50	110¾	3.50
Winston-Salem	4½	1950	82	6.25	117¾	2.90
North Dakota real estate	5¾	1946	80	8.35	118	3.50
Minot	5	1946	80	7.50	103¾	4.50
Ohio (no long-term debt):
Akron	4½	1950	72	7.50	107¼	3.80
Cincinnati	4½	1955	104	4.20	131¼	2.40
Cleveland	5½	1964	76	7.50	133	3.60
Columbus	4¼	1950	92	5.25	119	2.80
Toledo	4½	1950	77	6.85	117¾	2.90
Oklahoma	2⅞	1945	([3])	([3])	106½	2.05
Oklahoma City	5	1944	100	5.00	117¾	2.40
Tulsa	4¼	1952	94	5.00	120½	2.85
Oregon highway	4½	1945	95½	5.00	119½	2.00
Portland	4	1946	86½	5.50	115¼	2.20
Pennsylvania	3¾	1943	103	3.40	115¼	1.30
Philadelphia	4	1980/50	76	[7] 5.40	114	[8] 2.75
Pittsburgh	4½	1953	104½	4.15	130¾	2.25
Rhode Island	4	1977	109	3.60	141½	2.40
Providence	4	1948	100	4.00	122¾	1.80
South Carolina highway	4½	1953	78	6.50	120¾	2.90
Charleston	4½	1942	82	7.35	105¾	3.35
Columbia	4½	1950	84½	6.00	110¾	3.50
South Dakota rural credit	5	1944	82	7.50	113¼	3.00
Sioux Falls	4½	1947	86	6.00	115¾	2.75
Tennessee	4½	1955	82	6.00	118¾	3.15
Chattanooga	5	1954	88	6.00	118	3.60
Knoxville	4½	1958	70	7.10	101½	4.40
Memphis	4½	1947	95	5.00	116½	2.70
Nashville	4½	1950	100	4.50	120¼	2.70
Texas relief	3	1943	([11])	([11])	109¼	1.50
Dallas	4½	1950	94½	5.00	120¼	2.70
Fort Worth	4½	1948	83½	6.25	114½	3.00
Galveston	5	1949	84½	6.60	120¾	3.00
Houston	4½	1955	87½	5.50	124½	2.80
San Antonio	4½	1950	89	5.50	117¾	2.90
Utah	4½	1942	103	4.05	117	1.30
Salt Lake City	4½	1954	104	4.20	126½	2.60

[Footnotes at end of table]

State and municipal bonds, prices and yields, 1933–36—Continued

[Footnotes at end of table]

State and municipal bonds, prices and yields, 1933–36—Continued

	Rate (percent)	Due	December 1933 Price	December 1933 Yield (percent)	December 1936 Price	December 1936 Yield (percent)
Vermont	4	1945	106½	3.30	120	1.50
Montpelier	4	1946	96	4.50	115	2.25
Virginia	4	1962	104½	3.75	131½	2.35
Lynchburg	4	1950	102	3.85	119½	2.30
Norfolk	4½	1945	84	6.50	114	2.65
Petersburg	4½	1954	90½	5.25	116½	3.25
Richmond	4½	1960	106½	4.10	137½	2.40
Roanoke	4½	1952	101	4.40	119¾	2.90
Washington	4½	1946	86	6.10	121½	2.00
Seattle	4½	1955	82	6.00	125¾	2.75
Spokane	4	1950	84	5.50	118¼	2.40
West Virginia	3½	1954	89	4.30	115¾	2.40
Charleston	5	1952	98½	5.15	127½	2.80
Huntington	5	1944	99½	5.05	118½	2.30
Wheeling	5	1950	99½	5.05	125¼	2.75
Wisconsin (no general obligation bonded debt):
Milwaukee	4½	1946	105	4.00	120½	2.10
Racine	4½	1947	95	5.00	115¾	2.75
Wyoming	4	1951/41	102	[8] 3.70	112¾	[8] 1.20
Cheyenne	4½	1950	100	4.50	121½	2.60
TWENTY SELECTED LONG-TERM BONDS
Birmingham, Ala	4½	1957	70	7.15	119½	3.20
Phoenix, Ariz	4½	1950	64	8.65	114¾	3.15
San Francisco, Calif	4½	1963	96	4.75	134	2.70
Hartford, Conn	4	1950	103	3.75	125	1.90
Jacksonville, Fla	5	1950	96	5.35	125¼	2.75
Atlanta, Ga	4½	1956	107½	4.00	132½	2.40
Louisville, Ky	4¾	1968	101	4.20	134	2.65
New Orleans, La	4½	1950	84	6.05	116½	3.00
Minneapolis, Minn	4	1950	96	4.35	118½	2.40
Omaha, Nebr	4	1950	97½	4.20	119¾	2.30
New York City	4¼	1981	84	5.15	131	2.98
Rochester, N. Y	4¼	1956	95	4.60	129½	2.35
Raleigh, N. C	4½	1950	65	8.50	110¾	3.50
Cincinnati, Ohio	4½	1955	104	4.20	131¼	2.40
Tulsa, Okla	4½	1952	94	5.00	120½	2.85
Pittsburgh, Pa	4½	1953	104½	4.15	130¾	2.25
Dallas, Tex	4½	1950	94½	5.00	120¼	2.70
Richmond, Va	4½	1960	106½	4.10	137½	2.40
Spokane, Wash	4	1950	84	5.50	118¼	2.40
Wheeling, W. Va	5	1950	99½	5.05	125¼	2.75
Average			92¼	5.18	124¾	2.65

[1] Flat.
[2] Not issued.
[3] Comparable maturities offered at 46 flat.
[4] Figured as 6 months' maturity.
[5] Refunded June 1935 into 2-percent bonds due 1936–47.
[6] Comparable maturities offered at 42 flat.
[7] Figured to final maturity.
[8] Figured to optional date.
[9] Callable 1941 or thereafter at 105.
[10] Callable 1939 or thereafter at 105.
[11] None outstanding.

Mr. BYRNES. One of the difficulties confronting local governments during the depression was the inability to collect taxes. Statistics show that that trouble has been greatly eliminated. Today the average percentage of taxes due and collected within the year is almost as large as it was in 1930. The exact figures are as follows: Between 1930 and 1933 the average percentage of collections of taxes in municipalities declined from 90.7 to 75.5. Since 1933 there has been continued improvement, with the result that the average collection last year was 87 percent, or only 3.7 percent less than the 1930 figure for the same municipalities. That necessarily has helped the financial condition of the cities and has made it easier for them to borrow.

There is another element to be considered—the per-capita debt. The per-capita debt of the municipalities has not changed as much as I had expected to find; but, on the average, our large cities have been able to reduce their per-capita debt during the past year. The table before me shows the per-capita debts of 13 of the largest cities for 1936 and 1937. Eight of the thirteen have a lower per-capita debt than a year ago. One has the same debt, while Chicago, Minneapolis, New York, and St. Louis have a larger debt. In none of these cases has the city had any difficulty in borrowing at substantially lower rates of interest than 4 or 5 years ago.

Mr. President, I ask permission to insert in the RECORD the statistics as to the per-capita debts of the 13 municipalities.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

PER-CAPITA DEBT OF MUNICIPALITIES

On the average our large cities have been able to reduce their per-capital debt during the last year. The reduction has not been great it is true, but it stands as striking evidence of the improved financial position of the cities, and, consequently, of their ability to take care of additional burdens.

In the following table the per-capita debt for 13 of the larger cities is given for 1936 and 1937. Of the 13, 8 have a lower per-capita debt than a year ago; one has the same; four—Chicago, Minneapolis, New York, and St. Louis—have a larger debt. In none of these cases has the city had any difficulty, not only in borrowing, but in borrowing at substantially lower rates of interest than 4 and 5 years ago.

Per-capita debt of municipalities

	1936	1937
Baltimore	$135.00	$134.00
Boston	137.00	135.00
Chicago	133.00	141.00
Cleveland	153.00	145.00
Detroit	183.00	178.00
Los Angeles	135.00	135.00
Milwaukee	97.00	92.00
Minneapolis	122.00	132.00
Nashville	90.00	88.00
New York City	203.00	220.00
Philadelphia	247.00	222.00
San Francisco	161.00	152.00
St. Louis	90.00	99.00
Average	145.08	144.08

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, speaking in behalf of the payment of a greater proportion of the debts by local governments, I do not believe that the people of this Nation can say that the Government of the United States has not been generous. I call attention to the fact that this year the financial condition of the local governments has greatly improved. Practically every one of them has reduced its debt per capita, has greater borrowing power, and is in better financial condition, while the Federal Government is more than $35,000,000,000 in debt, and daily increasing that debt. If we could ever bring that home to the mayors and county officials I believe we could appeal to them to come to the relief of the United States Government instead of asking for further extension of relief from the United States Government.

Let me state what Congress is doing this year. We are appropriating in the bill before us $1,500,000,000; we have authorized the appropriation of funds for the C. C. C. camps. That is direct relief for the unemployed. The Director of the Budget tells me that Army officers will urge that $397,000,000 must be appropriated by us before adjournment to care for the Civilian Conservation Corps. Of course it does not follow that the Budget Director will agree to that, but I think it is fair to assume that he will submit an estimate for $350,000,000. I hope it will not be higher than that. Add that three hundred and fifty million to the one billion and a half carried in this bill.

Then in the independent offices bill we are appropriating $214,000,000. There is an appropriation for old-age pensions, and it goes to those in need. Then there is $54,000,000 for dependent children; for the blind, ten million; and for unemployment compensation, twenty-nine million. The total is $214,000,000.

We contribute to the States for the administration of unemployment compensation, without any amount being contributed by the States, the sum of $36,000,000. That makes $2,100,000,000 the Government of the United States is appropriating at this time for the relief of need throughout the country.

In addition to that, and since the Budget was submitted, without any request being made by the Chief Executive, solely on the initiative of the Congress, we have placed in this bill title II. Under that title $300,000,000 additional is made available for P. W. A. Under the act of 1935 the President makes regulations for the expenditure of that money. Under the regulations made by the President relief workers must be given preference in the work upon all projects of P. W. A. The single exception is that if a contract is given to a contractor who has a contract with organized labor, he is not required to use relief labor, because he would thereby be obliged to violate his contract with organized labor. But, with the exception of such contracts, relief labor must be utilized.

We must assume that, if this bill shall pass in its present form and the $300,000,000 additional be made available, the President will issue the same regulations, and require the employment of relief labor upon all contracts where a contract does not exist between organized labor and the contractor securing the award. Therefore, it is fair to say that certainly the greater part of that sum will go to assist the unemployed. That makes $2,400,000,000 made available by this Congress for need, either through the Social Security Board, P. W. A., W. P. A., or other organizations. I should say that I have not taken into consideration some minor sums—just a few millions that are appropriated and made available through the Public Health Service and the Labor Department for work of a similar character.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I said that I would yield to the Senator from Indiana, if he desires to ask me a question.

Mr. MINTON. I do not desire to interrupt the Senator at this time.

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I merely wish to remind the Senator that on yesterday the Senate voted to appropriate also the unexpended and unallocated balances, amounting, as the Senator from Colorado, the chairman of the subcommittee, has frequently asserted, to $200,000,000, which will also be added to the figure the Senator from South Carolina has given.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado was presenting that question yesterday. I ordinarily dislike to participate in a debate when another Member of the Senate is in charge of a bill, and I did not do so yesterday. I voted for the proposal in the committee. I stated at the time that I voted for it because after it was presented by the Senator from Colorado, the Director of the Budget did not furnish to the committee information that would enable us to answer the question we knew would be directed to the committee on the floor of the Senate as to how much money was affected by the provision. There is not a member of the committee who could secure information as to how much was affected by the language of the bill. At the conclusion of two hearings we varied all the way from the estimate of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] of $23,000,000 to my guess that it would be $60,000,000, a guess which was concurred in by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], and up to the $233,000,000 estimate of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. My idea in voting for the amendment was that if the Senate adopted it, before the bill went to conference, the committee might be able to secure accurate figures telling us exactly how much is reappropriated and we could give that information to you.

Specifically answering the question of the Senator from Alabama, and carrying out his line of thought, regardless of who is right, as to whether the amount carried over as unobligated and not contracted for is $223,000,000, or $23,000,000, as believed by the Senator from Tennessee after his calculation, the fact is that the figures read by the Senator from Colorado show that as of March 30, as I recall it, not that amount, but more than $2,000,000,000 is available for expenditure by the departments of the Government in the carrying out of contracts which have been made. The important part of that is that after July 1 there will be available for expenditure to the people of this country in various forms not merely the $2,400,000,000 to which I have called attention but this money which is in the Treasury for expenditure which is contracted for, and which will be put into circulation during the next fiscal year.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator was speaking of the amount of the unexpended balances. On our desks this morning is a Treasury statement of June 14, showing on page 4, in the last column, unexpended, $3,916,958,000, and, in addition to that, unallocated funds, $50,674,000, or a total of $3,967,000,000 available for expenditure out of what are denominated funds appropriated and allocated for recovery and relief expenditures.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, even in these times that is not an insignificant sum.

Let me now say something with reference to the amendment itself. In the hearings before the House committee Mr. Hopkins stated that in his opinion this assistance would have to be permanent. If that is so, should we not now consider what Congress is to do about it? Mr. Hopkins said in the House hearings that the local governments should be made to contribute more than they are now contributing. We agreed.

Why should there be complaint? If the city of any Senator here, I care not where it is, today wanted a project from P. W. A.—for instance, if the city of Spartanburg, S. C., wanted a project—under the language of this amendment it would come and gladly pay to P. W. A. 55 percent upon a sewerage system, upon a schoolhouse, upon anything else. All they want of P. W. A. is a chance to pay.

When we come to social security, for the protection of the aged, what does the Congress do? Congress says, "We will put up money to help you pay for those in need who are old", but asserting its right to function, the Congress says, "We will pay not more than $15 a month on a $30 pension. We will give 50 percent." No State in the Union raises any question about that. Senators can go through the list of the many laws we have enacted during these recent years in which we have required a 50-percent contribution by the local government, and they will realize that no Governor who comes to Washington seeking funds for his State, and no mayor of any city who comes to Washington seeking funds for his city, raises any question about it. No question is raised until we come to W. P. A. Then the Governor or the mayor says, "With respect to W. P. A. a different situation exists, and I do not think we should be called upon to put up any more money."

Mr. President, as a result of that situation let us see what will happen. I say the sole question is whether we shall fix as a goal a percentage which shall be sought by the Administrator, which will be of more help to the Administrator than any other one thing we could possibly do for him, even though he does not agree with it today. If we fix the percentage, he could insist that the city, county, or State comply unless they show that it is impossible for them to do it, and he would then have less trouble than he has now.

The Administrator is forced every day to turn to a bond division which he has. He has a division of credit men. Let us say that the mayor of the city of Spartanburg, S. C., comes to Washington and seeks aid. That mayor will be judged by his ability as a high-powered salesman. He has got to build a sewer system. Until now he never dreamed that he could come to the Government of the United States to get aid in building that sewer system. He would not do it today, but he sees the mayor of Columbia or the mayor of Greenville, rival cities, boasting of Federal grants they have received, and he knows when he goes back to the electorate he has got to say how much he was able to get.

The question will be asked him on his return, "What did you get?" He must make a showing, and the rivalry between the cities is on. He comes to Washington and says, "I do not have sufficient money to meet the requirement." If he is a good salesman, he sells his proposal and he puts up 15 percent. If he is a poor salesman, he may be required to put up 50 percent. The average contribution on all construction projects in my State is 40 percent. I think the contribution should be 50 percent. I know there is not one of the local governments which is not able to pay its share, and I think they ought to pay their share instead of coming to the United States Government, which is spending more every day than it is taking in.

Mr. President, the result of it is that we find a variance which appears in table 11 in the hearings before the House committee, and in table 43–B. I have copies of those tables here. If Senators do not have the hearings before them, I shall be glad to have the Senate pages distribute copies of these tables. I ask them to do so now.

In Alabama the administrator, after passing upon the need, upon the taxpaying ability and the credit facilities of that State, called on sponsors of projects to put up 17.3 percent. The local contributions range all the way from 7.2 percent in New York State to 29 percent which was asked of the State of Idaho. The State of Arizona was asked for 20 percent. The State of Arkansas was asked for 19.9 percent.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, is the Senator speaking only of the one item of relief?

Mr. BYRNES. I shall make that clear.

Mr. WAGNER. I hope the Senator does make it clear.

Mr. BYRNES. I shall make it clear. I am not discussing anything but W. P. A., the appropriation for which is carried in this joint resolution, and which we are discussing. I do not want to have it confused nor to have that table confused. The heading clearly shows that it concerns nothing but W. P. A. It has nothing to do with these other matters. This joint resolution carries $1,500,000,000. I asked Mr. Hopkins how much he would get out of it for W. P. A. He said that he estimated there would be $100,000,000 for Resettlement, $60,000,000 I think he estimated for N. Y. A., some other allotment of no size, and the balance for W. P. A. So I am discussing whether there should be a matching, and how we should match this billion and one-half dollars which is carried in the joint resolution.

No one would criticize the Administrator for the way he has carried out his duties in connection with this administration. I often think what I would do under similar circumstances. What man could exercise a power of that kind without having variations occur which would arouse criticism from somebody? So far as I am concerned, I have said before and I say again that I think Mr. Hopkins has had the worst job that any man in the administration has had, and he has done a fine job. I say it here gladly.

What I have to say does not involve any criticism of any personality or any individual. But the question is here, Who determines who shall go on the relief rolls in this country? Does Mr. Hopkins do it? No. He cannot be charged with it. That is done by local officials in every State of the Union. At one time there were two sets of officials appointed by W. P. A., but today it is the officials in my State who put persons on W. P. A. It is the officials in my State who keep persons on W. P. A. Mr. Hopkins cannot take them off. We say under this dual system, this rather confused system under which we work, "You put them on the roll." Then what happens? The amount of money that he makes available upon projects is dependent upon the number of persons on the relief rolls. If a community takes the view that the resources of the public should be conserved, and it takes persons off the rolls who in our State are described as career workers, if it gets rid of its career workers, then when the community asks for a project, it may be denied because of the number on relief.

If I were mayor of my city, and I wished to get more money for projects for my city, I should keep more people on the rolls, otherwise I cannot get the money. Therefore it is incumbent upon me to make a showing as to the relief cases I must care for. There is every incentive on the part of officials to make such a showing, and there is no incentive on the part of the local official to remove persons from the relief rolls.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I am in full accord with the sentiments expressed by the Senator now addressing the Senate. The mayor of my city, Mr. LaGuardia, questions the figures which have been given out, saying that the amount contributed by New York City in 1936, for example, was $108,000,000, and that the first 6 months of this year we will spend about $52,000,000.

I ask that a telegram from Mayor LaGuardia, addressed to me, be printed in the RECORD at this point. I make this request on behalf of the mayor and not for the purpose of contradicting the doctrine of the Senator from South Carolina, which I fully approve.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 15, 1937.

Hon. ROYAL S. COPELAND,
United States Senate:

I am sure you will inform Senate of the misrepresentation made concerning New York City's contribution to the unemployment problem and to direct relief. Under any fair formula it will readily be seen that New York City has spent more than any other community in the country during this period. Naturally, communities that throw their entire unemployed on W. P. A. cannot be compared with all that New York City is doing. Administrator Hopkins gave figures concerning New York City before the subcommittee of the House. The city of New York spent $108,704,000 on relief in 1936. For the first 6 months of 1937 the city of New York will spend $52,139,000. Of this total, the city's share of the cost in 1936 was $61,091,000. For the first 6 months of 1937 the city's share will be $31,292,000. New York State contributed $47,613,000 in 1936 and will contribute $20,847,000 for the first 6 months of 1937. In addition to these relief costs the city of New York has appropriated over this 18-month period $3,051,000 for materials and supplies to be used on Works Progress Administration projects. The rate of expenditure by the city on relief purposes for 1936 and 1937 has been substantially in excess of expenditures in 1934 and 1935, partly because the city has had to assume a larger share of relief costs under the W. P. A. program. I am sending a similar telegram to Senator WAGNER.

F. H. LAGUARDIA,
Mayor of New York City.

Mr. BAILEY rose.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator from North Carolina will bear with me for a moment, I wish to make a statement. I repeat, because I always wish to be fair and never want anything I say to be misunderstood, that the figures submitted by Mr. Hopkins—they are not mine—apply only to W. P. A. Since they were submitted I know there has been inserted in the record of the Senate hearings a letter addressed to the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] by Mr. Hopkins, submitting a statement which contains not only the appropriations for W. P. A. but the contributions for direct relief that are made by the mayor of New York, and for half a dozen other purposes. I have a copy of the statement here. It goes back to 1933 and makes a showing that the city of New York for highways and for various and sundry purposes has made very large contributions, which Mr. Hopkins states should be taken into consideration in connection with this matter. That is the statement of Mr. Hopkins, and I gladly call attention to it, and then I shall proceed to say why I differ with him.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I wish to make a statement in refutation of what the Senator is attempting to prove. I have a list of all the contributions made by the State of New York for all activities involving relief and work relief of all types. The record is very different from what the Senator has been trying to bring out by limiting his discussion to W. P. A. alone. The Senator was accurate as to W. P. A. But when we add all the relevant items together, we find that the total contributions of the State of New York were 37.6 percent of the total funds spent in New York during 1933–36, and during the same period the total contributions of South Carolina were only 9.6 percent of the total funds spent in South Carolina. I do not think that it is a fair way of dealing with this problem when we do not enumerate the total contributions made by the States for all forms of relief and work relief.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I think I am really more familiar with the table to which the Senator refers than he is. I have had it for some time. It includes 10 subjects. The figures are practically the same as those given by the Senator showing 37.6 percent for the 4-year total of expenditures from 1933 to 1936. I have two answers. The figures include W. P. A., P. W. A., housing, conservation work, Bureau of Public Roads, C. W. A., and other Federal programs. In determining the contribution of sponsors of W. P. A. projects for the next fiscal year, I do not see how it is relevant to show what was spent for C. W. A. in South Carolina during 1933. It may be that I do not comprehend the significance, but, to my mind, it has absolutely nothing to do with the question before the Senate, and the only effect, if not the purpose, is to confuse the issue. It leads to this——

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. BYRNES. I should like to finish this statement, and then I will yield to the Senator. This is what it leads to: If we say to the mayor of my city of Spartanburg, "Raise money by taxation or borrowing, but do not put it up with the W. P. A.; spend that money; give it to those you think are in need; give it to the needy, or certainly to the faithful who are needy. Let them know that that money comes not from Uncle Sam, not from President Roosevelt, or from Administrator Hopkins, but that it comes from the mayor, and they are receiving flour, clothes, medicine from your hands." Then when Mr. Hopkins asks the city to put up for a W. P. A. project 29 percent, which he demands of Idaho, the mayor can say, "No; I want you to take the whole picture into consideration; I want you to see what I have spent here in my town." Then you say, in the language of Luke in Holy Writ, "Give, and it shall be given unto you." And if you do not understand that, just say, as was said by Saint Matthew, "Ask and it will be given unto you."

The record shows that one-half of 1 percent is contributed to W. P. A. projects by the city of New York. The reason assigned for it is that money is spent by the mayor of that city in distributing among the people in direct relief large sums of money. If the mayors of Baltimore and Cleveland and Chicago do not take what money they can get from any source and give it to the needy of their cities as coming from Mr. Mayor, and they say, "I demand of you, Mr. Administrator of W. P. A., the same treatment accorded to the city of New York", they do not deserve to be elected; they do not deserve to continue in office.

This amendment would only ask that the mayor of every city put up 40 percent unless he could not do it; and if he said he could not do it—and I will discuss in a moment the question how it should be done—it would do him no harm; he would just take this money and put it up with W. P. A. Then, if he wanted to get any aid for direct relief, he could proceed to any other sources that were available to him.

I now yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I think that it is the Senator's statement heretofore made with reference to New York that has caused the confusion. Several Senators have asked me whether it was true that New York was contributing only one-half of 1 percent toward the relief of the unemployed. I wanted to bring out that it was quite the contrary; that, in spite of the Senator constantly using that one figure, when it comes to the handling of the entire subject of relief and work relief, New York has contributed nearly 40 percent toward the expenditures made.

I do not say this as in any way indicating that New York has done any more than have any other States; it just so happens that we were able to make that contribution; but I know that the people of New York are quite willing to have smaller contributions made by other States in the Union if the need exists.

This problem should not be handled in a provincial way, and complaint be made that one city or one particular locality gets more than another locality. We have long ago recognized that this is a national problem. The whole question, Mr. President, is where does the need exist? We are a united nation; we are not divided by economic barriers. The question is, Where does the need exist? Wherever it exists, we want to do our part to aid in the relief of the individual who is unfortunate enough to be unemployed.

So when I boast about New York making nearly a 40-percent contribution, I do not mean by that that other States should be required to contribute an equal sum. I am quite willing, if a State is in such economic situation that it cannot contribute a dollar, that the Federal Government shall provide the total contribution, and I know the taxpayers of New York would be quite willing to aid the unfortunate who are unemployed through no fault of their own and to have relief given to them. I do not look upon this question in any provincial spirit, Mr. President.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I cannot yield for a longer speech.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. I have to yield to my friend from North Carolina, who asked me to yield a few moments ago.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I wish to bring up two matters. I hope I may be heard later, but I do not care to make a speech, of course, at this time.

The Senator was acquitting the Administrator, Mr. Hopkins. He has called attention to the fact that there is a system of padding unemployment rolls going on under his administration throughout the country. I know that to be a fact with respect to some localities in North Carolina, and I can corroborate to that extent what the Senator says.

It is not to provide for the unemployed; it is to provide for a project, and when there are not sufficient unemployed in the city they go out and canvass for those who are willing to be enrolled as unemployed. I am saying that Mr. Hopkins knows that, and he cannot be acquitted as a good administrator so long as he permits that. That is all I have to say about that.

I wish to refer to the little controversy here between New York and South Carolina. The total amount of W. P. A. funds appropriated through March 31, 1937, was $2,774,000,000. Of this New York City got $384,500,000 and New York State got $122,000,000. Add the two together, and New York got $506,000,000. Now I suppose they do not want to pay 40 percent. Pennsylvania got $298,000,000. The two States together got $800,000,000 out of $2,700,000,000. That is about 30 percent of the total for the United States. When some of us protest against that situation we ought not to be charged with being provincial. It is not right.

Mr. WAGNER. I should like to ask the Senator whether he has examined all the contributions which the city of New York has made?

Mr. BAILEY. I have; and I would be willing to make contributions if I could get money from the remainder of the country at that rate.

Mr. WAGNER. I wish to say to the Senator that there are only two States in the Union that have made a larger contribution toward unemployment relief or work relief than has New York, and those two States are Montana and Rhode Island.

Mr. BYRNES. Will the Senators yield to me?

Mr. WAGNER. New York has contributed thirty-seven-and-some-odd percent, which is more than North or South Carolina have contributed.

Mr. BAILEY. The program is costing North Carolina so much——

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina declines to yield further.

Mr. BYRNES. No; I asked if the Senators would yield to me.

Mr. BAILEY. I thought the Senator said he yielded to me. I beg pardon.

Mr. WAGNER. South Carolina's contribution——

Mr. BYRNES. May I ask the Senator from New York if he will yield to me?

Mr. WAGNER. I hope the Senator will permit me to say a word or two further.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina has the floor and does not have to yield, and he declines to yield.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I think I have been generous.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator decline to yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I asked the Senator from New York to yield to me, and he did so, I understood. I wish to continue my statement.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator, much to my regret, becomes irritated and talks about a table being unfair and expresses the belief that he has been interrogated by Senators because of a table handed out by me. It is not my table. It is in the hearings. It was furnished by the Administrator, Mr. Hopkins, to the House committee. It gives the figures for W. P. A. It sets forth the estimated cost of Works Progress Administration projects and nothing else. Nobody has ever said anything else. But when that statement was presented it naturally was disturbing. I assume that the officials of the city of New York, knowing that they did spend large sums for direct relief, called attention to those sums. I have no objection at all to any statement that was prepared or issued showing the sums spent for direct relief in New York, but I have contended that that has nothing to do with this question, for the reasons I have outlined. Those reasons may or may not be convincing to the Senator from New York. I took the statement from the record presented by Mr. Hopkins, appearing on page 247 of the House hearings, and requested by a Representative from New York State. That table shows the total amount for all projects to be $620,700,295 in New York. Federal funds provided were $575,873,076; the percentage of Federal funds was 92.8 percent; the amount paid by New York State was $44,827,219. The city of New York was granted $433,783,001 of Federal funds and put up $2,244,337, or one-half of 1 percent. The average contribution by the State was 7.2 percent for all works projects in New York State.

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. DAVIS addressed the Chair.

Mr. BYRNES. That was the works-progress work alone. I repeat that for emphasis.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. DAVIS. That was quoted from the House hearings?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes. I shall yield to the Senator from Kentucky in just a moment.

I make no criticism of the people of New York. I believe if New York will put up the percentage the other States are putting up on W. P. A. projects and to that extent lessen the money it has for direct relief in New York, that when they call upon the people of New York for funds to relieve need in New York the people of that city, who have responded to every appeal for aid that has come, even from other lands, will respond to that local appeal and look after the people of New York City. Why should not they put up the same amount of money for W. P. A. as any other city in the country?

Then if there is not enough money to take care of direct relief in New York, let them appeal for it. If they cannot get it in New York, we will pass a resolution as we have for other places which have been in distress, and we will provide the money. But they will never ask for it in that way, because the proud people of New York, who so generously respond to the appeals of other people, will look after their own. Those people do not know of Mr. Hopkins' figures. They would be willing to pay their share of the cost of W. P. A. projects.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. I yield now to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. WAGNER. Oh, the Senator from South Carolina will not yield to me?

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from Kentucky has been on his feet and I promised to yield to him. I have yielded generously to the Senator from New York. The Senator from Kentucky was on his feet and I must yield to him.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I am not troubled over the controversy between New York and South Carolina, or between New York and any other city or State. Whatever has happened to them has happened, and I am satisfied that what has happened can be justified. However, regardless of New York and regardless of any other State or any other city, is it not true that during the 4 years from 1933 to 1936 all of the States and all of the communities in the States increased each year their contributions toward the relief fund?

Whether it was spent on W. P. A. or on direct relief or whatever was done with it, whether it was for 10 or 20 different purposes, is it not true that all the States and all the communities, beginning with 1933, increased their contributions to that problem with which we were confronted?

Mr. BYRNES. That is certainly true. There may be some isolated community which did not do so, but it is certainly true as a general statement.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to go into any detail because the contributions of the various States are shown in the schedule, but for 1933 local contributions of States and communities for relief purposes and employment and the work program were $338,000,000; for 1934, $691,000,000; for 1935, $714,000,000; and for 1936, $1,244,000,000.

Mr. BYRNES. What the Senator says is undoubtedly true. For instance, take the P. W. A. We had no such thing in 1933. To every State in the Union under the 55–45 plan of the P. W. A. we are making large contributions. Things that were heretofore done by the State governments of South Carolina and Kentucky are now done in cooperation with the Federal Government on the basis of 55–45, and necessarily any statement shows large amounts.

With reference to what has been said, I do not desire to criticize New York and have no objection to the figures my friend from New York has shown about South Carolina. Here is my position about South Carolina. I know South Carolina did not put up what the State should have put up for direct relief. In a public meeting, in 1934, in the presence of the Governor and the Governor-elect I stated South Carolina should in all fairness increase its contribution. I would make South Carolina put up more today because she is able to do it, and because it would cause local officials to ask for projects only if they were necessary. Being in good condition, South Carolina has no right to come to the Federal Government, in the condition in which the Federal Government now is, and seek to have it pay any more than it contributes to any other State. I would make South Carolina put up 50 percent. I would like to make New York put up 50 percent. If South Carolina could do it, certainly New York could do it. If they put it up, there would be more money for employment. If, because of the requirement they did not ask for projects, less money would be spent, less taxes collected, and more jobs be available in private employment.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator will pardon me for being somewhat sensitive about these references to New York, because I am so definitely convinced, as I have kept track of all our activities, that New York has done its utmost to help and has contributed a great deal.

Let me call the attention of the Senator to another evidence of our unselfishness. We contributed, I believe, 26 percent of all the taxes collected by the Federal Government, but I do not make that a point. We did not complain about the A. A. A., and yet I have here some figures which show that in New York State we received $707,000 under the A. A. A. and South Carolina received $22,622,195. There is a great disparity there, but I do not complain of it. I think South Carolina was entitled to it, and I am sure New York was quite willing to make its contribution toward building a better life for the farmers of the country. If I wanted to take the attitude the Senator from South Carolina does with reference to W. P. A., I could point to those figures as showing a remarkable disparity.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I think the Senator ought to be sorry that he did point to those figures. Whenever the Senator talks about paying 26 percent of the taxes of the Federal Government, every Senator in the Chamber smiles and can hardly restrain himself from laughing. They know that New York may pay taxes, but where does New York get the money to pay the taxes? She gets it from Michigan, Idaho, Mississippi, New Jersey, and the other States. If a cotton buyer in one of the Southern States buys a hundred bales of cotton, and to hedge, sells 110 bales on the New York Exchange, a tax is paid in New York City on the contract.

Mr. WAGNER. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. BYRNES. Today in Washington if a man sells 100 shares of stock, where is the transfer tax on the sale paid? New York. If you live in Wisconsin and own a hundred shares of stock in a corporation incorporated in New York, where are the corporation taxes going? To New York. It is Wisconsin money invested, but the corporation taxes are going to be paid in New York. Talk about helping the farmers! The farmers of the Nation have supported New York City. They have made it. If it were not for the farmers of America, grass would grow in the streets of New York City and the Senator would have nothing to represent except a farming district. [Laughter.]

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from South Carolina must not twist what I said into something I did not say. I emphatically stated that I am sure New York was quite happy to make its contribution for the benefit of the farmers of the country. That is the point I made. There is an interdependence between the farmers of the country and the workers in the city. They must both be prosperous. One cannot be prosperous without the other. New York is interested in seeing that the farmers are prosperous, just as the farming communities of the country are interested in seeing the industrial sections prosper.

Mr. BYRNES. The farmers are all in favor of this interdependence. All that the farmers ask is that if the farmers of Idaho have to pay 29 percent on a W. P. A. project, that the farmers of New York City should pay more than one-half of 1 percent on their projects.

The amendment, as I have said several times, seeks to provide a goal toward which the Administrator may strive. It provides that if in any case the officials of a State, city, or county cannot make the required contribution, then, upon the determination of the President, which means the Administrator, he shall have the power to do exactly what he is doing today and every day as to every project—to determine how much can be contributed by the State, county, or city. The Administrator is to determine whether they can put up more, and, if so, to seek the increased amount. Senators say this is wrong because it involves a pauper's oath. Let me talk about that.

You know, there is a certain odium about a pauper's oath. Opponents say, "Oh, that is a pauper's oath." They think that is odious to governments and individuals. If a city claims it cannot put up 40 percent but can put up 35 percent, is that a pauper's oath? Would a city that today swears it cannot put up 1 percent be humiliated by swearing it could not put up 40 percent?

My good friend from New York [Mr. WAGNER], who has just been interrogating me, should be interested in this matter, for the reason that the relief problem was a local problem until 1932. The Congress then determined that it was no longer a local problem, and that the Government of the United States had an interest in it; and we proceeded to legislate to show an interest in the problem and contribute to relieve unemployment and need. First a bill was introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and the then Senator from Colorado, known as the La Follette-Costigan bill. It did not go through; and then another bill was introduced which bore the names of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY]. What did that bill provide? Here is its language:

> The Governor of any State or Territory may from time to time make application for funds under this section, and in each application so made shall certify the necessity for such funds and that the resources of the State or Territory, including moneys then available and which can be made available by the State or Territory, its political subdivisions, and private contributions, are inadequate to meet its relief needs.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, in what year?

Mr. BYRNES. In 1932. It was presented to the Senate by the Senator from New York. Did anybody say that was a provision for a pauper's oath? No.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. The RECORD does not show it. I have here the statement presented by the Senator from New York, and certainly it does not show it. I looked to see if the Senator from New York or anybody else called this a provision for a pauper's oath. If the Senator has such a statement, I should like him to give me a reference to it.

Mr. WAGNER. What I was about to say was that we were required to conform to the wishes of the then President of the United States. That was the beginning of the infancy of our thinking upon this subject. We soon recognized that the problem was national in scope when President Roosevelt took office; and then the Senator from New York sponsored two bills, one providing for emergency relief and the other the National Recovery Act, which provided for the public-works program and the other things.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I agree that the matter was in its infancy, and I never saw an infant grow so lustily or so rapidly as that infant grew. [Laughter.]

Mr. WAGNER. Because the conditions of the country demanded it.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I am satisfied that unless we bring home to the mayors of this country a realization of the fact that they, by direct levies, must contribute to the solution of this problem, it will not recede. It will never recede, if it is left to them. Congress must assert itself and put some brakes upon it.

Let me say, however, that under the so-called pauper's oath, if it should be called that, every State in the Union, with the exception of Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Vermont, and Wyoming, certified that it did not have the capacity to provide for its needs either by revenues or by private contributions, and asked and received aid. Of course, what the Senator says is true, that the matter was in its infancy. Of course, conditions grew worse; and as conditions grew worse, counties, States, and cities could not comply, for the reasons I have heretofore cited at too great length today; and, as a result, the Federal Government contributed more and more until we reached the present situation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. A few moments ago the Senator said that unless some action such as that which is now proposed is taken, this problem will never recede. Is it not a fact that in January of 1936 we had some three-million-two-hundred-and-some-odd-thousand persons on W. P. A. projects, that now we have reduced that number by approximately a million, so that the total is now 2,200,000, and that under this appropriation it is proposed to reduce it to 1,700,000? There has been a reduction from 3,200,000 down to 1,700,000 in about a year and a half.

Mr. BYRNES. The number has not yet gotten down to 1,700,000; but I will withdraw the statement that there is no recession. Many have been transferred to Resettlement rolls, many more have gone into private employment. But there has been no recession in the number of applications for projects. These applicants are interested in projects, not in relief workers. But certainly in the very nature of things there had to be some recession in the number of relief clients from the days of 1934.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I merely desire to add to what the Senator from Washington stated by observing that the mere fact that we are appropriating a billion and a half dollars for a year's work and work relief next year is itself quite a recession from the annual appropriations we have heretofore passed for the same purpose, regardless of the number of men employed.

Mr. BYRNES. There is no question about the reduction in this appropriation, but in considering total appropriations by Congress we must take into consideration the other appropriations which are being made by Congress to which I have made reference, such as those for social security to care for persons who were formerly taken care of by appropriations for direct relief. The thought of the Senator from Washington that there has been a reduction of this appropriation was correct, regardless of whether or not his figures are exactly correct.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator said, in answer to this argument, that we must take into consideration the amount of money expended for other forms of relief—social security, and things of that kind. That is precisely the reason why the figures which the Senator from South Carolina presents for W. P. A. alone are unfair, and why, if we are going to consider the problem, it is necessary to consider the entire amount of money put up by the Federal Government and the States and the local governments. By his statement now in reference to this argument the Senator himself has confessed that in considering the problem we must consider all the moneys that are spent for unemployment relief.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, of course, I disagree with the Senator in that respect. In determining whether there has been a reduction in appropriations by Congress for relief it is fair to consider that a reduction in this bill is made possible by the transfer to social-security rolls or the transfer to a bill for C. C. C. workers. That is different from saying that because a city spends money for relief or hospitalization or other things it should not put up anything for W. P. A. projects.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I should like to conclude my remarks.

Mr. WAGNER. Will the Senator yield, not for a question, but to allow me to correct a statement he made? When the Senator enumerated those who participated in drafting the bill of 1932, I think he failed to mention the present presiding officer, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

Mr. BYRNES. Mr, Mr. President; I called him by name. I placed him high up on the roll of honor.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well. He was a very important member of the group.

Mr. BYRNES. He is an important member of any group.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I merely rise to correct the original statement of the able Senator detailing the course of the different States in what he called the infancy of this undertaking. The role of Illinois was that of a borrower. The able Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] did a great deal to direct the course that enabled Illinois, through Chicago, to borrow for the payment of her school teachers; but that was a loan for which she put up security, and which I may say to the able Senator has largely been paid off.

Mr. BYRNES. I am very glad to learn that.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I ask Senators to pardon me and let me conclude, because I must do so.

By the language of the amendment as it now stands, materials, services, or money may be offered by the State, county, or city. That is now being done. There is no change in that. The average contribution for the country has increased from 13 to 16 percent.

As a result of this amendment, nobody will be caused to go hungry. I say that because I assume we will hear much about that. We generally do.

There is no question here about causing persons to go hungry. The States, counties, and cities, I think I have shown, are in position to take care of those who are hungry or who may be hungry. Throughout this country today they are in good condition. The effect of the action that is proposed here would be solely to make the States, through their local boards, take a greater interest in the relief rolls. It would cause them to be reduced. If in the cities people are in need of jobs and the cities put up 40 percent, we will have more money for more jobs.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. The discussion has been very edifying. Has the Senator any figures which indicate the average contributions made by States and localities throughout the country?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes, Mr. President. I ask a page to take to the Senator the figures showing the average as 13.1 percent up to January 1. Since that time the average has been increased by the Administrator to 16 percent and possibly some fraction. That was the testimony before the Committee on Appropriations last Saturday.

The 13 percent added to the one billion and a half dollars would make available for W. P. A. for the next fiscal year $1,695,000,000. If the sponsors are made to put up 40 percent, there would be $600,000,000 added to the one and a half billion dollars, or $2,100,000,000. That, however, would not be quite accurate, for the reason that I have said that Mr. Hopkins does not expect to get for W. P. A. the entire $1,500,000,000. In round figures we may put it, say, at $1,300,000,000. That would mean if 40 percent were provided, that the W. P. A. would have $1,820,000,000, or approximately $125,000,000 more than they would have if the amendment is not adopted.

Some newspapers made the statement that I said that the additional amount would be $750,000,000. I never quarrel with the newspapers. I only wonder how they are as accurate as they generally are. So far as I am concerned, while I have no recollection of making the statement, I may have done so, for the reason that I have several times said in conversation that the effect of this proposal would mean one of two things: If there is need throughout the country, if projects are demanded because of need, and communities ask for them as they would ask for them if they needed them, it would mean putting up $2,100,000,000.

If, however, there is no such need and mayors are asking for projects—if, for instance, a mayor is asking for an airport because a rival city has an airport, or for help in order that it may help the mayor because some other city has been getting something—"As long as spending is going on, I might as well get my share"—if that is the theory upon which it is done, the people of the community would demand that they stop filing applications. I would say that nobody could guess what would happen. I said on one occasion that my hope was that the contribution of the Federal Government would be reduced to $750,000,000. That was not my opinion; that was a hope, a vain hope, I know. But if the Government were putting up only $750,000,000 it would be a blessed day for the Government of the United States and the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRNES. In just a moment, and I will have concluded.

The President of the United States, in the Budget message he sent to Congress on April 20, made this request:

> I regard it as extremely important that we should achieve a balance of actual income and outgo for the fiscal year 1938, and I appeal to you to join me in a determined effort to bring about that result.

The President of the United States appealed to us to join him in balancing the income and the outgo. That appeal will not be answered unless some action is taken upon this bill, and the only action we could take on this bill which would not hurt those on relief would be to require the local governments to put up a greater part and let the Federal Government put up a lesser part. If that result could be brought about, then there would be no deficit of $419,000,000 on June 30, 1938. The Treasury of the United States could submit a balance sheet which could command the confidence of the investors of this country, which would give heart not only to those who are running the banks in this country today, and holding the bonds of the country, but would give heart to every man and every woman whose common sense tells them that this Government cannot forever go on spending daily more than its income, that there must come a time when income and outgo must be balanced. I believe that time has arrived and I appeal to the Senate to respond to the appeal of the President and balance income and outgo.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. OVERTON. Before the Senator from South Carolina takes his seat I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I wanted to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has the Senator from South Carolina yielded the floor?

Mr. BYRNES. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR].

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to yield to permit the Senator from South Carolina to answer the question of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BYRNES. I yield to the Senator from Washington, if I have permission to do so.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, the Senator has made a very forthright and aggressive exposition of his views about the problem of relief, and in some measure has answered the question I wanted to ask when I rose to interrogate him. I suspect that if there is anyone here who can make an intelligent approach to this question the Senator from South Carolina can, because he has led the fight against this amendment in the form in which it was originally, and has demanded that the States and communities contribute a portion of the relief fund.

I wish to ask the Senator now what, in his honest judgment, is likely to be the result of the adoption of the committee amendment compelling a contribution by the communities so far as the total amount of contributions by the Federal Government is concerned? Does he honestly think that it would be somewhere around $700,000,000 or $750,000,000? The Senator must have some definite idea about it; otherwise our action would be futile; we would never know where we were going.

Mr. BYRNES. Of course, I know the Senator will agree that it would be utterly impossible for anyone to state how many communities, under the requirement that they contribute 40 percent in money, materials, or services, would file applications when they today are paying less. We would have to determine what action the mayor of Milwaukee might take or what action the mayor of Detroit or of Atlanta might take, and it is, of course, necessarily difficult.

Then, too, there is the other question; it would necessitate a determination as to whether or not in my State, for instance, there are some communities which would say, "We cannot put it up. We will put up 30 percent, and we will make a showing that we cannot put up more." The President would then determine, as he does today—of course, Mr. Hopkins would do it for him—and say, "You can put up 30 percent, because that is all you can put up." Those two factors make it impossible for me to answer intelligently, and with the satisfaction I should like to have, the question of the Senator.

Mr. BONE. I do not expect the Senator to answer an impossible question, but I want to be perfectly frank and fair, and it must be obvious to the Senator from South Caroiina, as I think it is to all other Senators, that the Federal Government would not put up nearly so much as the sum contemplated in the joint resolution before the Senate if this amendment should become the law. I suspect the Federal expenditure might even go below $700,000,000. Is not that, frankly, the purpose?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I have stated that any estimate would be a guess. But judging from the way the law has been administered, and as I believe it should be administered, with reason, I do not believe the adoption of the amendment would mean a reduction of more than $500,000,000. That is my belief. The Senator and I might hope that the States would put up more money. I do not believe they would.

Mr. BONE. Of course, we are confronted by a rather serious problem here. There is a great army of young people coming on every year who are not fitting in. I have here some interesting figures. I do not want to occupy the floor, because the Senator from Tennessee desires to make answer to what has been suggested, but I do desire to call the attention of Senators to some figures at this time. The able Senator from South Carolina referred to the fact that we would have this army with us all the time. In other words, it seems to me there is an unhappy implication that many people would just take advantage of relief, if they got the opportunity, rather than seek private employment.

The Alexander Hamilton Institute made a very exhaustive study not long ago of some of our industrial processes, and they point out that the cost of labor was tremendously lower in 1936 than it was in 1929. Wage rates were at a high level, to be sure, but the challenging thing in these figures arises from the fact that the output per man-hour in January of this year was higher by 1.5 percent than in 1936; it was 16.7 percent higher than in 1932, and as compared with 1920 there was an increase of 71.2 percent in the output per man-hour.

When there is such an inordinately rapid increase in the tempo of output, coupled with the fact that every year there is coming along a great army of young men trying to squeeze themselves into an industrial pattern where there is not room for them, a very menacing picture is presented; and it matters not whether one likes it, we might as well challenge the multiplication table, and assert that two and two do not make four. It is a fact we have to wrestle with, a grisly phantom, but a very serious one. That is why I think we have to be exceedingly realistic in approaching this matter.

I find myself in disagreement with the attitude and viewpoint of the Senator from South Carolina in saying that this army would consciously and purposely stay with us, because, poor devils, they have not anything else to do than to seek relief when they cannot find a place in our economic life. I am fearful that the adoption of a provision of this kind might prove disastrous right now, and precipitate a crisis worse than the one we now face.

I apologize to the Senator from Tennessee for taking so much of his time.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator need not apologize; I was glad to yield to him.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield to me a moment to make a suggestion to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. If the Senator from Washington will look on page 77 of the Senate hearings, he will find Mr. Hopkins' statement as to the annual increase that is coming into the picture by reason of the development of youth.

Mr. BONE. What does he indicate?

Mr. ADAMS. He makes it half a million a year.

Mr. BONE. That is a tremendous army, a half million men, and they are ambitious; they want to fit in, but they run into an economic pattern where the marvels of science have made it possible to turn out more and more and more of the good things of life with less and less human labor applied to the process. That is one of the most challenging things we confront in this country today, and I have no wonder that Mr. Hopkins has pointed out that situation.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator will find his statement, on pages 76 and 77 of the Senate committee hearings, very interesting.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to point out to the Senate and to the country that under the administration of the relief activities of the Government, States and their subdivisions have on the average contributed 13.1 percent of the amount expended. It is proposed by Mr. Hopkins to raise that percentage probably to 16, since the appropriation is to be reduced.

The proposal of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] would increase this general aggregate of 13.1 percent to 40 percent; and, in the opinion of 10 members of the Appropriations Committee who have signed a minority report, such an increase is unwise. We do not believe that the States or local communities which sponsor these projects should be required to pay such a large increase.

The Senator from South Carolina seems to think that one of the purposes of his amendment is to establish a policy of forcing the States and localities to reassume the burden they have heretofore carried in reference to relief matters. I quote from what the Senator himself said in the public press on June 3, 1937, just a few days ago. The following appeared in the Washington Post of June 3, 1937:

BYRNES will stage his major fight to require local communities able to put up at least 40 percent of their share of relief funds. "If this is done", said the South Carolinian, "it makes little difference how much actually is appropriated for relief." If the States and public and political subdivisions have to pay part of the costs, the money just won't have to be asked for and spent. Probably the 1938 relief expenditures could be held to $750,000,000.

So, Senators, we see the real purpose of this amendment. It is to reduce the $1,500,000,000 appropriation to what the Senator from South Carolina believes would be $750,000,000. Whether or not to do that is a question for Senators to decide.

The Senator from South Carolina talks about the President's message urging the balancing of the Budget. We have all read the President's message. He did send such a message to the Congress, and I am heartily in favor of balancing the Budget at the earliest possible moment. But when that message was sent to the Congress I believe the message dealing with the measure now under discussion had been sent to the Congress asking for a billion and one-half dollars and the unexpended balances for this year.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. It is my recollection that that message contained a recommendation that the sum should be fixed at $1,500,000,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is my recollection. So we find that the President has recommended the appropriation of $1,500,000,000 and the unexpended balances; not $750,000,000, with or without the unexpended balances. Of course, the question of the unexpended balances has been voted on and is behind us. The question now before us is whether we shall agree to the pending amendment, which will result in an appropriation for relief of $750,000,000, or whether we shall pass the joint resolution in the amount of one and a half billion dollars, as recommended by the President.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Is not the Senator also of the opinion that the States which are in greatest need of relief money, are the ones which will suffer most if the amendment should be agreed to, because, not being able to make the contribution required, they will get nothing?

Mr. McKELLAR. In my judgment, that is absolutely true. We do not know what will happen if the amendment shall be agreed to. As the President has stated time and again, and as almost every Member of this body has stated time and again, the question of relief is a national one. The only way in which we can deal with the question is nationally. We cannot deal with it in any other way. We have dealt with it for 5 years as a national question.

I now call attention to the fact that we have passed seven relief measures. On June 16, 1933, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $3,300,000,000. On February 15, 1934, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $950,000,000. On June 19, 1934, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $899,000,000. On June 19, 1934, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $525,000,000. On April 8, 1935, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $4,880,000,000. On June 22, 1936, we passed a measure providing for the appropriation of $1,425,000,000 and the unexpended balances—at that time an enormous sum, amounting to more than $1,000,000,000. On February 9, 1937, we appropriated an additional $789,000,000. Therefore, it will be seen that we are lessening the appropriations as times grow better.

The President has told us that if we appropriate the $1,500,000,000 now provided in the pending measure, relief will be cut down about one-third. The testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee showed that if we had lopped off the $200,000,000 of unexpended balances it would have meant cutting off 120,000 persons from W. P. A. rolls. If we agree to this amendment, and cut down the appropriation from $1,500,000,000 to $750,000,000, we shall deprive a great many more men of opportunity for employment. I think we should not do that. I think the President of the United States is right when he recommends a great lessening, by one-third, of the appropriation below that made last year; but that is as little as we can get along on. That was the evidence before the committee.

Mr. President, 10 members of the Appropriations Committee signed a report saying that they were opposed to this amendment, and I hope it will not be agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would not the adoption of the amendment really operate to penalize those communities which are in greatest need of work relief in the form of projects adopted for the purpose of giving work to people in the communities?

Mr. McKELLAR. In my judgment, unquestionably so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Not only do I have in mind many communities all over the United States, but I have especially in mind communities in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys where the cities and counties exhausted every possible resource they had in order to take care of the flood emergency that existed during the past winter. Some of them anticipated their revenues for the next 2 years in order to save lives and care for the people who were driven out of their homes and had their property destroyed by the floods. Of course, in most of those cases the limitation of debt has already been reached under the constitutions of the States and under the charters of the cities. In most of those places the limit of real-estate taxes has already been imposed on the people. So in order for them to obtain any money to put up either 40 percent or any other percentage which might be fixed as an arbitrary percentage, they would have to attempt to resort to expedients which they cannot use, because they have already exhausted their resources and cannot go any further into debt or increase taxation. Even if they could do so, they could only increase taxes upon real estate, which has been greatly damaged by the disaster to which I have already referred.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think the Senator from Kentucky is entirely correct. In substantiation of what he has said, I wish to read a telegram which I just received from the mayor of my city. I do not think the mayor of my city knew my attitude about the matter. Judging from what he says, I do not believe he did.

The telegram is addressed to me, dated Memphis, Tenn., June 14, 1937, and is as follows:

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 14, 1937.

Hon. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Senate Office Building:

I understand amendment has been offered to relief appropriation bill requiring cities to contribute 40 percent of the cost of all W. P. A. projects. Believe this will place a burden on cities which they cannot bear. In addition to W. P. A., cities are being called upon to take care of thousands of relief cases without Government aid. The entire relief load is being placed on Memphis with both State and Federal Governments withdrawing July 1. We cannot carry this load and contribute 40 percent to W. P. A. projects. The cities, through United States Conference of Mayors, have always urged that the Federal Government take care of the employables, and the local governments be responsible for unemployables. We cannot take the entire load of caring for unemployables and contribute 40 percent to caring for the employables under W. P. A.

WATKINS OVERTON, Mayor.

I also received a telegram from County Judge Will Cummings, of Chattanooga, as follows:

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 14, 1937.

Hon. K. D. MCKELLAR,
Senator, Washington D. C.:

Property of the State and counties, which now produces 85 percent of the collectible taxes, cannot stand any further tax burden. Therefore I want to protest against the State and county standing 40 percent of the cost of relief. Please do everything possible to prevent this being imposed on us.

WILL CUMMINGS, County Judge.

Those telegrams corroborate what the Senator from Kentucky has said. It is impossible for the local communities to carry the burden of looking after both unemployables and employables, and the National Government is now being asked to look after only the unemployables.

The President has sent in his message, the appropriation has been approved by the Department, and the need for the amount requested is confirmed by the testimony given the Appropriations Committee.

I wish to state further that leaving it to the discretion of the Administrator of the W. P. A. or even leaving it to the discretion of the President is not the perfect way of handling this matter. We all realize that to be so. I do not believe there is any perfect way of handling it. What we have got to do is to realize that it is a national question, and then lodge the authority somewhere so as to assure that the funds will be administered so as to relieve persons in need wherever they may be found throughout the United States. That is the truth of the matter. It can only be done by leaving the authority in the hands of the President.

Mr. President, I wish to say that I voted, as did the Senator from Colorado and the Senator from South Carolina, for the $3,300,000,000 appropriation, and in that act we left the fund to the President of the United States to be administered. All three of us voted for the $950,000,000 appropriation in 1934, and all the other relief appropriation bills, seven in number, which turned the funds over to the President to be administered. Have we made a mistake in so doing?

I was surprised a while ago at the argument of the Senator from South Carolina. I think practically every Democrat in the Congress less than a year ago made speeches upholding the W. P. A. and upholding the administration of the W. P. A. We said that it had done a good job. I still believe that it has done a good job, and I am wondering what has caused my distinguished friend who believed that it had done a good job last year to change his mind. I do not know the cause. I do not know of any evidence that came before the committee that the W. P. A. has not functioned in an excellent manner. I believe that the W. P. A. has done magnificent work, and I believe that its continuance is absolutely necessary. I do not believe that employables who are without work can be taken care of in any other way. I think the Government has done a grand job in carrying on this work. It is true we have appropriated a great deal of money; it is true we have given great authority to the President; but that authority has generally been used with great ability and outstanding success.

We have come a long way through the depression. Why change at this late day? Why do we want to reduce the amount of this appropriation? Why do we want to change the whole system by requiring the States to increase their contributions from a general average of 13.1 percent to 40 percent? It is not fair to the States and communities; it cannot be done. If it should be done, the result would be that communities which are rich enough would be able to obtain the money, and their employables would be taken care of, while the poorer States and communities would have to get along as best they could, and if they could not get along at all, then their unemployed would die, and that would be the end of it. That would not be fair. This is a national question, and the Government ought to treat it in a national manner; it ought to continue to use the funds throughout the entire Nation.

The Senator from South Carolina read a long list of bonds and referred to the enhancement of their value. I am proud of the fact that during the last 4 years the bonds of cities and States and the Government of the United States have all gone up in price. The bonds of the United States Government have gone up more than 20 percent. On the average they were quoted in the neighborhood of 87 cents on the dollar some years ago, while on the average they are now selling for about 119, and I believe have been as high as 120. The bonds of the Government were never more valuable than they are today.

I am glad State bonds and county bonds have gone up throughout the country, because it is an evidence of prosperity. However, there is no reason for voting for this amendment because the bonds of the Government and States and municipalities are better today than they previously were. A county cannot just go ahead and issue bonds when it wants to do so. It has to get the State legislature to authorize the bond issue. A State cannot issue bonds unless its legislature authorizes such issuance; and as I remember—I may be mistaken—in all but 10 or 12 of the States the legislatures have already adjourned, and most of them will not meet for 2 years. So how could they issue bonds? How could the counties, how could the municipalities issue bonds in States where the legislatures have adjourned?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is there any limit to the amount of bonds the Federal Government may issue?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know of any limitation. Does the Senator know of any?

Mr. VANDENBERG. I know of some in the law of economics.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought the Senator was talking about the law or the Constitution. There is no limit in the law or the Constitution. I may be mistaken, and I hope I am, but I suspected a political coloring in the question of the Senator from Michigan. I will say that 4 years and a little more ago the average value of Government bonds was somewhat less than 100 cents on the dollar; the average value of United States Government bonds today is a little less than 120 or a little more than 120. So it does not look as if we are endangering the Government bonds which have been issued, for they are more valuable than ever. The public thinks better of them than ever, and they are worth 20 cents more on the dollar than they were 4 years ago.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator will recall that a few days ago the Secretary of the Treasury asked for bids, or asked the American people to purchase $800,000,000 worth of Government obligations, and they were oversubscribed about 10 to 1. That shows that the credit of the United States has not suffered very greatly.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not believe the credit of the United States was ever better in all its history than it is at this very moment when we are talking.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, would the Senator seriously contend that an oversubscription of Government bonds under existing circumstances has any relation whatsoever to the intrinsic credit of the instrument?

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course it has.

Mr. McKELLAR. In my judgment, it has a great deal of relation to it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It reflects almost perfectly an inflationary spiral which leaves no other place for money to go.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not think there has been any inflationary spiral; I disagree with the Senator about that.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Referring for a moment to the question of the difficulty experienced by the States in borrowing funds, I should like to call the Senate's attention to the fact that 23 States in the Union have constitutional prohibitions against using the credit of the State for the issuance of bonds, and 38 States require a referendum to the people before public indebtedness may be incurred. Some indication of the terrific difficulty confronting numerous States is afforded by the fact that it is impossible for 23 States, without amending their constitutions, to borrow money and that great delay would be incurred in 38 States in which, if it were desired to issue bonds, the question would have to be referred to a referendum election of the people.

Mr. McKELLAR. In addition to that, the Governors of such States would have to call a meeting of the legislature. That would be extremely expensive and probably would be prohibitive in cost. I know if an election had to be held in addition to an extra session of the legislature the cost would be prohibitive.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. In connection with the rise in the price of municipal and State bonds, which have gone up along with other securities during the last 4 years, is it any guarantee because a certain outstanding city bond has gone up in price on the market that the city will be able to issue additional bonds in cases where it has already reached its limit, and even if it could issue bonds, if it had to submit the question to the people at a regular election, which could not be held until next November, would such a situation bring any relief?

Mr. McKELLAR. Instead of bringing relief it would be the very contrary.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are thousands of communities so situated all over this country.

Mr. McKELLAR. The suggestion was made awhile ago that the bonds of one of the States—I have forgotten which one—which had been selling for about 50 or 60 cents 4 years ago had gone up to $1.05, as I recall the figure, or something like that. That does not show that that particular State has the difference in money. Those bonds are held by private individuals; they have already been sold. The State, it is true, if it called its legislature in session and could get permission of its people to issue bonds, would probably get the prevailing price of $1.05, but it would have to go through a difficult procedure in order to get the benefit of this bill.

Why change the present arrangement which, I think I can say without exception, all of us less than 8 months ago were declaring was a good and proper method of handling the matter; that it was a good policy; that it was good business; and that it had brought prosperity to our country?

Why should we want to change it at this late day and adopt an entirely new method of arranging the distribution of these funds?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. I do not desire to discuss the merits, but merely to call the Senator's attention to the fact that there is a decided limitation to the argument which has been presented by the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Tennessee in reference to the limitations imposed on the issuance of bonds by States. A vast majority of the projects are not State projects, as may be ascertained by going through the list, so the argument as to State constitutions applies to a relatively small proportion of the projects. In my State the projects have largely been city projects, school-district projects, water-district projects, and there are practically no State projects.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know how it is in Colorado and I do not know what is the law there, but in Tennessee a city cannot issue bonds until authorized by the legislature to do so. A county cannot issue bonds until authorized by the legislature to do so. A school district cannot issue bonds until authorized to do so both by the county and the legislature, as I recall. They have to be authorized in any event. The Tennessee Legislature has adjourned. If we had to depend on a bond issue, it would deprive us entirely of any participation in the appropriation. I do not think it is fair to adopt a scheme that would foreclose some of the States and allow others more fortunately situated to get the money.

Mr. ADAMS. I am sure the Legislature of Tennessee in years past has done as our Legislature in Colorado has done, and passed a general law. In my State a city does not have to go back to the legislature in order to have a local election involving such matters. We have laws allowing school districts, cities, counties, and so forth, to issue bonds under certain conditions.

Mr. McKELLAR. In Tennessee we have to have special legislation to enable communities to issue bonds for any purpose, and the purpose must be stated, as I recall. That applies not only to cities, counties, and districts, but to all political subdivisions, whatever they may be.

Mr. ADAMS. Is there no general law authorizing the issuance of bonds?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; there is not.

Mr. ADAMS. That ought to keep the credit of Tennessee very good.

Mr. McKELLAR. We have fairly good credit in Tennessee notwithstanding that fact.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In further answer to the statement made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], I think the situation confronting the State governments with regard to increased indebtedness for relief purposes has a great deal to do with this situation if we view it from the point of view of the problem of taking care both of the employable and the unemployable. If the amendment operates, as I am convinced it will, to cripple the program carried on by the Federal Government for the employables, it means that an additional burden must revert to the States and localities. Therefore their ability to obtain money by borrowing is very important in considering the merits of the amendment if we view it from the point of view of men, women, and children who are involved.

Mr. McKELLAR. It seems to me the Senator from Wisconsin is entirely correct. I take exactly the same view. I believe the purpose of the Government was to save men, women, and children who had no employment, and those of them who now have no employment. I pray God that the time will soon come when it will not be necessary to furnish this kind of work relief, but that time has not as yet come. Since it has not come, why should we change our system? Why should we lose confidence in the Administrator who has made a good record, as it seems to me? Why should we lose confidence in our President who has made a wonderful record, as it seems to me? Why should we change and undertake to limit and hamstring the administration and reduce the appropriation by $750,000,000?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. The proportion of cities and school districts and counties in the United States which would be handicapped by this limitation is greater even than the proportion of the States themselves. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] referred to 38 out of the 48 States, but if he will take all of the cities and counties and school districts, which are, of course, much more numerous, it will be found that the proportion of those which would be handicapped because of these limitations is greater than in the case of the States.

Not only are they limited as to their ability to go into debt but they are limited as to the amount of taxes they may levy. In my State every county and city is limited in its tax rate to 50 cents on the hundred dollars except for certain road purposes, where they may, by a vote of the people, increase the taxes to provide a sinking fund for the payment of the debts incurred for road-building purposes. But if this amendment goes into the pending measure, it means that even those counties and cities and school districts which have not reached the limit of their indebtedness must delay until the middle of next winter before they can go through the necessary process to enable them to get the required money.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. HUGHES. In the State of Delaware no city, no town, no county, and not even the State itself can borrow money without special act of the legislature. Our legislature has adjourned and will not be in session again for 2 years; so we would be handicapped in applying for any of this money during that time because no one of the subdivisions of the State could borrow a cent without getting special authority from the legislature to do so.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has stated a situation which is exactly identical with the situation in the State of Tennessee.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator would not want those counties and cities to go through the process of taking a pauper's oath and coming to Washington with hat in hand asking for funds, would he?

Mr. HUGHES. Assuredly not.

Mr. McKELLAR. I want to make another suggestion along that line. It is true that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] provides in his amendment—

> Except that in any case in which the applicant for any such non-Federal project certifies in writing that it is unable to supply such 40 percent, the President is authorized, after investigation of the taxpaying capacity and credit of the applicant, to determine the maximum amount possible for such applicant to supply. The President shall furnish to the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives, upon the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July 1938 a list of cases in which less than 40 percent of the cost of non-Federal projects was furnished by applicants, together with a statement of the amount furnished by the applicants in each such case.

I know the Senator did not mean that he was not willing to trust the President's discretion in the matter and he does propose to give him the right to pass on individual cases; but, at the same time, he requires the President to certify in writing to the House and to the Senate as to his action. I do not think such a provision ought to be in the law. I do not think anything President Roosevelt has done concerning the whole relief problem should subject him to the implications contained in that part of the amendment. I do not think any State or any county or any subdivision should be required to come here, hat in hand, and make a pauper's oath, for that is exactly what it means.

The appropriation made in the pending joint resolution, the President has said and the Administrator has said, should be $1,500,000,000, and the unexpended balances of $200,000,000 should be reappropriated. I think the Senate ought to vote down the amendment, just as yesterday it voted down the amendment in reference to unexpended balances. I hope the Senate will vote that way.

My own judgment is that a perfectly splendid job has been done by the Works Progress Administration. There may be instances of mistakes being made, but that happens in any large undertaking of this kind. I do not think anything has been done that any man responsible for it should be ashamed of, and accordingly I am asking the Senate to vote down the pending amendment.

I ask leave to have printed at the conclusion of my remarks some excerpts from the report filed by the minority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

> In other words, the meaning of this amendment is that while 40 percent is established, that if any State, county, or municipality or other organization entitled to receive relief is willing to take the pauper's oath, and if the President finds that they are paupers, he can reduce the amount of their contribution. The minority members do not approve of this policy. They do not believe it is fair or just. They believe that the policy already established by the President is a much better rule for fixing the amount of relief that local sponsors must put up than the rule set up in this amendment.
>
> In the committee it was argued that the reason of the amendment was that New York City paid only one-half of 1 percent and that New York paid only 7.2 percent, while some States, like Idaho, paid 28.3 percent, Wyoming 26.7 percent, Tennessee 26.6 percent, and others smaller amounts. The average for the country as a whole was 13.1 percent. The answer to this was furnished by Mr. Hopkins in a table comparing New York to South Carolina, showing that in all relief work in 1933 to 1936 New York and its local organizations put up 37.6 percent, while the Federal Government put up 62.4 percent; that during the same period South Carolina and its local organizations put up 9.6 percent, while the Federal Government put up 90.4 percent. Taking 1936 only, it was shown that New York State and localities put up 36.9 percent, while the Federal Government put up 63.1 percent, and that South Carolina State and local put up 17.1 percent, while the Federal Government put up 82.9 percent.
>
> The truth of the matter is that when you examine all figures, when you take into consideration the difference in the number and extent of relief, it has been and it will be, in the opinion of your committee, absolutely impossible to obtain a rule that will work with absolute fairness, but that the rule adopted by the President has been just as fair and just as any rule that could be adopted, and it will be much more fair and just than the rule proposed by the Senator from South Carolina.
>
> Again, many State legislatures which have met this year have adjourned and will not meet for 1 or 2 years.
>
> DEBT LIMITATIONS LOCAL
>
> Many cities and counties cannot issue bonds unless specially authorized by the legislature. In this situation it is going to be difficult, extremely difficult, for many States, counties, and cities to take advantage of relief at all, and the result will be, as Senator BYRNES argued in the newspapers, that these States will not be able to receive relief, and there will be a large saving to the Government. He estimates it at $750,000,000. Well, if we did not pass the bill at all the Government would save $1,500,000,000. In the minds of the minority members of this committee, whether the Byrnes amendment should be adopted is simply whether Senators believe in a relief bill that will apply to some States and will not apply to others, that will apply to some types of needy workers and not others, whether they believe that relief ought to be cut down and in a partial and unfair way; whether Senators believe that the President has unfairly and unjustly carried out his official duties in disposing of the moneys previously appropriated and turned over to him for distribution for relief.
>
> Effects of arbitrary requirement for matching Federal Works Progress Administration funds
>
> The proposal that State and local governments be required to meet an arbitrary fixed proportion of the cost of Works Progress Administration projects is administratively unworkable and inconsistent with the objectives of the program. The following considerations form the basis for this conclusion:
>
> 1. The national character of the unemployment problem, its independence of State and local boundaries, and the inability of local governments to control or adjust its causes make it unwise for the Federal Government to enact legislation which would, in effect, limit or entirely eliminate Federal assistance to the needy unemployed in many communities for reasons which neither the individuals nor the communities can control.
>
> 2. Most Works Progress Administration projects are sponsored by local governments—cities, towns, counties, and school districts. The same factors which make Federal assistance necessary require that the Work Progress Administration program be adjusted to the total number of unemployed persons in need of relief and the financial ability of each individual community.
>
> Usually the localities faced with the heaviest unemployment and relief problems are those whose financial resources are most severely depleted, and under a matching policy Federal aid would be restricted where it is needed most.
>
> 3. If sponsors are required on all projects which they undertake to provide 40 percent of the funds, they will, in most cases, desire that the funds so contributed shall be spent on materials and equipment for construction projects. Projects such as sewing rooms, which are designed to employ needy women, could not be operated. The same is true of projects of the National Youth Administration, which help keep needy youth in schools. Universities and schools which sponsor these projects will in most cases be unable to meet this requirement. There are thousands of projects which provide work for clerks and people trained in professions requiring few materials and taking care of needy groups which are too often overlooked. Most of these projects would have to be terminated.
>
> 4. The chief source of revenue of local governments is the real-property tax. Unless they could increase property-tax collections or borrow, these local governments would be unable to match Federal expenditures.
>
> In many instances the tax rate has reached the maximum allowed by State law. In others new taxes would simply increase delinquencies and would yield little additional revenue.
>
> Depreciated property valuations have already restricted local revenue from this source; the levy of additional property taxes would result in still further deflation of values, increase rents, and discourage the construction of new homes, stores, and factories, which is vital to the recovery of the building industry.
>
> 5. Many localities which might be willing to borrow in order to match Federal funds would be unable to do so because there is no ready market for their bonds or because their debt already has reached the legal maximum in their State.
>
> 6. A few State governments are in a position to help their localities somewhat in meeting a Federal matching requirement, but the great majority of them could not do it at this time. All but 10 or 11 State legislatures have adjourned, and most of them will not meet again in regular session until 1939. By the end of this month it is expected that the few legislatures now in session will have adjourned. Furthermore, the borrowing power of the State government is limited by most State constitutions.

7. The net result of an arbitrary matching requirement would be a complete shut-down of the Works Progress Administration program in many areas of the country where large numbers of families are destitute and without other means of support; in others it would mean the wholesale elimination of desirable projects which now comprise integral parts of local construction programs.

8. A transition period is a prerequisite to the adoption of any matching principle. The States must be given time to strengthen their administrative relationships with local governments, to review and revamp their revenue systems, and to test the yield from augmented tax levies.

9. At the present time the Federal Government, through administrative action in each locality, is attempting to equalize Works Progress Administration costs without denying Federal help to impoverished communities. Federal funds are being used to pay the wages of needy project employees plus a small allowance for materials and other nonlabor costs sufficient to provide a program of useful projects. Sponsors are required to defray costs in excess of the Federal contribution. Under this policy employment can be provided on inexpensive projects in even the most severely depressed areas. More costly projects are operated in localities which can economically afford the additional costs. The needy unemployed are not penalized by the financial circumstances of the local governments under which they live.

It is true that Senator BYRNES, instead of absolutely shutting down on the present method of conducting relief on July 1, has modified his amendment so as to begin its operation on October 1, but this does not meet the situation.

The debt-incurring power of local governments is limited by constitution or statute in almost every State. These limitations usually apply only to tax-supported bonds. As a result of recent legislation, debt limits in most States are not applicable to bonds which have no recourse to tax funds and are payable only from the revenues of publicly owned utilities.

Limitations may restrict the amount of bonds issued to a specified percentage of the assessed valuation of taxable property or may restrict the rate of tax that may be levied to service outstanding obligations. Some local governments are subject to both types of limitations. It may frequently happen that a local government which has voted bonds is unable to dispose of them because prospective purchasers are doubtful that the rate of tax which the locality can levy will yield a sufficient sum to meet principal and interest payments.

Each local bond issue in some States must be authorized by a special act of the State legislature. Where constitutional limitations prevail, an increase in the limitation would require constitutional amendment—a lengthy process. Limitations set by statute can be changed only by action of the legislature. Revision of limitations written into city charters would in every case require the same formality as the original adoption of these charters.

State governments are even more restricted in their borrowing than are local governments. Most of them can readily increase debt to repel invasion or suppress insurrection, but not for other purposes.

Only 10 States can borrow by action of the legislature. The constitutions of 38 States require referendum approval or constitutional amendment to authorize borrowing in excess of very small amounts to meet casual deficits. How small these debts are that can be incurred without legislative or referendum approval or constitutional change is indicated by the fact that the maximum in Maryland, Oregon, and Rhode Island is $50,000, and in most other States is $1,000,000 or less.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, there is one phase of the so-called Byrnes amendment which has not been commented upon, and which I think deserves some consideration.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], in vindication of the committee amendment, has shown that there is considerable discrepancy in the contributions made by the different States. The amendment which he proposed in the committee, however, and which the committee has adopted, does not undertake to equalize the contributions by the various States. It does not undertake to strike an average and to provide that the average local contribution toward the cost of non-Federal projects in the different States shall be a certain percent. The Senator has shown, for instance, that down to and through the year 1936 the average of local contributions by States has been 13.1 percent; but the committee amendment proposes that a requirement of 40 percent of local funds shall be put into each and every project, regardless of the type of the project. Experience in the practical operation of the W. P. A. administration has demonstrated that there are certain types of projects that will properly and readily command much larger local contributions than other types of projects.

In the hearings of the House committee, on page 166, appears a list of these different types of projects, showing how much Federal funds have been contributed and how much sponsors' funds have been contributed. The average of sponsors' funds, as I have stated, is 13.1 percent. With respect to these sponsors' funds, however, as they relate to highways, roads, and streets, the average is 16.1 percent, considerably above the general average. The average of local contributions with reference to public buildings is 17 percent. The average of sponsors' funds contributed to the type of projects designated as sewer systems and other municipal facilities is 17.1 percent.

On the other hand, there is another type of project where the local contribution is necessarily very low. Such are the "white collar" projects, which take in the educational, recreational, professional, and clerical relief aid. The average contribution, insofar as "white collar" projects are concerned, is only 6.7 percent.

There is another class of projects, characterized as the women's projects, which embrace sewing, canning, and other activities in which women may be engaged. The local contribution in respect to such projects is properly and necessarily much lower than in the case of other types of projects. The average for women's projects is only 4.9 percent.

That also is true in reference to some projects connected with sanitation and health. In the elimination of stream pollution, for example, the local contribution is 5.6 percent. In the case of mosquito eradication it is 3.3 percent. Furthermore, if we take into consideration the types of projects that as a class require larger local contributions than the ones to which I just referred it will be discovered that there are among the high-class projects certain types that necessarily require a lower local contribution.

For instance, in the subclassification of grade-crossing eliminations, under the general classification of highways, roads, and streets, the local contribution is 1½ percent. In the case of housing and demolition, under the classification of public buildings, the local contribution is 1.6 percent; and so on down the list of types of projects furnished by the Administrator.

The committee amendment under discussion overlooks the absolute necessity of making a distinction between types of projects. It requires that, regardless of the character of the project, 40 percent shall be contributed locally on each and every project.

A 40-percent requirement, as it must be apparent to every Senator, would wipe out at once all the women's projects and all of the "white collar" projects unless they are to come within the exception to the rule.

If we consider the proviso in reference to the exception to the rule, it seems to me it must be apparent that in a sensible, just, sound administration of the whole W. P. A. program there will necessarily be more projects that will fall within the exception than projects that will fall within the rule. That is true not only in reference to the type of project but it is true by reason of other conditions—the financial ability of the State or the political subdivision or the community to make the contribution; considerations as to the requirements for relief in a particular community, and the absolute necessity of going forward with the program of relief in that particular community.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DUFFY in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. I am sure the broad classification of types of projects which the Senator has mentioned could be carried still further if we had a more complete analysis.

For instance, in Alabama in 1929 there was a very disastrous flood which almost wiped out a small town called Elba. We sought in vain to obtain relief under the old system to protect the people of that community. We were never able to get it until W. P. A. began its work. The result was that the little town of Elba, which was wholly unable to make any substantial contribution of any kind, has a levee built around it which protects it from the floods caused by the overflow of a navigable stream.

If it had been required that the town of Elba put up as much as 5 percent of the cost, the people living there would still be in dread and fear every spring of the floods which always come. However, since no matching program was provided, relief money has been spent which it was necessary to spend anyway in the condition that existed; and although the stream rose to very great heights a short time ago the people who live in Elba were safe. They would not have been safe if there had been a 40-percent requirement.

I call the attention of the Senator to that matter for the reason that other places where there is a great deal of wealth might be able to contribute 15 percent, or 20 percent, or 40 percent, but not places such as Elba, which would continue to be unprotected if there were a 40-percent requirement.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator a moment?

Mr. BLACK. Yes.

Mr. OVERTON. What could Elba do in reference to contributing work for women who are poverty-stricken and in need and can get employment in sewing circles? What could Elba do in that connection? Could it put up 40 percent of the cost of the project?

Mr. BLACK. Of course not. It would be wholly impossible for towns of that size to put up 40 percent.

Mr. OVERTON. There is not only an Elba in Alabama, but there are throughout the United States thousands of Elbas that are in exactly the same situation so dramatically described by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

It has been said by the proponents of this amendment that an exception is provided to the general rule of 40 percent. An exception has been provided because the proponents of the amendment are bound to know that an absolute, fixed rule of 40 percent would be totally impracticable; and I say that the rule providing for the exception is impracticable. There will be more applications to come within the exception than there will be communities that will apply to come within the rule.

What is going to be the result from a practical standpoint? One community after another will make application to be permitted to make a smaller percentage of local contribution; and what does the committee amendment prescribe? That the President of the United States shall take up each one of these applications; that he shall undertake to police and to audit the finances of the community; that the President of the United States, either himself or through someone he may delegate, shall say to community A, "You must levy an additional tax at such-and-such a rate"; to another community, "You will be absolved from the payment of any additional taxes." If the provision contained in the committee amendment is properly and faithfully carried out, the President will have to make a careful and conscientious investigation into the financial credit and responsibility of all the different applicants, and the result will be an almost interminable delay; and in any relief program what we want to avoid is delay.

What would have happened to the stricken community of Elba, referred to by the Senator from Alabama, if its citizens had been called upon to await the determination whether or not additional taxes must be levied, or whether they were able constitutionally to levy additional taxes in order to provide for relief? Are such communities throughout the United States to wait week after week and month after month until a Presidential order has been issued directing exactly what the particular community must do before the ill-fed, and the ill-clad, and ill-housed, and the starving in the community can get relief?

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I invite the attention of the Senator to another Elba in this country, the town in which I live on the Ohio River. Many homes were washed away in the recent great flood there. Now, there is an effort to establish a small local housing community and move the people affected from the banks of the river to the high ground. A W. P. A. project was started; it was approved by the W. P. A. engineers in Indiana, and the plan came to Washington. The engineers here examined and approved it, the financial officers approved it, the directors approved it, and the janitor policed it. Then the proposal went to the Budget Bureau, and the Budget Bureau looked into it and approved it. It went back to the President, and the President approved it. Then it went to the Comptroller General's office, and after going through all the ramifications of that great office, it finally met approval there. Now it goes back to the W. P. A., and if we add another obstacle, such as that to which the Senator refers, the time may come when they never will get relief under W. P. A.

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let me suggest to the Senator that not only will the delay he has so well illustrated occur, but under the proposed amendment, in order that the President may pass on the financial ability of the people and upon the merits of the situation, he will have to send someone to a town like Elba, or a town like the one in Indiana, to have an investigation made, which will take quite a while.

Mr. OVERTON. He will need constitutional lawyers to go into the question as to whether or not a community can constitutionally impose any taxes; he will need expert auditors in order to determine the financial credit of the different communities, he will require all sorts of expert advice before he can finally arrive at a proper conclusion.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. Let me first finish this thought. If he goes into it properly, as the amendment contemplates—and certainly it contemplates that the President will give conscientious consideration to every community that makes application to come within the exception—it will be necessary for him to have a number of experts and to have conducted a long investigation of the condition of each applicant in order that he may arrive at a proper decision.

Mr. McKELLAR. And we will have to make another appropriation to do it.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield now?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Is it not true that Mr. Hopkins appeared before the Committee on Appropriations when both the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Tennessee were present, and stated that at the present time and under the present procedure he has on his staff bond experts, authorities on municipal taxation, and others familiar with conditions in cities and counties, in order to advise him as to their financial condition? So he is in a position now to ascertain quickly how much the sponsors can contribute? Is not that a fact?

Mr. OVERTON. That is true; but that is not the character of experts who would be required in the application of this amendment.

Mr. BURKE. What difference would there be?

Mr. OVERTON. He has experts, a general staff of experts to give him general advice, and there are experts in different States, I dare say, who give him a bird's-eye view of the whole situation. But there is no rule now fixed for a 40-percent contribution, and when a community comes forward and says, "We ought to be exempted from this 40-percent exaction", the only ground for exempting them is a demonstration to the satisfaction of the President that they have neither the taxpaying capacity nor the credit to meet the exaction. Then the committee amendment contemplates, if it contemplates anything at all, that there will be a much closer scrutiny, and a much more careful investigation, and a much more expert finding than the one referred to by Mr. Hopkins in his testimony.

Mr. BURKE. The present rule is that each sponsor is required to contribute all that it can properly contribute. The Senator does not mean to say, does he, that the determination of that question is arrived at in a slipshod, easygoing manner, so that a city or a county or a school district may get by because the authorities have not made such careful examination as is necessary to enable them to know whether or not the applicants are telling the truth?

Mr. OVERTON. No; I do not say it is determined in a slipshod way; but the Senator overlooks one important consideration when it comes to ascertaining what shall be done in a community presently. The labor requirements are taken into consideration, as well as the financial responsibility; and when we undertake to apply this 40-percent rule, it will be applied to every project, regardless of labor conditions or other considerations, such as the number of people there may be in the community who are in destitute circumstances, whether or not they have been recently visited by some calamity, whether there is drought, or whether there is flood, or whether there is a total or almost total failure of the food and clothing supply. The only way they can take part in this relief program is to put up 40 percent of the relief funds which are given for the community, or else apply to the President of the United States and show, through expert testimony and otherwise, that they are financially unable to meet the 40-percent requirement.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would not that very requirement and that circumstance lead to infinite jealousies among cities and communities, if the President, exercising the soundest possible discretion based upon any investigation he might make, said that one city could put up 20 percent, and another one 40, and another one 5, or perhaps another none at all? That would give rise to all manner of charges of favoritism and partiality, which ought not be involved in a program of this sort.

Mr. OVERTON. I think the Senator from Kentucky is correct in making that observation.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. OVERTON. Let me complete my answer. The Senator from South Carolina says that today the mayor of Spartanburg comes in and gets as much relief funds as a mayor can possibly get with as little local contribution as possible, because if he does not do it, the mayor of some other city will have done it, and his constituents then will think that he ought to have done the same thing. He does not, by his amendment, remove the difficulty, because the mayor of Spartanburg is going to come in and say, "I want an exception made. I am entitled to come in under less than a 40-percent rule", and he will so contend, not, perhaps, because the community cannot put up the 40 percent but because some other municipality has come within the exception, and, in the language of the Senator from South Carolina, he has to make a good showing to his constituents.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield now?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Will the Senator from Louisiana or the Senator from Kentucky explain why there would be any more rivalry or hard feeling or dissatisfaction under the proposal to impose in the first instance a prima facie requirement for 40 percent, than there will under the present system? One municipality or county or other sponsor now is enabled to get a project by contributing one-half of one percent or nothing, while some other community contributes 40 or 50 percent. How are we going to add to the jealousies and rivalries and hard feelings of communities by saying to them all in the first instance, "Instead of leaving this to the judgment of an employee of the Federal Government, we are going to ask you to make a contribution of 40 percent. If you cannot do it, come in and make a showing, and we will have you given what the evidence shows you ought to get."

Mr. OVERTON. Let me say, in answer to the Senator's question, that I did not make that statement, but I said that the committee amendment does not remove the difficulty that was suggested by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that connection I will say also that the requirements under the present system are informal. They are not hedged about by any hard and fast rule of law. The question of legality does not necessarily enter into it. The Administrator, through such investigations as he can make, takes into consideration the financial condition of the people, the treasury of the community, whether it is a school board or a county or a city, and, by mutual understanding and agreement, he arrives at what he considers a fair proportion of the total expense.

That is quite different from establishing a hard-and-fast rule of 40 percent, which can be escaped only by having the mayor or the chairman of the school board or the executive officer of a county come in and make oath or make some representation that from all standpoints—legal, financial, and otherwise—they cannot comply with the 40-percent requirement.

The Senator from South Carolina earlier in the day suggested that it was customary for mayors of cities to pad the relief rolls in order to make a big showing of unemployment in order to get projects. I am sure the Senator from South Carolina did not intend to say just that. We all know that mayors of cities have nothing to do with making up the relief rolls. The relief rolls in every county and every community are certified by a nonpartisan, impartial committee. The mayor is not on it. The mayor does not dominate it, nor does any other officer dominate it. It is not fair to any mayor, who has nothing to do with it, to say that he would pad his relief rolls in order to make a showing for a project that might be obtained in his community. It is not done in that way.

Mr. OVERTON. I agree with the Senator from Kentucky. My main purpose in rising, Mr. President, was to call attention to the different types of projects, and to show that certain projects necessarily require much more local contributions than others; that some projects necessarily require a great deal less of local contributions than do other projects; and that if any rule is to be adopted so as to avoid the apparent discrepancy in contributions by States, the rule ought to provide for a break-down by States, as, for instance, requiring that an average of a certain percent of the total cost of all the projects in each State shall be supplied in each State from non-Federal funds.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I desire to ask the Senator whether his view is that all contributions by States for the unemployed in the form of relief or work relief should be considered and not only one classification, such as W. P. A.?

Mr. OVERTON. I think so. I think there is a great deal in the suggestion made by the Senator from New York. But if we are going to have a uniformity of contribution by States it ought not to be broken down into projects, but the break-down ought to be by States.

So far as I am concerned, I look upon this whole problem as national in character, as one of national relief. I believe that Uncle Sam should provide for relief where relief is needed, and that there cannot very well be any hard-and-fast rule, and especially there cannot be a rule requiring a fixed percentage of local contributions by projects.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, at the outset I should like to make my position clear concerning the relief resolution now under consideration. I regard the appropriation of $1,500,000,000 on the basis of 12 months for the next fiscal year as totally inadequate to meet the problem confronting those who are employable but who are unable to secure employment in private enterprise.

In this connection I wish to call attention to the fact that I have just received information which indicates that on the basis of an appropriation of $1,500,000,000 for the next fiscal year, instructions have been issued to cut the quotas in every State in the Union by July 15. The total cuts which will take place within the next month, proportionately distributed over every State in the Union, amount to 378,219 persons who are now working on projects carried on under the Works Progress Administration. If we bear in mind that according to Mr. Hopkins' own admission before the Appropriations Committees of the House and the Senate there are 350,000 persons eligible and employable who have been certified for W. P. A. employment and who have never been given employment, we get some appreciation of the inadequacy of this appropriation.

I do not desire to burden the Senate by reading the reduction in quotas which will take place in all the States by the 15th of July next, but Alabama, for example, will have a reduction of 5,377 persons; Idaho, 1,957; Kentucky, 8,464; Michigan, 8,165; Massachusetts, 21,511; Tennessee, 5,253; Wisconsin, 6,254.

Mr. President, I contend that there is not a Senator present who believes that these employables who will be severed from the W. P. A. rolls within the next 30 days, have any chance of obtaining private employment. It is inevitable that these employables will be dumped back upon the meager direct-relief systems of the various localities.

I ask unanimous consent to have inserted at the conclusion of my remarks, a table giving the figures to which I have referred.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In resisting the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina, I do not want to be understood to be taking the position that the appropriation now under consideration is adequate.

Mr. President, one of the chief arguments, as I understood it, advanced by the Senator from South Carolina in his speech sponsoring his amendment, was that recovery had taken place and that, therefore, we were in a position to abandon the Federal Government's activities, or at least drastically to curtail them in the field of relief and employment.

The fact is that the partial recovery has not reabsorbed the unemployed. There has been a 29-percent decline in the relief cases from the peak of January 1935 to March 1937. Unemployment during the same period, according to the American Federation of Labor figures, has declined 24 percent, from 12,364,000 to 9,429,000. Since February 1936 the number on works program declined over 1,000,000, or 26 percent, while unemployment declined over 2,100,000, or 19 percent. It is therefore clear that the works program employment has declined relatively more than total unemployment. The primary reason for the level of relief at the present time is due to the large number of unemployed. There are a number of reasons why unemployment continues at an estimated seven to nine millions.

In the first place, new persons seeking employment each year, according to Mr. Hopkins' estimates, number 500,000. In other words, since 1929 4,000,000 young men and women seeking employment have come of employment age.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a net figure after deducting all those who have died and have retired because of age.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator is correct. It is a net figure.

Another reason for this apparent discrepancy between the rise in production and the continuation of a high level of relief load is the fact that, according to the best estimates available, the productivity of labor employed in manufacturing has increased 25 percent in the last 6 years. Obviously, unless total output increases accordingly, unemployment will result from these technological changes.

An additional reason is the fact that the hours of work of those persons employed in manufacturing have increased approximately 20 percent in the last 2½ years. This has made it possible to increase production without a corresponding increase in employment.

Therefore, Mr. President, so far as the men, women, and children who are vitally involved in the question of the amount of money to be provided for the W. P. A. program are concerned, recovery has not come for them. Recovery may have come for those who are concerned with finding ways and means of avoiding or evading their just income taxes; it may have come for the coupon clippers; but it has not reached that section of the population which this program has been designed from the beginning to reach.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] stated that he did not believe his amendment, if adopted, would result in reducing the total amount available for the works program. He indicated that he thought it would be possible for cities, counties, and other subdivisions to increase their contributions. In this connection, Mr. President, despite all the propaganda, I think it is well for us to bear in mind that since 1933 the total contributions of municipalities, counties, and States to meet the problem of unemployment relief have increased 400 percent. According to W. P. A. figures in 1933 State and local funds spent amounted to $338,800,000; by 1936 their contribution toward meeting the problem had risen to $1,245,000,000. This was a major achievement for W. P. A. and the State and local governments. It is a complete answer to the argument that the participation of the Federal Government has resulted in shifting the entire burden upon it.

The Senator from South Carolina also advanced the proposition that the bonds of municipalities and States have improved in price; that many of them, in fact, are selling above par, whereas in 1933 they were selling far below par. One of the primary reasons why municipal, county, and State securities have recovered from the depression low is because the Federal Government, with its broader tax base, has helped to lift some of the crushing load of unemployment relief and work relief from the backs of the municipalities, counties, and States.

It was during the period when the Hoover philosophy prevailed that the National Government should not extend aid to meet this national emergency that most municipalities, counties, and States had their financial foundations undermined in attempting to carry the staggering unemployment relief load.

Mr. President, it has also been suggested that the provision in the pending joint resolution permitting the revolving fund of the Public Works Administration to be made available for 2 more years for Public Works Administration projects should be taken into consideration in connection with the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina. I have been an ardent advocate of the Public Works program, and I believe that the projects which it has enabled counties, cities, and municipalities to undertake and complete are of lasting benefit to those communities, and that they have added to the total national wealth. Nevertheless, I think we should keep in mind that, according to the table furnished to the House committee, and to be found on page 115 of the House hearings, the largest number of persons employed at any one time since 1935 directly on Public Works Administration projects was 171,000 in June 1936, whereas at that same time there were under the Works Progress Administration 2,249,000 persons employed on its program.

So, while I am as happy as is any other Senator to see the Public Works Administration program carried forward through the employment of the revolving fund, I think it is obvious that we cannot rely upon this expenditure to take up the load from the rolls of the Works Progress Administration.

Something has been said in this debate about the incentive which mayors have to pad the relief rolls in order that they may secure projects. I should like to point out, Mr. President, that it was not the mayors and it was not the Governors who suggested that the Federal administration should withdraw from the field of direct relief. The step was taken upon the recommendation of the President of the United States, and at the time the withdrawal was announced it was stated that the Federal Government would assume responsibility for the employables and that the local units of Government and the States must assume responsibility for the unemployables. At the time the W. P. A. was inaugurated there were many mayors who were unalterably opposed to it because they did not believe that the financial condition of their communities would permit them adequately to care for the unemployables.

The Federal Government has never carried out its promise and never attained the announced objective made at the time the W. P. A. was inaugurated, and there are still at least 350,000 persons who have been certified as employable who, along with the unemployables, are being cared for by local units of government because the Works Program has never been sufficiently large to absorb them. So I do not think that we are in a position logically to attack the mayors of the country for creating this division of responsibility. Nor do I think we are in any position to charge them with maladministration or ulterior motives. I want some specific proof that the mayors were responsible for having padded or increased the rolls of those certified for employment upon the Works Progress Administration program.

Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina also said, if I heard him correctly, that the amounts spent for direct relief were not relevant to the questions involved in his amendment. I was rather shocked to hear the Senator from South Carolina make that statement.

I thought that in 1933 the Federal Government had accepted the fundamental and basic proposition that the problem of unemployment was a national problem and that we must view it as a national problem. Mr. President, in my opinion, the amount spent by a community to care for its unemployables and for those employables who have not been absorbed by the Works Progress Administration program is a very relevant subject of consideration and discussion in connection with the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina. The enormous sums of money, for example, which the city of New York has raised by taxation for the purpose of caring for its unemployables by direct relief is very pertinent when the ability of that community to provide additional sums of money for some other purpose is under consideration. In deciding upon the ability of New York City to provide more revenue from taxation one must consider the taxes now levied for direct relief and for every other purpose.

If the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina should be adopted, one of the first questions that would arise would be the amount of money which the city of New York, for example, was providing for the direct-relief program in measuring its ability to pay under the W. P. A. program.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that connection it might be interesting to state at this time the amount contributed by the State of New York for 1936 alone in connection with the care of the unemployed. That sum was $282,000,000. The total amount spent in New York State for the calendar year 1936 was $764,000,000, of which $482,000,000 was contributed by the Federal Government and $282,000,000 by the State of New York, amounting to 36.9 percent of the total amount spent in that State during the year.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. In connection with the Senator's statement that unemployment is a national problem I invite his attention to the fact that at least one party in 1936 stated, in language which cannot be misunderstood, that it was a national problem. Here is the language of the Democratic National Platform in 1936 on that point:

> Unemployment: We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable obligation of our Government to meet it in a national way.

I invite the Senator's attention to that language in connection with his statement that unemployment is a national problem.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I thank the Senator for calling my attention to the platform. I remember that provision of it.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. A good deal has been said during the debate about padding relief rolls. I inquire of the Senator if he knows whether any member of the Appropriations Committee or anyone else has taken steps to have incorporated in the pending joint resolution a provision suspending Federal payments in the event of evidence of padded relief rolls on the part of any State, city, or municipality?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not know that any such provision is contained in the joint resolution.

Mr. WALSH. Would not that be the practical way of stopping it?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not believe the rolls are padded. I believe that on the whole very careful investigations have been made of individual applicants. It is my understanding, and I know it is true in my State, as I assume it is in every other State, that before an individual can secure certification he is most carefully investigated.

It is my understanding that the financial situation of each applicant is very exhaustively investigated. It is also my information that recently, that is within the past year, the W. P. A. rolls were reinvestigated to make certain that eligibility under the rules and regulations was established.

Mr. WALSH. My inquiry was made because of the repeated assertion here that such a practice prevails. I am pleased to have the Senator's view that he does not coincide with that assertion. It seems to me if it has occurred in the past or is likely to occur in the future, now and in this joint resolution steps should be taken to stop it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I have no doubt there have been instances of people who have gotten on the rolls through misrepresentation or through error, but taking into consideration the size of the program I am convinced that a thorough investigation by an impartial agency would not disclose any substantial number of people working on W. P. A. who are not eligible for employment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I had in mind stating what the Senator has just stated better than I could, and that is that in my judgment, while there might have been some individual instances of persons getting on the roll who should not have been there, yet I am quite certain that the Administrator of this agency, Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, has used every endeavor within his power to prevent any such thing, that he has not in any way connived at it or known about it, and whenever any such instances have been brought to his attention he has taken the most stringent measures to correct them.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I should like also to point out that the very fact that at least 350,000 persons eligible for W. P. A. are now being cared for on direct relief by municipalities, because of the fact that the W. P. A. program has never been big enough to absorb them, creates strong pressure upon local authorities to ferret out any individuals on the W. P. A. program who are not there properly in order that places may be made for those who have never had an opportunity to be employed, although they have been certified as being eligible.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, as the Senator knows and as we all know, it is easy to make a charge that somebody is on a relief roll who ought not to be there. I receive letters frequently, as I am satisfied other Senators do, from people who are complaining that somebody else got on the relief roll and they did not, and that they are more deserving than those who got on the roll. Of course such things cannot be avoided.

I have no doubt that in some instances people go through the sifter and get on the rolls who are no more deserving than others who do not get on the rolls; but to say there is any wholesale padding or any conspiracy among responsible local officers to pad the relief rolls in order to get projects adopted in their communities is a serious indictment of the people of any community over which a mayor or any such officer presides.

My experience has been that there are many communities which would like to have a project in the way of a schoolhouse or some other public building, who are unable to get it because there is not sufficient relief labor on the rolls to justify the establishment of a project of that sort. We all have complaints of that nature, and we know the administrator has sought to adhere as strictly as possible under the circumstances to the requirement that the projects must be completed by relief labor in the community where they are being constructed.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I think the Senator is absolutely correct. I submit there is no evidence and no proof that relief rolls have been padded for the purpose of securing projects. I submit, on the other hand, that it is my own experience, and I believe it is that of a great many other Senators, that a very conscientious effort is being made by the certifying agencies in the respective States to make certain that those who are certified as eligible to be employed upon the W. P. A. program do qualify so far as the rules and regulations governing need are concerned.

Mr. President, as I started to say a few moments ago, I thought that in 1933 we fought out the issue of whether this is a Nation-wide problem and whether unemployment should be regarded from the national point of view.

I thought it was fought out again in 1936. I did not believe we should again be confronted with a question as to whether or not Nation-wide unemployment, and the problems flowing from it, were a responsibility in part of the Federal Government.

I know it will be said that this amendment is not predicated upon the theory that unemployment relief is a problem solely of the States and localities; but I do contend, regardless of the intent of those who advance it—and I grant that their motives were of the highest—that the adoption of this amendment would be a step in the direction of fixing upon the localities, counties, and States the sole responsibility for meeting this Nation-wide problem of unemployment, because the amendment sets up as its objective that communities shall meet a certain percentage of the cost of providing work on W. P. A. projects. The standard set in the amendment is 40 percent.

Mr. President, that is a step which we cannot afford to take. As I suggested a few moments ago, we are dealing here not alone with dollars and cents and percentages. The people who are on the receiving end of this program, so to speak, are flesh and blood. What we do here will affect millions of homes all over the United States. To say, as I contend this amendment does say, that every community should pay 40 percent of the cost of the Works Progress Administration program unless it can prove its inability to do so, is to set up a standard of measuring the financial ability of the community rather than the need of the men and women and children who, through no fault of their own, are in destitute circumstances.

I know it is said that there is in this amendment a provision that the President may make an investigation, and, if he finds that a community is unable to meet the standard set in the amendment, that exceptions may be made.

Nevertheless, it seems to me to be clear that the inevitable effect of adopting this amendment would be to set up a standard of the financial ability of communities to meet the problem, rather than to regard the problem as one which must be determined upon the basis of need.

I do not believe that a majority of the Senate is willing to take this step. I am convinced that too many Senators are in possession of facts regarding the problem in their own States. I believe, furthermore, they are aware of the fact that this amendment will result in the Federal Government shirking its share of the burden of a national economic crisis.

Mr. President, so far as the manner in which this amendment would work is concerned, much has been said about the ability of the President to set up an organization which could make the investigations necessary in order to ascertain whether or not communities could provide 40 percent of the cost of the projects. One of the serious problems which would be created in the practical working out of this amendment is the unavoidable delay which would be created. The thousands and thousands of municipalities that would have to be investigated inevitably means that after the effective date of this amendment projects would be unconscionably delayed, and in the meantime persons who were in dire need of employment would either have to be cared for by the meager direct-relief facilities of the communities or they would not be cared for at all.

I should like to point out that if this amendment were adopted, we are imposing a terrific burden on the President. The amendment would require him to pass judgment upon the fiscal situation and the taxpaying capacity of thousands upon thousands of communities all over the United States. I believe that is a task which the President of the United States should not be asked to perform.

I fear that the results of the operation of this amendment upon the fiscal affairs of communities all over the United States would be most disastrous. Its adoption will work untold hardship upon those who have suffered most during the depression.

The table presented by Mr. LA FOLLETTE is as follows:

EXHIBIT A

Works program—Works Progress Administration and other agencies relief employment

State	May 8, employment	July 15, quotas	Estimated decline
Total, continental United States	2,224,036	1,796,677	427,359
Other agencies (relief)	180,340	131,200	49,140
Total Works Progress Administration	2,043,696	1,665,477	378,219
Alabama	26,194	20,817	5,377
Arizona	8,496	7,194	1,302
Arkansas	28,964	21,680	7,284
California	104,938	91,219	13,719
Colorado	23,836	18,197	5,639
Connecticut	18,503	15,516	2,987
Delaware	2,025	1,881	144
District of Columbia	6,787	6,095	692
Florida	24,491	24,723	+232
Georgia	29,287	22,671	6,616
Idaho	6,989	5,032	1,957
Illinois	149,065	117,027	32,038
Indiana	60,759	47,247	13,512
Iowa	22,056	18,181	3,875
Kansas	36,851	27,205	9,646
Kentucky	46,569	38,105	8,464
Louisiana	31,880	24,582	7,298
Maine	6,050	4,161	1,889
Maryland	12,160	10,105	2,055
Massachusetts	89,096	67,585	21,511
Michigan	56,684	48,519	8,165
Minnesota	41,332	36,303	5,029
Mississippi	23,398	18,195	5,203
Missouri	76,178	60,251	15,927
Montana	11,499	7,836	3,663
Nebraska	21,853	18,136	3,717
Nevada	1,989	1,632	357
New Hampshire	6,764	5,172	1,592
New Jersey	75,316	61,276	14,040
New Mexico	8,390	7,331	1,059
New York City	177,027	157,341	19,686
New York; up-State	78,589	60,994	17,595
North Carolina	24,727	19,992	4,735
North Dakota	13,698	12,054	1,644
Ohio	119,148	90,745	28,403
Oklahoma	54,650	45,285	9,365
Oregon	14,930	11,190	3,740
Pennsylvania	199,585	165,210	34,375
Rhode Island	11,689	10,116	1,573
South Carolina	21,767	18,135	3,632
South Dakota	15,633	13,038	2,595
Tennessee	26,073	20,820	5,253
Texas	79,166	63,378	15,788
Utah	7,442	7,278	164
Vermont	3,847	2,077	1,770
Virginia	21,930	19,110	2,820
Washington	30,638	23,212	7,426
West Virginia	36,543	30,091	6,452
Wisconsin	45,647	39,393	6,254
Wyoming	2,568	2,144	424

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, earlier in the day the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], in the course of his remarks, put in the RECORD certain tabulations in reference to municipal taxes and municipal indebtedness, tending to show that there had been, as I recall, a decrease in the indebtedness of municipalities, and arguing from that standpoint that they were better able than formerly to carry the burden of relief.

As one of a quite limited number of Senators who have rather consistently endeavored to support measures of economy in the Senate, I desire to offer some figures as to the national indebtedness which will supplement the figures given by the Senator from South Carolina.

The first table which I wish to have printed as a part of these brief comments gives a statement of the public debt of the United States, beginning in 1890 and coming down to date, and also the per-capita debt, showing that since 1916 the per-capita debt of the United States has increased from $11.96 to $271.78.

The second table shows the appropriations that have been made by Congresses, beginning in 1890 and running to 1937, showing that in that period of time the appropriations have increased from a per-capita basis of $6.27 per year to $79.92.

I have also appended a third tabulation of the deficits from 1932 on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the tabulations presented by the Senator from Colorado will be printed in the RECORD.

The tabulations are as follows:

Public debt of the United States, 1890 to 1937, both dates inclusive, and debt per capita

June 30—	Total debt	Debt per capita
1890	$1,122,396,584	$17.92
1891	1,005,806,561	15.75
1892	968,218,841	14.88
1893	961,431,766	14.49
1894	1,016,897,817	15.04
1895	1,096,913,120	15.91
1896	1,222,729,350	17.40
1897	1,226,793,713	17.14
1898	1,232,743,063	16.90
1899	1,436,700,704	19.33
1900	1,263,416,913	16.56
1901	1,221,572,245	15.71
1902	1,178,031,357	14.89
1903	1,159,455,913	14.40
1904	1,136,259,016	13.88
1905	1,132,357,035	13.60
1906	1,142,522,970	13.50
1907	1,147,178,193	13.33
1908	1,177,690,403	13.46
1909	1,148,315,372	12.91
1910	1,146,939,969	12.69
1911	1,153,984,937	12.28
1912	1,193,838,505	12.48
1913	1,193,047,745	12.26
1914	1,188,235,400	12.00
1915	1,191,264,068	11.83
1916	1,225,145,568	11.96
1917	2,975,618,585	28.57
1918	12,243,628,719	115.65
1919	25,482,034,419	240.09
1920	24,297,918,412	228.32
1921	23,976,250,608	221.09
1922	22,964,079,190	208.97
1923	22,349,687,758	200.10
1924	21,251,120,427	186.86
1925	20,516,272,174	177.82
1926	19,643,183,079	167.70
1927	18,510,174,266	156.04
1928	17,604,290,563	146.69
1929	16,931,197,748	139.40
1930	16,185,308,299	131.49
1931	16,801,485,143	135.37
1932	19,487,009,766	155.93
1933	22,538,672,164	179.21
1934	27,053,085,988	213.65
1935	28,701,167,092	225.07
1936	33,545,384,622	261.20
1937 (May 20)	35,150,500,988	271.78

Congressional appropriations and population per year and per capita, 1890 to 1937

Year	Amount	Population	Per-capita appropriations
1890	$395,630,284.26	63,056,438	$6.27
1891	463,383,480.86	64,361,124	7.20
1892	524,381,815.60	65,665,810	7.99
1893	507,376,397.53	66,970,496	7.58
1894	519,535,293.31	68,275,182	7.61
1895	492,477,759.97	69,579,868	7.08
1896	$496,982,585.01	70,884,554	$7.01
1897	515,852,380.27	72,189,240	7.15
1898	528,735,878.33	73,493,926	7.19
1899	892,656,775.65	74,798,612	11.93
1900	698,912,982.83	76,129,408	9.18
1901	705,653,298.01	77,747,402	9.08
1902	730,241,862.51	79,365,396	9.20
1903	801,682,773.42	80,983,390	9.90
1904	752,741,659.25	82,601,384	9.11
1905	781,288,214.95	84,219,378	9.28
1906	818,191,283.26	85,837,372	9.53
1907	881,953,644.09	87,455,366	10.08
1908	919,163,823.18	89,073,360	10.32
1909	1,006,431,726.96	90,691,354	11.10
1910	1,044,433,622.64	92,267,080	11.32
1911	1,039,550,617.01	93,682,189	11.10
1912	1,022,759,948.52	95,097,298	10.75
1913	1,021,349,990.63	96,512,407	10.58
1914	1,098,602,065.64	97,927,516	11.22
1915	1,122,471,919.12	99,342,625	11.30
1916	1,114,490,704.09	100,757,735	11.06
1917	1,628,411,644.81	102,172,845	15.94
1918	18,881,940,243.79	103,587,955	182.28
1919	27,065,148,933.02	105,003,065	257.76
1920	6,454,596,649.56	106,543,031	60.58
1921	4,780,829,510.35	108,207,853	44.18
1922	3,909,282,209.46	109,872,675	35.58
1923	4,248,140,569.99	111,537,497	38.09
1924	4,092,544,312.04	113,202,319	36.15
1925	3,748,651,750.35	114,867,141	32.63
1926	4,151,682,049.91	116,531,963	35.63
1927	4,409,463,389.81	118,196,785	37.31
1928	4,211,011,352.58	119,861,607	35.13
1929	4,633,577,973.85	121,526,429	38.13
1930	4,665,236,678.04	123,091,000	37.90
1931	5,071,711,693.56	124,113,000	40.86
1932	5,178,524,967.95	124,974,000	41.44
1933	5,785,252,641.95	125,770,000	46.00
1934	7,692,447,339.17	126,626,000	60.75
1935	7,527,559,327.66	127,521,000	59.03
1936	9,579,757,330.31	128,429,000	74.59
1937	10,336,399,272.65	129,329,000	79.92

Deficit—Amounts by which expenditures have exceeded receipts

1932	$3,147,919,455
1933	3,063,256,885
1934	3,989,496,035
1935	3,575,357,964
1936	4,763,841,643
1937 (estimated)	2,557,000,000

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, just a word or two in reference to the pending amendment.

I had expected that there would be some discussion as to rates, as to whether or not 40 percent was a proper rate of contribution. In the committee, amendments were offered proposing that the rate of contribution should be 20, 25, 30, and 35 percent, I think. So there was a discussion as to rates, and I thought perhaps that element might enter into this discussion; but apparently the debate is to be confined solely to the question whether or not there should be any contributions from localities.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] was rather appropriately shown the Democratic national platform. I rather think that is the appropriate platform to show him. He has not always exactly gone with us, but I think he is entitled to come under it. In that platform the declaration was made that unemployment is a national problem. It is a national problem, but it is not exclusively a national problem. There was a time, not many years ago, when it was regarded as exclusively a local problem. Congress stepped outside of that narrow and unsound boundary, and declared that there was a national obligation as to unemployment; and it seems to me we are not recognizing the facts properly if we do not recognize relief as both a local and a national problem. Whenever we say it is exclusively the burden of the locality or the Nation, we are putting an undue burden upon one or the other.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. McNARY. During the discussion I have given some thought to the percentage which the States and communities should contribute. I assumed that the able Senator in charge of the bill would discuss that phase of the subject. There must be some reason why the contribution is fixed on the basis of 40 percent. Personally I think that is too high. I shall vote against making it 40 percent, but I would vote to make it 25 percent. I think there ought to be some stabilizing influence toward which the Administrator could work whereby to bring about a general contribution equitable to all the States and communities, and unless such a base is supplied there will be no effort made along the line of the stabilization of Federal appropriations and cooperative appropriations from the local communities and the States.

It occurs to me that a contribution of 25 percent by the local communities and 75 percent from the Federal Government would nearly approach an ideal proportion of costs to be levied against the Federal Government and the communities. I wish the Senator would discuss that phase of the problem.

I do not wish to offer an amendment, because I am not a member of the committee, and I have not given this subject matter the study to which it is entitled; but if no other Senator offers an amendment, or if any hesitancy whatsoever is shown, I shall offer an amendment to decrease the contribution by the local communities and States from 40 percent to 25 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. I will state to the Senator from Oregon that his views and mine are very close together. I would have voted more cheerfully to make the figure 25 percent than 40 percent. I voted for the 40-percent provision.

I voted against the change, with the view that in the course of compromise which I thought might develop on the floor of the Senate, and which, if the amendment were carried would necessarily develop in the conference committee, probably we would arrive at just the proportion which the Senator from Oregon suggests, which seems to me a very appropriate figure. That was the impression I had when I came from the committee; but I have heard the speeches today, and I have rather come to the conclusion that if the figures cited are accurate, we should substitute for the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina a resolution censuring Mr. Hopkins for having accepted any contributions from the States, and should insert a provision that they should be returned to the localities. Apparently it was a most outrageous performance to have accepted a contribution from any locality for the relief of unemployment. I have been especially amazed to find this position most ardently advocated by Senators coming from the Southern States.

However, I am not entirely convinced of the soundness of their theory. I still have lingering ideas that there is a local obligation, and I think it can be stated in mathematical terms so that we can apportion a fair amount to the localities with the necessary exemptions.

Now, one word as to the amount involved in the bill under consideration. The Senator from Wisconsin and others have indicated that they thought an appropriation of a billion and a half dollars was too small. That amount, as the Senator from Wisconsin recalls, was fixed by the President in his message. Some of us wanted to change the figure and reduce it, so far as unobligated balances were concerned, but the Senate has thought otherwise. So the amount appropriated is the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau and by the President. Therefore, if there is any shortage in the amount provided, it is not to be charged to the Congress of the United States. I have assumed that the amount would be entirely adequate.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. I know the Senator did not intend to convey the idea, but one would get the impression that the Senator's view is that the localities have made no contributions.

Mr. ADAMS. Oh, no; the Senator misunderstood me. I said that after I had listened to some of the Senators I thought Mr. Hopkins must have done a most outrageous thing in accepting contributions, and that we ought to include a provision to refund them, because it seemed to be a most terrible thing, in the view of some of the Senators, that any locality had been asked, as a condition of getting Federal aid in extending relief, to make a contribution; and the contributions amounted to about 13 percent.

Mr. WAGNER. The table before me, which appears in the House hearings, indicates a proportion of 24 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. The statements made by Mr. Hopkins before the committee were to the effect that the average contribution throughout the United States was 13.1 percent, and that it had been gradually raised to 14 percent, that the highest contribution was from the State of Idaho, with 29 percent.

Mr. WAGNER. Did he not refer only to the Works Progress Administration?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; that is all he was talking about.

Mr. WAGNER. But it is not all that we ought to have under consideration when we are discussing this matter.

Mr. ADAMS. All we are discussing in connection with the pending amendment is the Works Progress Administration.

Mr. WAGNER. But when we are discussing what the States are doing in the way of contributions I think it is fair to take into consideration the State and local contributions toward relief and work relief of all types. The contributions by the States and the localities to all the programs, according to this statement, amount to 24 percent.

Mr. ADAMS. In the House hearings and the Senate hearings the contributions for different purposes are broken up into each character of contribution. Of course, when we figure whether a State is carrying its fair burden, various matters should be taken into consideration. We are now considering an amendment which has to do only with the Works Progress Administration. In the second portion of the bill is the provision for the Public Works Administration, and there a 55-percent contribution is to be required. We are dealing with another percentage.

Mr. WAGNER. I hope the Senator has some sympathy with the protest which I have made here when New York City was referred to as making a contribution to this social service of only 1½ percent, when the RECORD shows, when we take all of the relief programs together, that it has made a contribution of 36.6 percent. That is what I wanted to emphasize. I think the Senator sympathizes with my views on that subject.

Mr. ADAMS. There is just one other matter to which I wish to refer, and that is the possibility of the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina restricting relief expenditures. It will be recognized that the possibility of the amendment is to increase the relief expenditures up to two and a half billion dollars. In other words, if the States and local communities should contribute their 40 percent so as to consume the whole billion and a half dollars, we would have two and a half billion dollars, a billion dollars more than the billion and a half dollars carried in the bill. That is the possibility. My own judgment, from watching the avidity with which localities have volunteered to contribute 55 percent in order to get a 45-percent grant, is that we would find practically all of the billion and a half dollars consumed by communities willing to contribute 40 percent. So that I do not regard the amendment as involving a reduction in relief expenditures.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. From what the Senator has said, I judge that in his opinion, the adoption of the amendment could not be in any sense construed as a move to effect economy. It might have the opposite effect.

Mr. ADAMS. It may be a move to effect economy in Federal expenditures but not in aggregate expenditures for relief. That is, the limit is not changed, it is a billion and a half to be appropriated by the Federal Government whether or not the amendment is adopted. If it is adopted and the States and localities do not match, there may be a portion of the billion and a half not consumed, but, so far as the States do match the 40 percent, the aggregate amount put up by the taxpayers of the United States will be spent. I have never been able to separate a taxpayer who paid a Federal tax and a taxpayer who paid a State tax or county tax, because they are the same individual.

Mr. HATCH. That is exactly the point I wanted the Senator to develop, that there is no essential saving so far as the ultimate taxpayer is concerned.

Mr. ADAMS. I think it means an increase in the amount of money to be spent, in the aggregate, for relief.

Mr. BAILEY obtained the floor.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so that I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Andrews	Davis	La Follette	Pope
Ashurst	Dieterich	Lee	Radcliffe
Austin	Donahey	Lewis	Robinson
Bailey	Duffy	Lodge	Russell
Bankhead	Ellender	Logan	Schwartz
Barkley	Frazier	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Berry	George	Lundeen	Sheppard
Bilbo	Gerry	McAdoo	Smathers
Black	Gibson	McGill	Steiwer
Bone	Gillette	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Glass	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Bridges	Green	Minton	Townsend
Brown, N. H.	Guffey	Moore	Truman
Bulkley	Harrison	Murray	Tydings
Bulow	Hatch	Neely	Vandenberg
Burke	Hayden	Norris	Van Nuys
Byrd	Herring	Nye	Wagner
Byrnes	Hitchcock	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Capper	Holt	Overton	Wheeler
Caraway	Hughes	Pepper	White

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I intend to speak primarily in behalf of the amendment of the committee put forward by the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], but in connection with that I wish to give notice that I intend at the proper time to offer an amendment striking out the figures "$1,500,000,000" in line 2, on page 2, and inserting in lieu thereof the figures "$1,000,000,000", and, of course, making changes in the same ratio in the allotments and allocations in the remainder of the joint resolution.

The purpose of the amendment put forward by the committee, and which we speak of as the Byrnes amendment, is not to take relief from any deserving man or woman, or to deprive any community of a proper and just share of the national relief fund. We all agree that the unemployment problem has become a national problem, but in becoming a national problem it has not ceased to be a local problem. It is both. And unless we take some step after the order of the Byrnes amendment or some other step reducing the total fund available from the National Treasury, we may as well confront the fact and duly reckon with it, that the whole problem and the entire financial burden of unemployment relief will be transferred, as it has been quite rapidly transferred since 1932, from the States and the counties and the cities to the Congress and the Federal Treasury.

We must take some steps to arrest that progress, and there are great reasons why we should do that. The problem of relief cannot be well handled as exclusively a national problem. We give credit to the present administration for all that its most ardent and enthusiastic friends could claim. We must reckon with the fact that unless we deposit a certain amount of responsibility upon the counties and the towns and the cities and the States, responsibility both for finances and for administration, we shall aggravate this problem rather than solve it.

So I look upon the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina as a constructive amendment, not designed to deprive any community or any individual of a fair share in the national measures of relief, but as an amendment that has two purposes, one to throw in greater measure the responsibility for unemployment upon the localities, where it primarily belongs, and the other to eliminate from the present administration the almost scandalous demands upon the Treasury. By "scandalous" I mean that they have ceased to be demands in the interest of unemployment, but demands in the interest of local pride and local rivalry, and demands in the interest of political power, national and local. So I think that the amendment confronts us with a great opportunity. I shall vote for it, and if we lose it, then I shall insist that we cut down the total amount carried in the joint resolution. Either way you go you achieve the objective that I have in mind.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. Do I correctly interpret the remarks of the Senator from North Carolina to mean that if the Byrnes amendment is agreed to the Senator will not offer his amendment to cut the sum from $1,500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000?

Mr. BAILEY. I shall be inclined not to offer it, although I may yet make an argument that $1,000,000,000, in my considered judgment, is an abundant Federal fund.

Let us now see what we have to support us in this position. I have here speeches by His Excellency the President of the United States. I call attention to his speech to the Governors of our States in which this paragraph occurred:

> The primary duty is that of the locality—

He is now talking about the duty of relief.

> The primary duty is that of the locality, the city, county, town. If they fail and cannot raise enough to meet the needs, the next responsibility is on the States, and they have to do all they can; and if it is proven that they cannot do any more, and the funds are still insufficient, it is the duty of the Federal Government to step in.

I am saying to the Senate that the Byrnes amendment was conceived and stands before us at this moment in the spirit of that great paragraph from the speech of the President of the United States.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. May the RECORD show the time and place of that speech?

Mr. BAILEY. I shall be very glad to give it. The speech was made on March 7, 1933, and the photostatic copy is from the New York Times, and was given to me by the Legislative Reference Service of the Library of Congress.

Again, here is a quotation by the President of the United States from a photostatic copy of the report of his address at Detroit on October 2, and apparently the year is 1932:

> All of us in the city and country alike have got to do everything we can to tide over. All agree that the first responsibility for the prevention of poverty and the alleviation of distress and the care of its victims rests upon the locality, the individuals, the organizations, and the Government.
>
> First of all, perhaps, upon the private agencies of philanthropy, just as far as we can drag it out of them; and secondly, the other social organizations; and last, but not least, the church. And yet all agree that to leave to the locality the entire burden would result in placing the heaviest proportion of the burden in most cases upon those who are the least able to bear it. In other words, the communities that have the most difficult problem, like Detroit, would be the communities that would have to bear the heaviest of the burdens.
>
> And so the State steps in to equalize the burdens by providing for a large portion of the care of the victims of the poverty and by providing assistance and guidance for local communities, and above and beyond that—

That is, after the State has done its work—

> the National Government has a responsibility.

All this is to the point of my contention, that in recognizing the problem as national the Congress did not discharge the towns, the cities, and States of their obligations to bear their fair share of the burden; and that is all that the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina contemplates.

Mr. President, I do not have before me the President's address to the Congress in 1935, but I remember it, and I think Senators will corroborate my memory of it, in which he declared in plain language that the Federal Government must get out of this business of relief.

If the President is correct, if the principles laid down in his utterances which I have quoted are sound, as I think they are, then I raise the question, has not the time come when Congress, making the annual appropriation for relief, should either make it so low as to require the States, counties, cities, and towns to do their part, or make it as high as the pending measure does, and then require of them a 40-percent contribution, provided further, if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the President, and upon a certificate from the authorities of a commonwealth, county, or a city, that the city, county, or commonwealth is unequal to the task of contributing 40 percent, that the President shall ascertain what is its fair share, in order that no man may suffer by reason of the application of a rigid rule.

I think that responds, in part, to the inquiry of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. He wished to reduce this percentage. I can understand that. None of us would like to tie ourselves to a rigid rule, but this amendment does not do that. The amendment makes full room for the exercise of a just, sound, and constructive policy. Making for that, Senators, it also makes for what I conceive to be probably the most necessary thing now in the national policy, and that is that the Federal Government shall throw the responsibility for unemployment relief to the full extent that it can upon the local subdivisions.

This might not have been said in 1934. In that year I question whether the cities and counties could collect their taxes. I am satisfied that in 1934 the States could not borrow money. But that is not the situation today. Here is the situation: The budgets of all the cities in America are balanced; the budgets of all the States in the Union are balanced; but the Budget of the Republic of the United States is out of balance by $19,000,000,000 net in 4 years. The cities and States balanced their budgets at the expense of the credit of the Federal Government. Now that they are in greatly improved condition, now that their credit is restored, now that they can collect taxes, now that they can sell bonds, now that they can discharge their duties, now that they can shoulder the burden of their just responsibility, why shall not the Congress pursue a policy which will compel them to do it? Why should the Federal Government continue to bear the burden?

In that connection I bring to you the warning of the President. It is not long since he informed us that the plan of the administration respecting the income of the Government had been disappointing. It has not been long since he warned us of the extravagant demands that were threatened to be made here in the Congress upon the Treasury of the United States. It has not been long since he suggested in a very definite and emphatic way that the time had come to set the Nation's financial house in order and balance the Budget after 7 long years of ever-increasing deficits.

We are not going to balance the Budget so long as we allow the burden of relief to be borne wholly by the Federal Government. I think, on the other hand, I am almost safe in saying that once we centralize this policy, cultivate the thought throughout America that any sort of demand can be made upon the Treasury and we will meet it, leaves the administration of it in the hands of one man—not the President but the Administrator, Mr. Hopkins, and he committed publicly to the policy that the problem of relief is a permanent problem, and carrying his administration on with a view to its permanence—so long as we follow that policy, I do not think there will be an opportunity at the end of this year or the next year or the year following that, to balance the National Budget.

I know, Mr. President, we have talked about balancing the Budget; we have raised all sorts of ghosts about an unbalanced Budget; we have threatened one another with the terrors of inflation until we have reached the point where this discussion has been carried on thus far without reference to national finances. I believe I am the first Senator who has had the hardihood to mention anything about the National Budget or the necessity for balancing it. That is a dreadful commentary on the state of affairs.

The balancing of the National Budget is indispensable to the maintenance of the Republic and the solution of the problem of unemployment. It is indispensable to the farm program. The marvelous thing—it is a tribute to the power of the country and the capacity of the American people for order—is that we have gone on since 1930 without a balanced Budget, and that year after year the deficit has been not less than $2,000,000,000 and as high as $3,000,000,000. It is a marvelous tribute to the power and character of the Republic that we could go so long in such a course and still have a stable Government and a sound currency. But there is an end to all that. Every day and every year and every appropriation brings us that much nearer to the end.

The way to balance the Budget is to cut down public expenditures. That is the only way to do it. The way to cut down public expenditures is to place a fair share of public relief on the counties, cities, and States. A $1,000,000,000 appropriation, which I advocate, would bring us to a balanced Budget on the 1st day of July 1938, and that is only 1 year and 15 days away. I will say for myself that that would be a foundation upon which alone we could build the reemployment of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 of Americans. It would be a greater contribution than the $500,000,000 which I propose to take off of the proposed appropriation.

Mr. President, we cannot ask men to invest money in business unless we give them assurance that their investments will be worth something at the end of the period for which the investment is made. We cannot call upon an enterprise to expand unless the men who put up the money are assured that in the day of the sale or the day of the realization at least the equal of the money will return to them. Without a balanced Budget after, not 1 year or 2 years, but after 7 years—without a balanced Budget after 7 long years—we cannot hope to have a financial or industrial or social or agricultural stability in this land. I put it on that basis as an immediate necessity of national policy.

Mr. President, I want to show just the process through which we have gone. I was here when the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] placed in the RECORD the first important communication on the subject of necessity for Federal relief. Perhaps Senators do not recall that the senior Senator from Wisconsin, in the spring of 1932, sent out letters to a great many American mayors of towns and cities and that he received answers from 775 of those men. The letter was in the form of a questionnaire, and the most important question in the letter, as I conceive it, was this:

> Do you favor a Federal appropriation to assist the local governments in meeting their emergency relief budget?

There was a plain question. That was in January 1932. Those were terrible days. There was not this bright sunshine of prosperity and hope. There was, as we understood at that time, an army of 15,000,000 of unemployed, and the shadows were growing darker instead of brighter.

How did they answer? I checked them at the time. Of the 775 mayors only 271 said that they favored a Federal appropriation to assist local governments; 372 answered flatly "No"; 86 were neutral, and 46 gave no answer at all.

I have this tabulation here by States, every State and every mayor, with the yeas and nays, and I think for the benefit of the RECORD I shall not ask too much if I ask that it be printed as an exhibit at the end of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. BAILEY. There was a test of American mayors in the darkest days of the depression. Out of 775 only 275 were in favor of Federal relief. Let us look at the situation now.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. In the light of subsequent developments what would the Senator say as to which of the mayors exercised the best judgment in the answer of that inquiry?

Mr. BAILEY. I am not going to pass judgment on the mayors. I would not be able to say. I am not saying that any of them exercised either good or bad judgment. I am saying what they asked for then.

Here we are a few years later. What is the situation now? Every mayor, every Governor, every county commissioner, every local subdivision, everybody is crying, "Relief, relief, and more relief! Projects, projects, and still more projects!" There is a degeneration for you, Mr. President! There is a degeneration, but that is not all the degeneration that has taken place in this country.

That disease has run throughout the whole municipal organization of the country. The race is on, not to see who can get money to relieve unemployed men but who can build the most sewers and swimming pools. They are not half as much interested in unemployment as they are in projects.

The concomitant of that is just this: One State sees another State getting hundreds of millions of dollars, while it is getting only a few million dollars, so that State puts the pressure on its Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, and even tells them that if they cannot get projects like other cities and towns and States are getting they have no business being here. That is the consequence of the Federal responsibility. All I am saying to Senators is that the time has come to arrest that process. I believe I will add this: That if we do not arrest it now it will be still more difficult to arrest it later. The appetite grows by that upon which it feeds.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I think the Senator might note still another factor involved. One of the mayors in my State was frank enough to tell me that his message soliciting my support for the W. P. A. appropriation was inspired by a demand from the W. P. A. upon him that he send the message.

Mr. BAILEY. I have no doubt.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, the program not only is arousing selfishness but also the bureaucratic appetite.

Mr. BAILEY. I am going into that subject. There has been this degeneration, there is this degeneration, and only you and I have the antidote for it. We cannot expect them to stop it. I do not see how they could stop it.

When the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] today mentioned the matter of getting persons on the pay roll in order to justify projects, one of the Senators said to me, "What do you expect the people to do? When they see the money going out, why should they not get their share? They are going to have to bear their part of the burden." That is hard-boiled and practical, but this is a hard-boiled and a practical universe with which we are dealing.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. BAILEY. I do.

Mr. PEPPER. I am curious to know how the Senator reconciles such degeneration with such remarkable recovery.

Mr. BAILEY. I see no contradiction between the degeneration and the recovery. I think the sense of recovery probably accelerates the degeneration. The more we give, the more we do for these people, the more they want. That is the history of the human race. No matter how prosperous persons might be made, they would want to be still more prosperous. I do not blame anybody for that. No matter how many persons we employed, they would ask to have more employed. The more responsibility we take off them, the more they want. "Facilis descensus Averni"—easy the road to ruin, and easy because men are as they are. They will get money where it is easiest to get it. They will go along the line of least resistance.

Mr. President, I was saying these things by way of indicating just what the centralization of responsibility in the Federal Government necessarily implies; but I am not through with that. It is not just the towns, the cities, the States, and the counties that are crying for projects. The cement people say, "If you do not appropriate money, we cannot sell cement." The asphalt men say, "If you do not pass the billion and a half joint resolution, we cannot sell asphalt." The steel men say, "If you do not pile up this fund for us, we cannot sell steel." The labor organizations bring their pressure to bear upon us. The school teachers say, "If you do not appropriate this money, we cannot have schoolhouses built." The manufacturers and the merchants are saying, "If you do not send out this money for the pay rolls, we cannot sell goods." We have created a sense of vested interest in appropriations.

Do Senators think that interest is just to relieve the unemployed? That is the interest of business. That is the interest of the desire for profits. We are in the grip of it; and the head of the Relief Administration, Mr. Hopkins, encourages it. That is the worst feature of this matter. He has written a book. If there ever was an absurdity since God allowed men to make books, that book is an absurdity. It is entitled "Spending to Save." "Going Into Bankruptcy to Get Rich" would be about as much sense. His theory is not a theory of relief, and he will tell you so. I have his speeches in my desk here. He is distributing money in order to distribute wealth. He is distributing money in response to a peculiar economic theory. He is not concerned about the unemployed. He is concerned to get the money out. Now, hear me: Congress cannot pass on this joint resolution without Mr. Hopkins and his lobbyists surrounding us with their influence. When they call on us these days, Senators, to appropriate money, in view of what I know and what you know, I feel that when I vote for it I am voting for the chains of my own slavery. They even have the effrontery to say to a Senator of the United States that "his conscience will hurt him" when he comes down and asks for some of the money that he placed in their hands for his people. That is going on.

We have pending in the Senate an important bill unrelated to relief, but the head of the Relief Administration goes out and advocates it to the American people, and introduces himself as the man who distributes the money. What do you think of that? What did he know about that bill? Why was he there?

I think this policy involves the life of representative government itself. Are not these bureaucrats telling Senators that they will beat them? And with what will they beat them? Are they not saying of Senators that they cannot come back here? And why can they not come back here? I think the time has come for Congress, when it hands out a billion and a half dollars, to divorce every dollar of it absolutely and irrevocably from every aspect and influence of politics. I have drawn a bill for that purpose. I would take the whole thing out of the present control and put it in the hands of a nonpolitical and nonpartisan board. I would put every man who administers it under the civil service, and then I would tell the head of it that when we wanted to hear him we would send for him and hear him, but he and his agents should not come snooping around the corridors of the Capitol, and he should not threaten people; he should not whisper falsehoods behind their backs.

Mr. President, those are some of the things that have accounted for this degeneration. I leave out the matter of the local political popularity of the present policy. Of course, it is locally popular when the mayor of a city can come down here and get twenty, thirty, or forty million dollars, fill his city with parks and swimming pools and schoolhouses, and then run for reelection, boasting of the great things he has done for the people "with no cost to them", as he says. Of course, the fact is that there will be cost to them in the long run.

Mr. President, I have gathered some data here. I am going to come to them with one remark: In my deliberate opinion, there has been a studied effort to magnify the problem of unemployment in America. Why is not a census of the unemployed taken? When we ask to know the facts, why can we not know them?

Do you know how many families there are in the United States? Thirty-two or thirty-three million families. Do you know how many jobs there are in the United States now, other than public jobs? There are 33,000,000 persons on private pay rolls in America, and 10,000,000 persons living off the farms. Forty-three million Americans have jobs, and that is 43,000,000 jobs for thirty-two or thirty-three million families. That is a job and a third for every family in the land.

That is one way to get at the problem. I do not know how many persons there are who are unemployed; but I think a civilization that can succeed in providing a job and a third for every family is doing pretty well. Figure it out for yourselves. There are only four persons on the average in a family of America. One and a third out of every four men, women, and children have jobs today in America.

I know the farmers were badly off. They are better off now than they were, however, and I thank God for it.

I confirm whatever one may say in praise of the administration in view of the fact that corn, tobacco, hogs, cattle, oats, and hides are bringing good prices, everything is up except cotton, which is going down; cotton is 11 cents. The farm income has greatly improved.

Industrial pay rolls in America have increased this year by between seven hundred million and a billion dollars a year. Yet, with the cities all right, and the States all right, and the counties all right, and 43,000,000 people employed, the Congress is putting the burden on the back of the Treasury, whose budget has been out of balance for 7 long years, instead of returning it to the States and political subdivisions which have been delivered, and whose burdens we have borne, and borne greatly, in the time of their need.

Mr. President, I have here some data as to New York; and I do not want to wound the sensibilities of my honored friend, the distinguished junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. The whole country honors him and all Senators do, and I with them. I have figures from Pennsylvania and New York, and I have figures from North and South Carolina. I am not going to talk about sectional matters; I am merely going to make the point that the evidence shows on its face that there has been a strange disbalance in America in the distribution of these funds. I have asked for the information from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and also from the Works Progress Administration. I have here a letter from Mr. Corrington Gill, the Assistant Administrator of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, and at the end of March of this year the Works Progress Administration has put into operation nearly 20,000 work projects in New York and Pennsylvania, and I have a list of them here and desire to call attention to some of them.

The total for New York City through March 31, 1937, was the modest sum of $470,994,696. Here is the item of highways, roads, and streets in the majestic metropolis of the world, the richest of all the cities, as I understand, whose skyscrapers challenge the skies and eclipse the Tower of Babel.

Highways, roads, and streets, $82,000,000.

Eighty-two million dollars for highways and roads and streets in New York City. If there is a city on which the sun shines that is able to build its own roads and highways and streets, it is the city of New York, and I would not hear anyone say anything to the contrary. It is not a pauper city. It is the center of the world's wealth.

Streets and alleys in New York City	$59,000,000
Bridges and viaducts	8,000,000
Public buildings	92,000,000

We are constructing the buildings for the officials of New York City to do business in.

Charitable, medical, and mental institutions	$15,000,000
Educational	20,000,000
Housing	6,826,000
Parks and other recreational facilities	131,000,000
Playgrounds and athletic fields	4,993,000
Other	124,000,000

They just do not put it down; it is $124,000,000.

Land utilization in New York City. I really thought they had used it all up and were trying to inhabit the skies up there, but I see that our Federal Government has spent $163,000 to utilize land in New York City. I suspect they ought to get up to the penthouses and see what they could do with them.

Sewer systems and other utilities in New York City	$33,000,000
Water purification	6,000,000
Sewer systems, again	25,000,000

That makes $58,000,000.

Airports	$21,000,000
Navigation, in New York	15,000,000
Education	20,000,000

The Federal Government is spending $20,000,000 in New York City for education.

Women's projects	$6,000,000
Sewing	6,000,000
Sanitation and health	9,000,000

I am not saying any more about New York than I said over the radio in my own home city, the capital of North Carolina, the night before I came to the Senate this session. I protested against the city of Raleigh, N. C., calling on the Federal Government to do the things I knew they could do, and I protest now. New York City does not have to get all this money from the Federal Government. It is a rich city. Her citizens have three dollars for every dollar the citizens of North Carolina have; and I take that from the census reports. Their budget is balanced, and the Federal Budget is out of balance.

How much will they get next year? There will not be any trouble about that. They will have an election up there this year.

The Assyrian came down like a wolf on the fold.

And that is exactly the way they have come down on the Federal Government—and they will succeed again unless we do something to protect it.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not want the Senator to become confused politically, and I am afraid there is a little confusion. The present mayor of New York is not a Democrat.

Mr. BAILEY. But he has the greatest way of coming to Washington and howling every time we talk about stopping this business, more than any mayor in America, and he will admit it himself.

Mr. WAGNER. I was trying to get the Senator's political information straight, in order that he might not infer that the Democratic administration is attempting to help one candidate against another.

Mr. BAILEY. I was not thinking about that. I am going to clear this up. If they would run the junior Senator from New York for mayor he would not have to get a project, the people would vote for him. If I were a voter there I would do the same thing myself. I did not mean that this administration was going to help a political party up there. Oh, no! Oh, it is incapable of doing that! Far be it from me to suggest that there is any possibility of that ever being done in America! [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I read the newspapers. I read the New York newspapers and I know very well that the mayor of New York does come down here and protest every time we try to cut down these funds, and he is always here demanding projects. I think there is no question about that. I think he is proud of it. He is "running on his record." That is what I mean.

I am going to offer, without reading further, a statement of W. P. A. expenditures from funds provided in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts of 1935 and 1936, through March 31, 1937. United States totaled $2,774,000,000. New York City, $384,547,000. New York State, $122,477,000. Pennsylvania, $298,000,000. That makes a total of approximately $80,000,000,000 for the period of 27 months. Two States get more than 25 percent of the total amount! Let this go in the RECORD. I cannot believe that 25 percent of the unemployed are in those two States. Do Senators know how that is done? In those two States the unemployed are being paid $60 or $70, whereas in North Carolina they are paid $23. That is also maladministration. I agree that there might be some reduction, but there cannot be the difference between $23 and $65.

I ask that the tabulation to which I have just referred may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit B.)

Mr. BAILEY. I have also tables showing the Public Works appropriations and summary of the non-Federal allotments and disbursements throughout the United States by States to May 31, 1937. It gives each State and the amount of allotment and amount of disbursement for each State. Then I have a table showing the non-Federal allotments and disbursements for the State of New York, and in addition to that I have a table for the State of Pennsylvania and for the city of Philadelphia.

Without detaining the Senate to go through the details, it will appear to Senators upon reading the tables in the morning that the Federal Government is building a vast system of projects in those two great cities and giving over to those two great and immensely wealthy States enormous subsidies for carrying on their activities, as if they were bankrupt and broke.

Mr. President, if New York and Philadelphia are not able to build school houses, if New York and Philadelphia are not able to maintain their sidewalks, if New York and Philadelphia are not financially able to carry off the sewage of their cities, then where will we find the cities that are able? That is very easy to answer. What shall we say for the little city of Elba, Ala., which was brought up today as a great example? If those great cities can get this money for subsidies, if they can get money for constructing public buildings, if the Federal Government is to do all that they want it to do, to the tune of nearly $800,000,000 for the two of them, then why should not every little town and city in America, and why should not every county and every State come here and say, "Treat us likewise. We surely are not as rich, and the census will show that our per-capita wealth is incomparably less than the per-capita wealth in those States and cities."

So, Mr. President, we must meet this situation. You cannot go on the way you are going; come up here and make your appropriations, have the House of Representatives try to cut it down to a billion dollars, and actually vote that way; and then 4 days later reconsider, for reasons, of course, which I shall not question—you cannot turn over to this great organization a billion and one-half dollars and turn it loose and let it bring its influences to bear upon us as it does. If we hope to save this Republic from the bankruptcy which is inevitable from this continuing policy, we have got to put the brakes on it.

Back in February I made my protest along these same lines, and urged the Senate to adopt an amendment which is to some extent, at any rate, in line with the principle asserted by the Byrnes amendment. I am glad that we have at least the support of the majority of the Committee on Appropriations for that principle. Next year when we meet, just as this year when we met, notwithstanding this appropriation today, the Relief Administrator will be right back here asking for $880,000,000 more. I give the Senate notice of that. Nobody told him to come the last time. He spent the money. Then he raised the great cry of millions of unemployed who were without succor, without aid in the winter, and that if we did not do something the country would blow up. What is there to hinder him now from spending this money by next January and coming back and asking for more?

I suggest that to the Senate in order that I may say one thing. I know that the administrative department of the Government must be separate from the legislative, and for that very reason I am persuaded that the time has come when the Senate of the United States ought to appoint a committee of three alert Senators to keep their eyes on this situation. They would have no power, but what a restraining influence they would have! Then somebody would keep informed. What are we that we should turn over a billion and a half dollars to a man like Harry Hopkins? And who is he that we should place our confidence in him to that extent? And who are we, representatives of the American Government, that we should place in the hands of men that amount of money, knowing that they can surround us, and they can have all sorts of demands made upon us, and they can refuse us our projects?

We appropriate the money, and sit like beggars on their doorsteps, and they give us political orders, and if we disobey we are told our consciences should hurt us. Conscience! What did he mean by that? Conscience refers to Deity. He meant political conscience. He referred to the god in the political machine, not to God in heaven. I do not worship before the altars behind which they minister as high priests.

(The tables presented by Mr. BAILEY, being exhibits A, B, and C, are as follows:)

EXHIBIT A

In the fall of 1931 Senator LA FOLLETTE sent out a questionnaire to the mayors of certain cities and towns in the United States. One of the seven questions asked was: "Do you favor a Federal appropriation to assist the local governments in meeting their emergency relief burdens?", to which 775 mayors replied as follows:

Yes	271
No	372
Neutral	86
This particular question unanswered	46

The tabulation with reference to this particular question was as follows:

Alabama:
Albertville	Yes.
Anniston	Neutral.
Auburn	Neutral.
Bessemer	No.
Birmingham	No.
Brewton	No.
Cullman	Yes.
Demopolis	No.
Lanett	Yes.
Montgomery	No.
Opp	Yes.
Russellville	Neutral.
Sheffield	Yes.
Arizona: Winslow	No.
Arkansas:
El Dorado	No.
Fort Smith	No.
Helena	No.
Magnolia	No.
Morrilton	Yes.
North Little Rock	Yes.
Paragould	No.
Searcy	Yes.
Van Buren	Neutral.
California:
Anaheim	Yes.
Claremont	No.
Colton	Yes.
Compton	Neutral.
Coronado	No.
Culver City	Yes.
El Segundo	Yes.
Fresno	Neutral.
Fullerton	No.
Gardena	Yes.
Glendale	No.
Hawthorne	No.
Hermosa Beach	Neutral.
Hollister	No.
Huntington Beach	Yes.
Huntingdon Park	Yes.
Inglewood	Yes.
La Verne	Neutral.
Los Gatos	No.
Madera	Unanswered.
Marysville	No.
Mill Valley	No.
Montebello	Yes.
Monterey Park	Yes.
Needles	No.
Ontario	Yes.
Pasadena	Yes.
El Paso de Robles	Yes.
Pittsburg	No.
Pomona	Yes.
Porterville	Yes.
Red Bluff	Neutral.
Redlands	No.
Redwood City	No.
Riverside	Yes.
San Bernardino	Yes.
San Francisco	Neutral.
San Gabriel	No.
San Jose	No.
San Luis Obispo	Yes.
San Rafael	Yes.
Santa Ana	Yes.
Santa Clara	No.

California—Continued.
Santa Maria	Unanswered.
Santa Paula	No.
Signal Hill	Yes.
Torrance	No.
Turlock	No.
Colorado:
Canon City	No.
Denver	Neutral.
Monte Vista	Yes.
Trinidad	No.
Walsenburg	No.
Connecticut:
Ansonia	No.
Derby	No.
Hartford	Neutral.
New Britain	No.
New Haven	No.
Norwalk	No.
Shelton	No.
West Haven	No.
Florida:
Daytona Beach	No.
De Land	Unanswered.
Fort Myers	Neutral.
Fort Pierce	Yes.
Hialeah	Yes.
Melbourne	Unanswered.
Miami	Yes.
Orlando	Unanswered.
Pensacola	Neutral.
St. Petersburg	No.
Tallahassee	Neutral.
Tampa	Yes.
Georgia:
Albany	No.
Augusta	Yes.
Brunswick	No.
Columbus	No.
East Thomaston	No.
Manchester	No.
Thomasville	Neutral.
Tipton	No.
Toccoa	Yes.
Idaho:
Boise City	Yes.
Coeur d'Alene	Yes.
Emmett	No.
Lewiston	Yes.
Payette	No.
Preston	Yes.
Illinois:
Batavia	Neutral.
Beardstown	No.
Benton	Yes.
Blue Island	Yes.
Carlinville	No.
Canton	Yes.
Centralia	Neutral.
Charleston	No.
Dolton	Yes.
Downers Grove	Yes.
East St. Louis	No.
Edwardsville	Yes.
Elgin	Neutral.
Eldorado	Yes.
Elmwood Park	Yes.
Evanston	Yes.
Fairfield	No.
Freeport	Yes.
Gillespie	Yes.
Granite City	Yes.
Harvey	Neutral.
Highland Park	Yes.
Johnson City	Yes.
Joliet	Neutral.
Kenilworth	Neutral.
Kewanee	Yes.
La Grange	No.
Lansing	Yes.
Libertyville	No.
Macomb	Yes.
Marion	Yes.
Mattoon	Neutral.
Mount Vernon	No.
Naperville	No.
Oak Park	Yes.
Ottawa	No.
Park Ridge	No.
Paxton	No.
Peoria	Neutral.
Princeton	No.
River Grove	Yes.
Robinson	No.
Rochelle	No.
Illinois—Continued.
Rock Island	No.
Staunton	Yes.
Summit	Yes.
Jacksonville	No.
Tuscola	No.
Wheaton	Yes.
Wilmette	No.
West Frankfort	No.
Zeigler	Yes.
Indiana:
Aurora	No.
Bloomington	Neutral.
Bluffton	No.
Clinton	No.
Connersville	Neutral.
Crawfordsville	No.
Elkhart	No.
Greencastle	No.
Jeffersonville	Neutral.
Kendallville	No.
Lawrenceburg	No.
La Porte	Neutral.
Lebanon	Yes.
Marion	Yes.
Martinsville	No.
Mitchell	No.
An unidentified town	Yes.
Peru	Yes.
Princeton	No.
Shelbyville	No.
Terre Haute	Yes.
Valparaiso	No.
Wabash	No.
Washington	Yes.
Richmond	No.
West Lafayette	No.
Westminster	Yes.
Iowa:
Ames	No.
Boone	Neutral.
Cedar Rapids	No.
Council Bluffs	No.
Denison	No.
Des Moines	No.
Fort Dodge	No.
Glenwood	Yes.
Keokuk	No.
Maquoketa	Neutral.
Mason City	Neutral.
Muscatine	Yes.
Newton	No.
Oelwein	No.
Oskaloosa	No.
Sac City	No.
Valley Junction	Yes.
Kansas:
Abilene	Neutral.
Anthony	No.
Atchison	No.
Baxter Springs	Neutral.
Chanute	No.
Dodge City	No.
Emporia	No.
Galena	Unanswered.
Herington	Neutral.
Horton	No.
Independence	No.
Liberal	Yes.
Ottawa	No.
Topeka	Neutral.
Kentucky:
Catlettsburg	Yes.
Cumberland	Yes.
Earlington	Yes.
Hopkinsville	Yes.
Lebanon	No.
Madisonville	Neutral.
Mayfield	No.
Middlesborough	Unanswered.
Russellville	Yes.
Shelbyville	No.
Louisiana:
Alexandria	Yes.
Ferriday	Yes.
Lake Charles	Yes.
Merryville	Yes.
Pineville	No.
Maine:
Brewer	Unanswered.
Fort Fairfield	Neutral.
Rockland	Neutral.
Saco	Yes.
South Portland	Yes.
Waterville	Yes.

Maryland:
Baltimore	No.
Frederick	Yes.
Salisbury	No.
Massachusetts:
Amesbury	Unanswered.
Arlington	No.
Beverly	No.
Boston	No.
Brockton	No.
Chelsea	Unanswered.
Clinton	No.
Fall River	No.
Gardner	Yes.
Hopedale	No.
Hudson	Yes.
Leominster	No.
Lynn	Yes.
Mansfield	Neutral.
Marblehead	No.
Marlborough	Yes.
Medford	Yes.
Melrose	No.
Milford	Yes.
Needham	No.
New Bedford	Yes.
Newton	No.
Norwood	Yes.
Pittsfield	Yes.
Quincy	Unanswered.
Rockport	No.
Springfield	Neutral.
Stoughton	No.
Taunton	Yes.
Uxbridge	Yes.
Waltham	Neutral.
Wellesley	No.
Westfield	Unanswered.
Michigan:
Ann Arbor	Neutral.
Bay City	No.
Clawson	Yes.
Detroit	Yes.
Eaton Rapids	No.
East Grand Rapids	Neutral.
Escanaba	Yes.
Ferndale	Yes.
Flint	Yes.
Grand Rapids	Yes.
Greenville	No.
Grosse Pointe	Yes.
Hamtramck	Neutral.
Highland Park	No.
Holland	Yes.
Jackson	No.
Kalamazoo	No.
Lansing	Yes.
Lincoln Park	Yes.
Ludington	No.
Mason	No.
Monroe	No.
Mt. Pleasant	No.
Muskegon	No.
Niles	No.
Owosso	Yes.
Pontiac	Unanswered.
Port Huron	No.
River Rouge	Yes.
Rochester	Yes.
Rogers City	No.
Roseville	Yes.
Royal Oak	Neutral.
South Haven	No.
Traverse City	No.
Wakefield	Yes.
Wyandotte	Yes.
Ypsilanti	Neutral.
Minnesota:
Austin	No.
Blue Earth	No.
Brainerd	Yes.
Cloquet	Neutral.
Detroit Lakes	No.
Duluth	Unanswered.
Ely	No.
Hastings	No.
International Falls	Yes.
Lake City	No.
Marshall	Yes.
Minneapolis	Yes.
Montevideo	No.
Moorhead	No.
Pipestone	No.
Robbinsdale	No.
St. Cloud	Neutral.
St. James	No.
Minnesota—Continued.
St. Louis Park	Yes.
Staples	Yes.
South St. Paul	No.
Virginia	Yes.
Wadena	Yes.
Waseca	No.
White Bear Lake	No.
Mississippi:
Corinth	No.
Greenville	No.
Laurel	No.
Meridian	Yes.
Picayune	No.
Tupelo	No.
Yazoo City	Yes.
Vicksburg	No.
Missouri:
Carthage	No.
Cameron	No.
Clayton	No.
Columbia	No.
Farmington	No.
Ste. Genevieve	No.
Higginsville	No.
Independence	Yes.
Jefferson City	Neutral.
Lebanon	Yes.
Louisiana	Yes.
Maryville	No.
Moberly	Yes.
Poplar Bluff	Yes.
Richmond	No.
Sedalia	Unanswered.
Springfield	Yes.
Trenton	Yes.
Warrensburg	Neutral.
Montana:
Anaconda	No.
Bozeman	No.
Helena	No.
Miles City	Yes.
Missoula	Unanswered.
Red Lodge	No.
Nebraska:
Aurora	No.
Beatrice	No.
Chadron	Yes.
Crete	No.
Falls City	No.
Grand Island	Neutral.
Hastings	No.
North Platte	Neutral.
Sidney	Yes.
South Sioux City	Yes.
Wahoo	Yes.
Nevada:
Elko	Yes.
New Hampshire:
Berlin	No.
Keene	Unanswered.
Laconia	Yes.
Nashua	No.
Portsmouth	Neutral.
New Jersey:
Audubon	Yes.
Beverly	No.
Bogota	Yes.
Bordentown	No.
Bridgeton	Neutral.
Burlington	No.
Caldwell	No.
Clementon	No.
Cliffside Park	No.
Egg Harbor City	No.
Englewood	No.
Flemington	No.
Fort Lee	Unanswered.
Freehold	No.
Garfield	Yes.
Glassboro	Yes.
Hackensack	No.
Haledon	Yes.
Hightstown	No.
Hillside	Yes.
Linden	Yes.
Maplewood	No.
Maywood	Yes.
Merchantville	Unanswered.
Montclair	No.
Morristown	No.
New Brunswick	No.
Neptune	Unanswered.
Northfield	No.
Oaklyn	No.
Ridgewood	No.

New Jersey—Continued.
Roselle Park	Neutral.
Teaneck	No.
Tenafly	No.
Trenton	No.
Verona	Yes.
Wallington	Yes.
West New York	Yes.
West Paterson	Yes.
Westwood	Yes.
Wharton	Yes.
Woodlynne	Yes.
New Mexico:
Clovis	Yes.
Deming	No.
Gallup	No.
Roswell	No.
Santa Fe	No.
New York:
Babylon	No.
Batavia	No.
Bronxville	No.
Buffalo	No.
Canton	Unanswered.
Cohoes	Yes.
Cortland	Neutral.
Dunkirk	Yes.
Elmsford	No.
Farmingdale	No.
Fort Edward	Yes.
Garden City	No.
Geneva	No.
Irvington	No.
Jamestown	Neutral.
Johnstown	Neutral.
Larchmont	Neutral.
Lynbrook	Unanswered.
Massena	Neutral.
Medina	No.
Middletown	No.
Mineola	No.
New Rochelle	Yes.
Newburgh	Yes.
North Tonawanda	No.
Nyack	Yes.
Olean	No.
Oneida	No.
Oneonta	Yes.
Patchogue	No.
Pelham Manor	No.
Perry	No.
Plattsburg	Unanswered.
Pleasantville	No.
Port Jervis	Unanswered.
Rensselaer	Unanswered.
Rochester	Yes.
Rockville Centre	No.
Rye	No.
Schenectady	No.
Valley Stream	Yes.
Waterford	No.
Watertown	No.
White Plains	Yes.
Yorkville	Yes.
North Carolina:
Asheville	No.
Burlington	Neutral.
Charlotte	No.
Concord	No.
Fayetteville	Yes.
Goldsboro	Yes.
Henderson	Yes.
Lenoir	No.
Morganton	Yes.
Rocky Mount	Yes.
Smithfield	Yes.
Thomasville	No.
Winston-Salem	Unanswered.
North Dakota:
Bismarck	No.
Dickinson	No.
Fargo	Unanswered.
Jamestown	No.
Ohio:
Alliance	Unanswered.
Ashland	Yes.
Barberton	No.
Barnesville	Yes.
Bellare	Yes.
Bellefontaine	Yes.
Bridgeport	Yes.
Bryan	No.
Chillicothe	No.
Cleveland	No.
Cuyahoga Falls	Yes.
Dayton	Yes.
East Cleveland	Yes.
Ohio—Continued.
Elyria	Yes.
Euclid	Unanswered.
Franklin	No.
Fremont	Neutral.
Gallipolis	Yes.
Geneva	Yes.
Girard	Yes.
Ironton	Yes.
Kent	No.
Lima	No.
Lisbon	No.
Maumee	No.
Medina	No.
North Olmsted	Yes.
Perrysburg	No.
Rittman	No.
St. Marys	Yes.
Shelby	No.
Struthers	Yes.
Tippecanoe	No.
Toledo	Yes.
Uhrichsville	No.
Upper Sandusky	No.
Wadsworth	No.
Warren	Yes.
Wauseon	Yes.
Wellsville	No.
Willard	Yes.
Wooster	No.
Zanesville	Unanswered.
Oklahoma:
Ardmore	No.
Bartlesville	No.
Cushing	Neutral.
Duncan	Neutral.
Frederick	Yes.
Holdenville	Yes.
Ponca City	No.
Sapulpa	No.
Seminole	No.
Vinita	No.
Oregon:
Albany	No.
Astoria	No.
Bend	Neutral.
Eugene	No.
Newberg	Yes.
Salem	Yes.
Pennsylvania:
Apollo	Neutral.
Arnold	Yes.
Athens	Yes.
Beaver Falls	No.
Bloomsburg	No.
Boyertown	No.
Bradford	No.
Bristol	Unanswered.
Columbia	Neutral.
Conshohocken	No.
Duquesne	Yes.
East McKeesport	Yes.
Elizabethtown	No.
Ellwood City	Yes.
Emporium	No.
Franklin	No.
Freeland	Yes.
Glassport	Yes.
Hanover	Unanswered.
Harrisburg	Neutral.
Hatboro	No.
Hellertown	No.
Johnsonburg	Yes.
Kulpmont	Yes.
Kutztown	Yes.
Lebanon	Unanswered.
Leechburg	Yes.
Leetsdale	Yes.
Lehighton	Yes.
Mahanoy City	Yes.
Manheim	No.
Middletown	Yes.
Milton	No.
Minersville	Yes.
Morrisville	No.
Mount Carmel	Unanswered.
Munhall	No.
Nanty Glo	Yes.
Nazareth	No.
New Castle	Yes.
New Cumberland	Unanswered.
New Kensington	Unanswered.
North Braddock	Yes.
Oil City	No.
Olyphant	Yes.
Oxford	No.

Pennsylvania—Continued.
Philadelphia	Neutral.
Phoenixville	Unanswered.
Pottstown	Unanswered.
Reading	Yes.
Ridley Park	No.
Sharon	No.
Slatington	Yes.
South Fork	Yes.
Sunbury	Yes.
Taylor	Yes.
Throop	Yes.
Tyrone	No.
Upland	Yes.
Verona	Yes.
Washington	Neutral.
Waynesboro	No.
Wellsboro	No.
West Chester	No.
West Hazelton	Yes.
Stowe	Yes.
West View	No.
West Wyoming	Yes.
Williamsport	No.
Yeadon	No.
Rhode Island:
Pawtucket	No.
Providence	Yes.
South Carolina:
Anderson	No.
Camden	No.
Columbia	Unanswered.
Easley	No.
Georgetown	Neutral.
Greenwood	Yes.
Hartsville	No.
Sumter	No.
York	No.
South Dakota:
Brookings	No.
Mobridge	No.
Sioux Falls	Yes.
Watertown	No.
Tennessee:
Knoxville	Yes.
Kingsport	Unanswered.
Johnson City	Yes.
Jackson	No.
Franklin	Yes.
Dyersburg	No.
Clarksville	No.
Bristol	Neutral.
Springfield	No.
Milan	No.
London	Yes.
La Follette	Yes.
Texas:
Amarillo	No.
Austin	Neutral.
Brownwood	Unanswered.
Denton	No.
Electra	Yes.
Galveston	No.
Gatesville	No.
Goose Creek	Unanswered.
Greenville	No.
Harlingen	No.
Hearne	No.
Houston	No.
Huntsville	Unanswered.
Lampasas	Yes.
Littlefield	Yes.
Lockhart	No.
Lubbock	Unanswered.
Marshall	No.
Mineral Wells	No.
Nacogdoches	No.
New Braunfels	No.
Palestine	No.
Pecos	No.
San Angelo	Neutral.
Smithville	No.
Stamford	Yes.
Sweetwater	Yes.
Uvalde	No.
Utah:
Helper	Yes.
Logan	Yes.
Ogden	Yes.
Payson	Yes.
Vermont:
Bennington	No.
Brattleboro	No.
Newport	No.
St. Albans	No.
Virginia:
Alexandria	No.
Clifton Forge	Yes.
Virginia—Continued.
Fredericksburg	No.
Hopewell	Yes.
Lynchburg	Unanswered.
Marion	No.
Norfolk	No.
Radford	Yes.
South Boston	No.
Staunton	Neutral.
Suffolk	No.
Waynesboro	No.
Winchester	No.
Wytheville	No.
Washington:
Bellingham	No.
Bremerton	Yes.
Clarkston	No.
Hoquiam	Neutral.
Kelso	No.
Lilliwaup	No.
Longview	No.
Mount Vernon	Yes.
Omak	No.
Pasco	Neutral.
Port Angeles	Neutral.
Raymond	No.
Shelton	Neutral.
Tacoma	Yes.
Toppenish	Yes.
Vancouver	No.
West Virginia:
Benwood	Yes.
Bluefield	No.
Charleston	No.
Clarksburg	No.
Elkins	Yes.
Grafton	Neutral.
Hinton	Yes.
Kenova	Neutral.
McMechen	Yes.
New Martinsville	Yes.
Point Pleasant	Yes.
St. Albans	Yes.
South Charleston	Yes.
Welch	No.
Wisconsin:
Appleton	Yes.
Ashland	Yes.
Beaver Dam	Yes.
Beloit	Neutral.
Clintonville	No.
Columbus	No.
De Pere	No.
Eau Claire	No.
Edgerton	No.
Fond du Lac	No.
Janesville	No.
Kenosha	Yes.
La Crosse	Yes.
Lake Geneva	Yes.
Madison	Yes.
Manitowoc	Yes.
Menasha	Neutral.
Menomonie	No.
Milwaukee	Unanswered.
Monroe	No.
Oshkosh	No.
Racine	Yes.
Rhinelander	Neutral.
Ripon	No.
Sheboygan	Neutral.
Sheboygan Falls	No.
Shorewood	No.
Sparta	No.
Stevens Point	No.
Two Rivers	Yes.
Watertown	No.
Waukesha	No.
Wausau	Neutral.
Wauwatosa	Yes.
West Bend	No.
Wisconsin Rapids	No.
Whitewater	No.
Wyoming:
Cheyenne	No.
Rock Springs	Yes.

EXHIBIT B

W. P. A. expenditures from funds provided in the Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts of 1935 and 1936, through Mar. 31, 1937

United States, total	$2,774,250,289.27
New York City	394,547,510.60
New York State	122,477,363.08
Pennsylvania	298,076,620.03

Source: U. S. Treasury Department.

Number and estimated cost from Federal funds of Works Progress Administration projects placed in operation, by types of projects

[Through Mar. 31, 1937]

NEW YORK CITY

Type of project	Number of projects	Estimated cost from Federal funds
Total	812	$470,994,696
Highways, roads, and streets	60	82,136,484
Streets and alleys	29	59,776,783
Sidewalks and curbs	1	47,722
Roadside improvements	16	8,675,870
Bridges and viaducts	6	8,269,844
Grade-crossing elimination	1	56,772
Other [1]	7	5,309,493
Public buildings	101	92,422,788
Administrative	27	22,576,674
Charitable, medical, and mental institutions	9	15,884,295
Educational	18	20,456,984
Social and recreational	6	2,044,023
Federal Government (including military and naval)	22	9,608,541
Improvement of grounds	1	1,501,815
Housing	2	6,826,314
Other [1]	16	13,524,142
Parks and other recreational facilities	40	131,179,030
Playgrounds and athletic fields	2	4,993,241
Parks	1	1,383,253
Other [1]	37	124,802,536
Land utilization	1	163,389
Sewer systems and other utilities	27	33,960,755
Water purification and supply	5	6,904,369
Sewer systems	14	25,279,744
Electric utilities	8	1,776,642
Airports and other transportation	7	21,696,234
Airports and airways	2	6,147,760
Navigation	5	15,548,474
Education	32	20,801,929
Professional and clerical	504	61,137,151
Women's projects	9	6,346,889
Sewing	5	6,041,310
Canning	1	34,400
Other [1]	3	271,179
Sanitation and health	9	9,726,146
Miscellaneous	22	11,423,901

NEW YORK (EXCLUDING NEW YORK CITY)

Type of project	Number of projects	Estimated cost from Federal funds
Total	6,846	$158,719,009
Highways, roads, and streets	2,437	46,798,406
Highways	4	45,062
Farm-to-market and other secondary roads	1,045	13,187,357
Streets and alleys	646	20,022,944
Sidewalks, curbs, and paths	245	6,325,655
Roadside improvements	244	2,706,408
Bridges and viaducts	63	505,393
Other [1]	189	4,005,677
Public buildings	867	16,048,792
Administrative	235	2,045,987
Charitable, medical and mental institution	119	2,734,342
Educational	189	3,638,172
Social and recreational	88	4,109,577
Federal Government (including military and naval)	11	296,240
Improvement of grounds	179	2,345,306
Other [1]	46	879,168
Parks and other recreational facilities	401	11,306,637
Playgrounds and athletic fields	148	1,854,413
Parks	169	3,545,107
Other [1]	84	5,907,117
Conservation	160	4,762,617
Forestation	22	206,940
Erosion control and land utilization	11	214,912
Water conservation and flood control	99	3,364,572
Plant, crop, and livestock conservation	3	372,083
Other [1]	25	604,110
Sewer systems and other utilities	1,374	31,052,218
Water purification and supply	388	9,545,480
Sewer systems	950	20,808,732
Electric utilities	15	205,114
Other [1]	21	492,892

[1] Includes projects classifiable under more than 1 of the headings above.

Number and estimated cost from Federal funds of Works Progress Administration projects placed in operation, by types of projects—Continued

NEW YORK (EXCLUDING NEW YORK CITY)—continued

Type of project	Number of projects	Estimated cost from Federal funds
Airports and other transportation	36	3,839,514
Airports and airways	31	3,699,036
Navigation	3	16,344
Other [1]	2	124,134
Education	39	4,638,781
Professional and clerical	809	11,224,825
Women's projects	469	19,246,513
Sewing	244	12,589,793
Other [1]	225	6,656,720
Sanitation and health	26	1,929,147
Elimination of stream pollution	8	160,310
Mosquito eradication	11	1,675,078
Other [1]	7	93,759
Miscellaneous	228	7,871,559

PENNSYLVANIA

Type of project	Number of projects	Estimated cost from Federal funds
Total	10,448	$354,674,729
Highways, roads, and streets	3,619	204,114,090
Highways	4	4,493,798
Farm-to-market and other secondary roads	1,362	21,722,166
Streets and alleys	983	32,391,817
Sidewalks, curbs, and paths	171	1,840,874
Roadside improvements	468	87,561,263
Bridges and viaducts	187	1,100,936
Other [1]	444	55,003,236
Public buildings	1,934	21,304,024
Administrative	249	2,267,350
Charitable, medical, and mental institutions	139	2,017,112
Educational	1,028	8,890,021
Social and recreational	85	$1,496,682
Federal Government (including military and naval)	49	1,935,325
Improvement of grounds	335	3,935,251
Other [1]	49	762,283
Parks and other recreational facilities	719	21,643,489
Playgrounds and athletic fields	384	6,270,178
Parks	281	13,583,981
Other [1]	54	1,789,330
Conservation	430	11,467,317
Forestation	37	559,155
Erosion control and land utilization	3	21,632
Irrigation and water conservation	208	8,771,398
Plant, crop, and livestock conservation	6	288,398
Other [1]	116	1,826,734
Sewer systems and other utilities	1,043	20,993,999
Water purification and supply	259	5,644,324
Sewer systems	776	15,083,539
Electric utilities	2	192,564
Other [1]	6	73,572
Airports and other transportation	78	12,512,051
Airports and airways	74	12,490,672
Navigation	2	7,218
Other [1]	2	14,161
Education	77	5,272,286
Professional and clerical	1,570	20,171,938
Women's projects	405	28,035,219
Sewing	379	27,357,082
Other [1]	26	678,137
Sanitation and health	138	4,096,711
Elimination of stream pollution	11	461,753
Mosquito eradication	5	183,915
Other [1]	122	3,451,043
Miscellaneous	435	5,063,605

[1] Includes projects classifiable under more than 1 of the headings above.

EXHIBIT C

FEDERAL EMERGENCY ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC WORKS,
Washington, D. C., June 14, 1937.

Hon. J. W. BAILEY,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR BAILEY: In accordance with our acknowledgment of May 29, 1937, of your letter dated May 26, 1937, in which you requested a list of all projects for New York City, New York State, and Pennsylvania, indicating the amount of money paid out from the Public Works Administration for each docket listed, also a sum total of all moneys paid out by the Public Works Administration, we submit the following information:

Summary Non-Federal Allotments and Disbursements, United States, by States, as of May 31, 1937.

Non-Federal Allotments and Disbursements, State of New York (New York City), as of May 31, 1937.

Non-Federal Allotments and Disbursements, State of New York, as of May 31, 1937.

Non-Federal Allotments and Disbursements, State of Pennsylvania (Philadelphia), as of May 31, 1937.

Non-Federal Allotments and Disbursements, State of Pennsylvania, as of May 31, 1937.

The term "disbursements", as used on the above lists, represents the amount of P. W. A. loans and grants which have been paid into the construction accounts.

Sincerely yours,

HORATIO B. HACKETT,
Assistant Administrator.
Per E. W. CLARK.

Summary of non-Federal allotments and disbursements, United States, by States, May 31, 1937

State	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
Alabama	$17,989,063.53	$12,998,032.37
Arizona	7,757,611.08	6,865,145.28
Arkansas	17,368,037.23	15,409,881.24
California	68,197,466.95	53,568,758.12
Colorado	12,931,756.05	7,328,254.86
Connecticut	9,920,694.00	7,984,274.34
Delaware	1,713,976.17	1,668,501.82
Florida	21,235,715.90	15,743,702.60
Georgia	9,015,796.38	7,839,947.56
Idaho	3,185,457.17	2,040,100.54
Illinois	127,327,185.22	101,551,346.90
Indiana	20,535,103.84	17,223,227.82
Iowa	11,358,182.97	9,223,209.11
Kansas	14,976,770.39	13,287,701.92
Kentucky	16,778,111.15	10,463,060.79
Louisiana	10,788,590.39	6,136,411.31
Maine	1,610,997.00	896,004.03
Maryland	$21,813,031.81	$15,743,414.99
Massachusetts	27,242,909.99	21,024,170.98
Michigan	36,091,889.81	16,710,253.76
Minnesota	18,581,920.47	10,937,121.29
Mississippi	31,131,441.47	12,210,198.04
Missouri	29,125,408.84	18,606,100.86
Montana	14,156,041.19	9,695,129.87
Nebraska	40,501,769.13	25,777,232.44
Nevada	1,555,017.30	1,277,152.49
New Hampshire	3,098,214.10	2,619,770.18
New Jersey	35,397,539.71	21,703,675.80
New Mexico	4,803,230.16	4,144,546.64
New York	71,698,752.24	51,409,738.18
New York City	$209,349,360.00	129,257,357.13
North Carolina	19,653,131.01	15,135,348.82
North Dakota	3,914,610.23	3,401,917.78
Ohio	51,417,753.64	39,643,781.04
Oklahoma	13,365,005.97	11,995,270.21
Oregon	11,785,132.28	9,744,624.23
Pennsylvania	31,758,127.28	20,605,677.40
Philadelphia	14,781,331.00	9,473,407.26
Rhode Island	8,832,206.40	5,450,687.08
South Carolina	21,766,681.53	11,939,557.27
South Dakota	6,128,901.89	5,433,343.34
Tennessee	19,911,362.44	11,618,498.84
Texas	77,280,944.64	60,205,685.53
Utah	5,630,054.42	4,867,775.64
Vermont	1,630,197.02	1,374,263.92
Virginia	18,441,190.77	14,766,506.28
Washington	17,543,938.17	11,314,274.08
West Virginia	8,573,087.38	7,400,214.55
Wisconsin	14,402,205.27	9,394,576.05
Wyoming	3,049,170.72	1,564,589.49
District of Columbia	6,504,000.00	6,495,293.65
Alaska	973,600.46	905,451.53
Hawaii	2,041,399.67	1,857,302.58
Puerto Rico	3,172,172.00	2,245,230.74
Virgin Islands	152,664.00	111,939.00
Total	1,279,940,909.83	898,098,639.67
Railroads	200,974,500.00	200,974,500.00

Summary of non-Federal allotments and disbursements, United States, May 31, 1937—Continued

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937

STATE OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK CITY

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
39	Triboro Bridge Authority	Bridges and viaducts	$44,200,000.00	$43,267,651.75
228	Port of New York Authority	Subways and tunnels	17,030,000.00	15,755,824.30
262	Hillside Housing Corporation	Limited dividend housing	4,990,000.00	4,988,336.00
266	Boulevard Gardens Housing Co	do	3,450,000.00	3,069,586.97
1028-R	New York City	Hospital buildings	412,363.00	180,090.00
1060-D	Brooklyn	Courthouses (including jails)	618,545.00
1075-R	New York City	Complete waterworks system and equipment	929,700.00	653,205.25
1085-R	do	Ferryboat	1,397,250.00	776,250.00
1090-D	do	Courthouses (including jails)	2,175,930.00	21,453.58
1147-R	do	New secondary schools	344,700.00	241,384.50
1178-R	do	do	465,544.00	213,378.38
1179-R	do	Repairs to secondary schools	171,225.00	116,862.90
1180-R	do	New secondary schools	779,400.00	478,518.32
1181-R	do	Repairs to secondary schools	125,550.00	84,906.50
1198-R	Brooklyn	New secondary schools	779,850.00	456,463.88
1208-D	New York City	Hospital buildings	141,300.00
1376-D	Bronx	Bridges and viaducts	367,650.00
1392-R	New York City	Repairs to hospital buildings	268,762.00	114,312.00
1393-R	do	Hospital buildings	724,500.00	357,500.00
1399-R	Brooklyn	New secondary schools	380,250.00	289,161.76
1448-R	New York City	Repairs to secondary schools	118,800.00	86,625.00
1451-R	do	do	440,100.00	342,300.00
1453-D	do	New secondary schools	194,850.00
1475	New York City Tunnel Authority	Subways and tunnels	58,365,000.00	2,405,000.00
1512-D	New York City	New highways, roads, and trails	2,434,500.00	811,500.00
2654	do	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	1,000,000.00	984,000.00
2726	do	Hospital buildings	1,258,000.00	627,605.64
2735	do	New secondary schools	2,070,000.00	1,940,750.00
2741	do	Subways and tunnels	19,392,000.00	18,477,085.90
2756	do	Municipal improvements	567,500.00	235,124.37
3236	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	796,200.00	661,000.00
3247	do	Garbage-disposal plants and incinerators	2,660,000.00	2,089,264.20
3249	do	Repairs to secondary schools	1,898,500.00	1,755,000.00
4333	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	519,000.00	242,635.15
4985	do	Hospital buildings	185,000.00	173,786.18
6863	do	Electric distribution	110,000.00	108,000.00
6878	do	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	981,000.00	915,731.76
6882	do	Piers	218,000.00	103,719.90
6926	do	Pier sheds	360,000.00	149,575.62
6931	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	516,500.00	467,504.28
6938	do	do	259,000.00	210,149.72
6956	do	Gymnasium	65,800.00	55,479.90
6957	do	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	497,000.00	469,720.14
7124	do	Repairs to streets	252,000.00	202,436.51
7150	do	Repairs to secondary schools	318,000.00	287,000.00
7161	do	New secondary schools	1,197,000.00	1,120,028.22
7173	do	do	384,100.00	360,475.00
7181	do	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	131,700.00	113,229.17
7196	do	Fire department and police station buildings	187,000.00	99,025.93
7215	do	Repairs to secondary schools	257,000.00	234,700.00
7244-R	do	New secondary schools	471,136.00	399,772.45
7582	do	do	301,700.00	265,200.00
8000	do	do	832,000.00	717,355.89
8024-R	do	do	1,387,681.00	1,008,850.05
8044-R	do	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	11,300,250.00	6,311,250.00

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF NEW YORK—Continued

NEW YORK CITY—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
8071	New York City	New secondary schools	$630,000.00	$605,237.93
8072	do	General municipal improvements	97,400.00	91,000.00
8073	do	New secondary schools	246,000.00	225,400.00
8081	Jewish Memorial Hospital	Hospital buildings	350,000.00	350,000.00
8118-R	New York City	New secondary schools	329,500.00	227,375.00
8281	do	do	548,000.00	531,969.98
8332	do	Laboratory	474,500.00	395,400.00
8882	do	New secondary schools	1,043,600.00	958,758.73
8884-R	do	do	2,003,863.00	1,394,049.88
8885	New York City	Bridges and viaducts	289,000.00	240,415.08
8892-R	do	Electric distribution system	215,181.00	119,545.00
8898	do	Pier sheds	1,193,000.00	1,001,011.69
8929	do	Rapid transit	118,500.00	12,000.00
9048	do	Dock improvements	142,000.00	61,227.71
9049	do	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	582,700.00	464,869.02
9050	do	Jails, prisons, reformatories	910,000.00	648,066.70
9051	do	Repairs to municipal buildings	851,600.00	612,709.70
9060-R	do	Repairs to jails, prisons, reformatories	47,681.00	35,820.00
90631	do	Hospital buildings	195,000.00	163,574.37
90662	do	do	402,000.00	331,763.34
9068-R	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	91,227.00	44,456.00
9161	do	do	241,000.00	211,370.00
9164-R	do	do	76,500.00	51,406.75
9165	do	do	168,500.00	97,400.00
9166-R	do	Hospital buildings	993,681.00	551,920.00
9167-R	do	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	205,636.00	175,272.60
9175-R	do	College and university buildings	2,700,000.00	2,150,000.00
9176	do	Hospital buildings	78,000.00	74,863.88
9205	do	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	1,807,500.00	1,713,411.85
9233-R	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	33,955.00	16,294.75
9240-R	do	do	495,000.00	215,000.00
	Total, 86		209,349,360.00	129,257,357.13

BALANCE OF STATE

539-D	Syracuse	Social, recreational buildings (municipal)	$270,000.00	$90,000.00
1003-R	North Collins	New secondary schools	83,300.00	64,750.00
1004-R	Webster	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	91,688.03	71,297.33
1012-R	Suffolk County	Dams, levees, channel dredging	127,494.00	99,162.00
1015-R	do	New highways, roads, and trails	45,600.00	45,600.00
1017-R	do	do	72,000.00	72,000.00
1019-R	Corpu	New secondary schools	71,182.00	55,353.00
1022-D	Monroe County	do	225,000.00	225,000.00
1024-R	New Castle	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plant	13,909.00	13,268.34
1027-R	Grand Island	New secondary schools	40,909.00	31,818.15
1029-R	Amherst	Repairs to secondary schools	118,536.00	92,194.66
1030-R	Carrollton	New secondary schools	59,727.00	46,454.33
1032-R	Tonawanda	do	81,818.00	63,636.30
1033-R	West Valley	do	91,636.00	71,272.60
1034-R	Buffalo	Combination storm and sanitary sewers	10,608,000.00	3,868,535.75
1036-D	Mount Vernon	New secondary schools	223,364.00	124,091.00
1038-R	Clymer	do	85,077.00	66,171.00
1039-R	Ithaca	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	13,950.00	12,447.00
1040-R	Gowanda	Repairs to secondary schools	34,364.00	24,115.86
1041-R	Buffalo	Repairs to courthouses	78,500.00	58,563.40
1042-R	Union School District No. 2	Repairs to secondary schools	18,000.00	18,000.00
1045-D	Sloan	Dams, canals, etc	92,727.00	92,727.00
1052-R	Ithaca	Repairs to secondary schools	91,636.00	91,429.24
1054-R	Peekskill	Municipal buildings	57,272.00	44,545.20
1055-R	Falconer	New secondary schools and repairs to existing schools	62,100.00	62,100.00
1057-R	Auburn	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	360,000.00	280,000.00
1058-R	Rome	Fire department and police station buildings	18,284.00	17,616.42
1061-D	Scio	Complete waterworks system and equipment	20,691.00	20,011.39
1062-R	Herkimer	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	34,363.00	26,727.05
1063-R	Lockport	Libraries and museums (municipal)	59,575.00	46,336.15
1066-R	Ebenezer	Repairs to secondary schools	19,485.00	19,485.00
1068-R	Cornwall	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	91,398.00	91,398.00
1071-R	North Hempstead	Repairs to secondary schools	13,050.00	13,050.00
1072-R	Schoharie	Jails, prisons, reformatories	34,178.06	33,210.53
1073-D	Rochester	Repairs to secondary schools	79,650.00	61,950.00
1074-D	South Dayton	do	40,317.00	29,659.00
1076-R	Oyster Bay	New street paving	47,454.00	26,363.50
1077-R	Niagara Falls	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	1,035,000.00	575,000.00
1078-R	Easthampton	New secondary schools	76,050.00	59,150.00
1079-R	Yonkers	Repairs and improvements to highways	32,727.00	25,454.45
1080-R	do	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	130,090.00	86,790.56
1083-R	Maybrook	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	65,454.00	58,908.90
1084-D	Canisteo	New secondary schools	135,000.00
1086-R	Sherwood	Repairs to secondary schools	27,573.00	27,573.00
1093-R	Angola	New secondary schools and repairs to existing schools	81,000.00	63,000.00
1094-R	Harrisville	Repairs to secondary schools	35,181.00	27,363.35
1095-R	Perry	Water storage (tanks, reservoirs, etc.)	18,293.00	18,293.00
1096-R	Kendall	New secondary schools	99,000.00	98,941.53
1097-R	Lyons	Charitable institutions	31,785.00	31,785.00
1098-R	Pavilion	New secondary schools	75,515.00	58,734.20
1099-R	Weedsport	Repairs to secondary schools	34,420.00	34,420.00
1100-R	Riverhead	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	66,191.00	51,482.00
1102-R	Friendship	Repairs to secondary schools	67,500.00	63,274.07
1104-D	Mamaroneck	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	188,446.00
1105-R	Mount Kisco	Repairs to combination waterworks and sewers	18,396.00	17,773.04
1108-D	New York	New secondary schools	110,454.00
1109-D	do	Repairs to hospital buildings	122,727.00
1113-D	do	do	83,454.00
1116-D	Pittsburg	New secondary schools	64,636.00	35,909.00
1117-R	Candor	Repairs to secondary schools	36,450.00	36,450.00
1118-R	Morrisville	New secondary schools	185,625.00	144,375.00
1120-R	Rye	Fire department and police station buildings	68,718.00	65,462.65
1121-R	Catteraugus	Repairs to secondary schools	40,909.00	31,818.00
1122-D	Olmstedville	do	62,950.00	39,200.00
1125-R	Berlin	New secondary schools	103,340.00	80,375.55
1126-R	Sodus	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	31,310.00	24,356.50

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF NEW YORK—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
1128–R	Hamburg	Repairs to secondary schools	$32,400.00	$32,400.00
1129–D	Rochester	Garbage disposal plants and incinerators	184,096.00	102,275.00
1130–R	Poughkeepsie	Hospital buildings	39,692.00	39,692.00
1131–D	Mount Kisco	Wells, dams, canals, etc., for water supply	27,900.00
1132–D	Ogdensburg	New secondary schools	180,000.00	100,000.00
1133–D	Ogdensburg	Vocational schools	81,000.00	63,000.00
1134–R	West Chester County	Repairs and improvements to highways	49,909.00	49,909.00
1135–D	Cortlandt	do	130,909.00	9,137.50
1137–R	Gowanda	Municipal buildings	26,100.00	26,100.00
1138–R	Red Hook	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	28,751.00	22,362.20
1139–R	Clarence	Repairs to secondary schools	49,500.00	38,499.50
1141–R	Mount Vernon	do	24,545.00	24,238.60
1143–R	Gloversville	New street paving	25,446.00	25,446.00
1151–D	New York	Repairs to secondary schools	64,636.00
1152–D	Rochester	New secondary schools	117,000.00	91,000.00
1153–D	do	do	148,500.00	115,500.00
1154–D	do	Fire department and police-station buildings	182,970.00	142,310.00
1155–D	do	Dams, levees, and channel dredging	144,000.00	80,000.00
1156–R	Tonawanda, Kenmore	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	112,197.00	87,264.80
1157–R	Orisville	Sidewalks, curbs, and gutters	10,227.00	9,998.24
1159–R	Marcellus	New secondary schools	238,500.00	185,500.00
1160–R	Bradford	Repairs to secondary schools	67,272.00	53,818.00
1162–R	Newberg	New secondary schools	546,750.00	425,250.00
1164–R	Sherman	Repairs to secondary schools	69,999.00	54,397.00
1166–D	Brentwood	Repairs to hospital buildings	193,883.00
1169–D	Rochester	General municipal improvements	58,500.00	35,710.09
1170–R	Stewart Manor	Social, recreational buildings (municipal)	16,363.00	16,363.00
1171–R	Bemus Point	Repairs to secondary schools	33,750.00	33,688.72
1173–R	Catskill	New secondary schools	158,850.00	123,550.00
1175–R	Porter	Repairs to wells, dams, canals, etc	27,967.00	23,286.93
1176–R	Owego	Complete waterworks system and equipment	22,500.00	22,500.00
1184–D	Chester	Repairs to secondary schools	30,330.00	23,590.00
1185–D	Yaphank	Hospital buildings	268,000.02	24,000.00
1187–R	Hempstead	Repairs to secondary schools	169,363.00	131,727.05
1188–R	Eggertsville	do	36,000.00	35,487.13
1189–R	Evans	Complete waterworks system and equipment	21,019.00	20,944.08
1192–D	Niagara Falls	Fire-alarm systems and police communications	22,860.00	12,700.00
1193–D	Claverack	Fire department and police-station buildings	6,136.00
1194–R	Avon	Repairs to secondary schools	47,250.00	46,945.73
1195–D	Mohawk	Sewage-disposal plants	12,122.00	6,734.75
1196–D	Rushford	New secondary schools	72,000.00	56,000.00
1197–D	Rochester	Fire department and police-station buildings	83,408.00
1199–R	Lima	New secondary schools	47,070.00	36,610.00
1200–D	Greenwood	do	55,000.00	30,555.55
1201–R	Denmark	do	135,000.00	105,000.00
1203–D	Queensbury	do	67,500.00	52,500.00
1204–R	Goshen	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	36,184.90	28,946.62
1205–D	Chester	New secondary schools	117,358.00	91,278.39
1216–D	Herkimer	Warehouses, laboratories, shops, garages	19,439.00	8,495.90
1218–R	Queensbury	New secondary schools	153,900.00	119,700.00
1222–D	West Seneca	Fire department and police-station buildings	10,636.00	5,909.00
1223–D	Albany	Pier sheds	33,750.00
1225–D	Cedarhurst	Repairs to streets	9,000.00
1226–R	Riverhead	New secondary schools	289,636.00	225,272.60
1227–R	Fleischmanns	Repairs to secondary schools	65,155.00	64,576.75
1228–R	Oneida	Hospital buildings	99,000.00	77,000.00
1230–R	New Berlin	New secondary schools	128,700.00	100,100.00
1233–D	Springport	do	146,250.00	81,260.00
1234–R	New Hyde Park	Electric distribution system	300,000.00
1235–R	Philadelphia	New secondary schools	54,171.00	54,171.00
1236–R	Altona	do	97,363.00	75,726.85
1237–D	Grand Island	Complete waterworks system and equipment	62,181.00
1238–D	do	Sewage disposal plants	18,000.00
1239–D	Cornwall	do	90,276.00
1240–R	Ballston Spa	Combined new sewage disposal plants and repairs to existing plants.	36,818.00	36,818.00
1243–D	Central Islip	Fire department and police-station buildings	28,192.00	9,397.00
1244–R	Clinton and Essex Counties	Repairs to secondary schools	280,000.00	252,000.00
1245–R	Yonkers	do	117,818.00	117,133.01
1248–R	Marlborough	New secondary schools	167,141.00	129,999.10
1249–D	Croton on Hudson	Repairs to sidewalks, boardwalks, and sewers	45,454.30	6,578.10
1250–R	Pomona	Hospital buildings	204,592.00	159,127.50
1254–R	Perry	New secondary schools	22,500.00	17,510.00
1255–R	Prattsburg	Repairs to secondary schools	80,902.00	62,923.77
1257–D	Dryden and Freeville	do	137,025.00	76,125.00
1258–R	Windham	New school districts	123,750.00	96,250.00
1259–R	Dansville	Repairs to secondary schools	56,475.00	43,916.25
1260–D	Jamestown	do	67,500.00	67,500.00
1261–D	Rochester	do	202,500.00	157,500.00
1266–R	Carmel	Complete waterworks system and equipment	49,909.00	38,818.15
1267–R	St. Regis Falls	do	116,363.00	101,334.27
1268–R	Brant	New secondary schools	18,000.00	17,993.02
1270–R	Gouverneur	Repairs to secondary schools	101,993.00	79,095.10
1271–D	New Rochelle	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	19,350.00
1272–D	do	Warehouses, shops, laboratories, and garages	19,350.00
1276–R	Wyandanch	New secondary schools	120,000.00	108,000.00
1281–R	Arkport	do	63,000.00	49,000.00
1282–D	Buffalo	Jails, prisons, reformatories	326,250.00
1283	Erie County	Repairs and improvements to highways	1,259,800.00	1,119,000.00
1283–D	Troy	New secondary schools	643,090.00
1284	Buffalo	do	334,500.00	214,186.77
1285	do	Storm drains and sewers	1,148,413.98	1,135,413.98
1287	do	New secondary schools	710,000.00	697,000.00
1287–D	Golden	do	9,000.00
1288–D	Norfolk	Combined waterworks and sewers	81,818.00
1289–R	Carmel	Repairs to courthouses	29,250.00	22,750.00
1290–D	Corning	Bridges and viaducts	130,275.00	72,375.00
1292–R	Minetto	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	28,967.00	28,716.23
1293–R	Holland	New secondary schools	197,475.00	148,925.00
1296–R	Glen Falls	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	74,700.00	58,100.00
1297–D	Colonie	do	26,636.00	26,529.20
1298–D	do	Sewage-disposal plants	110,454.00
1299–D	Port Byron	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	45,000.00	15,000.00
1300–R	Watervliet	New secondary schools	322,363.00	250,727.05
1301–D	Ossining	Repairs to secondary schools	119,119.00	92,648.00
1302–R	Watkins Glen	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	88,181.00	86,824.00

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF NEW YORK—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
1303–R	Palisades	New secondary schools	$23,760.00	$23,183.27
1306–R	Highland Falls	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	121,000.00	121,000.00
1309–R	Orangetown	Repairs to secondary schools	29,475.00	29,080.54
1311–R	Courtlandt	Complete waterworks system and equipment	14,727.00	14,169.99
1313–D	Haverstraw	Municipal buildings	70,909.00	56,727.25
1314–R	Tuckahoe	Repairs to secondary schools	155,250.00	120,750.00
1315–R	New City	do	13,909.00	13,909.00
1316–R	Harrison	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	16,363.00	16,363.00
1317–D	Gloversville	Repairs to streets	46,846.00
1321–R	Binghamton	Bridges and viaducts	162,297.00	126,231.70
1322–R	do	Repairs and improvements to highways	82,188.00	63,924.70
1325–R	Spencer	New secondary schools	75,145.00	71,143.10
1327–R	Binghamton and Johnson City	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	27,000.00	21,000.00
1329–R	Brocton	Complete waterworks system and equipment	36,028.00	28,021.70
1331–D	Albany	Fire-alarm systems and police communications	62,687.00
1332–D	Montgomery	New secondary schools	112,500.00	85,250.00
1335–R	Gloversville	do	84,764.00	65,928.10
1336–D	Endicott	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	23,400.00	19,359.21
1338–D	Evans Mills	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	27,000.00
1342–R	Bath	Hospital buildings	61,027.00	47,465.44
1343–R	Jefferson	New secondary schools	53,100.00	41,300.00
1345–R	Newfane	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	65,803.00	45,419.50
1347–R	do	Complete waterworks system and equipment	48,092.00	37,405.20
1351–D	Montrose	Repairs to secondary schools	125,454.00	112,908.90
1354–R	St. Regis Falls	do	19,350.00	15,050.00
1355–R	Saranac Lake	do	41,818.00	37,636.30
1356–D	Plattsburg	Sewage-disposal plants	340,000.00
1360–R	Woodlawn	New secondary schools	68,400.00	53,200.00
1361–D	Alden	Repairs to secondary schools	61,357.00	47,724.95
1365–D	Lackawanna	Repairs to libraries and museums	22,500.00
1366–D	Greece	Sewage-disposal plants	499,500.00	166,500.00
1368–R	Oyster Bay	Garbage-disposal plants and incinerators	58,090.00	39,949.00
1371–R	Woodmere	New secondary schools and repairs to existing schools	176,850.00	137,550.00
1373–D	Hempstead	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	308,454.00	129,825.25
1374–R	do	Complete waterworks system and equipment	153,000.00	124,033.96
1380–R	Binghamton	New secondary schools	374,400.00	291,200.00
1382–D	Cortlandt	Complete waterworks system and equipment	17,100.00
1383–D	Elmira	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	419,400.00	285,278.93
1387–R	Plattsburg	Electric distribution system	520,000.00
1390–R	Garden City Park	Repairs to secondary schools	67,500.00	52,500.00
1391–R	Carmel	do	49,500.00	38,500.00
1400–D	Yorktown	Complete waterworks system and equipment	6,545.00
1405–R	Auburn	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	55,935.00	48,056.04
1409–D	Albany	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	88,074.00
1410–D	Rockville Center	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	81,900.00	52,851.40
1414–D	Olean	Complete waterworks system and equipment	64,800.00
1415–D	Niagara Falls	Municipal buildings	67,500.00
1417–D	Niagara	Bridges and viaducts	29,430.00
1425–R	Westchester County	Repairs to combine sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	417,473.00	141,933.00
1428	Goshen	Repairs and improvement to waterworks and equipment	155,113.51	155,113.51
1437–R	Bath	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	66,272.00	51,545.20
1438–D	Steuben County	Repairs and improvements to highways	45,675.00
1441–R	Jamestown	Hospital buildings	36,000.00	28,000.00
1446	Geneva	Sewage-disposal plants	237,000.00	227,992.90
1458–R	Westchester	Repairs to combine sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants—Combine with docket 1425–R.		90,000.00
1463–R	Rome	Hospital buildings	73,285.00	73,098.81
1467–D	Esopus	Repairs and improvements to waterworks equipment	56,250.00
1477–R	Stanford	New secondary schools	188,100.00	104,500.00
1479	Syracuse University	College and university buildings	825,000.00	825,000.00
1482–D	Olcott	Complete waterworks system and equipment	51,660.00	2,110.46
1483–D	Verplanck	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	37,636.00	20,909.00
1485–D	Port Byron	New secondary schools	225,000.00	19,900.00
1493–D	Odessa	do	129,240.00	71,800.00
1503–D	Ovid	do	157,500.00	14,000.00
1516–D	Mexico et al	do	225,000.00
1520–D	Akron	Repairs to secondary schools	53,333.00
1524–D	Deferiet	Complete waterworks system and equipment	18,900.00
1532–D	Somers	New secondary schools	149,727.00
1541	Croton on Hudson	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	115,152.69	115,152.69
1548	Suffolk County	Repairs and improvements to highways	16,400.00	16,400.00
1553–D	Lockport	Repairs to hospital buildings	92,858.00	30,952.50
1597	Canajoharie	Sewage-disposal plants	55,804.68	55,804.68
1604	Malone	do	10,000.00	9,285.84
1631	Westchester County	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	1,378,000.00	1,246,116.67
1832	Utica	New secondary schools and repairs to existing schools	716,300.00	690,753.08
2113	Niagara Falls	Complete waterworks system and equipment	229,000.00	229,000.00
2116	Pelham	do	175,256.45	175,256.44
2140	Rochester	New secondary schools	746,000.00	720,423.77
2176	Holland	Complete waterworks system and equipment	79,000.00	77,261.37
2195	North Hempstead	Sewage-disposal plants	131,215.86	131,215.86
2204	Mount Morris	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	45,022.93	45,022.93
2218	Rochester	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plant.	660,000.00	485,426.99
2220	Rensselaer	Repairs to storm drains and sewers	12,548.57	12,548.57
2221	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	175,000.00	173,635.32
2223	Yonkers	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	703,000.00	696,651.95
2230	Water Power Control Commission	Dams, canals, etc	106,526.94	106,526.94
2253	Schenectady	Charitable institutions	508,642.11	508,642.11
2254	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	462,381.01	457,381.01
2256	Mount Morris	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	15,000.00	14,627.81
2271	Utica	New street paving	28,000.00	28,000.00
2382	Albany	Repairs to secondary schools	25,200.00	25,200.00
2620	Cedarhurst	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	563,000.00	529,432.59
2634	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	234,429.40	234,429.40

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF NEW YORK—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
2631	Great Neck	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	$757,640.00	$755,086.61
2671	Elmsford	do	332,000.00	306,895.58
2715	State of New York	Bridges and viaducts	82,000.00	61,186.85
2724	Hempstead	New secondary schools	844,000.00	843,274.28
2734	Jamestown	New secondary schools and repairs to existing schools	891,000.00	801,210.02
2755	Westchester County	Charitable institutions	525,000.00	416,650.49
3189	State of New York	do	183,000.00	183,000.00
3200	do	Jails, prisons, reformatories	38,000.00	34,421.45
3201	do	Hospital buildings	668,000.00	553,439.71
3237	do	Schools for physically handicapped	255,000.00	215,000.00
3241	Rochester	New highways, roads, and trails	139,000.00	101,646.39
3248	State of New York	Repairs to jails, prisons, reformatories	226,000.00	175,991.79
3253	Rochester	Libraries and museums (municipal)	314,000.00	261,665.00
3258	State of New York	Hospital buildings	146,000.00	146,000.00
3259	do	Corrective institutions, other than jails and prisons	262,000.00	204,537.00
3301	Union School District No. 3	New secondary schools	800,000.00	800,000.00
3302	Union School District No. 11	do	16,000.00	9,646.74
3370	White Plains	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	196,500.00	194,098.41
3375	Suffern	do	232,500.00	226,583.75
3377	Watervliet	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	215,086.01	215,086.01
3382	Gloversville	do	52,650.00	50,953.93
3397	North Hempstead	New secondary schools	195,000.00	195,000.00
3407	Wells water district	Complete waterworks system and equipment	65,000.00	61,610.52
3429	Central School District No. 1	Repairs to secondary schools	45,700.00	45,700.00
3440	Saranac Lake	Repairs, improvements to waterworks and equipment	16,000.00	15,094.88
3445	Almond	Complete waterworks system and equipment	34,083.51	34,083.51
3457	Hastings on Hudson	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	25,100.00	22,754.79
3491	Union School District No. 1	Repairs to secondary schools	80,000.00	80,000.00
3594	White Plains	Repairs to storm drains and sewers	157,100.00	157,100.00
3598	Southold School District No. 9	New secondary schools	275,268.23	275,268.23
3627	Central School District No. 9	do	131,341.05	131,341.05
3628	Plandome	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	70,000.00	68,844.10
3629	Central School District No. 2	New secondary schools	140,239.50	140,239.50
3631	Do	do	221,842.70	221,842.70
3663	White Plains	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	51,000.00	48,288.76
3667	Buchanan	do	103,000.00	100,172.74
3678	Plattsburgh	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	6,000.00	6,000.00
3703	White Plains	New street paving	136,000.00	132,308.36
3724	Walden	Combination storm and sanitary sewers	298,000.00	286,282.70
3744	Keene and Jay	New secondary schools	198,100.00	179,015.34
3755	Central School District No. 2	Repairs to secondary schools	301,252.27	301,252.27
3764	Lloyd sewer district	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping station, and disposal plants	112,072.72	112,072.72
3767	Greenburgh	New street paving	370,000.00	355,977.72
3974	East Rochester	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	80,444.70	80,444.70
3975	Penn Yan	Sewage disposal plants	48,594.42	48,594.42
3981	Suffolk	New highways, roads, and trails	41,700.00	41,627.12
3990	Union School District No. 17	New secondary schools	162,000.00	162,000.00
3993–R	Hudson	do	500,000.00	450,000.00
4031	Pleasantville	Repairs to water mains, meters, pumps, etc	11,756.73	11,743.07
4042	Common School District No. 3	New secondary schools	141,556.12	141,556.12
4054	Hempstead	do	317,800.00	313,950.27
4063	Elba	Complete waterworks system and equipment	54,800.00	54,608.29
4188	Irvington	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	52,300.00	51,790.53
4215	Central School District No. 5	New secondary schools	119,050.00	119,050.00
4244	Rome	Repairs to streets	21,700.00	20,194.87
4324	Hamburg	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	56,000.00	56,000.00
4325	Union School District No. 6	Repairs to secondary schools	500,000.00	500,000.00
4353	Port Chester	Repairs to streets	65,921.19	65,921.19
4356	Baldwin fire district	Fire department and police stations	58,000.00	58,000.00
4364	Scarsdale	Repairs to combined storm and sanitary sewers	21,000.00	18,634.97
4371	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	204,500.00	198,210.08
4533	Tonawanda	Storm drains and sewers	62,949.48	62,949.48
4543	Ossining	New street paving	99,196.44	99,196.44
4551	Schroon	New secondary schools	281,000.00	269,355.76
4587	Scharon	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	40,988.22	40,988.22
4599	Union School District No. 1	New secondary schools	46,600.00	45,530.52
4926	New York	Grade crossing	1,460,900.00	777,756.19
4943	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	75,000.00	67,970.93
4963	Thompson	do	372,000.00	372,000.00
4980	Central School District No. 1	do	34,900.00	34,900.00
4981	Common School District No. 1	do	142,200.00	138,131.94
5022	Pleasantville	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	70,000.00	67,264.72
5028	Central School District No. 2	Repairs to secondary schools	185,364.69	185,364.69
5085	Canton	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	12,000.00	11,125.10
5097	Suffolk	New highways, roads, and trails	53,000.00	50,495.25
5301	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	196,750.33	196,750.33
5276	Binghamton	Repairs to streets	19,400.00	19,107.33
5281	Hamburg	Repairs to sewage disposal plants	57,924.81	57,924.81
5438–R	Syracuse	Markets	880,909.00	470,000.00
5648	State of New York	Grade crossing	57,600.00
5651	Union School District No. 1	New secondary schools	24,800.50	24,356.17
5654	State of New York	Grade crossing	41,500.00
5662	Common School District No. 4	Repairs to secondary schools	13,500.00	12,428.53
5716	Woodridge	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	120,000.00	120,000.00
5720	Union School District No. 1	New secondary schools	200,000.00	198,930.00
5747	Union Free School No. 9, District No. 29	do	122,300.00	122,228.37
5757	Urbana	do	218,500.00	218,500.00
5797	Pouses Point	New street paving	32,000.00	28,919.26
5801	Eden	Complete waterworks system and equipment	20,000.00	19,233.73
5825	Union School District No. 1	New secondary schools	185,000.00	98,148.22
5895	Hornell	New highways, roads, and trails	12,500.00	11,181.95
5906	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	24,300.00	13,551.80
5953	Hempstendt school district	Repairs to secondary schools	150,900.00	150,900.00
6049	Central District No. 2	New secondary schools	89,700.00	88,756.69
6068	Avon	Repairs to waterworks and equipment	8,054.08	8,054.08
6100	State of New York	Repairs to jails, prisons, and reformatories	162,000.00	162,000.00
6101	do	Grade crossings	54,000.00	20,815.24
6147	Ardsley	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and equipment	223,000.00	223,000.00

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF NEW YORK—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
6148	Union School District No. 6	Repairs to secondary schools	$110,400.00	$106,292.31
6222	Central School, etc.	New secondary schools	462,200.00	426,864.84
6223	Central District No. 1	do	317,000.00	276,670.27
6282	Mount Pleasant	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	20,000.00	19,571.97
6284	Eastchester	New secondary schools and repairs to existing school	278,000.00	278,000.00
6315	Suffolk County	New highways, roads, and trails	128,000.00	113,312.06
6317	Hempstead	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	60,019.26	60,019.26
6318	Union Free School	New secondary schools	235,700.00	193,269.56
6338	Lockport	Garbage and disposal plants and incinerators	16,000.00	15,970.28
6339	State of New York	Grade crossings	45,000.00
6396	Oneida County	Hospital buildings	84,000.00	72,999.55
6423	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	170,000.00	170,000.00
6460	Union School District No. 1	do	220,000.00	219,350.22
6472	Rockville Center	Repairs to electric distribution system	78,000.00	35,640.94
6473	Central School District No. 12	New secondary schools	130,000.00	128,405.02
6484	Central School District No. 6	do	140,000.00	138,577.62
6504–D	Mount Vernon	Repairs to libraries and museums	135,000.00
6505	Yonkers	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	337,000.00	285,000.00
6506	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	137,600.00	137,600.00
6912	Union School District No. 1	do	487,300.00	430,103.53
6940	Central School District No. 1	do	167,631.84	167,631.84
6976	Porter	Complete waterworks system and equipment	14,000.00	4,564.38
6981	Union School District No. 1	Repairs to secondary schools	85,478.22	85,478.22
6983	Central School District No. 1	New secondary schools	157,000.00	152,489.38
6984	Union School District No. 5	Repairs to secondary schools	72,656.67	72,656.67
6996	Stillwater	Complete waterworks system and equipment	103,892.67	103,892.67
7122	Williamson	Fire department and police station buildings	6,900.00	6,740.05
7138	Freeport	Repairs to combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	14,500.00	14,325.48
7238	West Haverstraw	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	135,000.00	135,000.00
7250	Bethlehem	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	27,000.00	23,089.05
7261	Common School District No. 10	New secondary school	95,992.89	95,992.89
7262	Yorktown	Municipal buildings	27,200.00	27,200.00
7280	Buffalo	Fire department and police-station buildings	230,000.00	170,773.49
7288	Island Park	New street paving	200,432.28	200,432.28
7509	Common School District No. 14	New secondary schools	22,426.08	22,426.08
7642–R	Long Beach	Water-front improvement	1,730,500.00	1,067,550.00
8116	Plattsburg	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	42,000.00	41,077.52
8153	Ossining	Repairs and improvements to highways	18,500.00	18,500.00
8160	Union School District No. 4	New secondary schools	52,100.00	39,438.14
8271	Central School District No. 1	do	48,800.00	48,800.00
8518	Fallsburg	Repairs to secondary schools	79,000.00	78,571.00
8577–D	Andes	New secondary schools	90,000.00	50,000.00
8827	Greenburg	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	60,000.00	60,000.00
9062	L. H. Hudson Regl. Mkt	Markets	211,000.00	203,441.30
6148	Union School District No. 6	Repairs to secondary schools		4,000.00
	Total		71,698,752.24	51,409,738.18

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA

1	Juniata Park Housing	Limited dividend housing	$1,039,000.00	$1,024,010.00
1057–R	Philadelphia	New secondary schools	5,107,106.00	3,972,193.54
1293–	Delaware River joint community	Subways and tunnels	5,142,000.00	2,292,078.72
1326–	Temple University	College and university buildings	550,000.00	550,000.00
1549–D	Philadelphia	New secondary schools	1,084,950.00	602,750.00
1562–D	do	do	1,589,175.00	882,875.00
1584–D	do	do	269,100.00	149,500.00
	Total		14,781,331.00	9,473,407.26

BALANCE OF STATE

740	Shippensburg	Wells, dams, canals, etc., for water supply	$36,000.00	$36,000.00
969	Sayne	Hospital buildings	420,000.00	420,000.00
972	Carlisle	Repairs to sewage-disposal plants	52,450.00	52,450.00
1001–D	Lebanon	New secondary schools	239,310.00	132,950.00
1002–R	Middletown	Repairs to secondary schools	11,454.00	11,354.00
1003–R	do	New secondary schools	21,273.00	21,273.00
1005–R	Plymouth	Repairs to secondary schools	41,727.00	39,285.81
1007–R	Jenkintown	New secondary schools	102,060.00	101,898.63
1009–R	Reading	Repairs to secondary schools	209,475.00	162,925.00
1011–R	Palmyra	New secondary schools	117,000.00	91,000.00
1012–D	Punxsutawney	do	106,153.00	45,000.00
1013–R	Brookville	Municipal buildings	18,818.00	14,636.30
1015–R	Selinsgrove	New secondary schools	61,900.00	48,144.44
1016–R	Carlisle	do	46,800.00	37,491.93
1017–D	Lewistown	do	164,772.00	91,540.00
1018–R	Heidelberg school district	do	56,250.00	43,750.00
1019–R	California	New street paving	11,045.00	8,009.03
1021–D	Llewellyn	New secondary schools	97,364.00	75,727.55
1022–R	Dickson City	do	54,400.00	42,311.11
1023–R	Troy	Repairs to secondary schools	12,158.00	11,200.61
1025–R	California	do	15,545.00	15,545.00
1027–D	Roaring Spring	Secondary schools	70,650.00	54,950.00
1032–R	Warren school district	Repairs to secondary schools	96,000.00	74,666.66
1033–R	New Cumberland	do	6,136.00	6,136.00
1034–R	West Fairview	do	6,136.00	6,136.00
1036–R	Mount Pleasant	New secondary schools	9,818.00	9,818.00
1039–R	Pine Grove	Repairs to secondary schools	21,418.00	15,750.00
1042–R	Grove City	Repairs to sewage-disposal plant	36,000.00	28,000.00
1043–D	Myerstown	Repairs to secondary schools	29,900.00	29,572.00
1044–R	Rostrover school district	do	22,050.00	22,050.00
1045–R	Gettysburg	do	42,750.00	42,750.00
1046–R	Catawissa	do	19,800.00	19,800.00
1047–R	Horford school district	do	12,150.00	12,150.00
1048–D	Lewistown	Municipal buildings	29,454.00	29,454.00

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
1049-R	Middleton	Social, recreational buildings (municipal)	$18,000.00	$18,000.00
1050-R	West Chester	New secondary schools	90,000.00	90,000.00
1052-R	Lancaster	....do	630,000.00	350,000.00
1053-D	Centerville	....do	70,020.00	38,900.00
1054-D	Blossburg	....do	48,600.00	47,692.41
1056-D	Bellevue	....do	270,000.00	----------
1058-R	Roulette	....do	7,363.00	7,363.00
1059-R	Seipsville	Repairs to secondary schools	12,273.00	12,258.72
1060-R	Du Bois school district	....do	11,700.00	9,100.00
1062-D	Philipsburg	New secondary schools	101,156.00	78,677.00
1066-R	Centre County	Repairs to secondary schools	6,954.00	6,264.00
1067	Monoca	Repairs to combination waterworks and sewers	13,000.00	10,522.58
1068-D	Wilcox	New secondary schools	27,000.00	21,000.00
1069	Torentum	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	40,000.00	39,562.69
1069-D	Hampton Township	New secondary schools	33,750.00	29,909.25
1070-D	Chester	....do	13,500.00	10,500.00
1072-R	Maple and Newton school districts	....do	32,500.00	32,500.00
1073	West Kittanning	Complete waterworks system and equipment	17,300.00	17,234.51
1073-R	Franklin	Repairs to secondary schools	116,182.00	90,363.70
1074-D	Scranton	New secondary schools	537,165.00	298,425.00
1075-R	South Whitehall	Repairs to secondary schools	25,472.00	14,151.25
1076-D	Schuylkill Haven	....do	36,818.00	20,454.00
1077-D	Forty Fort	Municipal buildings	27,900.00	21,700.00
1078-R	Temple	New secondary schools	34,200.00	34,200.00
1080-R	Williamsport	Repairs to secondary schools	106,785.00	83,055.00
1081-R	Huntingdon	....do	42,200.00	32,822.30
1084-R	Plymptonville	....do	13,222.00	12,294.98
1085-R	East Greenville	Vocational schools	4,909.00	4,909.00
1087-R	Charleston	New secondary schools	27,000.00	27,000.00
1089	Oil City	New street paving	2,500.00	2,500.00
1089-R	Harmony Township	Repairs to secondary schools	27,421.00	27,421.00
1090-R	Brownstown	New secondary schools	13,091.00	12,998.74
1091-R	Renova	Repairs to secondary schools	24,223.00	24,223.00
1092-R	Emporium	....do	25,275.00	12,950.00
1093-R	Sligo	....do	11,528.00	11,528.00
1094-R	Lock Haven	Repairs to courthouses	44,730.00	34,790.00
1095-R	Wayne	Repairs to secondary schools	101,487.00	101,487.00
1096-D	Mount Penn	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	139,909.00	97,380.50
1098-R	Scranton	New street paving	65,122.00	36,178.75
1099-R	Berlin	New secondary schools	99,000.00	77,000.00
1100-R	Logan	....do	30,273.00	21,833.00
1101-R	McDonald	Repairs to secondary schools	33,545.00	33,545.00
1103-D	Slatington	....do	59,318.00	32,954.50
1105-R	Knox	....do	6,954.00	6,954.00
1106-R	Weatherly	New secondary schools	33,673.00	33,673.00
1107-R	Bridgeville	Repairs to secondary schools	22,909.00	22,909.00
1108-R	Coudersport	....do	33,545.00	32,145.00
1109-R	Port Vue	....do	49,091.00	38,181.85
1110-D	Radnor	Combined, sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	73,854.00	48,912.50
1111-D	Spring Garden	New secondary schools	37,305.00	37,305.00
1112-D	Corrall	....do	36,352.00	36,279.98
1113-D	Charleroi	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	36,818.00	20,454.45
1116-D	Northumberland	New secondary schools	49,090.00	27,272.50
1117-D	Ambridge	....do	147,273.00	49,090.95
1118-D	McAdoo	....do	20,455.00	----------
1120-R	Summerville	Repairs to secondary schools	18,251.00	14,194.95
1121-R	Smithfield	New secondary schools	24,545.00	24,545.00
1122-R	Upper Marion	Repairs to secondary schools	19,017.60	19,017.00
1123-R	Ambridge	Storm drains and sewers	87,545.00	55,009.83
1124-R	Summerhill	New secondary schools	24,545.00	14,825.07
1125-D	Kane	....do	53,181.00	53,181.00
1126-R	Covington	....do	13,091.00	13,091.00
1127-R	Clearfield	....do	46,636.00	36,272.60
1128-R	Howard	Repairs to secondary schools	17,500.00	13,610.80
1129-R	Williamsburg	....do	13,500.00	13,147.76
1130-D	Wilmerding	New secondary schools	206,182.00	160,363.70
1132-D	Kulpmont	....do	63,259.00	51,704.80
1134-D	Kenhorst	Repairs to streets	4,909.00	2,727.25
1137-D	Hollidaysburg	New secondary schools	117,818.00	65,454.50
1139-D	Montgomery County	Complete waterworks system and equipment	45,450.00	45,450.00
1140-D	Wrightsville	New secondary schools	27,818.00	27,818.00
1142-R	Juniata	....do	47,250.00	47,250.00
1143-R	Burnham	....do	58,275.00	41,671.00
1144-R	North Fayette	....do	52,363.00	40,727.05
1145-D	Latrobe	....do	88,364.00	49,091.00
1148-R	Weatherly	Repairs to electric distribution system	14,727.00	11,454.45
1150-R	Pittsburgh	New secondary schools	67,030.00	52,134.25
1151-R	....do	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	17,994.00	17,994.00
1152-R	Center Hall	Repairs to secondary schools	15,120.00	15,120.00
1153-D	St. Clair	New secondary schools	103,364.00	59,091.00
1155-D	Derry	....do	56,925.00	44,275.00
1156-R	Pittsburgh	Repairs to secondary schools	24,083.00	24,083.00
1157-R	Ambler	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	107,106.00	90,861.73
1159-R	Catasauqua	Repairs to secondary schools	19,636.00	19,636.00
1161-R	Union City	....do	31,909.00	22,099.46
1166-D	Lower Paxton Township	....do	56,475.00	56,060.86
1167-D	South Fork	....do	29,700.00	29,530.00
1168-D	Sharon	Bridges and viaducts	72,396.00	71,110.95
1169-D	Trucksville	Repairs to secondary schools	21,273.00	7,090.95
1171-R	Waynesboro	New secondary schools	144,855.00	112,665.00
1173-D	Pittsburgh	....do	154,980.00	86,100.00
1174-D	Ligonier	....do	30,273.00	30,273.00
1175-D	Monaca	New street paving	37,948.00	21,082.25
1176-R	Newfoundland	Repairs to secondary schools	23,137.00	15,272.60
1177-R	Elysburg	New secondary schools	16,364.00	16,132.91
1178-D	Huntingdon	....do	27,000.00	19,016.23
1179-R	Taylor	....do	22,091.00	20,238.85
1180-R	Wilkes-Barre	Garbage-disposal plants and incinerators	70,758.00	66,516.75
1183-R	Economy Township	New secondary schools	25,364.00	19,727.50

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
1184-R	Conway	Repairs to secondary schools	$24,545.00	$24,545.00
1186-R	Elizabeth	do	37,636.00	29,272.44
1188-D	Cheltenham	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	65,166.00	36,203.50
1189-R	Chalfonte	New secondary schools	49,091.00	49,091.00
1190-D	Clarion County	do	20,421.00	20,421.00
1192-R	Muse	do	50,580.00	39,340.00
1193-R	Cecil	do	50,580.00	39,340.00
1195-D	Freeburg	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	11,045.00	8,045.75
1196-R	Cambria County	Repairs to secondary schools	21,818.00	21,681.03
1197-R	Mifflin County	New secondary schools	19,567.00	19,567.00
1198-D	Turbotville	do	31,909.00	17,727.25
1199-R	Exeter	do	101,818.00	101,818.00
1200-R	Wyoming	do	119,455.00	92,909.25
1202-R	Pocono	do	18,405.00	14,315.00
1203-R	Mauch Chunk	do	79,364.00	61,727.40
1206-D	Washington	do	39,273.00	30,545.52
1209-D	Pennsylvania	Warehouses, laboratories, shops, garages	107,552.00	59,751.25
1210-D	do	do	140,208.00	77,893.25
1212-R	Buffalo	New secondary schools	26,100.00	20,300.00
1213-R	Elwood City	Municipal buildings	58,959.00	45,857.55
1214-D	Jeannette	New secondary schools	38,455.00	29,909.25
1216	Reading	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	708,000.00	688,293.90
1216-R	Elkland	New secondary schools	22,909.00	22,909.00
1217-D	Bliss Township	do	8,182.00	4,545.50
1224-D	Fountain Hill	do	98,100.00	54,500.00
1225-R	Mount Joy	Repairs to secondary schools	33,322.00	25,917.25
1226-D	Retreat	Repairs to hospital buildings	103,909.00	57,727.25
1227-D	Shenandoah	New secondary schools	81,818.00	28,636.30
1230-D	Lake Avid	do	45,000.00	45,000.00
1231-R	Scranton	Combined waterworks and sewers	36,056.00	33,923.74
1232-D	do	Repairs to streets	160,174.00	88,958.00
1234-D	Lycoming County	Charitable institutions	181,395.00	121,030.75
1235-R	Farrell	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	45,000.00	35,000.00
1243-D	Bloomsburg	Repairs to streets	110,025.00
1246-R	West Pittston	Repairs to secondary schools	64,636.00	50,274.60
1248-D	Mahanoy City	New secondary schools	68,727.00	53,454.45
1252-R	Tarentum	Repairs to streets	12,375.00	9,625.00
1254-R	Dubois	Reservoirs	84,060.00	82,353.68
1250-D	Harris Township	New secondary schools	21,272.00	11,817.77
1251-D	Forest City	do	27,315.00	21,910.92
1263-D	Centralia	do	47,455.00	36,909.25
1267-R	Penbrook	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	58,909.00	58,112.45
1270-D	Bridgeport	Repairs to secondary schools	39,060.00	21,700.00
1276-D	Forty Fort	New secondary schools	31,909.00	31,909.00
1279-R	Lawn	do	30,273.00	26,731.80
1280-D	Pottsville	Municipal buildings	82,636.00	64,272.00
1283-R	Hazleton	New secondary schools	39,273.00	39,273.00
1288-R	Karns	Repairs to secondary schools	8,591.00	8,339.05
1290-R	Porter	New secondary schools	17,694.00	13,762.00
1233-R	Wayne	do	27,457.00	21,355.60
1236-D	Jermyn	do	25,364.00	25,364.00
1242-D	Penn Township	Sewage-disposal plants	31,091.00	17,272.75
1247-R	do	New secondary schools	45,000.00	25,000.00
1251-R	Allentown	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	614,160.00	477,680.00
1253-R	do	Dams, canals, etc	74,025.00	66,819.54
1256-R	Barrett	New secondary schools	18,000.00	17,430.63
1262-R	Doylestown	do	18,815.00	14,634.20
1264-R	Upper Paxton	do	13,091.00	13,091.00
1268-D	Butler	do	58,909.00	46,818.11
1269-D	Norristown	do	487,086.00	270,603.50
1272-D	Ebensburg	Repairs to secondary schools	34,364.00	26,727.40
1278-D	North East	New secondary schools	61,096.00	60,246.00
1281-R	Hazelton	do	65,455.00	50,909.25
1285-D	Clarks Summit	Repairs to secondary schools	27,000.00	27,000.00
1289-R	Elders Ridge	New secondary schools	13,500.00	7,500.00
1291-R	Bruin	Repairs to secondary schools	18,607.00	18,607.00
1292-D	Mill Creek Township	Hospital buildings	67,909.00	29,618.18
1293-R	Blain	New secondary schools	18,090.00	18,090.00
1295-R	Millersburg	Repairs to secondary schools	13,192.00	12,841.04
1296-R	West Wyoming	do	46,273.00	45,857.77
1297-R	Peymouth	do	21,172.00	16,467.11
1299-R	Pittsburg	Storm drains and sewers	19,935.00	19,935.00
1301-D	Stroundsbury	Sewage-disposal plant	73,125.00	53,375.00
1302-R	Pittsburg	New secondary schools	196,563.00	137,903.50
1303-R	do	Repairs to secondary schools	211,689.00	117,605.25
1305-R	Jeannette	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants.	92,455.00	71,909.25
1306-R	Mount Carmel	New secondary schools	90,818.00	66,226.30
1307-D	Reading	Repairs to secondary schools	48,298.00	26,832.50
1308	Turtle Creek school district	do	74,500.00	56,412.70
1308-D	Reading	do	35,614.00	19,785.50
1309-R	Center Township	New secondary schools	1,335.00	1,335.00
1310-R	Berona	do	58,682.00	30,545.55
1311-D	Reading	Repairs to secondary schools	55,167.00	30,648.25
1312-R	Lehighton	Repairs to combination county and municipal buildings	20,455.00	20,455.00
1313-R	Monoca	Municipal building	20,251.00	19,760.82
1314-D	Chambersburg	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	101,496.00	78,909.60
1316-D	Pittsburgh	New secondary schools	176,693.00	98,163.00
1317-R	do	do	76,500.00	59,500.00
1319-R	Titusville	Repairs to secondary schools	27,818.00	27,818.00
1326-D	Wilkes-Barre	Charitable institutions	56,455.00	43,909.25
1328-D	Pitt Gas	New secondary schools	29,455.00	22,909.25
1329-R	North Union	do	44,182.00	34,363.70
1330-D	Middletown Township	Repairs to secondary schools	36,450.00	36,450.00
1332-R	Clairton	do	34,357.00	26,722.50
1335-D	Pine Township	New secondary schools	20,455.00	20,050.00
1339-R	Collingsdale	do	40,909.00	40,909.00
1341-R	Falls Creek	Complete waterworks system and equipment	5,727.00	2,181.75
1344-R	Lewis Run	Repairs to secondary schools	4,545.00	4,545.00
1355-R	Myersdale	do	32,119.00	32,119.00
1356-R	Broad Township	do	21,405.00	16,648.45

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
1358–R	East Norriton	Repairs to secondary schools	$45,471.00	$45,164.68
1360–R	West York	do	73,636.00	71,143.11
1364–R	Franklin Township	New secondary schools	18,818.00	13,570.05
1365–R	Exeter	Repairs to municipal buildings	40,000.00	39,151.45
1366–D	Allegheny County	New highways, roads, and trails	212,472.00
1367–D	do	do	110,070.00
1368–D	Dunmore	New secondary schools	335,000.00	105,000.00
1373–D	do	Repairs to streets	107,549.00	106,422.53
1388–R	Pottstown	Repairs to secondary schools	56,455.00	56,455.00
1390–D	New Kensingtown	do	27,818.00	27,818.00
1391–R	Laegerstown	New secondary schools	11,864.00	11,864.00
1392–R	Kennedy	Repairs to secondary schools	19,636.00	18,501.89
1395–R	Lansdale	do	41,727.00	32,454.45
1396–R	McCandless	do	13,909.00	10,818.15
1399–D	Coplay	Repairs to streets	34,587.00	19,215.00
1400–D	Conshohoken	Sewage-disposal plants	291,555.00	161,975.00
1404–D	McCandless	New highways, roads, and trails	62,757.00
1406–D	Marietta	Repairs to secondary schools	25,124.00	25,124.00
1407–D	East Dongel Township	do	27,490.00	23,424.59
1409–R	Newville	do	16,268.00	16,268.00
1411–R	Mereytown	New secondary schools	18,450.00	14,350.00
1415–R	Telford, Bucks, and M. T. G.	Repairs, waterworks system and equipment	6,727.00	5,432.55
1416–R	Hambright	New secondary schools	13,176.00	12,743.43
1419–D	Ephrata	Repairs to secondary schools	49,500.00	49,500.00
1420–D	East Hampfield Township	New secondary schools	60,300.00	46,900.00
1421–D	Warwick	do	16,313.00	15,849.64
1422–D	Pittsburgh	Water mains, meters, pump, and miscellaneous equipment	53,525.00	41,630.75
1424–R	Quarryville	New secondary schools	11,457.00	11,457.00
1426–D	Pittsburgh	New highways, roads, trails	128,970.00
1430–R	Foster	New secondary schools	55,636.00	43,272.60
1432–D	Allegheny County	New highways, roads, and trails	579,420.00
1435–R	Manheim	Repairs to secondary schools	12,618.00	12,618.00
1436–R	Rossmere	New secondary schools	62,737.00	48,795.25
1437	Shippensburg School District No. 1	Repairs to secondary schools	46,000.00	45,872.82
1437–R	Farmersville	New secondary schools	12,051.00	11,684.77
1439–R	Manor	do	13,026.00	11,535.76
1444–R	Spring	do	58,091.00	45,181.85
1445–R	California	Repairs to streets	40,909.00	22,727.25
1446–D	Olyphant	Repairs to secondary schools	198,182.00	69,363.70
1448–D	Allegheny County	Bridges and viaducts	324,967.00
1449–R	Richland	Repairs to secondary schools	27,000.00	27,000.00
1451–R	Freeport	do	11,138.00	6,618.85
1452–D	Warren	Municipal buildings	52,560.00	40,880.00
1453–R	Blawnox	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	14,727.00	11,454.45
1456–R	Mount Lebanon	Repairs to secondary schools	13,909.00	13,909.00
1458–D	Pittsburgh	do	21,273.00	21,272.90
1459–R	Lower Alasace	do	20,455.00	20,455.00
1461–D	Exeter	New secondary schools	45,000.00	25,000.00
1466–R	Aspenwall	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	6,545.00	3,636.25
1469–R	East Berlin	Repairs to secondary schools	12,150.00	12,150.00
1473–D	Dormont	Storm drains and sewers	35,182.00	22,872.50
1474–D	Lower Burrell Township	Repairs to secondary schools	11,455.00	6,363.75
1482	Chambersburg	Repairs to electric distribution system	26,100.00	26,100.00
1489–R	Archbald	New secondary schools	141,818.00	127,636.30
1490–D	North Belle Vernon	Repairs to secondary schools	69,927.00	11,426.40
1494–R	Wiconisco	New secondary schools	49,909.00	38,818.13
1496–D	Lykens	Municipal buildings	14,727.00	8,181.75
1499–R	Irwin	New secondary schools	62,182.00	62,182.00
1504–D	McKeesport	Sidewalks, curbs, and gutters	388,350.00	215,750.00
1507	Girard	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	5,600.00	5,600.00
1508–R	Fox Chapel	do	15,945.00	15,880.12
1509–D	Dormont	Swimming pool	18,000.00	10,000.00
1510–D	Clarks Summit	Sewage-disposal plants	175,950.00	58,650.00
1518–D	Cairnbrook	Repairs to secondary schools	34,364.00	11,454.60
1522	Mercer County	Repairs and improvements to highways	61,200.00	36,653.39
1530	Shaler	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	117,000.00	95,183.58
1536–R	Spring Garden	New secondary schools	12,499.00	9,721.23
1538–D	Spring City	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping station, and disposal plants.	92,454.00	30,818.00
1539–R	Myerstown	Electric distribution system	68,715.00
1540–D	Spring Grove	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	31,905.00	17,525.00
1543–D	Jefferson Township	New secondary schools	40,909.00	12,636.35
1545–D	South Huntingdon Township	do	81,818.00	45,454.50
1546–D	Snowden Township	Repairs to secondary schools	82,727.00	9,088.25
1547	Franklin	Water storage (tanks, reservoirs, etc.)	1,500.00	1,500.00
1548–D	Pennsylvania	Warehouses, laboratories, shops, garages	945,003.00
1550–D	East Lampeter Township	New secondary schools	56,250.00	31,250.00
1551–D	Genesee	Recreational buildings for secondary schools	9,000.00	5,000.00
1552–D	Lincoln Township	New secondary schools	19,134.00	10,630.00
1553–D	South Fork	Repairs to secondary schools	11,385.00	6,325.00
1554–D	Red Lion	do	20,835.00	11,575.00
1555–R	West Manchester	New secondary schools	18,450.00	14,350.00
1556–D	Dauphin County	Repairs to secondary schools	22,725.00	12,625.00
1557–D	Middle Smithfield	New secondary schools	17,182.00	9,545.50
1558–D	Mill City	do	19,935.00	1,322.81
1559–D	Summit	do	16,290.00	9,050.00
1561–D	Espyville	Repairs to secondary schools	17,325.00
1563–D	Evans City	New secondary schools	49,090.00	27,272.50
1566–D	Mauch Chunk	Repairs to courthouses	40,050.00	22,250.00
1567–D	Rose Valley	Sewage disposal plants	16,650.00	9,250.00
1569–D	Conshohocken	Repairs to secondary schools	50,868.00	28,260.00
1573–D	Scranton	Repairs to bridges and viaducts	33,543.00	18,635.00
1574–D	Archbald	Repairs and improvements to highways	38,253.00	21,252.00
1575–D	Braddock	Complete waterworks system and equipment	98,231.00	54,961.75
1823	Parkside Boro	New highways, road, and trails	21,500.00	21,443.93
1829	Sellersville	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	14,500.00	14,390.97
2005	Towanda	Municipal buildings	7,300.00	7,283.39
2008–R	Springboro	Complete waterworks system and equipment	25,974.00	25,974.00
2430	Mauch Chunk	New street paving	12,000.00	9,801.30
2443	Hanover	Repairs to sewage-disposal plants	21,600.00	20,157.18
2460	Salisbury school district	New secondary schools	18,700.00	18,700.00
2976	Allegheny County	General municipal improvements	3,840,000.00	1,484,340.00

Non-Federal allotments and disbursements, May 31, 1937—Continued

STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA—Continued

BALANCE OF STATE—continued

Docket number	Location	Type of construction	Amount of allotment	Amount of disbursement
3000	Swarthmore school district	Repairs to secondary schools	$28,300.00	$27,428.85
3002-R	Glenfield	Complete waterworks system and equipment	61,818.00	15,454.50
3007	Allentown	Sidewalks, boardwalks, and sewers	24,000.00	22,049.46
3008	Bradford	New secondary schools	186,000.00	184,149.66
3011	Ben Avon	New street paving	13,500.00	13,022.81
3018	Kingston	Storm drains and sewers	4,000.00	2,365.59
3463	Washington school district	New secondary schools	24,500.00	23,269.08
3476	Northampton	New street paving	33,200.00	23,994.08
3519	Pittsburgh	Hospital buildings	1,925,000.00	1,925,000.00
3567	East Greenville	Water storage (tanks, reservoirs, etc.)	4,000.00	4,000.00
4084	Stoneboro school district	Repairs to secondary schools	25,500.00	25,500.00
4086	Reynoldsville	Municipal buildings	23,200.00	23,200.00
4213	Mount Lebanon	Storm drains and sewers	10,600.00	10,600.00
4216	do	Repairs to streets	10,000.00	5,832.16
4218	do	Improvements to municipal and State parks	11,200.00	10,435.74
4240	Wilkes-Barre	Combination storm and sanitary sewers	106,000.00	105,094.27
4242	Allegheny County Home	Repairs to charitable institutions	713,000.00	713,000.00
4249	Bearer Meadows	Combined sanitary sewers, pumping stations, and disposal plants	43,000.00	40,883.69
4318	Ellwood City school district	Repairs to secondary schools	100,388.47	100,388.47
4800	North Corentry school district	do	16,824.24	16,824.24
5124	Mahanoy	New schools (secondary)	57,200.00	38,947.78
5153	Du Bois school district	Repairs to secondary schools	14,500.00	14,500.00
5213	West Chester	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	55,800.00	54,216.54
5237	Sykesville	Water mains, meters, pumps, and miscellaneous equipment	50,497.57	50,497.57
5282	Warren County	Repairs to charitable institutions	11,000.00	11,000.00
5445	Saltsburg	Repairs to secondary schools	21,300.00	20,500.00
5525	Tidioute	do	13,000.00	12,113.16
5559	New Eagle school district	New secondary schools	9,400.00	4,339.36
5589	State of Pennsylvania	Schools of physically handicapped	50,900.00	50,839.28
6107	East Prospect	Social recreational buildings (municipal)	2,800.00	2,734.42
6483	Smithport school district	New secondary schools and repairs to extension schools	23,000.00	22,181.07
6828	Hughestown	Repairs to secondary schools	22,000.00	22,000.00
6844	Greene County Memorial Hospital	Hospital buildings	70,000.00	70,000.00
6847	New Providence school district	Repairs to secondary schools	18,200.00	17,827.67
6853	Smithfield	Repairs and improvements to waterworks and equipment	13,000.00	9,607.37
6900	Radnor	Sewage-disposal plant	90,000.00
7000-D	Pittsburgh	General municipal improvements	380,500.00	451,500.00
7328	School district, Pennsylvania township	Repairs to secondary schools	92,500.00	62,412.56
7349	Croyle school district	do	20,800.00	20,800.00
7480	Upper Chichester school district	do	14,500.00	13,634.25
7501	Allegheny County	Corrective institution other than jails and prisons	98,000.00	65,013.84
7530	School district of Reading	New secondary schools	380,000.00	353,818.53
7550	Blythe school district	Repairs to secondary schools	47,000.00	46,656.84
7690-D	Beech Creek	Complete waterworks system and equipment	31,836.00	17,500.00
7700	Derry	Repairs to secondary schools	13,000.00	13,000.00
7701	Ren Argyle school district	New secondary schools	56,000.00	39,852.57
7830	Kingston	Storm drains and sewers	55,000.00	26,041.38
7897	Pittsburg	Repairs to markets	71,000.00	71,000.00
7969-R	Fleetwood	Electric distribution system	166,272.00
8888	Ridley school district	New secondary schools	72,000.00	61,449.63
9208	School district in Forks	do	20,500.00	19,836.41
9616-D	North Park	Improvements to municipal and State parks	492,750.00	383,250.00
			31,758,127.00	20,605,677.40

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope my silence at this time will not be interpreted as an agreement with the statements which the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] has made. I have not had an opportunity to examine the figures which he submitted. I am going to do so. But I am very sure that I know how the money in New York was distributed. There were no political phases involved in it. It was distributed by independent citizens appointed purely for that purpose. Several investigations have been made, and no evidence of any character has been disclosed indicating that there was a dollar of that money wasted.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. If I recall, though I may be mistaken, Maj. B. B. Somervell, who is an Army officer from Arkansas and one of the finest and most efficient administrators I know, and who was not a resident of New York at all at the time of his appointment, was appointed as administrator in New York. No one would undertake to "put up a job" where Major Somervell is in charge.

Mr. WAGNER. That is correct. The commission which takes care of the rest of the State of New York is one appointed as the result of State legislation, and a very distinguished Republican heads the commission.

As to the appropriations, of course, I shall have to examine the figures presented by the Senator from North Carolina, and I hope tomorrow to submit some observations in relation to them.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to correct a statement which I made yesterday during a colloquy with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR]. In that colloquy I was asked with respect to my vote upon previous relief bills, and made the statement that according to my recollection I voted for all the relief bills after having made an effort to amend them. I have refreshed my recollection from the RECORD, and find that my memory was inaccurate. I should have said I voted for one of the relief bills.

CELEBRATION OF THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF VIRGINIA DARE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 17), which was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That a joint committee consisting of five Members of the Senate, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and five Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, shall represent the Congress of the United States at the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare (the first child of English parentage to be born on the American Continent), and the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the disappearance of Sir Walter Raleigh's Colony (known in history as "The Lost Colony"), to be held at Roanoke Island, N. C., on August 18, 1937. The joint committee shall select a chairman from among its members.

SEC. 2. The necessary expenses of the joint committee herein authorized, not exceeding $1,000, shall be paid one-half out of the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives on vouchers authorized by the joint committee and signed by the chairman thereof.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate concur in the concurrent resolution.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. ROBINSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, I report back favorably from that committee, without reservation, Executive L (75th Cong., 1st sess.), being a convention for the maintenance, preservation, and reestablishment of peace signed at Buenos Aires on December 23, 1936, by the respective plenipotentiaries of the United States of America and the other 20 American republics represented at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace held at Buenos Aires in December 1936, and I submit a report (Ex. Rept. No. 16) thereon.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state in their order the nominations on the calendar.

UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Raymond B. Stevens, of New Hampshire, to be a member of the United States Tariff Commission.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, on behalf of the chairman of the Finance Committee [Mr. HARRISON] I ask that the President be notified of the confirmation of Mr. Stevens, of New Hampshire, to be a member of the Tariff Commission, for the reason that his term of office expires today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the President will be notified.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Joseph A. Maynard to be collector of customs for the customs collection district no. 4, with headquarters in Boston, Mass.

Mr. WALSH. I move the confirmation of the nomination.

The motion was agreed to.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John O'Keefe to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 34, with headquarters at Pembina, N. Dak.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William H. Gilliland to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 21, with headquarters at Port Arthur, Tex.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Raymond A. Vonderlehr to be surgeon in the Public Health Service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Dwight K. Shellman to be assistant dental surgeon, United States Public Health Service.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Margaret Crew to be postmaster at Orchard Lake, Mich., which had been reported adversely.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to this nomination?

The nomination was rejected.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters reported favorably.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that nominations of postmasters reported favorably be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. That concludes the Executive Calendar.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH obtained the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, does the Senator from Washington desire to proceed this evening?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No; not if the Senator wishes to suspend at this time.

Mr. ROBINSON. It is my purpose to yield to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] and then to take a recess until tomorrow.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Very well.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE CONNERY, OF MASSACHUSETTS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 239

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
June 16, 1937.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., a Representative from the State of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That a committee of 10 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That, as a further mark of respect, the House do now adjourn.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, in behalf of my colleague the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and myself, I send to the desk resolutions which I ask to have read and immediately considered.

The resolutions (S. Res. 146) were read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., late a Representative from the State of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the President pro tempore to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, Representative CONNERY's sudden and untimely death comes as a stunning shock to all his colleagues and friends. He held a position of exceptional power and influence and was one of the most active Members of the House. He specialized in legislation in behalf of veterans and labor and took a leading part in all measures relating to these subjects.

His was a unique personality. He possessed a fine sense of humor, was intensely dynamic, deeply absorbed in every cause he espoused, was always approachable and affable, even with those who disagreed with him, all of which contributed to a popularity among Members of the Congress that was without parallel.

His passing is a distinct loss to the public service, and he will be mourned by a legion of admirers in and out of public life. He will be especially missed in solving the problems of the Massachusetts delegation, among whom he was an able and highly esteemed leader.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, although I know more ample tribute will be paid to the public services of the late Representative CONNERY at a later time, yet I desire to pay just a brief tribute to his memory at this moment.

The death of Representative CONNERY gives me a keen sense of personal loss. I have known him since I was a boy, and for many years was a constituent of his. He was a tireless worker, a most effective debater, and held a position of immense influence in Congress. He served his country in war and in peace. He had a keen wit and a warmth of personality which endeared him to all who knew him. I am much saddened at his passing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions presented by the Senators from Massachusetts.

The resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

Under the second resolution the President pro tempore appointed Mr. WALSH and Mr. LODGE as the committee on the part of the Senate to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, June 17, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 16 (legislative day of June 15), 1937

UNITED STATES TARIFF COMMISSION

Raymond B. Stevens to be a member of the United States Tariff Commission.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

Joseph A. Maynard to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 4, with headquarters at Boston, Mass.

John O'Keefe to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 34, with headquarters at Pembina, N. Dak.

William H. Gilliland to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 21, with headquarters at Port Arthur, Tex.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Raymond A. Vonderlehr to be a surgeon, to rank as such from April 10, 1937.

Dwight K. Shellman to be an assistant dental surgeon, to take effect from date of oath.

POSTMASTERS

HAWAII

Jack Y. Ouye, Hakalau.
James Takeo Yahusaki, Papaikou.

ILLINOIS

Joseph A. Schneider, East Dubuque.
Eleanor Onken, Gibson City.
Charles E. Hibbs, Grand Ridge.
Francis Hayes, Gridley.
Henry Dwyer, Ladd.
Iona M. Blair, Leaf River.
Basil R. Dawson, Lexington.
Carl E. Farrell, Louisville.
Virginia E. Turner, McLean.
David E. Woolsoncroft, Roberts.
Hugh D. Stine, Saybrook.
Walter W. Lesch, Washburn.
Alyce M. Wilson, Wenona.

LOUISIANA

Walter L. Huckabay, Bienville.
Delta A. Bourg, Le Moyen.

NEBRASKA

Donald W. Flory, St. Edward.

OHIO

Wilmer Harvey Driggs, Cambridge.

REJECTION

Executive nomination rejected by the Senate June 16 (legislative day of June 15), 1937

POSTMASTER

MICHIGAN

Margaret Crew to be postmaster at Orchard Lake, in the State of Michigan.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Ever blessed Lord God, as the mind and the soul are the standards of man, we pray Thee to make this day an opportunity to serve, to learn, and to grow. By fidelity to common duty, by diligence in well-doing, help us to deepen our capacity for more extended usefulness. Father of mercies, do Thou say to any who may be of a fearful heart, "Be strong and of good courage." It is Thy challenge to the spirit of fear. Save us, O God, from the fear that is born of guilt or cowardice, and may it never cause us the shame of failure. We praise Thee that in every time of human need there is a hand stretched toward us—the hand that fashioned the stars and holds them in their sockets. Be with any ill or afflicted Members. May they view the high rock amid the waves and hail the dove in the deluge.

We pause! Wherever there is a listening soul, there Thou art. A Member, with a springtime soul, earnest and beloved, has passed behind this changing veil to that which does not change. We pray that the arms of a loving Father may be round the grief-stricken, forward-looking loved ones. Soothe them, O God, with the lyrics of the heavenly life. In our dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting two addresses that I recently made.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting therein an editorial from the St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. What is the editorial about?

Mr. KNUTSON. It refers to some very wholesome advice that Mr. William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, gave to some labor organization out on the Pacific coast.

Mr. RANKIN. It does not refer to that donkey which the gentleman murdered on the floor the other day?

Mr. KNUTSON. I understand the donkey has been buried.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COMMITTEE—LEAVE TO SIT DURING THIS AFTERNOON

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the District of Columbia may sit during this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. HONEYMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by the Comptroller of the Currency before the Oregon Bankers Association.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO FILE REPORT

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Rules may have until midnight tonight to file certain rules.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. BOILEAU, leave of absence was granted to Mr. KVALE for the week.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 1277. An act for the relief of William Hayes;

H. R. 2080. An act for the relief of Eleanora S. Richardson;

H. R. 2705. An act to provide for the manner of inflicting the punishment of death;

H. R. 2887. An act to amend the provisions of the pension laws for peacetime service to include Reserve officers and members of the Enlisted Reserves;

H. R. 2924. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of war, catastrophes of nature, and other causes;

H. R. 3203. An act for the relief of Rosalie Rose;

H. R. 3557. An act for the relief of the Coast Fir & Cedar Products Co., Inc.;

H. R. 4213. An act to amend the Inland Waterways Corporation Act, approved June 3, 1924, as amended; authorizing the Secretary of War to extend the services and operations of the Inland Waterways Corporation to the Savannah River;

H. R. 4575. An act for the relief of A. R. Netterville, Sr.;

H. R. 5721. An act to amend the Federal Register Act;

H. R. 5880. An act to amend Private Act No. 210, approved August 13, 1935, by substituting as payee therein the Clark Dredging Co. in lieu of the Bowers Southern Dredging Co.;

H. J. Res. 335. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to receive for instruction at the United States Military Academy at West Point, Olmedo Alfaro, a citizen of Ecuador; and

H. J. Res. 339. Joint resolution granting permission to George E. Ijams, a civilian employee of the Veterans' Administration, to accept and wear the decoration bestowed upon him by the Republic of France.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM P. CONNERY, JR.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, my purpose in seeking recognition of the Chair on this occasion is the saddest of my 9 years as a Member of this body, and is the saddest occasion for which I have sought recognition of the presiding officer of any legislative body of which I have been a member during 20 years of service in various legislative bodies, State and Nation. I rise to announce to the House the death of one of the finest characters that has ever lived; one of the finest characters any of us will meet in our journey through life; one of the most sincere, most conscientious, constructively aggressive, and most beloved Members of the House—our late distinguished colleague, WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., of Massachusetts.

Mr. Speaker, this is no occasion for extended remarks. This is an occasion of gloom, of sorrow; and the best word at this time is the unspoken word, the spoken word to be expressed on a later occasion. We are going to miss him, and the departure of BILLY CONNERY, as we all called him, is going to leave a vacancy in the House, a vacancy in the minds of all who have served with him, which time will not fill. He was one of the most beautiful characters, in the possession of the fine qualities of life, that any person could meet. I can see him now in the middle aisle. I can see his interest in a bill and see the intensity of his thought, evidenced by the aggressiveness of his action in any cause in which he was interested. I know I speak the sentiments of every Member of the House, and the House collectively, when I say that the Nation he served so well has sustained an irreparable loss. His beloved Commonwealth and the city of Lynn, of which he was a lifelong resident, have sustained equally an irreparable loss. His dear wife and children and his relatives in their sorrow receive the heartfelt sympathy of every Member of the House and the heartfelt sympathy of his legion of friends and admirers.

His death is a loss to the Nation, the State, and the community, a great loss to his family and his relatives, and equally a great loss to his friends and to his colleagues of the National House of Representatives. To me it is the loss of my closest and dearest friend.

On a later occasion I will ask the indulgence of the House to undertake in a more extended manner to state the sentiments which I am possessed of, and the feeling of regret that leaves me incapable of adequate expression; to express the deep sentiment and sorrow that I have, and that I know all of my colleagues have in the sudden departure of our beloved colleague from this world.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, before proceeding further, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, at a meeting of the Massachusetts delegation, held previous to the session this morning, I was authorized to present to the House the following action of that delegation:

In the sudden death of WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., the Massachusetts delegation has lost one of its most active, sincere, and able members. Coming to Congress soon after the close of the World War, he immediately showed his interest in his former buddies and has constantly endeavored to aid the veterans of the war by obtaining legislation beneficial to them and their families. As chairman of the Committee on Labor he has been as active in connection with progressive labor legislation as that pertaining to the veterans. Our late beloved colleague untiringly labored for the best interests of Massachusetts and the Nation. It can truthfully be said that BILLIE CONNERY sacrificed his life for his fellow man. We mourn his loss and extend our most heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved widow and daughter.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCORMACK] please take the chair?

Mr. McCORMACK assumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I cannot find it in my heart to let this opportunity pass without undertaking to speak just a brief word of admiration and affection for the qualities of our gallant comrade in the legislative service, who has passed away under such untimely and such inconsolable circumstances. I have known a great many hundreds of men during my long service in the House of Representatives, but I think I may say without undertaking to make any invidious comparisons as to the qualities and character of other colleagues with whom I have served here that I have never known a more delightful or a more lovable man than BILLY CONNERY. It is difficult, if indeed not impossible, for us to understand the mysterious dispensations of Providence like this, in taking away from us, without warning, apparently in the very bloom and vigor of his manhood, when he had achieved and was riding toward the pinnacle of a great legislative record here, a man of this type, so universally beloved by all of us. It is hard for us to be reconciled to the fact that he has taken his final departure from this forum of his activities. The thing that always appealed to me, and I am sure to you, in the make-up of this man, in his qualities of heart and head, was the fact that he always stood for and championed the cause of the average man, the underprivileged man and woman in our society, in our economic system; the forgotten man, if I may use that term. He stood here year after year, ever since his service began, as the valiant and capable advocate of the cause of the man in overalls and the woman in gingham.

I think if there has ever been a public figure in America in recent times who deserved to have erected to his memory a fitting memorial to his services by that particular class of men and women whom he especially sought to favor, the laboring class of America, surely it is WILLIAM P. CONNERY, who in season and out of season, despite at times adverse majorities and sometimes bitter and even malignant criticism, stood here in his place as the representative of his people, particularly of that great group of our American people, and battled with all his intellectual vigor and his mental gallantry to uphold the cause of those whom he loved so well.

I am personally deeply grieved at his departure. As our colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] has stated, it will be a long, long time in all human probability before a man of the exact type and of the qualities of WILLIAM P. CONNERY will find a place in this Chamber.

The SPEAKER resumed the chair.

Mr. MCCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 239), which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 239

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr., a Representative from the State of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That a committee of 10 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed the following funeral committee: Mr. MCCORMACK, Mr. HILL of Alabama, Mr. RAMSPECK, Mr. HEALEY, Mr. HIGGINS, Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts, Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri, Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts, Mr. WIGGLESWORTH, and Mr. BATES.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the concluding portion of the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

ADJOURNMENT

The resolution was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, June 17, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARING

COMMITTEE ON THE POST OFFICE AND POST ROADS

A hearing will be conducted by Subcommittee No. 2 of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads Thursday, June 17, 1937, at 10:30 a. m., on bills to extend the local delivery rate on first-class mail.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Mines and Mining. S. 187. An act providing for the suspension of annual assessment work on mining claims held by location in the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 1033). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 241. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 7051; without amendment (Rept. No. 1034). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 242. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 6586; without amendment (Rept. No. 1035). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 243. Resolution providing for the consideration of H. R. 7472; without amendment (Rept. No. 1036). Referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. OLIVER: A bill (H. R. 7542) granting the consent of Congress to a compact entered into by the States of Maine and New Hampshire for the construction of the Maine-New Hampshire Interstate Bridge Authority; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7543) authorizing the Maine-New Hampshire Interstate Bridge Authority to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Piscataqua River at or near Portsmouth, State of New Hampshire; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CANNON of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 7544) to regulate the manufacture and sale of stamped envelopes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. IZAC: A bill (H. R. 7545) to authorize an exchange of lands between the city of San Diego, Calif., and the United States; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DICKSTEIN: A bill (H. R. 7546) to clarify the expatriation laws with regard to certain native-born citizens of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DIES: Resolution (H. Res. 240) to create a standing committee on lobbying; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. NICHOLS: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 414) authorizing the issuance of a special postage stamp in honor of Sequoyah, the inventor of the Cherokee Indian alphabet, and the one hundredth anniversary of the first post office in Oklahoma; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. WOODRUM: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 415) making an appropriation to defray expenses incident to the dedication of chapels and other World War memorials erected in Europe, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 7547) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Dubbs; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COLMER: A bill (H. R. 7548) for the relief of J. Lafe Davis; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GRAY of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 7549) granting a pension to Mary J. Stahl; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2655. By Mr. KENNEY: Petition of the New Jersey Housing League of Newark, N. J., endorsing the Wagner-Steagall bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2656. By Mr. LAMNECK: Petition of Lisle S. Huffman and other citizens of Columbus, Ohio, urging the introduction and passage of a bill authorizing a pension for the totally and permanently disabled adult with no income; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1937

(Legislative day of Tuesday, June 15, 1937)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. ROBINSON, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, June 16, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I suggest, in order to assure the presence of a quorum, that the roll be called.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	La Follette	Reynolds
Andrews	Davis	Lewis	Robinson
Ashurst	Dieterich	Lodge	Russell
Austin	Donahey	Logan	Schwartz
Bailey	Duffy	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Ellender	Lundeen	Sheppard
Barkley	Frazier	McAdoo	Smathers
Berry	George	McGill	Steiwer
Bilbo	Gerry	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Black	Gibson	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Bone	Gillette	Minton	Townsend
Borah	Glass	Moore	Truman
Bridges	Green	Murray	Tydings
Brown, Mich.	Guffey	Neely	Vandenberg
Brown, N. H.	Harrison	Norris	Van Nuys
Bulkley	Hatch	Nye	Wagner
Bulow	Hayden	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Burke	Herring	Overton	Wheeler
Byrd	Hitchcock	Pepper	White
Byrnes	Holt	Pittman
Capper	Hughes	Pope
Caraway	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is detained from the Senate by a death in his family.

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] are detained on important public business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] is necessarily absent from the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

UNITED STATES DELAWARE VALLEY TERCENTENARY COMMISSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the terms of Public Resolution 102, approved June 5, 1936, the Chair appoints the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN] a member of the United States Delaware Valley Tercentenary Commission to fill an existing vacancy.

DEFAULT OF FOREIGN DEBT PAYMENTS TO THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to make mention of a fact which some will think has no relevancy to the subject about which we are debating, but which seems to me to have some relevancy in sentiment if not in reality. While we are placing new burdens on our people, it seems relevant to note that we are indirectly lifting burdens from others. I would like to see a firmer policy in collecting the debts due the American taxpayer.

The bill which we are debating carries an appropriation of $1,500,000,000. The amount of the interest and principal due us from foreign governments on contracts deliberately made is $1,520,000,000.

In that connection I offer for the RECORD, and ask to have printed as part of my remarks, an editorial from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch entitled "Finland and the Dead Beats."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the editorial will be printed in the RECORD.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of June 15, 1937]

FINLAND AND THE DEAD BEATS

This is war-debt pay day. At least the calendar says so. A 6 months' installment on what European nations owe the United States on money lent abroad during and after the World War is due, but going unpaid. France is defaulting on an $81,500,000 installment and Italy is failing to remit an installment of about the same amount. Great Britain has sent regrets, while Yugoslavia, Latvia, and seven other countries are also terribly sorry. Only Finland is paying on schedule. As long ago as May 29 the land of Paavo Nurmi announced that its check for $163,143 would arrive at the United States Treasury on time.

Does some partisan of cancelation rise up to say that France's installment of $81,500,000 and Finland's of $163,143 are not in the same bracket? Well, France has many times the population of Finland and, in terms of what the taxation experts call "ability to pay", is infinitely better off. The size of a debt, like Einstein's space, is relative. The fact simply is that Finland has chosen to keep its word, even though the vogue has been repudiation. The north-land republic has its reward in the satisfaction which only the person or nation which honors its obligations can enjoy.

What the defaulting nations intend to do is clear enough. They plan to let the installments pile up until they are so far behind that payment will be out of the question. If this was not their plan, they would pay partial installments at least every 6 months and thus begin to cut down the interest charge. And yet these nations, at staggering costs, are arming to the teeth and getting ready for another war. What could be more insane?

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR (S. DOC. NO. 82)

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for salaries and expenses, oil regulation and enforcement, Department of the Interior, amounting to $285,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF THE NEAR EAST RELIEF

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the Comptroller of the Near East Relief, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Near East Relief for the year ended December 31, 1936, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Printing.

DRAFTS OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION BY THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate letters from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting drafts of proposed legislation which, with the accompanying papers, were referred to committees as follows:

A letter together with a draft of legislation proposing to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to permit the payment of the costs of repairs, resurfacing, improvement, and enlargement of the Arrowrock Dam in 20 annual installments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

A letter together with a draft of legislation proposing to regulate the leasing of certain Indian lands for mining purposes; and

A letter together with a draft of legislation proposing to set aside certain lands in Oklahoma for the Cheyenne and Arapaho Indians; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

ACTS OF THE HAWAIIAN LEGISLATURE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a letter from the secretary of Hawaii (submitted through the Department of the Interior), transmitting certified copies of Acts Nos. 3 and 23 of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1937, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

ACTS OF THE LEGISLATURE OF MASSACHUSETTS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate certified copies of two acts of the Legislature of Massachusetts, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

(Ch. 208). An act making uniform the law as to extraterritorial arrest on fresh pursuit and authorizing this Commonwealth to cooperate with other States in connection therewith; and

(Ch. 210). An act making uniform the law securing the attendance of witnesses from without a State in criminal proceedings.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Negro Labor Assembly, New York City, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Van Nuys antilynching bill, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from the third district representative of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, praying for the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Gavagan antilynching bill, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WALSH presented a resolution of the Municipal Council of Haverhill, Mass., endorsing a resolution adopted by the transitional administrative committee of the local Boot and Shoe Workers Union regarding a proposed reciprocal trade treaty with Czechoslovakia affecting the tariff on shoes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of several citizens of Lynn, Mass., praying for the abolition of the Federal Reserve System as at present constituted, and also praying that Congress exercise its constitutional right to coin money and regulate the value thereof, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Wellesley, Mass., praying for economy in governmental expenditures so as to insure a balanced Budget in 1938, and praying for the abolition of the W. P. A., and also remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to enlarge the membership of the Supreme Court, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented the following resolution of the Senate of the State of Texas, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Whereas there has been introduced in the Congress of the United States House bill No. 6763, which would extend the 3½-percent interest rate to farmers on certain Federal land-bank farm loans; and

Whereas this bill has been favorably reported to the Senate; and

Whereas unless this or some similar bill is passed before July 1, 1937, the interest rates on such loans are automatically reverted to the original higher rate of 4½ to 5 percent; and

Whereas it would be utterly unwise to increase the interest rate on such loans because one of the greatest services which the Federal Government can render is to make it easy for farmers to become the owners of the land on which they live; and because the establishment of farm homes ought to be one of the cardinal policies of the Federal Government; and because those farmers who have purchased homes and have loans on them in the Federal land banks are making earnest efforts to complete their payments and become the absolute owners of the land upon which they live; and because this Government can afford to continue at 3½-percent interest rates on such loans, and by so doing it will enable farmers to meet interest payments on their loans and to pay a portion of the principal indebtedness; and cause to increase the interest rate at this time and seriously hinder the progress that farmers have thus far made under and by virtue of the low interest rates now existing: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Texas, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, urgently requested to pass House bill No. 6763 as speedily as possible in order that the farmers of the Nation, the sinew and backbone of this country, may continue to receive the aid and help afforded them through the low interest rates on loans obtained from the Federal land banks and to which they are so justly entitled; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the senate send a copy of this resolution to the Secretary of Agriculture, to Senators SHEPPARD and CONNALLY, and to each of the Members of Congress from the State of Texas.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3075) for the relief of E. P. Lewis, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 740) thereon.

Mr. ELLENDER, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 1689. A bill for the relief of Dominga Pardo (Rept. No. 741); and

H. R. 2983. A bill for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Porter (Rept. No. 742).

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 1406) for the relief of Frank S. Walker, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 743) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2229) for the relief of Florida O. McLain, widow of Calvin E. McLain, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 744) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3259) for the relief of Laura E. Alexander, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 745) thereon.

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2146. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the city of Perth Amboy, N. J.", approved July 23, 1935 (Rept. No. 746); and

H. R. 5438. A bill for the relief of Richard T. Edwards (Rept. No. 747).

Mr. SMATHERS, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 3967. A bill for the relief of Adele Fowlkes (Rept. No. 748);

H. R. 5496. A bill for the relief of Willard Webster (Rept. No. 749); and

H. R. 5652. A bill for the relief of Frank A. Smith (Rept. No. 750).

Mr. SCHWARTZ, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 1310. A bill for the relief of Clifford R. George and Mabel D. George (Rept. No. 751);

H. R. 3339. A bill for the relief of Allie Rankin (Rept. No. 752); and

H. R. 4942. A bill for the relief of A. L. Mallery (Rept. No. 753).

Mr. SCHWARTZ also, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1865) for the relief of Mrs. Cliff Snider, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 754) thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2649) to authorize appropriations for construction and rehabilitation at military posts, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 755) thereon.

FIRST, SECOND, AND THIRD NATIONAL STEAMSHIP COS.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 2609) for the relief of the First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos., reported a resolution (S. Res. 147), which was ordered to be placed on the calendar, as follows:

Resolved, That the bill (S. 2609) entitled "A bill for the relief of the First, Second, and Third National Steamship Cos.", now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary", approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BAILEY:

A bill (S. 2667) for the relief of Livvie V. Rowe; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GILLETTE (by request):

A bill (S. 2668) to amend the act cited as the Farm Credit Act of 1933, as amended, to improve and safeguard the financial integrity of the Farm Credit Administration by effecting a better coordination of Federal lending and marketing activities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. NYE:

A bill (S. 2669) for the relief of Amos M. Piper; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PITTMAN (for himself, Mr. BAILEY, Mr. CLARK, Mr. MCNARY, and Mr. WHITE):

A bill (S. 2670) to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife restoration projects, and for other purposes; to the Special Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma (for Mr. KING):

A bill (S. 2671) to reserve certain lands in Utah as an addition to the Goshute Indian Reservation; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. COPELAND (for Mr. KING):

A bill (S. 2672) to authorize the settlement of certain accounts of the District of Columbia; and

A bill (S. 2673) to revise the code of laws for the District of Columbia relating to building and loan associations; to define associations and to provide for their incorporation; prescribing terms, conditions, regulations, and supervision under which such associations may carry on their business; and prescribing penalties for violations of the provisions of the act; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

A bill (S. 2674) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Painter Menoher; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2675) to amend certain sections of the Federal Credit Union Act approved June 26, 1934 (Public, No. 467, 73d Cong.); to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

A bill (S. 2676) to amend the act approved August 24, 1935, entitled "An act to authorize the erection of a suitable memorial to Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals within the Canal Zone"; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

EXTENSION OF CERTAIN TAXES—AMENDMENTS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE submitted four amendments intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 375) to provide revenue, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. DUFFY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 6958, the Interior Department appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 66, after line 13, to insert a new paragraph reading as follows:

"The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States $105,000 of any funds on deposit to the credit of the Menominee Indians in Wisconsin (except the Menominee log funds), and to expend said sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for a per-capita payment of $50 to each enrolled member of the Menominee Tribe: Provided, That such payment shall be in lieu of the payment authorized by the act of June 15, 1934 (48 Stat., p. 964), for the fair market stumpage value of timber cut on the Menominee Reservation during the fiscal year 1937: Provided further, That in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior the payment herein authorized may be made in two installments."

Mr. POPE submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to House bill 6958, the Interior Department appropriation bill, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 12, after line 19, to insert the following:

"For administrative expenses on account of the above projects, including personal services and other expenses in the District of Columbia and in the field, $750,000, in addition to and for the same objects of expenditure as are hereinbefore enumerated in paragraphs 2 and 3 under the caption "Bureau of Reclamation": Provided, That of this amount not to exceed $75,000 may be expended for personal services in the District of Columbia.

"The unexpended balances of the amounts appropriated from the reclamation fund, special fund, under the caption "Bureau of Reclamation, Construction", in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1937, shall remain available for the same purposes for the fiscal year 1938."

On page 74, between lines 13 and 14, to insert the following:

"Upper Snake River storage project, Idaho, $250,000."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2630) for the relief of R. N. Teague and Minnie Teague.

The message also announced that the House insisted on its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5996) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. COLLINS, Mr. CALDWELL, Mr. HIGGINS, Mr. STARNES, and Mr. ENGEL were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

DELEGATION OF POWER UNDER PROPOSED FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT—STATEMENT BY ROBERT H. JACKSON

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a statement by Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, on the subject of Delegation of Power Under the Proposed Fair Labor Standards Act, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY ROBERT W. JOHNSON BEFORE JOINT COMMITTEE ON LABOR RELATIONS

[Mr. LA FOLLETTE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered before the Joint Committee on Labor Relations of the Senate and House of Representatives by Robert W. Johnson, of the Johnson & Johnson Manufacturing Co., of New Brunswick, N. J., which appears in the Appendix.]

DIGEST OF FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1937

[Mr. McGILL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a prepared digest of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

RELIEF APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 361) making appropriations for relief purposes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, during the last few days we have had some very interesting discussions upon the general question of relief. I think it might be very well at this time to remind the Senate that the particular question which we are now considering is whether or not the amendment which would place upon the President the necessity of requiring an arbitrary contribution of 40 percent from local sponsors shall be adopted.

I listened with interest yesterday to the discussion of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY]. If the picture which the Senator from North Carolina drew—a very harrowing picture—of the enervating effect of relief upon the morale and the morals of the country is a true picture, then certainly we should not adopt any relief appropriation at all. The logical conclusion to draw from the argument of the Senator from North Carolina is that, as an institution, both work relief and direct relief should be abolished.

I recognize that we have a right in the Senate to discuss any subject that we may desire; but the discussion of the Senator from North Carolina did not go to the merits of this particular amendment.

The amendment is put forth upon the theory that if we can place a greater responsibility upon the local governments we are going to bring about a reduction of the number upon relief. The theory is that the local governments, realizing that the Federal Government is putting up a large percentage of the money, are asking for more money than they really need, are promoting projects which are unnecessary and which may be undesirable, and that if we can force them to contribute 40 percent it will result in a reduction of the relief rolls and will result also in a reduction of the amount of money that the Federal Government is compelled to spend.

I am frank to confess that at first blush that seems to be an attractive argument; I am frank to confess that at first blush it would seem that if we did this thing it would result in a reduction of the relief rolls; but the facts do not bear out the contention of the proponents of the amendment.

Members of the Senate will remember that commencing the 1st of January 1936 the Federal Government took the position that it would assume the responsibility for work relief and would place upon the States and the local communities the responsibility for direct relief. If the theory upon which the proponents of the amendment depend is a correct one, that the realization on the part of the loyal communities that they are spending their own money would tend to decrease the number on their relief rolls, then the number on the direct-relief rolls, which have been paid for almost entirely by local funds in this last year, would have been reduced. But the fact is that instead of the local relief rolls being reduced in this last year they have been increased to a greater percentage than have the W. P. A. rolls.

In June 1936 the States and the local communities taking care of direct relief had 1,571,487 persons on their rolls. In February 1937 they had 1,725,000 persons.

Let us look at the picture from the point of view of W. P. A. In June 1936 they had 2,528,000 persons. In May 1937 they had 2,199,000 persons.

In other words, while the W. P. A. rolls, financed by money coming from the Federal Government, have been reduced during the last year, the local direct relief rolls have been increased.

Members of this body who say that if we place this responsibility upon the States and the local communities they are going to reduce the rolls are met with the fact and the figures that the Federal Government has been able to reduce its roll but the local communities and the States have been compelled to increase their rolls.

The argument is made that if we can place this responsibility upon the local communities and States, we will cut down administrative costs. It is argued that the authorities of the States and local communities are right there where the people seeking relief can be seen, and the administrative costs will be lessened and we will have more efficiency and economy in the operation of direct relief by local communities and States than we can if we handle it from the city of Washington through the Federal Government. Once again the facts are absolutely contrary to the arguments which are presented.

During the first 11 months of last year, on direct relief in which the Federal Government only participated to the extent of 2.6 percent, in which the burden was carried by the States and local communities, there was spent a total of $484,000,000. Of that amount 16 percent was administrative costs. At the same time the Federal Government, operating the W. P. A., had an administrative cost of 4.2 percent, and that amount has now been reduced to 3.5 percent.

It is very well for Members of this body to dislike Harry Hopkins because of arguments they have had with him. I may say that I have probably had as much difficulty with W. P. A. as any other Member of this body, and have had as bitter arguments with Mr. Hopkins as any other Member of this body; but we cannot evade the fact that under Mr. Hopkins it has been possible to operate the W. P. A. with an administrative cost of 4.2 percent, while the local communities and States spent 16 percent in the administration of their direct relief operations. The facts do not bear out the contention of the proponents of the amendment.

Yesterday we heard the rather naive contention that because we have a certain number of families in the United States and a certain number of jobs there is no serious unemployment, and that the relief roll simply has been built up by those who want to retain their administrative jobs and that it is a fraud upon the Federal Government. I am frank to confess I have been disappointed in the unwillingness of Congress to conduct a census of the unemployed. I have been very anxious that the efforts of the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] and the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] should be successful; that we may have a general study of the problem of relief and that we may have a complete census of the unemployed. But we do have a very definite census of the unemployed, though not a complete one. To me it is not a satisfactory census, but it is a census, through the National Reemployment Service. The unemployed go to the various offices of the Service and enroll themselves for jobs. The records of the National Reemployment Service show that in March 1937 there were 6,115,443 persons who had presented themselves to the offices of that Service asking for employment.

The next argument presented by the proponents of the amendment is that the cities and States are now in a position to take over the burden of relief and that the Federal Government should be relieved of it because of that fact. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] presented an argument yesterday that because of the fact that the bonds of the States and communities are selling above par, therefore, it is proof that the cities and communities are able to take care of their relief problems. Everyone here knows why the bonds of the State and communities, which were selling much below par in 1932, are now selling above par. We know it is the result of two things: First, a restoration of confidence in the country—a restoration of confidence which comes because of the efforts of the President; and, second, because of the fact that interest rates have been brought down and that the bonds of States and local communities, which have a high yield of 5 or 6 or 6½ percent, are selling above par because investors are willing to pay more than par for the bonds in order to get the high yield which they can secure through the purchase of those bonds. There is absolutely no relationship between the amount of money secured for bonds and the condition of the community or State, or the ability of the community or State to take care of the relief problem.

I was interested yesterday afternoon to hear the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] say that all the cities and communities in the country had now balanced their budgets and everything is all right; that the Federal Government is the only interest in the country that does not have a balanced budget. I do not know about the condition of cities in North Carolina, but I do know that some of the cities with which I am familiar are not in a position to take care of this problem. Let us look at the facts concerning the condition of the cities of the country.

In 1932, as a result of the depression, local communities—and by that I mean communities less than States—to the number of 2,600 were in default. Those defaults constituted about 10 percent of the total indebtedness of all the local communities within the country. At the depth of the depression one State and 37 cities of 30,000 population or more were in default. Those communities, together with the school districts which were also in default, accounted for 38 percent of the gross debt of all the cities and school districts in the population groups.

What is the result? The result is that those communities which went into default in 1932, 1933, and 1934 are engaged today not in the issuance of new bonds which they can sell to the public but in the operation of refunding the bonds which went into default during the period of depression.

The cities of the country are met with another sort of problem, and that is the question of decrease in assessed valuation, due to two causes—first, the loss of tax base available to the city, and, second, the lowering of the legal margin of borrowing capacity. I want to take the time to read to the Senate the decreases in some of the principal cities of the country in the assessed valuation as a result of the depression.

In New York City there was a decrease of 16.5 percent; Chicago, 46.3 percent; Philadelphia, 24.4 percent; Detroit, 39.3 percent; Los Angeles, 32.5 percent; Cleveland, 42.5 percent; St. Louis, 20.7 percent; Baltimore, 9.4 percent; Boston, 17.8 percent; San Francisco, 25 percent; Milwaukee, 16.6 percent; and Buffalo, 14.1 percent. The decrease in those cities is simply typical of the decrease in the cities of the United States as a whole; and yet when the proponents of this amendment stand up and say these cities are all right, the only argument they present in support of their contention is the fact that the bonds of these cities are selling for more than they sold for in 1932.

The total percentage of the amount of tax which must be used for debt service and debt payment is significant.

In Philadelphia it was 17.5 percent in 1933. In 1935 it went up to 19 percent.

In Cleveland it was 33.2 percent in 1933. It went up to 43.2 percent in 1935.

In Cincinnati it was 27 percent in 1933. It went up to 35.2 percent in 1935.

In Rochester it was 34 percent in 1933. It went up to 39 percent in 1935.

In Toledo it was 76 percent in 1933. It went up to 83 percent in 1935.

I appreciate the fact that Toledo is not a typical example; but take the city of Toledo, for illustration, compelled to pay out 80 percent of her regular taxes upon debt service and necessary payments upon the principal of debt. What chance is there for the city of Toledo to comply with the provisions of this amendment?

Let us look at a few of the important cities in the United States upon the question of their right to borrow in order to take care of these projects.

Take, first, the case of the city of Chicago. The city of Chicago has a constitutional debt limit of $101,775,664. The amount of her debt, despite her constitutional limitations, is $130,610,000.

The Chicago parks have a debt limit of $101,775,000 and a debt of $104,000,000.

The sanitary district of Chicago has a debt limit of $119,000,000, and a debt of $127,000,000.

Take the case of the city of Detroit: Detroit defaulted in 1933, and a bondholders' protective committee was appointed, and it was necessary for them to work with the city officials. A refunding plan was worked out under an agreement between the bondholders' protective committee and the city of Detroit; and as a result of that agreement it is absolutely impossible for the city of Detroit to make the 40-percent contribution which is necessary under this amendment.

Take the case of the city of Philadelphia: Its present debt is in excess of its constitutional debt limit. It has past-due obligations of $26,000,000 at the close of this fiscal year. These obligations are made up of $9,000,000 operating deficit for 1936, $5,000,000 estimated deficit for this year, $6,000,000 in outstanding 6-percent bonds, and $6,000,000 unpaid debt to the sinking fund; and yet there are those who stand upon the floor of the Senate and say that there is not a city in the United States that has not balanced its budget.

Take the case of the city of Cleveland: The city has constitutional power to issue new bonds up to 90 percent of the net amount matured in any fiscal year; yet Cleveland defaulted in 1934 and is now, with many other cities in the country, engaged in a process of refunding its defaulted obligations; and yet Members of this body say that we could go to the city of Cleveland and ask them to contribute 40 percent.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator is speaking of the city of Cleveland. I happen to have before me some newspaper articles concerning the administration of W. P. A., especially with reference to assuming obligation for direct relief. I observe that in these articles it is said that in the city of Cleveland, assistance for direct relief is now based on the old poorhouse or poor-law system. Has the Senator any information about how the city of Cleveland has administered direct relief?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No; I will say to the Senator that I have no personal knowledge of the method of direct-relief administration in the city of Cleveland; but with a situation existing where they are still attempting to refund their defaulted bonds, I can easily imagine that it is necessary for them to go back to the old poorhouse system of direct relief.

Take the case of the city of Los Angeles: Since 1933 the debts of the city of Los Angeles have been in excess of the limit allowed by the charter; and as of October 1, 1936, the debt limit of general obligation bonds was $38,014,000, while the outstanding bonds on that date were $38,398,000.

Take the case of the city of Buffalo: As of June 30, 1936, the margin of borrowing capacity was approximately $5,600,000. That amount had been reduced from $38,000,000 in 1932.

The examples which I have given of a few cities in the country are typical of the limitations which have been placed by the constitutions of the States or by the charters of the cities and communities upon the right of these States or these counties or municipal corporations to issue bonds and to increase their debt. I have here a résumé from the Municipal Year Book of the various constitutional limitations upon the right of cities and towns to assume obligations and to go into debt; and I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of my remarks these tables may be inserted in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit A.)

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BLACK. As I understand, the Senator's argument is based upon the fact that whether these localities are required to guarantee 40 percent, or 30 percent, or 20 percent, or any other percentage, such a guaranty is unfair and unjust, and would tend to break down the relief system.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I may say to the Senator that the question is not a very wide one. At the present time and during the past year, in an effort to get the States and counties and cities to contribute as large an amount as possible, in an effort worked out by the W. P. A., they have insisted upon a 16-percent contribution. This amendment says that there shall be a contribution of an arbitrary figure, and that the only way the States and counties and cities can get out of that arbitrary contribution is to have the President of the United States, after investigation, determine that it is not possible for them to make the contribution.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, the Senator, of course, knows that the President of the United States never could do any such thing. It would be wholly impossible.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I will say to the Senator from Alabama that if no emergency were involved and these people could go ahead and just exist on nothing for several months, if it were not necessary for people to eat in the meantime, while these investigations were being made, then it would be possible for this amendment to be of practical working. But suppose this amendment had been in force when the flood condition existed during the months of January and February of this year and the people from Ohio and Indiana came down here, and suppose the President had had to say, "Well, we shall have to have a certified audit of your financial condition. We shall have to examine the constitutions of your States. We shall have to examine your city charters. We cannot give you any money until all those examinations have been made." What would have happened to the people of Indiana and Ohio and the other flood States if this amendment had been in force during the spring months of this year?

Mr. BLACK. Of course, they would have been sacrificed on the altar of economy; but the point about which I intended to ask the Senator was this:

An effort may be made—it usually is—before this debate has concluded, or before the matter has been closed, to say, "Well, 40 percent is a little too much, but we will make an arbitrary compromise on a smaller amount." As I understand the argument the Senator is making, he is just as much opposed to the idea of an arbitrary requirement whether somebody tries to get a compromise below 40 percent or not.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. My idea is that the danger, the evil, of this amendment is not in the 40-percent part. The evil of the amendment is in the arbitrary nature of the amendment, the absolute impossibility of administering the W. P. A. fairly and impartially to the cities of the country if we fix any arbitrary figure; and I should object to 15 percent even though W. P. A. is now getting 16 percent. I should object to 15 percent, or 20 percent, or any other percentage.

Mr. BLACK. I fully agree with the Senator, and I think that is the viewpoint of the Senate; but I desire to call attention to the fact that we may be faced with that exact situation before we get through. Somebody may say, "Well, 40 percent is too much, but we will compromise on a lower amount"; and I wanted to be sure that the Senator's argument was against any arbitrary requirement by States and by communities that are unable to comply with it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator is right in his interpretation.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. The article I read from a moment ago was one of a series of articles by a newspaper man, Robert Brown, employed by the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who made quite a survey and study of W. P. A. He arrived at the conclusion that W. P. A.—that is, made work—should be abandoned. The article is not at all one in support of the Works Progress Administration; but along the line of the Senator's remarks, in which he mentioned the State of Ohio, I happened to notice this paragraph about some of the conditions in that State. Mr. Brown says:

> Fifteen of Ohio's most populous counties report that they have a combined gross deficit for direct relief in 1936 amounting to nearly $1,500,000. To April 15 their available funds will be short $5,789,000. For the year 1937, unless other sources are tapped, they will be shy $15,487,000.

That is from 15 counties in the State of Ohio; and if this amendment were adopted, with 14 or 15 counties already shy several million dollars, how could they possibly meet the situation?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. MINTON. I think we are all agreed that an arbitrary amount could not be fixed that would apply in every case, because we never could agree that all the cases are exactly alike; and no matter what amount might be fixed, some way would have to be provided to get around it. That would only mean complicating the administration of the act and increasing the red tape in its administration. Is that correct?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I agree with the Senator. As I said a few minutes ago, if we had plenty of time, if these people could get along without any food for a month or two, and we did not have any floods or emergencies, it might be perfectly all right to adopt this amendment.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator referred to the flood last year in my part of the country, on the Ohio River, and the predicament in which those people would have found themselves if we had had a limitation, such as this amendment calls for, to any percentage. Of course, if we really want to save W. P. A. money, if we do not want to spend any money, I can suggest an amendment to this bill which will prevent the spending of money. Just turn it over to the Disaster Loan Corporation. They will not spend it. [Laughter.]

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator ought to allude to this proposition, which arises in my mind. If we adopt this amendment, the investigation will have to be made in every case where a locality asks for money, and it will necessitate the employment of an army of investigators and specialists. So that to carry out the amendment it would increase the governmental expenses many millions of dollars.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I thank the Senator from Nebraska, and I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the most severe critics of the Works Progress Administration are those who are always contending that they are spending too much money on administrative costs, and that if we could just get it back to the cities and the towns and the States, then we could reduce that cost.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not wish to divert the Senator from the line of his argument, but I should like to suggest that it seems to me that one of the inherent objections to any arbitrary figure, whether it be 40 or 30, or whatever the percentage, is the fact that in each community there are likely to be a large number of different sponsors. All of these projects are not sponsored by a city itself; they are sponsored by a school board; they are sponsored by a water board; they are sponsored by some other organization.

In order to have this program function, it is essential that the situation confronting each and every different sponsor be taken into consideration. So that while the community as a whole may reach a 16- or a 25- or a 30-percent average of the amount they sponsor, the amount sponsored by each of the individual sponsors may vary greatly according to the individual sponsor's capacity to furnish funds. To my mind that is one of the most important practical objections to fixing any arbitrary percentage. In other words, it would stall the program on dead center.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is it not also true that if any amendment is adopted, whether providing for 40 percent, or 30 percent, or 20 percent, or 10 percent, the same kind of an investigation about which the Senator from Nebraska just asked will necessarily have to be made?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. As long as it is arbitrary, an investigation will have to be made.

Mr. McKELLAR. As long as it is arbitrary, whatever the percentage may be, investigations will have to be made, and great delays will consequently occur.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one other question?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. Am I to understand the Senator believes that under this proposal an investigation would have to be made of the ability of each State or county or city to this extent, to find out whether or not they are able to raise more taxes? If that is true, does it not necessarily follow that the investigation would have to go to the individuals in the city? How could they tell whether a city could pay more taxes or not unless they investigated each individual citizen to see what his mortgages were, whether he had any property that was subject to further taxation. How could they determine whether or not a city was able to pay out more money unless they went into the individual community and inquired as to the taxpaying ability of the individual citizen? And how many would it take to make such an inquiry? I might ask those who speak in the sacred name of economy, How many individual employees would it take to go into each city which made an application for some W. P. A. work to investigate each individual citizen to see what his mortgages were, to see how much in the way of taxes he was paying on real estate, to see how much in taxes he was paying on his mule, if he lived in a small southern village? How could they know whether or not a city was able to pay more unless they made such a searching scrutiny of the individuals who were to pay the taxes in the city?

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to permit me to ask the Senator from Alabama a question?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly.

Mr. BURKE. How does the Senator from Alabama think the investigation is made at the present time under the procedure under which each sponsor is required to pay all it is able to pay?

Mr. BLACK. I shall be glad to answer that if the Senator from Washington will permit.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Will the Senator permit me to read to him, to save him the trouble of answering, what Mr. Hopkins said about that?

Mr. BLACK. The Senator ought to let me answer, since he asked me the question.

Mr. BURKE. I want to put the facts before the Senator.

Mr. BLACK. I shall be glad to let the Senator answer his own question.

Mr. BURKE. This is what Mr. Hopkins said on last Saturday in direct answer to the argument the Senator is now making.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Alabama that it is customary for my good and intimate friend the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], whom I most highly respect, always to answer the questions he asks. So I beg of the Senator not to be disturbed. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLACK. I understand that. It is because the Senator from Nebraska is sure that the question will be answered better than if I were allowed to answer.

Mr. BURKE. We should like to hear the Senator's answer after we hear Mr. Hopkins' statement of how it is handled now. He was asked by Senator BYRNES this question:

> With reference to your being constituted "financial policemen" by these provisions, should they be enacted into law—

Which is the point, I understand, about which the Senator is asking—> let me ask you how you today determine what shall be put up by the sponsor in each case?

To that Mr. Hopkins replied as follows:

> We determine it by inquiring into their bonded indebtedness. We inquire into the law as to what legal right they have to increase that indebtedness. We inquire into their taxing ability on other fronts. We inquire into the ability of real estate to stand an increased tax. All of those things are taken into consideration in dealing with a sponsor when they ask us to pay what we think is an unreasonable percentage of the cost. We take into consideration what they are doing out of their own funds on other fronts in connection with the relief problem.

So wherein would there be any difference?

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, may I answer?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. The difference would be that the sponsors of 40 percent, or 30 percent, or 20 percent, or 10 percent, or 2 percent, are not satisfied with that. They want to send in an inspector to see how many kitchen utensils each taxpayer in the city has, whether or not his stove is mortgaged, whether or not he is able to buy gas in the community. Now they go into the city and ask something about the city's indebtedness, but they would have to go further. We would put the burden on the President, through his representative, to send investigators into every home in each city where they wanted to get some W. P. A. work, and let them investigate each individual's indebtedness, to see whether he owed a loan shark any money, and could put up any money.

We would not be satisfied with information as to the city's bonded indebtedness, we would have to look at the mortgages of the individual people in the city. So I answer the Senator that those who sponsor this movement are not satisfied with what Mr. Hopkins has been doing, looking at the ability of the city from the standpoint of city bonds, they want now to hire a million employees to go into every taxpayer's home in every city and every community in this Nation to find out if the mule is mortgaged up to the last dollar. Then they will let him go on relief in the community.

Mr. BURKE. If the Senator considers that an answer, we will let it stand. I fail to see that it has any bearing at all.

Mr. BLACK. I did not expect the Senator to see it, but I consider it a good answer.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I was interested in the Senator's remarks about ability to pay. That is also very intimately coupled with the condition in which many taxpayers find themselves when they are unable to pay their taxes. Under the laws of many States they are permitted to refrain from paying taxes for a considerable period of time. In my State the owner of real estate may refrain from paying his taxes for 6 years, if for any reason he is unable to pay them, and if he does not pay them, there is no way of enforcing the collection of the taxes except to sell his property at the end of that period. Also in my State the railroad organizations have made it their habit to restrain the collection of taxes imposed on them by the State. They have gone into the Federal courts and restrained collection; and that involves a large sum of money, all of which is taken from the State of Washington by judicial process.

I do not know whether it is true in Alabama, Kentucky, and other States that a home owner may refrain from paying his taxes, but it is so with us today. That complicates the problem for the local communities, because they have not any money with which to pay such things as these relief payments. It is of no avail to pass laws and tax people when they do not have to pay the taxes and can go into default.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator from Washington state that the laws of his State permit the nonpayment of taxes over a period of 6 years, at the end of which time the city or county or State may sell the property at public auction and recover the amount due?

Mr. BONE. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the law make any provision for helpless unemployed people waiting 6 years until that public auction has been held to determine whether they shall receive assistance after a while? What does the law of Washington provide with respect to how long a man shall go hungry while waiting for the State to sell somebody's property?

Mr. BONE. He is likely to go hungry.

Mr. BARKLEY. The law makes no provision about it?

Mr. BONE. It does not; and at the end of 6 years the county takes over the property, and it may remain in the possession of the county involved, and not sold, because, obviously, under conditions of that kind they cannot find a ready buyer. There are counties in the State which have held large blocks of real estate for years.

Mr. BARKLEY. It seems to me that the legislature of the Senator's State ought to be called into session to make it illegal for a man to starve to death while he is waiting for the property to be sold. [Laughter.]

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, that is quite an idea. I shall be glad to communicate it to the legislature of my State.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I should like to add what to me seems to be a much more serious menace involved in this particular phase of the question. If the President really should pass upon the question of the financial ability of municipalities to contribute, he must examine the budgets of those municipalities. Let us assume the representatives of a town come here and say, "We cannot contribute. Here is the amount of money we have." Then the President, if he really shall comply fully and technically with the provision of the amendment, must look through their budget to see whether they are wasting money on any other operation within that community, because certainly no town should be permitted to spend all its money on something else, and then come and ask for aid, if its other expenditures are not proper and are not justified.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. There has been a considerable amount of ill-founded and unjustified propaganda concerning the tendency toward dictatorship in this country. Can the Senator conceive of anything which would clothe an administrative official with more power over local communities of government than to give him the right to decide whether or not they were in a financially sound condition?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I appreciate the contribution of the Senator from Wisconsin, and say that I am particularly interested in his suggestion. I must frankly confess that I shuddered yesterday when the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] talked about the grass growing in the streets of New York. I had heard those words before. I heard them over the radio. They came from the lips of a man for whose integrity and ability I have great respect, but who, had he been permitted to continue to run this country for another 4 years, because of his political and economic theories and ideas would have come closer to bringing this country into dictatorship than any other man who could possibly have had anything to do with the Government of the United States.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. If any percentage of contribution should be fixed in the joint resolution, would it not have the effect of virtually stopping the so-called "white collar" projects and the youth projects? As I understand, there is very little contribution on the part of local sponsors toward either women's projects or especially the "white collar" class projects. If we should agree to an amendment fixing any amount as the amount which must be contributed by the sponsors, it would virtually wipe out those two projects.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I should like to say in answer to that suggestion by the Senator from Tennessee that when the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] yesterday pointed out precisely that fact he made what I considered the most valuable contribution to the argument that has been made on this amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. Did the Senator say that no contribution is made to the so-called women's projects, sewing-room projects, by the local communities?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I did not say that.

Mr. BYRNES. Certainly, in the State of South Carolina the sponsor of a project of that kind must furnish rent, light, heat, water, equipment, which means machines, thread, and buttons; and after July 21, under an order which has been issued, 25 percent of the raw material which is used must be furnished. That is very definite information as to the requirements there. I do not know what is required in other States, because, as we know from this discussion, different percentages of contribution from different sponsors are left to the States to be fixed.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, the argument which the Senator from South Carolina presents this morning is absolutely contrary to the argument which he presented yesterday, and the argument which the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] presented yesterday, about the mayors of the towns wanting to erect monuments to themselves; and when they come here and ask for money as the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] claim, they pad their relief rolls in order to have buildings constructed and in order to have sewers constructed, as well as other projects. Certainly the argument which the Senator from South Carolina presents this morning is absolutely contrary to the argument which he presented yesterday.

Mr. BYRNES. I am not presenting any argument. I am simply making a statement of fact with regard to the contribution required to be made by sponsors of sewing-room projects in South Carolina.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. If that is so, it is, to my mind, an almost complete answer to the argument made by the Senator from South Carolina yesterday.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield to me?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I wish to say that in my State the amount put up by the sponsor is, on an average, 25.5 percent. Except for two other States in the Union, I think my State puts up the largest average amount. In that respect my State is third in order. However, I wish to say, in fixing that average, the amounts that sponsors are required to spend for "white collar" projects and for women's projects are practically negligible; and if an amendment fixing the amount were placed in the joint resolution, it would virtually wipe out the "white collar" projects and the women's projects in my State.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I now wish to go on with the next point which was made by the proponents of the amendment yesterday. I had a feeling that in their discussion of the city of New York they were a little unfair, and there was what I believe to be an effort to create a certain amount of prejudice in favor of their amendment and against the city of New York. I myself have said some rather nasty things about some people in the city of New York, but they did not do business in that part of the town or they did not live in that part of the town where the beneficiaries of any relief program either have done business or live.

I think the Members of the Senate should realize this. In 1935 the President of the United States appeared before the Congress and he made a statement, which was not correctly quoted yesterday by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY]. The President said that the Federal Government had to get out of this business of direct relief. It was not that the Federal Government should get out of relief, because immediately after that the President asked for over $4,000,000,000 for relief purposes from the Congress. Prior to that time the Federal Government very largely carried on both work relief and direct relief. But the policy was adopted in 1935 that the Federal Government should carry on work relief, and that the local communities and States would take over the obligation of direct relief. When figures are presented to the Senate as to the amount of money being contributed by the States and the counties and the cities, if we are going to have a true picture, if we are going to have a fair picture, we must include in that picture the figures of the number of persons upon direct relief, and the amounts of money that have been contributed by the States and the counties and the cities.

In January of 1936 the Federal Government contributed 11.2 percent toward direct relief. That percentage went down and the amounts went down so fast that by November of 1936 we were contributing only two-tenths of 1 percent toward direct relief. The average for the year was 2.6 percent. So when Senators talk about the city of New York and the State of New York, and leave out the amount that the State of New York and the city of New York contribute for direct relief, they are deliberately attempting to cause the Members of this body to stick their heads in the sand and not see the entire picture.

Mr. WAGNER rose.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I shall be glad to yield at this point to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. I shall wait until the Senator has concluded his address. I spent half of last night looking up the figures upon this question, and I hope to say something about it when the Senator shall have concluded.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, any fair tabulation, any tabulation which will present a full and complete and fair picture to the Members of this body in passing upon the question of this amendment must necessarily include all the figures.

At this time, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in my remarks a table showing the Federal, State, and local funds used on relief and work programs for the calendar year 1936.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table is as follows:

TABLE 42.—Federal, State, and local funds used on relief and work programs,[1] calendar year 1936

[House hearings, p. 246]

State	Total	Federal funds		State and local funds
		Amount	Percent of total	Amount	Percent of total
United States	$5,008,073,641	$3,853,146,400	75.6	$1,244,927,241	24.4
Alabama	60,002,461	49,853,696	83.1	10,148,765	16.9
Arizona	38,443,024	32,850,868	85.5	5,592,156	14.5
Arkansas	50,295,536	42,295,115	84.1	8,000,421	15.9
California	301,490,275	221,173,007	73.4	80,317,268	26.6
Colorado	65,099,246	50,978,458	78.3	14,120,788	21.7
Connecticut	51,332,866	35,486,333	69.1	15,846,533	30.9
Delaware	5,760,197	4,737,273	82.2	1,022,924	17.8
District of Columbia	42,385,822	37,869,496	89.3	4,516,326	10.7
Florida	52,957,647	43,922,236	82.9	9,035,411	17.1
Georgia	62,342,235	52,121,452	83.6	10,220,783	16.4
Idaho	33,153,248	29,539,452	89.1	3,613,796	10.9
Illinois	326,929,068	216,770,542	66.3	110,158,526	33.7
Indiana	114,613,561	87,399,552	76.3	27,214,009	23.7
Iowa	61,854,873	46,240,924	74.8	15,613,949	25.2
Kansas	74,509,590	58,201,076	78.1	16,308,514	21.9
Kentucky	62,112,551	49,872,225	80.3	12,240,326	19.7
Louisiana	48,439,336	43,276,023	89.2	5,213,313	10.8
Maine	29,560,188	23,530,926	79.6	6,029,262	20.4
Maryland	45,819,455	36,534,060	79.7	9,285,395	20.3
Massachusetts	188,665,186	140,225,230	74.3	48,459,956	25.7
Michigan	154,895,520	113,894,472	73.6	41,001,048	26.4
Minnesota	116,756,939	90,031,732	77.1	26,725,207	22.9
Mississippi	55,289,150	42,417,999	76.8	12,821,151	23.2
Missouri	127,327,678	98,054,898	77.0	29,272,780	23.0
Montana	59,591,987	55,605,328	93.3	3,986,659	66.7
Nebraska	62,892,117	46,518,588	74.0	16,373,529	26.0
Nevada	13,120,703	11,799,024	89.9	1,321,679	10.1
New Hampshire	17,776,762	13,467,443	75.8	4,309,319	24.2
New Jersey	156,845,939	120,360,768	76.7	36,485,171	23.3
New Mexico	37,046,830	33,758,355	91.1	3,288,475	8.9
New York [2]	764,616,089	482,437,231	63.1	282,178,858	36.9
North Carolina	58,795,961	48,783,575	83.0	10,012,386	17.0
North Dakota	41,186,785	36,537,091	88.7	4,649,694	11.3
Ohio	264,754,905	200,663,705	75.8	64,091,200	24.2
Oklahoma	84,619,853	69,579,653	82.2	15,040,200	17.8
Oregon	61,348,287	50,898,352	83.0	10,449,935	17.0
Pennsylvania	404,418,316	297,035,671	73.4	107,382,645	26.6
Rhode Island	27,948,185	16,083,427	57.5	11,864,758	42.5
South Carolina	48,152,449	39,925,125	82.9	8,227,324	17.1
South Dakota	44,109,422	40,096,210	90.9	4,013,212	9.1
Tennessee	64,973,682	48,392,024	74.5	16,581,658	25.5
Texas	171,924,642	127,733,203	74.7	43,291,429	25.3
Utah	32,973,328	27,130,415	82.3	5,842,913	17.7
Vermont	15,976,458	12,868,629	80.5	3,107,829	19.5
Virginia	69,470,425	59,212,124	85.2	10,258,301	14.8
Washington	95,380,918	77,292,710	81.0	18,088,208	19.0
West Virginia	74,761,959	64,467,154	86.2	10,294,805	13.8
Wisconsin	119,492,853	91,079,323	76.2	28,413,530	23.8
Wyoming	22,389,456	19,794,539	88.4	2,594,917	11.6
Various	114,349,688	114,349,688	100.0

[1] Includes funds used for direct relief, Works Progress Administration projects, Public Works Administration projects, Bureau of Public Roads projects (including Federal-aid highway projects), Resettlement Administration projects operated by other Federal agencies from funds made available through the National Industrial Recovery Administration Act of 1933, and the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, and the Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts of 1935 and 1936.

[2] See table 43–A, following, for distribution of expenditures between New York City and New York State exclusive of New York City.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, the table shows that the State and local funds amounted to 24.4 percent on a national average. There has been discussion about the statement that the State of Idaho contributed the highest percentage toward W. P. A. projects and the State of New York the lowest percentage. When all the figures are taken together let us consider the two States which have been referred to. Idaho had a total contribution of 16.4 percent, while New York had a total contribution of 36.9 percent. So that instead of Idaho being the high State it was merely the average State, and instead of New York being the low State it was almost the high State. If we are going to consider this question fairly it must be upon the basis of the total amount of money spent upon direct relief and work relief.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have been confused and confounded by the different figures which have been presented. I have on my desk, furnished me by the able Senator from South Carolina, figures which are wholly different from those now given by the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Let me say to the Senator from Oregon——

Mr. McNARY. Just a moment. I have read the reports furnished the Senate and those furnished the House and have heard the discussion on the floor, and not once has anyone agreed upon the figures. Where did the Senator from Washington get these peculiar figures?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Let me say to the Senator that there is nothing "peculiar" about my figures. They come from the House hearings at page 247. There is nothing "peculiar" about them. They just happen to be the figures that include the whole picture, while the figures at which the Senator from Oregon has been looking since yesterday did not include the whole figures. The figures which the Senator secured from the Senator from South Carolina were W. P. A. figures exclusively. They did not include the amount of money which States, counties, and cities have contributed for direct relief. In the first 11 months of last year the Federal Government contributed only 2.6 percent of the total expended for direct relief, and in the month of November that percentage had dropped so that it was only two-tenths of 1 percent for direct relief. I think anybody who will consider the whole picture fairly must agree with the conclusion that when the Federal Government adopts a policy by which it says to States and counties and cities, "You take care of direct relief and we will take care of work relief", in giving a tabulation of the total amount spent there should be given the total amount spent by both upon both kinds of relief.

Mr. McNARY. I will state to the Senator that I do not dispute his figures or the figures of other Democrats, for they all emanate from Democratic sources, but none of them are alike. That is not a peculiar situation, however.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There is no confusion in the figures. It may be that it is rather difficult for those on the other side of the aisle to understand figures. [Laughter.] I know that some figures were published last fall by the Literary Digest which were accepted with great enthusiasm by those upon the other side; but they were "peculiar" figures; there must have been something wrong with them. There is, however, nothing "peculiar" about the fact that the Senator from South Carolina presents one set of figures and I present another set when it is understood that his figures relate purely to W. P. A. and my figures include all sorts of relief, direct relief as well as work relief.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator has made the statement which I desired to make, that there is no reason for any misunderstanding about these figures. They are not my figures; but as, in the case of the Senator from Washington, they are the figures presented by the Administrator, Mr. Hopkins. The table which the Senator from Oregon has before him, which appears at page 169 of the House hearings, specifically sets forth that it refers only to the Works Progress Administration.

It shows the number of projects, it shows the total cost of W. P. A. projects, and it shows the percentage of the cost supplied from Federal funds and the percentage of the cost supplied from sponsors' funds, and is limited to that. The table to which the Senator from Washington refers, and which is also in the House hearings, does not purport to show the difference in percentage between the contributions of the Federal Government and local governments for W. P. A., but to show the amount of money spent by local governments for all manner of relief.

The only difference between us is as to whether or not in determining this question we should consider the percentage contributed by sponsors and that contributed by the Federal Government of the cost of a work project, or whether, in determining it, we should take into consideration the amount of money spent by local governments for direct relief and for other purposes. There is no dispute as to the figures.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina argued yesterday that we should accept the table which he has. I am arguing in determining this question that we should accept the table which I present. There is no argument between us as to the correctness or incorrectness of either table. I think, however, the Members of the Senate will take into consideration this other fact, which is shown by a table on page 187 of the House hearings, that the amount of money which the States and local communities have put up for relief has been increasing steadily since 1933. In 1933 the amount was $312,000,000; in 1934 it was $412,000,000; in 1935 it was $468,000,000; and in 1936 it was $494,000,000.

I say we should take those figures into consideration in connection with the argument made yesterday that the local governments were the ones that were forcing the increase in the expenditures by the Federal Government; but, as a matter of fact, the Federal Government has steadily decreased its expenditures and the local governments have increased their expenditures.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Did the figures just recited by the Senator include the amount expended for all relief purposes or only for W. P. A., where he stated that the amount contributed locally for 1936 was $494,000,000?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Those were the figures for direct and work relief spent for local relief agencies.

Mr. BARKLEY. Did the Senator also—my attention was distracted—give the total amount of State contributions and local contributions toward direct relief and work programs?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes; I put that in the RECORD.

Mr. BARKLEY. Showing that for 1936 they contributed $1,244,000,000, which was almost 100 percent over the amount contributed in 1935, and that increase was coincidental with the decrease of the expenditures by the Federal Government for direct relief and also for work relief?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I have not as yet put those figures in the RECORD. Mr. President, in conformity with the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a table appearing in the House hearings on page 186 which shows the total State and local funds used for relief and work programs from 1933 to 1936.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the table will be printed in the RECORD.

The table referred to is as follows:

TABLE 24–A.—Total State and local funds used for relief and work programs, 1933–36 [1]

[House hearings, p. 186]

State	Total	1933	1934	1935	1936
United States	$2,940,166,087	$338,793,519	$641,807,569	$714,637,758	$1,244,927,241
Alabama	17,837,257	709,947	3,192,282	3,786,263	10,148,765
Arizona	10,220,677	734,081	1,423,269	2,471,171	5,592,156
Arkansas	15,024,840	322,957	2,734,315	3,967,147	8,000,421
California	192,428,997	22,191,599	28,442,499	61,477,631	80,317,268
Colorado	26,855,284	1,488,965	6,073,471	5,172,060	14,120,788
Connecticut	57,910,208	9,020,862	14,720,293	18,322,520	15,846,533
Delaware	6,577,861	1,766,585	2,661,340	1,127,012	1,022,924
District of Columbia	10,512,092	2,195,505	1,077,647	2,722,614	4,516,326
Florida	15,909,295	1,019,282	2,977,561	2,937,041	9,035,411
Georgia	17,665,198	743,205	3,427,073	3,274,137	10,220,783
Idaho	7,491,060	669,148	1,251,910	1,956,226	3,613,796
Illinois	234,735,280	19,898,109	55,726,258	48,952,387	110,158,526
Indiana	67,515,984	7,533,671	17,040,576	15,727,728	27,214,009
Iowa	44,371,896	5,396,649	13,671,006	9,690,092	15,613,949
Kansas	41,294,513	3,684,013	9,743,572	11,558,414	16,308,514
Kentucky	24,463,287	1,334,187	5,901,368	4,897,406	12,240,326
Louisiana	10,561,787	1,239,010	1,991,708	2,117,756	5,213,313
Maine	18,348,905	3,673,598	3,971,967	4,674,079	6,029,252
Maryland	29,435,355	5,031,866	10,876,734	4,241,360	9,285,395
Massachusetts	183,708,675	34,456,374	50,906,253	49,886,092	48,459,956
Michigan	92,809,243	10,283,024	22,617,015	18,968,156	41,001,048
Minnesota	62,126,549	5,033,066	13,488,454	16,879,823	26,725,207
Mississippi	16,610,947	202,603	1,341,017	2,246,176	12,821,151
Missouri	65,569,191	3,425,690	14,430,034	18,440,687	29,272,780
Montana	12,435,620	1,092,035	4,213,533	3,143,393	3,986,659
Nebraska	31,477,588	2,159,922	5,976,382	6,967,755	16,373,529
Nevada	2,313,223	138,485	301,123	551,936	1,321,679
New Hampshire	14,114,588	1,330,960	4,600,141	3,874,168	4,309,319
New Jersey	$91,929,881	$20,050,131	$11,978,288	$23,416,291	$36,485,171
New Mexico	5,142,296	148,541	501,739	1,203,541	3,288,475
New York	704,406,641	84,717,057	151,571,928	185,938,798	82,178,858
North Carolina	17,823,085	1,274,208	3,933,717	2,602,774	210,012,386
North Dakota	11,036,414	1,174,103	2,068,412	3,114,205	4,649,694
Ohio	136,807,987	18,676,593	33,975,572	20,064,622	64,091,200
Oklahoma	28,355,839	2,002,340	6,117,107	5,196,192	15,040,200
Oregon	21,075,012	877,918	3,131,457	6,615,702	10,449,935
Pennsylvania	258,219,721	40,681,414	51,687,490	58,468,172	107,382,645
Rhode Island	28,937,209	2,891,058	5,695,442	8,485,951	11,864,758
South Carolina	13,055,212	264,706	2,713,082	1,850,100	8,227,324
South Dakota	12,389,265	1,640,033	4,290,919	2,445,101	4,013,212
Tennessee	24,679,698	429,360	2,732,205	4,936,475	16,581,658
Texas	80,268,595	797,888	17,116,308	19,002,970	43,291,429
Utah	14,801,735	1,140,188	4,081,898	3,736,736	5,842,913
Vermont	7,331,268	998,623	1,883,083	1,341,733	3,107,829
Virginia	20,780,640	960,518	6,114,386	3,447,435	10,258,301
Washington	36,029,992	3,184,749	7,851,978	6,905,057	18,088,208
West Virginia	23,037,236	906,609	5,610,789	6,225,033	10,294,805
Wisconsin	68,928,629	8,788,712	13,218,612	18,507,772	28,413,530
Wyoming	4,084,523	413,382	634,356	1,041,868	2,594,917

[1] Includes funds used for direct and work relief, Civil Works Administration projects, Works Progress Administration projects, and Public Works Administration projects. For explantion of items included, see footnotes on tables 24–B through 24–E.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. As I said at the outset, I was very much interested in the remarks of the Senator from North Carolina yesterday. I was interested because of the fact——

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. I would not interrupt the argument of the Senator, were it not for the fact that it is my intention to offer an amendment to the committee amendment, and it appears that it is time that the amendment to the amendment, if it is to be proposed, should be submitted, so that the Senate may be thinking about it. If it would not interfere with the Senator's remarks too much, I should like to have the amendment now stated, and I will discuss it when I am able to obtain the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I have no objection to that being done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas to the amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment, line 17, page 4, it is proposed to strike out "40" and insert in lieu thereof "25"; after the word "services", in line 18, page 4, to insert a period and strike out the remainder of the amendment down to and including the word "supply" in line 23, page 4, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Provided, That if the President shall find any project to be necessary in order to provide work relief in the community where the project is to be located, and that the applicant is unable to supply 25 percent of the cost as herein required, he may authorize the project upon such contribution or assurance of contribution as he finds that the applicant is able to make.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Arkansas a question?

Mr. ROBINSON. I have not the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. From hearing the amendment read I could not follow it exactly. Would it reduce the contribution required by local communities to 25 percent?

Mr. ROBINSON. It reduces to 25 percent the amount required to be paid if those applying for the project are able to contribute that much. It does not mean that a larger amount may not be required, for, as the Senator knows, many of these projects have been promoted with the requirement that the applicant pay 40 percent, or even 50 percent, but 25 percent would be the minimum requirement if the applicant were able to meet that requirement.

There is a further provision that if the President finds that any project is necessary for work relief in the community where the project is located, the project may be proceeded with, notwithstanding this limitation upon the contribution of so much as those sponsoring the project may be able to provide. In other words, if I may trespass on the time of the Senator from Washington a little further at this juncture, it obviates two difficulties, as I see it: First, the amount of 40 percent is too large and will bar and prevent necessary work-relief projects; second, the amendment to the amendment does not exclude any project that is found to be necessary for work relief in the community if those sponsoring the project are unable to meet the 25-percent requirement. My reason for that is that there are some projects that are for the benefit of those who are most needy. Such projects would be excluded under the terms of the amendment as presented by the committee, the amendment known as the Byrnes amendment. No project that is found to be necessary for work relief in the community where the projects is located would be excluded under the amendment which I am proposing to the committee amendment. It would, however, contemplate that where the sponsors are able to do so they shall contribute at least 25 percent.

I will discuss the amendment further at a more opportune time.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I am very happy that the Senator from Arkansas has carried out the suggestion proposed by the Senator from Oregon yesterday. However, I want to inquire if the amendment includes both P. W. A. and W. P. A.

Mr. ROBINSON. It does not affect P. W. A.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I had hoped, as the result of my argument upon the question of arbitrary power, to have dissuaded the Senator from Arkansas from the introduction of this amendment. I do not care whether it is 25 or 40, 10 or 50 percent, so long as it is an arbitrary amount it contains precisely the evils and the objections to which I have alluded. While I dislike very much to disagree with the Democratic leader I am convinced that the amendment which he proposes contains within itself all the evils contained in the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, I realize, in presenting the amendment, that there is one group which does not believe any requirement should be made of those who propose the project, but that the matter should be left entirely to the discretion of the Administrator. I think perhaps the President would take that view of the matter. I am sure Mr. Hopkins does take that view of it. Nevertheless it occurs to me the time has come when, if we are to perform our duty with respect to the National Budget, if we are to safeguard the credit of the Treasury, we should require that those who are able to contribute to these projects should do so in a reasonable amount.

There are some who would not be satisfied with 25 percent. I made a brief statement a few moments ago of the reasons which prompted me to propose 25 percent in lieu of the 40 percent carried in the committee amendment. I think 40 percent is too high and that it would prevent the accomplishment of projects which are necessary for work relief.

Under the amendment I have proposed no projects found necessary by the President will be barred. All projects of that character may be proceeded with. There is not imposed in my amendment to the amendment any requirement as to the method by which the conclusion may be reached that the proponent of the project is unable to pay 25 percent. The President or the Administrator is at liberty to reach that conclusion in the same way it is reached now.

The amendment which I have submitted to the committee amendment does not contemplate the adoption of constitutional amendments or the enactment of statutes. It simply means what it says. When a project is proposed in a community where there is necessity for work relief, if those suggesting the project are unable to meet the 25-percent requirement, the projects may be proceeded with notwithstanding that fact; but if they are able to meet it, and the President finds they are able to do so, I challenge anyone to give a substantial reason why they should not be required to do it and why we as representatives of the National Government should not expect them to do it.

I thank the Senator from Washington for yielding so extensively. I am compelled to leave the Chamber for a brief period of time.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to enable me to submit a question to the Senator from Arkansas before he leaves the Chamber?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BLACK. Under the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arkansas, the President would have the power to deprive a community of a project if the community does not put up 25 percent, and under the Byrnes amendment the President would have the power to deprive the community of a project if it does not put up the 40 percent. In the long run, in spite of the difference in language and the difference in intent, would not the result be the same to the community?

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to enable me to answer the question?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not share that conclusion of the Senator from Alabama. The power exists now without limitation to reject any project that is proposed. The practice has been to require applicants for projects to show what they are able to contribute. The standard varies very greatly. In my State some projects have been advanced when the proponents of them were required to put up 50 percent.

The amendment which I have proposed establishes a comparatively uniform standard below which the proponents may not go in their contributions unless the President finds that it is necessary to do so to prevent suffering on the part of those who are the objects of the Government's aid. In my judgment, it takes care of the difficulty the Senator from Alabama has in mind.

Mr. BLACK. I may state that, in my judgment, it is still exactly the same, because the President is given the power in each instance to require the 25 percent or to require the 40 percent. The fact that there is additional language does not change the result. In my judgment, the only difference between the 25-percent requirement in the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas and the 40-percent requirement contained in the amendment of the Senator from South Carolina is that it might be that some of the communities could put up the 25 percent but could not put up the 40 percent.

Mr. ROBINSON. In answer to that suggestion, if I may answer in the time of the Senator from Washington the President now has the power—though in actual practice it is done by the Administrator—to reject any project or demand the payment of any amount he sees fit to demand. He may in theory demand 5 percent from the proponents of one project and 75 percent from the proponents of another project. What the amendment which I have submitted would do is to make sure that no meritorious project, no project found by the President to be meritorious, would be denied Federal aid, and at the same time that those who are able to contribute as much as 25 percent shall be required to do so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to enable me to submit a brief question to the Senator from Arkansas, because I shall want to discuss this matter a little later if I have the opportunity to do so.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under the present method informal conferences are held between the administrator and the sponsors in every community. Of course those conferences do not take place between Mr. Hopkins and the school board, for instance, but through the State administrator and his representatives these informal conferences agree very largely, without great controversy, on the amount the community can put up.

Is there any wide difference between that method, and the setting up of a fixed yardstick in the law itself which must prevail except in certain exceptional cases referred to in the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas and referred to in the Byrnes amendment? Is there any greater difficulty in determining these matters without friction, disagreement, disappointment, jealousy, and envy where there are informal conferences than where we have a fixed yardstick by which we must measure the amount which the sponsors must contribute?

Mr. ROBINSON. Of course, there is a difference, otherwise it would be absurd to offer the amendment. I make no complaint about the manner in which the work relief program has been administered. On the whole I think it has been effective and successful. I have no criticism to offer of Mr. Hopkins. I think he has done a wonderful work. But conditions are different now from what they were when we first initiated the work-relief program. I think that is easily demonstrable. We are now living in a period of notable general prosperity and if the time is ever to come when we are to diminish this burden, it surely is at hand or is approaching.

As to the authority or freedom of the Administrator, of course the amendment would impose some limitation upon his authority. His duty under the amendment would be to procure at least 25 percent in contribution by the applicant for the project if he can do so. If he finds the applicant is unable to pay it and finds that the project is necessary, he may go forward with it on the present basis. The only distinction between the present system and the one proposed by my amendment to the committee amendment is that my amendment would impose upon the Administrator the duty to procure 25 percent if he could do so. To that extent it limits his discretion.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I now desire to discuss the general subject. I think the things I now have to say will certainly apply just as much to the suggested amendment as to the committee amendment.

First I wish to read to the Senate from a political platform. Something was said yesterday about political platforms. I desire to read from the 1936 platform of a great political party:

> We pledge * * * Federal grants-in-aid to the States and Territories while the need exists upon compliance with these conditions: (a) A fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of State and local governments; (b) all engaged in relief administration to be selected on the basis of merit and fitness; (c) adequate provision to be made for the encouragement of those persons who are trying to become self-supporting.

That was the pledge of the Republican Party in 1936; and I think if Senators will analyze the proposals made here, if they will analyze the discussions that have been made here by the proponents of the pending committee amendment, they will find that the proposal and the arguments fairly well comply with the pledge of the Republican Party of 1936.

Now, I want to read the Senate something that I read yesterday morning with a great deal of interest. It was inserted in the RECORD on June 14, on Monday of this week, by the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY]. It is a letter written by him to the Legislature of the State of North Carolina, in which the distinguished Senator discussed the necessity of compliance with political party platforms. He said:

> I have no right, in politics or morals, to violate my party's covenant or my covenant with the electorate. I cannot assume that public opinion has changed between February 5 and March 22, 1937—and surely it could not have changed prior to February 5. If I could assume that it has changed between February 5 and March 22, 1937, would I be safe in assuming that it would not change again before the year is out?* * *
>
> I have always considered the platforms on which I stood as binding—first, as obligations of my party; second, as covenants accepted by the electorate; third, as solemn promises given by myself as candidate. I cannot change them after an election. I cannot go behind or over the verdict of the people as formally ascertained and declared in the election.
>
> In a word, I consider it my solemn duty to the Democratic Party, and the majority of the people, to abide by its platform.

What did the Democratic Party say to the people of this country in 1936? I am talking now to the Members on this side of the Chamber. I think it is about time that someone stood up and talked to the Members on this side of the Chamber about the aims and aspirations of the Democratic Party. I think it is about time that the members of the Democratic Party took to heart the words of the Senator from North Carolina when he wrote that letter, now that we are having all this discussion about what we are going to do. We are "going back to normalcy." "Going back to normalcy!" Back to the days of Harding and Daugherty; "back to normalcy!"

I say to the Members of this body on the Democratic side that the Democratic Party in 1932 and in 1936 made a pledge to the common people of this country that the Democratic Party was never going to take it back to "normalcy"—back to the days of Harding and Daugherty; back to the days of the greatest saturnalia of corruption this Nation has ever known; back to the days of ship subsidies, when the Fleischackers in San Francisco and the Dollar Line put their hands into the public pocket and took money from the people of this country; back to the stock-speculation days of 1926 and 1929. Every Member of this body must recognize that the Democratic Party pledged to the people of this country that we were never going back to that kind of normalcy. Senators get up and say, "Why, prosperity has returned."

I listened with interest to the very eloquent words of the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] about the "bright sunlight of prosperity" returning. Do not the Members of this body know that the "bright sunlight of prosperity" has not penetrated into the homes of one-third of the population of the country? If we make a pledge, I accept fully and without reservation the statement made by the Senator from North Carolina, in his letter to his legislature, as to the necessity of complying with it. But what was our pledge upon this question?

The Democratic Party, meeting at Philadelphia, said:

> We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable obligation of our Government to meet it in a national way.

That was in June of 1936. In speaking on that platform, what did the President say? I ask Members here, were there any of you who were candidates for office in 1932 or 1934 or 1936 who said, "No; I do not agree with the President. I will not go along with his program"?

Let me pay tribute to two men in this body who I think have absolutely kept faith. The senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] and the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] have never told the people of this country that upon financial matters they agreed with the President, and they stood up frankly and honestly and told their people where they would stand; but have you seen many of the other Members of this body who went into the elections of 1932 and 1934 and 1936 and said, "When I get into the Senate again I am going to vote that unemployment is not a national problem"?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. Is the Senator taking the position that the assertion of the platform that unemployment is a national problem excludes States and counties and cities from the responsibility and obligation to do a certain part?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. If the Senator had been here during the earlier part of my remarks——

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator is quoting my statement about the platform, and I wish to know whether that is his position.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. If the Senator had been here earlier, he would not have asked that question. The Democratic Party, the President, this administration, very definitely told the people of the country in 1935 and 1936 where the line of demarcation was. We said that those who were unemployed because of national conditions were not in that situation because of conditions in North Carolina, or in North Dakota, or in California, or in Maine, or in other States. Such unemployment is not due to any local causes. The Democratic Party told the people of this country that we recognized that the causes of that condition were national, and that we were going to have the Democratic Party, in charge of a national administration, assume the responsibility for that problem. We said, on the other hand, that the problem of unemployables—persons who were too old to work, persons who were disabled, or persons who were just lazy—was a local problem.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. I put a rather simple question to the distinguished Senator from Washington, and it is my impression that he has not answered it. If the Senator is taking the position that there is no local obligation in the view of our platform, then he is indicting this administration for demanding contributions from the sponsors throughout the country. Let the Senator take his position.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not care to enter into a personal discussion with the Senator from North Carolina. I think our position is known to everybody, that we have assumed responsibility. I think no one could have heard the speech of the President at Pittsburgh without realizing that fact.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator again?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. I am agreeing that we have assumed the responsibility, and I stated on yesterday that the problem was a national problem. I stated, further, that it was not exclusively a national problem, and that the conception of the problem as national by the Congress did not exclude the local subdivisions from their fair share of responsibility. As I understood the Senator, he quoted my statement on the solemn obligation of the platform, by way, I think, of suggesting that my position was not in line with the platform.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Let me say to the Senator that I used his statement only because it was so much better a statement than I could have written upon the question of obligation. I had no other motive.

Mr. BAILEY. I thank the Senator. Since the question has arisen, I say that the position of the platform does not exclude the dutiful States and local subdivisions from their duties. I do not think the Senator will so contend. I further say that the policy of this administration, directed by the President who was elected upon that platform, is a policy of national aid and State and city and county aid, and that the platform as interpreted by the head of the administration sustains my position that the local subdivisions do have a great duty in that respect and that the Congress is justified in holding them to that duty. I do not think the Senator will say that my position is inconsistent with the platform in the light of the administration's interpretation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, let me read two quotations from the campaign speeches of the President last year. I say it is about time to get back to reading what we told the people of this country. The Democratic Party was returned to power after making a solemn pledge to the people of this country. Here is what the President said at Pittsburgh on October 2:

> I had promised and my administration was determined to keep the people of the United States from starvation.
>
> I refused to leave human needs solely in the hands of local communities—local communities which themselves were almost bankrupt.
>
> To have accepted that advice would have been to offer bread lines again to the American people, knowing this time that in many places the lines would last far longer than the bread. In those dark days, between us and a balanced Budget, stood millions of needy Americans denied the promise of an American life.

In Madison Square Garden on November 1, 1936, the President said:

> Of course, we will provide useful work for the needy unemployed; we prefer useful work to the pauperism of a dole.
>
> Here and now I want to make myself clear about those who disparage their fellow citizens on the relief rolls. They say that those on relief are not merely jobless—they are worthless. Their solution for the relief problem is to end relief—to purge the rolls by starvation. To use the language of the stockbroker, our needy unemployed would be cared for when, as, and if some fairy godmother should happen on the scene.
>
> You and I will continue to refuse to accept that estimate of our unemployed fellow Americans. Your Government is still on the same side of the street with the Good Samaritan and not with those who pass by on the other side.

Mr. President, we hear a lot of talk about balancing the Budget and the necessity therefor.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly.

Mr. BAILEY. Is there not a pledge in the platform that we balance the Budget?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There is a pledge in the platform that we balance the Budget when it is possible under the conditions in this country.

Mr. BAILEY. Is the Senator quoting that? We gave a specific pledge that we would balance the Budget.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. If the Senator from North Carolina will read the platform, and then show me what it says as to when we will balance the Budget, I will be very glad to yield to him to do so. Does the Senator think—is there anyone in this body who honestly believes that when the people of this country in 1936, on the 2d of November, walked to the polls and cast 27,000,000 votes for Franklin Roosevelt they thought that within a period of a little over 6 months from that time the members of the Democratic Party were going to stand up and defy the President and say, "No; we will balance the Budget"? Is there anyone here who believes that the people of this country, relying upon a Democratic majority in the Congress, thought that the President was going to be defied in that way? We assumed an obligation, we assumed it as a political party, and every Member of this body who belongs to that political party must recognize that obligation. We are conducting a warfare in this country, a warfare against conditions of poverty. The Democratic Party pledged itself to carry on that war, and we are led in that war by a general.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator invited me to refer to the platform. I am fortunate in having gotten one quickly; and I am going to read the platform, first, on unemployment.

> We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable obligation of our Government to meet it in a national way. Due to our stimulation of private business, more than 5,000,000 people have been reemployed; and we shall continue to maintain that the first objective of a program of economic security is maximum employment in private industry at adequate wages. Where business fails to supply such employment, we believe that work at prevailing wages should be provided in cooperation with State and local governments—

That is the platform pledge—

> on useful public projects, to the end that the national wealth may be increased, the skill and energy of the worker may be utilized, his morale maintained, and the unemployed assured the opportunity to earn the necessities of life.

It says that, while it is a national problem, the job is to be handled in cooperation with the States and local governments.

As for the balanced Budget, on page 371, this is the pledge:

> We are determined to reduce the expenses of government. We are being aided therein by the recession of unemployment. As the requirements of relief decline and national income advances an increasing percentage of Federal expenditures can and will be met from current revenues secured from taxes levied in accordance with ability to pay. Our retrenchment, tax, and recovery programs thus reflect our firm determination to achieve a balanced Budget and the reduction of the national debt at the earliest possible moment.

I invite the Senator to stand with me on the retrenchment program and the balanced Budget program and the pledge of cooperation between the Federal Government and the State and local governments in handling this national problem of relief. This is the platform.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I have a copy here.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, does the Senator from Washington want to join the Senator from North Carolina in balancing the Budget at the expense of hungry people?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I most certainly do not, and I do not think the people of this country——

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Just a moment, please. When the people of this country returned the Democratic Party to power in 1936, they certainly did not anticipate that the Democratic Party was going to take the attitude toward the problem of relief that was taken upon the floor of the Senate yesterday by the Senator from North Carolina. As I said earlier in my remarks, there is only one logical conclusion to be drawn from the remarks of the Senator from North Carolina, and that is that relief should be completely abandoned. If it has the enervating effect upon the morale and the morals of the people of this country which he described yesterday, then certainly it ought to be abandoned. I do not think anyone would construe the platform in that way, and I do not think anyone would fairly ask anybody who attempted to stand upon that platform in June of 1937 to insist upon a program which would result in the abandonment of relief for the unemployed of the country.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator's remark about logic interests me very much. I cannot understand how he could construe what I said to mean that I was advocating abandonment of relief, when I began my remarks by stating that I had prepared and would present an amendment calling for the appropriation of a thousand million dollars for relief, and, following that, I demanded that the States, counties, and cities do their duty in the premises.

As for the statement of the junior Senator from Indiana, it was so manifestly fair and so elevating, placing me and others who entertain the views I entertain in the category of men who would wish to balance the Budget at the expense of the hunger and the suffering of our fellow men, that statement is such a lofty statement that I feel I should not make any comment upon it. I let it stand as a monument to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator from North Carolina knows that there is no way to balance the Budget in this year of 1937 unless we take it out of the hides of the hungry people of this country.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. MINTON. And if he is talking about balancing the Budget, I do not know where he is going to turn to get the money to balance it unless he gets it there. I want it distinctly understood, and I reassert it, that for my part I do not propose to stand here and vote to balance the Budget at the expense of hungry and suffering people. If the Senator from North Carolina can find some other way to do it, I will join him.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I shall leave that statement also just as it is. But I have not even intimated that we could balance the Budget in the remaining 14 days of this fiscal year; and I leave that right where it is. I did submit that we could balance the Budget by the 1st of July 1938, and that we could do it if we cut this appropriation to a billion dollars and called upon the States and counties and cities to do their fair share. That is my position, and I am perfectly willing to stand upon it, and let the rhetoricians interpret it as they please.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I call the attention of the Senator from North Carolina to the fact that he said yesterday that he wanted to reduce the appropriation to a billion dollars, that he did not know but that after he got through talking he might suggest it anyway, even if this amendment were adopted.

The record before this body discloses that there are now on W. P. A. rolls 2,200,000 people, that there are 350,000 people in the country certified for W. P. A. over and above that 2,200,000, and that if we adopt this amendment and make the appropriation a billion and a half the number on W. P. A. will be reduced to 1,700,000 people. Yet the Senator from North Carolina wants the appropriation reduced to a billion dollars. There is no other conclusion any logical mind can accept but that if he favors a reduction to a billion dollars, he certainly is favoring an effort to balance the Budget at the expense of the unemployed in this country.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Getting back for a moment to the interpretation of the platform read a while ago, which suggested increased cooperation from local communities and a gradually declining expenditure on the part of the Federal Government, does not the Senator think that the increase in local contributions in 4 years from $338,000,000 to $1,244,000,000, and an increase in 1 year, from 1935 to 1936, from $714,000,000 to $1,244,000,000, is a fair compliance with the requirements not only of the Democratic platform but of the equities as between the Federal Government and the local governments in undertaking to meet this problem by cooperation between the national and local governments? Does he not also think that the decrease in the annual appropriation by the Federal Government from four billion and more in one year and three billion three hundred million in another year to a billion and a half for next year is a substantial compliance with the requirements of our platform that we reduce Federal expenses for relief purposes in cooperation with the States and local communities?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Nation-wide it is.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. And when I find that the State of North Carolina in 1935 had only forty-eight thousand for direct relief, which went down from 1933, when they had a million and fifteen thousand, one hundred and ninety thousand in 1934, and only forty-eight thousand in 1935, I recognize that there are parts of this country in which the Federal Government is not getting so very much cooperation upon the question of taking care of the unemployed and providing relief.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. Do those figures refer to individuals or to dollars?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Dollars—$48,000.

Mr. BAILEY. I was taking the course that would cause my State to pay 40 percent. The Senator cannot shake his gory locks at me about that. What I want to call attention to in connection with that fact is that the sponsors for projects in North Carolina had put up 19 percent.

While I am on my feet I should like to say another thing. In 20 months the Federal Government has spent only $23,000,000 in the whole Commonwealth of North Carolina. In view of the fact that in those same 20 months it expended $800,000,000 in Pennsylvania and New York——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I do not intend to yield to permit the Senator from North Carolina to try to create prejudice again today against New York and Pennsylvania. If he had stayed in the Senate Chamber while I was making my remarks he would have seen the figures which completely and totally and absolutely answer that sort of an argument. But he did not see fit to do so. I do not blame him. I myself should rather eat than listen to a speech.

Mr. BAILEY. I share the gentleman's very high estimate of that argument. I agree to that. I believe the Senator said that I cannot finish my remarks, and that will be all right.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I am sorry; pardon me. Go ahead.

Mr. BAILEY. All right. I was saying that in view of the fact that North Carolina got $23,000,000 in 20 months, and Pennsylvania and New York got $800,000,000, which was between 25 and 30 percent of the total fund, and that the city of Philadelphia and the city of New York, which we North Carolinians had always understood were great and wealthy cities and very competent, I am not surprised that the people of North Carolina are disinclined to contribute to the program, because they know that when the debts contracted to pay this money shall be paid out of public revenue North Carolina will be in the position of contributing enormous subsidies to Pennsylvania and New York, and we do not think that is right.

I did not bring up the subject to prejudice New York or Philadelphia. I brought it up by way of showing that a national administration of this whole relief problem is necessarily going to get us into all sorts of disparity. I was making the argument for the coordination between the national and local relief, and those are precisely the words of the platform which the Senator said we all should stand upon.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, everyone in this country is disappointed over the fact that with a return of industrial prosperity there has not been the reduction in the relief or unemployment rolls that we anticipated. I think we should stop for just a minute and try to analyze the reasons for it. Our industrial production has gone up. All the ordinary indices of prosperity show that we are back to a condition almost parallel to that of 1929. But when we stop for a minute and consider the reasons why unemployment rolls have not gone down to the extent we anticipated, or why employment itself has not gone up to the extent that we anticipated, it is not difficult to find the reason. We must remember that even in the days of 1929 we had 1,900,000 people unemployed in this country. We must further remember that during the early part of this century, as the result of immigration policies and other reasons, we had an increase in population. New people were coming into this country. In the 20 years between 1917 and 1937 we have had an extraordinary increase in the number who have come up into the working age. That number is estimated at 500,000 a year.

We must further remember the fact——

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am a little bit confused about the argument which is taking place. Suppose $1,500,000,000 remains in the joint resolution and that amount is not reduced. Let us now suppose that even one of these amendments is put into the joint resolution, and suppose, for example, that every State which wanted some of this money put up 40 percent of the amount it requested. Would that not in effect increase the amount of money available for those who are out of work by 40 percent, if the illustration I have pictured were the accurate one?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes; if it were possible for these communities to put up the 40 percent and they were not deprived of an opportunity of taking care of their unemployed because of legal difficulties, financial difficulties, technical difficulties. While the Senator was out I detailed at great length the conditions of our States and our counties and our cities—the problems with which they are confronted. Theoretically, if everyone would put up 40 percent, we would increase the amount from $1,500,000,000 to 40 percent more. But the financial and legal and technical difficulties standing in the way convince me that it would result in a very material reduction.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] yesterday referred to a newspaper clipping containing the statement which he had made that it would mean a reduction to $750,000,000 so far as the Federal Government was concerned.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. And, consequently, if the amendment provided for a contribution of 25 percent, the joint resolution would be increased that much, assuming that the States would comply.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Upon that theory, yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. So that if we had the ideal condition that the States could comply we would have 25 percent more money for relief than we would have as the joint resolution is now written?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. According to that theory, yes; but I do not accept the theory.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not suppose the experience in the State of Maryland is much dissimilar from the experience in other States. Recently we had a session of the legislature in Maryland. The relief people came down to the legislature and asked that some six and one-half million dollars be appropriated on behalf of the State to take care of certain categories of relief. The legislature met and passed the bill, and it was held, after a thorough examination, that it would raise only about $4,000,000 or so, and there was some manner of raising that $4,000,000 which displeased great groups of people in our State on moral and other grounds, and as the result the legislature was called back into special session to write a new relief bill. The second time they met they passed a relief bill which carried about $5,500,000 instead of the $4,000,000. No one in the State of Maryland—and I suppose in other States—would contend that the legislature could not have raised $10,000,000 had it wanted to do so. The truth of the matter is that the legislature did not want to tax the people of Maryland, and that is understandable, and the legislature was perfectly willing to have the Congress tax the people of Maryland, because that is the place we have got to get Maryland's share of the money anyway.

I feel that that condition which exists in my State also exists, more or less, in any State, and I wish to ask the Senator, notwithstanding his former treatment of this question, if he knows of a single State in the Union, outside of perhaps one or two in which there are constitutional prohibitions, which cannot raise 25 percent of what it would get under this joint resolution?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I can tell the Senator one State which has purely a constitutional provision.

Mr. TYDINGS. Does the Senator know of any States outside of those States which cannot raise 25 percent of the amounts they ask for?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I submitted for the RECORD here the constitutional provisions in all the States. I cannot give them offhand.

Mr. President, let me answer the Senator's question in this way: It seems to me that the Senator from Maryland has made a very good argument against the amendment because of this fact. The Senator says that the legislature met in Maryland and that certain people objected to certain forms of taxes for the raising of the money; the Senator said the objections were based on moral grounds.

Mr. TYDINGS. So that the Senator will understand I will say that we had a proposition in Maryland to legalize certain forms of gambling, but the figures as to the amounts which could probably be raised were nebulous anyhow; there was doubt as to how much revenue would come in through those forms of taxation, and the people in the State thought that the taxes should be of such nature as to make certain definite amounts, and between the objections as to the lack of sound financial policy and the moral objections, the legislature reconvened to consider further measures.

However, to come back to my original statement. Outside of those States which have constitutional prohibitions, is there a State in the Union which cannot raise 25 percent of any funds it asks for toward W. P. A. work in that State?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I think I can answer that question by saying that just by increasing its property taxes it can raise the money, for example. But there is a point of diminishing return upon property taxes. A State may levy a sales tax. The Federal Government might come in and tell the State of Maryland, "Now, you can raise plenty of money to pay your 40 percent. You have the taxing power, and you must levy a sales tax." Or let us assume that the people of Maryland are opposed to the sales tax. I do not know about the conditions in that State. The Federal Government may say, "You should have a higher tax on liquor. You should do more to sell liquor in your State. You should advertise it more and get more money that way." The Federal Government would have to tell the State of Maryland that it must raise its money that way, or, for example, by a gambling tax. The point I make is that my objection to the arbitrary provision is that it requires of the President to enter into a controversy with the State and say, "You have the sources of revenue. Your people do not believe in that sort of a tax; it may be immoral; but you have the sources of revenue, and the State adjoining yours over here is doing it; therefore the State of Maryland must do it."

We hear much about State rights and about the Federal Government not imposing upon the States. I know of no better way we could invade State rights than to require the President to pass upon the financial ability of any State to raise money with which to pay its 40 percent.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield right there——

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President——

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator from Louisiana let me finish the colloquy with the Senator from Washington?

Mr. OVERTON. I desire to make an observation in line with the discussion.

Mr. TYDINGS. Probably that would get us off the track.

Mr. OVERTON. No; it would not. I want to get the Senator on the track if I can.

Mr. TYDINGS. Very well, I will yield.

Mr. OVERTON. The Senator from Maryland is proceeding upon the assumption that the committee amendment requires a specific percentage of contribution by States. It does not.

Mr. TYDINGS. No; the Senator from Maryland is not doing that. The Senator from Maryland——

Mr. OVERTON. Let me say to the Senator from Maryland——

Mr. TYDINGS. Just a moment. Let us get the facts correct. The Senator from Maryland stated a hypothetical case to the Senator from Washington, and asked, if that hypothetical case correctly represented the situation, if the Senator thought there would not be 40 percent or 25 percent more money than is provided by the joint resolution for relief. Then the Senator from Maryland said——

Mr. OVERTON. May I interrupt there, because that would be erroneous for this reason? The States and local subdivisions are today contributing 18 percent, and, therefore, if a percentage should be increased to 25 percent, there would be a net increase of only 7 percent.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is true. Of course, every Senator on the floor, and probably everybody in America, knows that each State is contributing something, but the proposition before us is whether that amount shall be fixed at 25 percent or shall be determined haphazard, as it is now.

The Senator has been very fair, and I am not trying to be contentious with his viewpoint, but let me say to the Senator, as the Democratic leader said a moment ago, we are in better times now than we were 2 or 3 years ago. If we are in good times now, then we are borrowing the very money which we are going to hand over for relief—and I am not quarreling with that—but when the time comes what are we going to tax to pay back to the Federal Treasury the money we are borrowing if during these good years the legislatures of the respective States will not raise the money?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Let me answer the Senator in this way: I started to discuss this question when the Senator first interrupted me. I share the feeling of others about the question of balancing the Budget——

Mr. TYDINGS. Let us leave the Budget out of it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No; it comes in. I fully agree with those who say that it must be balanced, and personally I have the greatest admiration for the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], who stands up here and gets kicked around every time an appropriation bill comes before the Senate because of his efforts and his courage in seeking to bring about a balanced Budget.

On the other hand, we must recognize that we have made fair progress in the matter of the reduction of the W. P. A. We had on W. P. A. rolls 3,200,000 people just a year and a half ago; now we have 2,200,000 on W. P. A.; during the next year, under this appropriation we will have 1,700,000. We have practically cut the W. P. A. rolls in two in a period of a year and a half.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield right there?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. We have done that, and that is a wholesome thing, but the Senator will concede that in doing it we simply passed over a part of the burden to the States; that is the way we reduced the Federal expenditure—by requiring them to furnish substantial aid for dependent children, aid for the blind, and old-age pensions.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator is entirely mistaken in that, because the figures I have given him relate purely to employables under the W. P. A.

Mr. TYDINGS. Yes; but does not the Senator realize that by taking a tremendous load off relief, affecting those who heretofore were on relief, direct and otherwise, at the hands of the States, we have put ourselves in a position to appropriate less money for those particular categories? In Maryland it is a notable fact that the relief rolls were closely scanned for the purpose of removing from them everybody who could qualify under one of these other agencies.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. On the other hand, in January 1936 the Federal Government contributed 11 percent of direct relief, and we cut that down until in November last it was only two-tenths of 1 percent. We have made a considerable cut in direct relief, as we have in work relief.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is true.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. So it seems to me that is an answer to the argument of the Senator. We have been making a reduction. If we simply made it along one line and not along the other, the Senator's argument would be correct, but we have been making it along both lines.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator just said, and very appropriately and correctly, that much of the reduction in the relief rolls was due to the fact that employment has picked up to a great extent. The reduction has not been due so much to economy on our part as to better times in the country.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I am not claiming that it is due to economy on our part. I am merely saying that the Members of the body who seem to feel that no effort has been made to reduce these expenditures are not correct. There has been an actual reduction, and I think it has been at a rate which has been as great as it has been possible for the country to stand. We have today 350,000 more certified for W. P. A. than the number on the rolls, and yet it is proposed to reduce the number 500,000. Recognizing the undesirability of spending money that we have to borrow, but taking the record that has been made, I do not see how anybody can be worried about the Budget not being balanced because of the fact that we are continuing relief.

Mr. TYDINGS. Let me give the Senator a couple of points of view which I know to be accurate. I know of one unit—I will not say whether it is a city or county or what it is—whose leading official recently told me that of course he hoped we would not put any restriction in the pending measure which would commit that particular political subdivision to a policy under which it would have to raise a definite amount of money. "Frankly", he said, "we would rather get from you, and all our people would rather get it from you who hold office than to tax the people under us, but", he said, "if you compel us to pay it, we can do it; we do not want to do it, but we are able to do it if you tell us we have got to do it, because nobody in this particular unit is going to starve so long as the present crowd are in control of affairs."

The point is that the day is going to come sometime when somebody has got to be taxed to pay back the money which we are now borrowing for all governmental purposes. This year we are spending over $8,000,000,000, and are taking in a little less than $5,000,000,000. That means, in this year of prosperity, we are spending about $3,000,000,000 more than we are taking in, and that means that we are not laying taxes in these good times to get the money we are paying out. If we do not lay the taxes in these good times, as I see it, I am wondering when the day is going to come when we can lay the taxes. Are we to go on and on and on, not raising the money by ordinary means but borrowing and letting the debt get to a point where—I do not think it has reached that point—eventually it may be fearful and may make borrowing very difficult? Are we going to let that go on, or, if we want to adhere to these policies in good times, does not the Senator feel we should levy taxes to support them rather than to put this burden on the next generation?

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President——

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. MINTON. Does it not finally resolve itself into the proposition of who is going to pay the taxes? Everybody admits that we have this relief problem, and we do not want the unfortunate victims of the national disaster, known as the depression, to starve. Somebody is going to feed them; somebody is going to have to take care of them. It is either going to be the Federal Government or the State governments. If we shift the burden back to the State governments, we increase the debts of the States; and where do the State of Maryland and the State of Indiana get their money? They get it from the backs of the taxpayers of Maryland and Indiana.

Mr. TYDINGS. Where does the Federal Government get its money?

Mr. MINTON. I will tell the Senator in a moment. The States get their money largely by taxing tangible, visible property. In other words, the people of Maryland and of Indiana will pay the taxes raised on their homes, their farms, their cows and horses to meet the relief rolls. Who pays the taxes to the Federal Government?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MINTON. In just a moment.

Mr. TYDINGS. But the Senator has made a misstatement. The people of Maryland, through their last legislature, did not increase the taxes on their homes and farms or horses; they imposed a State income tax.

Mr. MINTON. Very well; the people of Maryland get money for the State in one way or another, but the Federal Government gets its taxes largely from the people who can best afford to pay taxes.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is what we did in Maryland.

Mr. MINTON. Only 2,500,000 people actually pay income taxes to the Federal Government; very few of the constituents—some of whom are in the gallery—of Senators who are sitting around me are paying income taxes to the Federal Government; but if this relief roll be shifted back to the States it will put upon the backs of the people of the States the burden, and they will have to pay it.

Mr. TYDINGS. Very well; do not let us shift it back to the States; let us in a good year increase the income taxes of the country so to get the money with which to pay the cost. I am ready to vote for such taxes. We have comparative prosperity; the stock market has gone up $40,000,000,000 in value; grain prices higher than for many years; $500,000,000 has been appropriated for farm benefits. Now, if we are going ahead with relief policies, let us have the courage to pay the cost and not hand the burden over to some other Congress.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] last year, taking the same viewpoint that we ought to proceed along that line, offered a very sensible amendment, which I supported, proposing to increase income taxes in order to raise sufficient money so that we could pay our way as we go. We are not now in a depression; we are out of it. So let us face this problem not by putting it off and borrowing money and not doing our job as real legislators; but let us have the courage to raise some of the money, at least, as we go along.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. TYDINGS. I have not the floor; the Senator from Washington yielded to me.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator from Maryland think a country which still has eight or nine million people unemployed is out of the depression completely?

Mr. TYDINGS. If the Senator from Washington will allow me to answer that question, as I have not the floor, I will say that one day I hear there are 11,000,000 unemployed, the next day that there are 6,000,000 unemployed, and the administration only the other day issued a bulletin in which it was stated that there were about five and a half million unemployed. But whatever the number is, my honest thought is that if the Federal Government would compel the units that ask for relief to put up 25 percent, and "stand pat", every unit that needed relief would put up the money.

Mr. WAGNER. What would happen would be that some unfortunate people would have to suffer because of our determination to reduce appropriations which are needed to feed hungry people who are unemployed but are anxious to get work.

Mr. TYDINGS. There may be something in that.

Mr. WAGNER. I will be with the Senator on the tax proposition; I think the Senator is right; we ought to have more taxes.

Mr. TYDINGS. There may be something in what the Senator said.

Mr. TYDINGS. That is the reason why I asked the Senator from Washington whether or not these cities had the ability to pay. If not, let us abandon that plan, but in its place let us have increased taxes, so we do not keep continually borrowing money and camouflaging the situation that all is well in Washington when we are really living off the future. Who knows what is ahead of us? Suppose that 2 years from now we come back into the depression rather than keeping out of it. No man can foresee the future. What are we going to do then? Then is when we will need the credit, but if we have not done the best with the situation which now presents itself, it will be very difficult to borrow money if we get into hard times again.

Mr. WAGNER. Shortened hours of labor and increased wages will do it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I ask Senators not to interrupt me further until I shall have concluded.

We all feel, generally speaking, that we are operating at a terrific deficit, and I do not contend that we are not operating at a considerable deficit; but I have the feeling that the deficit about which we talk is not nearly as much of a deficit as at first blush might appear.

Suppose we have a corporation which has $100,000 worth of capital assets and has $100,000 worth of capital stock outstanding. That corporation is losing money every year because of the fact that the machinery it has is deteriorating. It finds it necessary to go out into the money market and borrow $50,000 with which to install new machinery and to repair its machinery. No system of accounting in the world would require that corporation to set up that $50,000 borrowing as a current deficit during the year of operation.

Never until the time of this administration have we in this country made any determined effort to conserve all our resources. We have been spending a lot of money.

Consider the situation brought about by the floods in the Ohio Valley. It is conceded that during the last 2 years we have had a direct loss of $700,000,000 in the Ohio Valley by destruction of property. The estimates of the War Department are that by the expenditure of $1,000,000,000 we absolutely could have prevented this loss. Let us assume that the two figures are correct. Clearly, if we had gone out in 1933 and borrowed $1,000,000,000 in order to prevent that $700,000,000 loss, we would have increased the capital assets of the country to the extent of the amount of that loss, to wit, $700,000,000. Any corporation doing business in that way would certainly set it up as a capital asset and there would not be an operating deficit.

Mr. TYDINGS. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not know how large the amount of money is, but I think very largely the amount of money we have spent on public works is not a deficit. We have increased the capital assets of the country and made it possible to operate without losses.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again at that point?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Very well.

Mr. TYDINGS. I agree fully with what the Senator has said. I agree with his analysis of the situation. However, what I am trying to point out with the very example which the Senator pictures is that once we have gone out and borrowed $100,000 and put in the new machinery and it starts to bear dividends by increased prosperity for the concern, then the time to commence to pay off the $100,000 we have borrowed is immediately, because the day will come in the future when we may have to do that again.

The wise business concern, in my judgment, when the $100,000 of new assets are in the form of new machinery and that machinery begins to work, immediately takes out of the new income, because of the increased efficiency and increased assets created, sufficient revenue to begin the liquidation of the money it had to borrow.

My only difference with the Senator from Washington is this. I am not quarreling with him over relief where it is needed. It is not a quarrel over the amount, not over the 40 percent or 25 percent proposal, but simply that if the Federal Government is going to do substantially the whole job, I think in these times we ought to have an increased tax levy over what we have now. If we are not going to have the increased tax levy then we ought to ask the communities to put up a larger part rather than encumber the Federal Government with debts that could be avoided, in my opinion, and which should be avoided as an insurance for prosperity and good times in the future.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. So far as the first part of the Senator's argument is concerned, we are in perfect accord. So far as the question of the amendment is concerned, I doubt that the amount of money which will be received from the local communities is going to be increased to any very great extent. The sole question is the arbitrary nature of the requirement. The Senator from Maryland was not here when I placed in the RECORD a long list of legal limitations against cities, towns, and counties raising money for the purpose of relief, but it would create a situation where, in my opinion, it would be extremely unfair and unjust and would result in differentials between communities and States and counties which would work an injustice to them and work a hardship to those who need work relief.

Mr. TYDINGS. There are probably a great many facts to support the statement the Senator is making, and certain municipalities perhaps would have great difficulty in doing this, and real hardship would come upon them. That possibly is true. But does not the Senator likewise concede that there never will be a time in the United States of America when there will not be a relief problem of some character?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I do not. I totally disagree with Mr. Hopkins in his testimony to that effect. I think we are in a peculiar situation at this time. We have an increased number of unemployed at this time because of increased population brought about by immigration between 1910 and 1917. We have gone through a period of depression and no new-type industry has been established in the last 7 years. We have had nothing of that sort in recent years. The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] has proposed a housing industry to take care of the situation and it may be he is correct.

Mr. TYDINGS. As I understand, I think the Senator from New York has stated on the floor of the Senate, as have many other Senators, and I think there is a great deal of argument to support it, that it is very unlikely that a time will ever come—it may for a short while but never as a standard proposition—when there will not be an unemployment problem in the United States.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. We had 1,900,000 not employed in 1929 but it was not considered an unemployment problem.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not mean to say the numbers will make the problem. There will always be some people unemployed in the United States.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There always have been.

Mr. TYDINGS. Therefore we will constantly have the problem to whatever extent it then exists. If that is true, if we are going to have some unemployment and the percentage varies, is it not time, if that is the real fact, that we should have a financial policy to go along with that problem so we can meet it when we are in the position to meet it rather than when we are not in a position to meet it? As the problem decreases and the people are stronger, the time to tax them is right then, it seems to me, so we will be in the position to borrow in the future.

My final statement is simply that whether the community which pays it is a city or a county or a State on the one hand, or the Federal Government on the other hand, whichever policy Congress finally adopts, the times are good enough now to levy enough taxes to care for the program that is adopted.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Let me say that so far as the taxation side of his argument is concerned I reiterate that I am in perfect accord with the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. President, theoretically, I have taken up a lot of time, and for that portion of it which I took up I apologize, calling attention, however, to the fact that I have not been talking all the time. I now yield the floor.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield to me before he takes his seat?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REYNOLDS in the chair). Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. As long as we are discussing the whole subject, I may say that I know how the Senator feels about it. There are some who seem to be content with appropriating each year a sum to care for those who are unemployed. But we have to go away down into the problem of getting back into employment those who are unemployed. The Senator from Washington referred to the technology which has had such a ravaging effect upon the employment situation in the country. We will have to get down to shorter hours and we will have to lift the wage level at least to a reasonable minimum wage.

Those are the methods to be employed, it seems to me, and the Federal Government must act to get people back into private industry, and to make private industry in all respects cooperate with the Government to reemploy people. I do not think enough has been done in that direction, but I am sure we are going that way. That is why I was so delighted to hear the Senator say today that he hoped the Democrats here would stand upon the Democratic platform and the Democratic determination to bring about and build a better economic life for the people of our country.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield the floor, Mr. President.

EXHIBIT A

LIMITATIONS ON LOCAL DEBT

TABLE VIII.—Constitutional and statutory debt limits; general provisions as of Jan. 1, 1936

(In the second column constitutional provisions are indicated by "C", followed by a date or dates referring to the latest revision of the organic law. Where 2 dates are given for 1 State, the later date refers to an amendment. The letter "S" is for statutory, referring to what purport to be more or less comprehensive bond acts, and dates refer to the more important acts. In the third column the debt limit is expressed in terms of a percentage of the assessed valuation.)

TABLE VIII.—Debt limits; general provisions

State	Source and date of limitation	Ordinary debt limits	Units affected	Authority for creating debt	Exceptions to debt limits
Alabama	C–1901	3½ percent counties; 6½ percent, Mobile County; 5 percent, municipal corporations, less than 6,000 population; 10 percent, city of Mobile.	Counties, cities, towns, municipal corporations.	Majority popular vote, excluding special assessment bonds	Municipal corporations less than 6,000, 3 percent additional for water, gas, lighting, sewers, street improvements; tax loans, special assessments.
Arizona	C–1912	4 percent	Counties, cities, towns, school districts.	Majority vote of property taxpayers and owners, for debt over 4 percent.	Countie and sschool districts, additional indebtedness up to 10 percent; cities and towns, 15 percent additional for municipal water, light, and sewage works.
Arkansas	C–1926, S–1927, S–1931.	7 percent, school districts; 25 percent, municipal corporations.[1]	All subdivisions	Majority popular vote
California	Special statutes.	5 percent, counties; 15 percent, cities and towns, for public improvements.	Counties, cities, towns, districts.	⅔ popular vote	Counties, up to 15 percent, if bond issue includes irrigation improvements, etc.
Colorado	C–1895, S–1923.	3½, 5 percent, school districts; 3 percent, cities and towns; ⅔ percent, counties[2] with assessed valuation over $5,000,000; 9/10 percent, other counties.	do	Majority popular vote, excluding certain refunding bonds.	Cities and towns, water supply; judgments, special assessments, local improvements; authorization by State tax commissioner or ⅔ popular vote.
Connecticut	S–1930	5 percent, grand list	Towns and municipalities.	Towns, popular vote; elsewhere, governing body.	Water, gas, electric light, relief, refunding purposes.
Delaware	Special statutes.	5 percent[3]	School districts and special school districts.	Popular vote
Florida	C–1930, S–1920.	10 percent, cities and towns[4] 20 percent; special tax school districts; none, counties.	Municipalities, counties, districts.	Majority of voters who are freeholders.	Special assessments refunding, city lighting bonds, 7 percent.
Georgia	C–1877, C–1918	7–10 percent[5]	Counties, cities, municipal corporations.	⅔ popular vote	Cities over 150,000, street improvement bonds; temporary loans.
Idaho	S–1919, S–1927	10 percent, municipal corporations; 4, 6, 10 percent, school districts[6]; 5 percent, port districts.	All subdivisions	Governing body[7]	Refunding purposes.
Illinois	C–1870, S–1913, S–1921, S–1925.	5 percent, municipalities and conservancy districts; 4 percent, sanitary districts; 1 percent, forest preserve districts.	do	Popular vote	Water, sewage systems, electric plants
Indiana	C–1881, S–1926	2 percent, municipalities, counties[8]; 8–10 percent, sanitary districts of first-class cities; one-half percent, park districts of first-class cities.	Counties, municipalities, districts.	Governing body	Funding, temporary, war construction of gravel roads.
Iowa	C–1857, S–1924	5 percent[9]	Municipal corporations and companies.	60 percent popular vote	Cities of 25,000, flood-protection bonds up to 5 percent; self-liquidating utilities.
Kansas	S–1909,[10] S–1923.	5 percent, cities of 50,000; 1-3¾ percent, school districts.	All subdivisions		Cities of 50,000; special-improvement and sewer bonds, 5 percent additional where assessed against property.
Kentucky	C–1891	10 percent, first- and second-class cities and third-class cities over 15,000; 5 percent, fourth-class cities and third-class cities under 15,000; 3 percent, fifth- and sixth-class cities; 2 percent, tax districts and municipalities; 5 percent, counties (road purposes).	Counties, cities, towns, municipalities; taxing districts.	⅔ popular vote	Renewals, funding, emergency, water works, local improvements up to assessed valuation of property benefited.
Louisiana	C–1921, S–1921	10 percent	All subdivisions	Majority vote (in number and value) of property taxpayers.	Self-sustaining improvements, tax loans.
Maine	C–1877, C–1911	5 percent: cities and towns; 7½ percent, cities over 40,000.	Cities, towns	Governing body	Temporary refunding, war loans.
Maryland	Special statutes.
Massachusetts	S–1921	3 percent, towns; 2½ percent, cities (except Boston).	Cities, towns, districts	⅔ popular vote	Statute exceptions for many purposes up to 10 percent in some cases.
Michigan	S–1909, S–1925, S–1931.	10 percent, cities and villages; 3 percent, counties; 5 percent, counties assessed valuation $5,000,000 or less; 2 percent, port districts.	Counties, cities, villages, districts.	Popular vote	Fire, flood, public calamity, public utilities special assessments refunding.
Minnesota	C–1879, S–1927	10 percent, municipalities; 5 percent, first-class cities; 20 percent, school districts.	All municipalities	5/6 popular vote, villages and boroughs; ⅔ popular vote, school districts, majority popular vote elsewhere.[11]	Special assessments, self-liquidating projects, revolving fund warrants.
Mississippi	S–1932	10 percent	All subdivisions	Majority popular vote	Water, light, special improvements, refunding, tax loans; 5 percent additional for schools, if municipal is separate school district (20 percent highest limit).
Missouri	S–1919, S–1920, S–1927.	5 percent, municipalities; 10 percent, cities of 75,000.	Municipalities (including counties).	⅔ popular vote	Cities of 75,000, additional 10 percent, public utilities; cities of 30,000, additional 10 percent for water and light purposes; counties, courthouse, jail, roads, bridges, culverts.
Montana	C–1889, S–1931	2½, 5 percent, counties;[12] 3 percent, cities, towns, school districts.	Counties, cities, towns, school districts.	Majority[13] popular vote except funding and refund.	Water, sewerage systems, 10 percent additional by vote of taxpayers affected; refund.
Nebraska	C–1875, S–1922	10 percent, cities and counties; 5 percent, metropolitan cities; 6 percent, light, heat, and power districts.	Counties, municipalities, districts.	Popular vote (¾-school districts.).	Water and sewer purposes refund.
Nevada	Special statutes.	30 percent, cities	Counties, cities, school districts, municipalities.	Majority vote of taxpayers and nontaxpayers, voting separately.	Public utilities, water supply, self-liquidating bonds.
New Hampshire	S–1895, S–1917	1 percent, village precincts; 2 percent, school districts; 3 percent, counties, cities, towns; 6 percent, city of Nashua.	Counties, cities, towns, precincts.	Governing body, cities; ⅔ popular vote, elsewhere.	Water, electricity, poor relief, tax notes, authorizations by special act.
New Jersey	S–1916	7 percent, municipalities; 4 percent, counties; 6 percent, first-class school districts; 9 percent, third-class school districts.	Counties, municipalities, school districts.	Governing body	Temporary relief bonds, refunding bonds (10 percent).
New Mexico	C–1911, S–1923	4 percent, counties, cities,[14] towns, villages; 6 percent, school districts.	All subdivisions	Majority vote of taxpayers, except refund.	Counties, cities, towns, villages; water and sewer purposes.
New York	C–1894, S–1909, S–1923.	10 percent, counties, cities, towns, villages; 15 percent, school districts of real-estate valuation of $500,000 or more.	Counties, cities, towns, villages, districts.	Majority popular vote	New York City, subway bonds; towns, issuances up to 33⅓ percent by majority popular vote.
North Carolina	S–1921, S–1927, S–1931.	8 percent, cities and towns;[15] 5 percent, school districts; 5 percent, counties.	Counties, municipalities, corporations.	do	Refunding, water, gas, electric light, or power purposes, school debts.

[Footnotes at end of table]

TABLE VIII.—Debt limits; general provisions—Continued

State	Source and date of limitation	Ordinary debt limits	Units affected	Authority for creating debt	Exceptions to debt limits
North Dakota	C-1920, S-1927, S-1931.	5 percent	All subdivisions	60 percent popular vote [16]	Revenue-producing utility bonds, not exceeding physical value of utilities, by majority vote; cities, issuances up to 8 percent by ⅗ vote; school districts, 10 percent, by majority vote.
Ohio	S-1927	5 percent municipal corporations [17]; 6 percent school districts; 2 percent, townships.	Counties, municipal corporations, school districts.	Popular vote	Emergency, temporary, self-liquidating loans.
Oklahoma	C-1907	5 percent	All subdivisions	⅗ popular vote [18]	Cities and towns, public-utility purposes.
Oregon	S-1903, S-1927, S-1929, S-1933.	10 percent, cities, towns, [19] water districts; 6 percent, county road debts; 5 percent, school districts under 75,000 population.	do	Majority popular vote	Water, gas, power, lighting, refunding, short-term; counties, suppressing insurrection, repelling invasion, building roads.
Pennsylvania	C-1874	7-10 percent, municipalities [20] and incorporated districts; 10 percent, counties; 15 percent, city and county of Philadelphia.	Counties, municipalities, districts.	Popular vote for issuances in excess of 2 percent.	Self-liquidating utilities.
Rhode Island	S-1923	3 percent	Towns (includes cities)	Popular vote, towns; governing body elsewhere.	Authorizations by State commissioner of finance on petition.
South Carolina	C-1895, S-1927.	8 percent	All subdivisons	Majority popular vote, except refunding bonds.	Water, sewer, lighting, refunding, tax-anticipation loans; many legitimate authorizations up to 20 percent.
South Dakota	C-1889	5 percent [21]	Counties, cities, towns, school districts.	⅗ popular vote	Water, sewers, irrigation, up to 10 percent; refunding; street railways, light plants, up to 8 percent, in counties over 8,000 population.
Tennessee	C-1870, S-1917	10 percent cities and towns [22]	Counties, cities, towns	Majority popular vote, except funding and refunding.	Water, light, heat, power, public improvements payable from special assessment fund.
Texas	C-1876, S-1925, S-1931.	5 percent counties, 6 percent municipalities.	Counties, municipalities	Majority vote property taxpayers, except funding and refunding.	Special improvement bonds.
Utah	C-1896, S-1917	4 percent, cities, towns; 2 percent, counties.	Counties, cities, towns, school districts.	Majority vote property taxpayers, except refunding.	Water, lights, sewers; total indebtedness of first- and second-class cities may not exceed 8 percent; of third-class cities, 12 percent.
Vermont	S-1917, S-1925	10 percent [23]	All municipal corporations.	⅔ popular vote	Water, electric, poor relief, tax notes.
Virginia	C-1902, C-1928	18 percent, cities, towns; [24] 10 percent, county roads; 15 percent, county water supply.	Cities, towns, districts	Majority popular vote	Revenue-producing projects, tax-anticipation notes.
Washington	C-1889, S-1923	5 percent	All subdivisions	⅗ popular [25] vote for issuances over 1½ percent.	Cities, towns, 5 percent additional for water, light, sewers; fourth-class cities, 10 percent, for garbage and sewage-disposal systems; public utilities.
West Virginia	C-1872, S-1906 S-1927.	5, 2½ percent [26]	Counties, cities, municipal corporations, school districts.	⅔ popular vote	Federal Government [27] purposes; counties, magisterial districts, and certain municipal corporations may create 2½ percent additional debt for certain purposes.
Wisconsin	C-1874, C-1912.	5 percent	All municipalities	Majority popular vote, except street improvement bonds.	Sewer plant, relief; temporary borrowing up to 25 percent.
Wyoming	C-1890, S-1931	2 percent	Counties, cities, towns, villages, districts.	Majority popular vote. [28]	Cities, towns, villages; 4 percent, sewers. School districts; 4 percent, school buildings. Cities, towns; water debts.

[1] The Arkansas Constitution of 1784 forbids any "county, city, town, or municipality" ever to issue any evidences of indebtedness. This has been evaded by the use of municipal improvement districts which have been held not to be municipalities within the meaning of the constitutional provision (Fitzgerald v. Walker, 55 Ark. 148 (1891)). The amendment, 1926, extended power to incur debt to first- and second-class cities, that is, incorporated communities having in excess of 2,000 population.

It is sought further to limit the debt-incurring power of municipal corporations (except school districts) by the constitutional prohibition of a greater annual tax levy than 10 mills (1924) or a greater amount than $5,000,000.

[2] The constitution prohibits counties from incurring debt except for public buildings, roads, and bridges.

[3] A general act of 1921 provides for bond issues of school districts and special school districts.

[4] There are exceptions to this limit for charter cities.

[5] There are numerous exceptions to this general limitation. The city of Brunswick, for example, may create debt up to 14 percent.

[6] The 4-percent limit is applicable to rural and joint rural high-school districts; the 6-percent limit, to common, joint common, independent, and joint independent school districts; the 10-percent limit, to independent class A and joint independent class A districts.

[7] For Federal projects (P. W. A.), two-thirds popular vote is required; for waterworks bonds, two-thirds vote of taxpayers; for debt initiated, a majority vote.

[8] There is a limit of 1 percent for counties for construction, etc., of county buildings.

[9] This limit is based on the true value of property, according to judicial interpretation. A law of 1924 fixes the limit at 1¼ percent actual value.

[10] These acts have been amended frequently.

[11] An exception to these methods of authorizing debt is refunding issues in municipalities where 25 percent or more of the land has been delinquent for more than 3 years. These issuances may be authorized by the local governing body but are subject to protest and referendum.

[12] The limit for counties may reach 5 percent for the following purposes: (1) Refunding; (2) replacing, rebuilding, repairing county buildings, bridges, or highways destroyed or damaged by an act of God, disaster, catastrophe, or accident; (3) acquiring land for sites for county high-school buildings, furnishings, etc.

[13] Only taxpayers may vote on questions concerning the construction, purchase, or securing of a water plant, water system, water supply, or sewerage system. Counties are prohibited by the constitution from incurring indebtedness for any single purpose in an amount exceeding $10,000, without majority popular approval.

County, city, and town bond elections must be petitioned by 20 percent of the qualified voters, and the issuance must be approved by a majority of 40 percent of the qualified voters entitled to vote.

[14] Counties may issue bonds for buildings, roads, and bridges only.

[15] Counties may issue bonds within an 8-percent limit (which may be exceeded for a number of purposes) if they accept school indebtedness.

[16] Exceptions are bonds issued by cities and villages for payment of deficiencies in special improvement district funds, certain issuances exceeding the ordinary limit, and refunding bonds.

[17] The limit for counties is a sum equal to 3 percent of the first $100,000,000 or part thereof of the tax list, plus 1½ percent of the tax list in excess of $100,000,000.

Debts created without popular approval are subject to lower limits.

[18] Utility debt may be created by a majority vote of property taxpayers voting.

[19] The 10-percent limit for cities and towns was reduced to 5 percent by ch. 305, Laws of 1933.

[20] There are apparently three limits for municipalities—2 percent, 7 percent, and 10 percent. Debts up to 2 percent may be incurred by the local governing body; up to 7 percent, by majority popular vote; up to 10 percent, by ⅗ popular vote.

[21] County and central high-school districts may create 2 percent additional debt.

[22] The incurring of debt by other localities is authorized by special statutes.

[23] The statute defines the limit as "10 times the grand list."

[24] If a town's charter specifically allows creation of indebtedness beyond the constitutional limit, the 18-percent limitation is not applicable.

[25] A law of 1925 provides that the constitutional ⅗ majority must be equal to more than 50 percent of the voters who voted at the last preceding State or county election.

[26] The constitutional limit is 5 percent; the statutory, 2½ percent.

[27] West Virginia municipalities and school districts may be authorized to exceed the 2½- and 5-percent limits.

[28] Improvement and refunding bonds may be issued by the local governing body.

TABLE IX.—Constitutional and statutory debt limits; substantive provisions as of Jan. 1, 1936

State	Purposes for which debts are prohibited	Serial bonds mandatory	Maturity limits	Maximum rate of interest	Sale below par prohibited
Alabama	Loan of public credit	Yes	Life of improvement, not over 30 years; 15 years, refunding.	No provision	No.
Arizona	do	No (excluding refunding).	40 years	6 percent	Yes.
Arkansas	do	Yes [1]	35 years [2]	do [3]	Do.
California	do	No	40 years [4]	6 percent; counties, 7 percent; water, irrigation districts, city refunding.	Do.
Colorado	do	do	20 years, counties; 10-15 years, cities and towns; 25 years, city and town refundings.	10 percent, counties; 6 percent, cities, towns.	Yes; for county refunding bonds and city and town special assessments.
Connecticut	In aid of any railroad corporation.	Yes	2-40 years, 4-15 years, for relief bonds	6 percent	No provision.
Delaware	Loan of public credit	No [5]	25 years	do	Yes.
Florida	do	No	Provision in act of issuance [6]	8 percent, city and town general improvement bonds. 7 percent, city lighting bonds; 6 percent, refunding.	No (except city lighting bonds).
Georgia	do	do	30 years	No provision	No provision.
Idaho	do	Yes	20 years	6 percent	Yes.
Illinois	Sectarian purposes; loan of public credit.	No provision	20 years; [7] 25 years; water bonds	No provision	No provision.
Indiana	Loan of public credit by counties.	Yes, for public improvement bonds.	30 years; 52 years; public improvement bonds.	6 percent	Yes.
Iowa	Purchase of stock in banking corporations.	No	Various; not over 50 years	No provision	No provision.
Kansas	No provision	Yes	20 years; 10 years; special assessments; bonds.	5 percent	Do.
Kentucky	do	No	No provision	No provision	Yes; exclusive of sewer bonds of first-class cities.
Louisiana	Loan of public credit	Yes	40 years	6 percent	Yes.
Maine	No provision	No	50 years	No provision	No provision.
Maryland	Loan of public credit; internal improvements.	No provision	40 years (Baltimore)	do	Do.
Massachusetts	No provision	Yes (excluding Boston).	1-30 years [8]	Fixed by local authorities	Yes.
Michigan	do	Yes [9]	50 years [10]	6 percent	Do.
Minnesota	Internal improvements; railroad loans. [11]	do	20, 30 years; [12] 50 years, refunding	do	Do.
Mississippi	Loan of public credit	do	25 years	do	Do.
Missouri	do	No	20 years	do	Do.
Montana	do	do	20 years, 10 years, refunding	do	Do.
Nebraska	Internal improvements [13]	do	50 years, irrigation districts	5½ percent, municipal corporations; 6 percent, water and irrigation districts.	Do.
Nevada	Loan of public credit, exclusively to railroad corporations.	Yes	20 years [14] or life of improvements	Authorized in each special act. [15]	Do.
New Hampshire	Loan of public credit	do	20 years	Discretion of local authorities	Discretion of local authorities.
New Jersey	do	do	5-50 years [16]	6 percent	Yes.
New Mexico	do	do	50 years	No provision	No provision.
New York	do	No provision	50 years; first- and third-class cities; 40 years, second-class cities; 30 years, towns; 20 years, villages.	do	Do.
North Carolina	Current expenses	Yes	5-50 years [17]	do	Yes.
North Dakota	Loan of public credit	do	20 years; 15 years, refunding	6 percent	Do.
Ohio	do	do	1-50 years [18]	do	Do.
Oklahoma	No provision	do	25 years; 30 years (conservancy districts).	do	Yes; for water and conservancy districts.
Oregon	Loan of public credit [19]	do [20]	No provision	6 percent, with minor exceptions.	Yes; exclusive of irrigation districts, drainage districts, ports.
Pennsylvania	do	No	30 years; 50 years, city and county of Philadelphia; 20 years, refunding.	6 percent	Yes.
Rhode Island		do [21]	Special acts	Special acts
South Carolina	No provision	Yes [22]	25 years; 50 years, refunding	No provision	Yes; exclusive of drainage districts.
South Dakota	do	No	40 years	6 percent	No provision.
Tennessee	Loan of public credit, without three-fourths popular vote.	Yes	30 years; 25 years, school bonds	do	Yes.
Texas	Loan of public credit	No	40 years	do	Do. [23]
Utah	Loan of public credit by countries.	do	20 years	No provision	Do.
Vermont	Ordinary expenses of any municipal corporation.	Yes	do [24]	5 percent	Do.
Virginia	Loan of public credit	No	35 years	6 percent	Do.
Washington	do	Yes	30 years	do	Do.
West Virginia	No provision	do	34 years	do	Do.
Wisconsin	Loan of public credit	No	20 years [25]	do	No; exclusively for county highway bonds.
Wyoming	do	do	10-30 years [26]	do	Yes; exclusively for irrigation and drainage districts.

[1] [2] [3] These provisions are applicable to first- and third-class cities.
[4] The maturity limit for city refundings is 20 years; that for water and irrigation district bonds, 10-30 years.
[5] This provision applies to Delaware cities and towns.
[6] The maturity limit for school-district bonds is 30 years; for all refundings, 25 years.
[7] This is a constitutional provision.
[8] The statute provides various maturity limits for 11 classes of debt.
[9] An exception to this limit is a class of cities which includes Dearborn and Detroit.
[10] Provision is made in the new municipal bond law, as amended in 1931, for a shorter maximum (2-15 years) in a few cases.
[11] The Minnesota constitution provides that local loans to railroads may not exceed a 5-percent limit.
[12] There is statutory provision for 4 classes of maturities, but the maximums are 20 and 30 years.
[13] This is not an absolute prohibition. Internal improvement bonds may be issued within a limitation and are subject to popular approval.
[14] Irrigation bonds are excepted from the 20-year limit.
[15] The maximum rate of interest for street-improvement bonds is 7 percent; for sewerage, county electrical plant, and county hospital bonds, 6 percent.
[16] The maturity limit for refunding and emergency bonds is 45 years; for school district bonds, 10-40 years; for school district refundings, 20 years.
[17] There are numerous maturity provisions for both counties and municipalities.
[18] The statute provides various maturity limits for 9 classes of debt.
[19] The constitutional limitation for ports is 1 percent.
[20] Serial bonds, ch. 334, Laws 1931, mandatory thereafter, for cities, towns, and school districts, except funding, refunding, water, power, gas, or light bonds, and bonds of municipalities of over 200,000 population.
[21] There are exceptions in many special acts.
[22] This provision is not applicable to bond issues under $20,000 nor to certain counties.
[23] By ch. 18, Laws 1935, all subdivisions are empowered to sell bonds to Federal Government agencies at less than par.
[24] A law of 1917, amended in 1921, permits 60-year maturity for forest development bonds.
[25] The maturity limit for public improvement bonds of cities and counties of 150,000 population is 50 years.
[26] The limit varies with the locality and with the purpose of the debt.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope I shall not bore the Senate too much with the rather brief statement I have prepared. For some very strange reason, which I am not able to fathom, both the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] devoted practically their argument yesterday in support of this amendment to stating what New York had received under the W. P. A. program.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for the purpose of permitting me to suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. WAGNER. I will say to the Senator from Wisconsin that I do not think it is necessary. I never want a Senator to remain here and listen to me if he does not desire to do so.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. There may be some Senators who do not know that the Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not wish to trouble Senators, though I thank the Senator from Wisconsin very much.

As I say, I could not understand such tactics. I desire to present figures which I believe to be accurate with reference to this whole situation.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will not the Senator yield in order that I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. WAGNER. No, Mr. President; I had better go right on.

Mr. President, I rise to repel the attack of the Senators from North and South Carolina, though not primarily because it is unfair to New York, since I think New York can stand upon the ground of the contributions it has made toward the solution of this entire unfortunate relief situation. My concern is rather for the Nation—for the Nation, whose welfare, in my opinion, is threatened by this indirect attack upon a program that has practically rescued America from absolute ruination.

In refutation of the remarks made yesterday, let me state some figures. They will not only correct the injustice done to my own State, but in addition they will shed light upon the true character of the splendid program now endangered by the pending amendment. I refer to the amendment proposed by my distinguished and beloved leader, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], as well as to the amendment proposed by the committee, and originally offered by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES].

During the years 1933 through 1936, New York contributed directly 37.6 percent of the cost of all forms of relief within its borders. During the same period South Carolina bore only 9.6 percent, and North Carolina only 10.4 percent of the cost of aiding their own citizens.

That is the first test of who is paying the relief bills.

During the years 1933 through 1936, New York contributed, on the basis of its total population, $54.74 per capita toward all forms of relief within its borders. South Carolina contributed only $7.13 per capita, and North Carolina only $5.74 per capita.

That is the second test of who is paying the relief bills.

Let us remember that the States do not only contribute directly toward relief; they also contribute indirectly through the taxes which they pay toward the support of Federal relief expenditures. Let us look at the record there.

During the years 1933–36 New York paid an average of over 21 percent of all Federal taxes. This means that of the $10,667,000,000 spent by the Federal Government for all forms of relief, New York contributed $2,238,000,000. During the same period South Carolina contributed 0.42 percent toward the support of the Federal Government, or $44,772,000 toward Federal expenditures for relief. North Carolina contributed 9 percent of all Federal taxes, or $959,000,000 toward Federal expenditures for relief.

When we add together, first the direct State contributions, and, secondly, the indirect State contributions through the support by the States of the Federal program, we find that the total cost of the whole Federal-State relief program has been $2,942,000,000 for New York, $57,000,000 for South Carolina, and $976,000,000 for North Carolina.

That is the third test of who pays the relief bills.

Now for the most important factor of all:

The total direct and indirect contributions of New York to all forms of relief have been $2,942,000,000. Of this amount, only $1,873,000,000 has been spent for relief in New York. In other words, New York has contributed $1,069,000,000 more than has been spent within her borders. This has been a net loss to New York.

The total direct and indirect contributions of South Carolina have been $44,772,000. This has been $90,594,000 less than the $135,366,000 spent within the State for relief. In other words, the money spent for relief in South Carolina has been a great deal more than the total outlays of the State of South Carolina for such purposes. That represents a net gain to South Carolina.

The total direct and indirect contributions of North Carolina have been $976,000,000. This is $804,532,000 more than the $171,462,000 spent within the State for relief. That represents a net loss to North Carolina.

I know it will be said that New York should pay more taxes because it is rich. I admit that; but it is not this relief program which has made New York rich. The fact remains that New York is charged for relief more than it receives, and that many other States receive more than they pay in taxes. In short, the fact is that our present relief policy pools the resources of the Nation and helps some of the poorer States at the expense of the richer ones.

I approve of that policy. I am proud that New York, as the Empire State, participates in it. If I thought of New York alone, I should favor the pending amendment. My State, as one of the few able to meet the requirements of the amendment, would unquestionably get a larger share than it now gets of the total Federal outlay for relief.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to his colleague?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. I talked this morning with Governor Lehman.

Mr. WAGNER. I did, too, I may say to my colleague.

Mr. COPELAND. I asked him several questions, and I think what he said fits into what my colleague has said—that if there were a consolidation of P. W. A. and W. P. A., with that consolidation we should be paying the 40 percent which is suggested.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; and direct relief, too.

Mr. COPELAND. And direct relief. I thought that would fit into what my colleague is saying at this point.

Mr. WAGNER. I am pleading for the other States.

In addition, due to the certain decline of aggregate Federal expenditures which would follow the acceptance of this amendment, New York would also benefit most largely as the largest supporter of the Federal Government; so that would be another benefit accruing to New York.

I oppose the amendment, Mr. President, not as a New Yorker; I oppose it as an American. It seems to me futile to be provincial in such matters. I do not think that the State of New York has done more than its share toward unemployment relief. I do not believe that the States of South Carolina and North Carolina have done less than their share. I think that each has done what it could. I think that each has received Federal aid in the proportion that it has needed Federal aid. I think that each has benefited equitably by the revived prosperity of the whole Nation. And that, I say, is equally true of the other 45 States.

Mr. President, I find it deplorable that the debate has been dragged to this level. I regard the whole effort through this amendment to enlarge and isolate individual State responsibility for the costs of unemployment as a terrible mistake. In this connection, our minds revert naturally to the conditions beginning in 1929. The blight of unemployment showed no respect for State lines.

If I may be permitted to say so, I had a large part in exposing this fact and bringing about a relief program, in cooperation with other distinguished Senators in this body.

No one could tell in which State the disease of unemployment originated. No one could tell in which State it would strike next. No one could measure which States were suffering most from its devastating ravages, or how conditions in one area interacted upon those in another. When we in New York and in Chicago and in other places stopped buying automobiles, through no fault of their own, 100,000 or 200,000 men found themselves unemployed in the State of Michigan. But, despite the fact that no one could isolate or localize the causes or symptoms of unemployment, we all remember the early cry: "Let the States handle the problem; let each State care for its own unemployed."

I am sorry to say that that was the definite attitude of the Republicans on the other side—and I am not speaking of the progressives. The Republicans never, from the beginning of this terrible tragedy, took one single step toward Federal relief for the unemployed. It was left to a combination of the progressive Senators and the Democrats in the Senate, although we were in a minority, to father such a program.

The cry to let the States handle the problem represented the infancy of our thinking about the unemployment problem. For 4 long years, Mr. President, we heard that cry. At first some of us mistook it for an avowal of local responsibility and a pledge of local action. We soon found that it was merely the counsel of ignominious inaction. The States could not deal with the problem, and everyone knew it. Their helplessness was so patent, so pitiful, that the whole Nation turned irresistibly to the Federal Government for action and salvation.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I think if the Senator will examine the RECORD he will find that, regardless of the denomination he gives to Republicans, the fight for Federal aid toward relief started on this side of the Chamber.

Mr. WAGNER. I have no recollection of it, unless the Senator refers to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. I excluded the progressive Senators.

Mr. BORAH. I am not concerned with whether the Senator excluded the progressive Senators or not.

Mr. WAGNER. What particular action has the Senator in mind?

Mr. BORAH. I had reference to my own position.

Mr. WAGNER. I certainly regard the Senator from Idaho as a progressive Senator.

Mr. BORAH. This habit of saying "on this side of the Chamber" and "on the other side of the Chamber", and so forth, does not represent the situation with reference to the relief matter. The fight for aid upon the part of the Federal Government started here, in one denomination or another of the Republicans.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not recall any emergency relief bill to feed the hungry being introduced, except the one introduced by Senators LA FOLLETTE, COSTIGAN, and myself; and before that the bill introduced by Senators ROBINSON, PITTMAN, BULKLEY, and one other Senator whom for the moment I cannot recall, and myself, which provided for emergency relief through loans to the States, plus a very small public-works program. Those bills became laws of the United States. If the Senator has in mind some other emergency legislation to feed the hungry and the starving which was enacted at that time, I should like to hear of it.

Mr. BORAH. I simply say that the debate in favor of aid by the Federal Government started here, on this side.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I say further that when the Senator from Idaho made a public speech upon the subject in September 1931 he was criticized severely by a leading New York paper. He was supposed to represent a poor State and anxious to have the help of wealthy States.

Mr. WAGNER. Does not the Senator recall that in March 1928 I stood upon this floor and stated what the Coolidge prosperity was—I do not know whether I used the words "a fraud" or not—and that I said there were then 5,000,000 out of employment with unemployment rapidly increasing? At that time I was a voice in the wilderness, except for one or two other Senators—I do not want to mention their names—who stood with me. The Republican press charged me with being a cheap politician who was trying to minimize Coolidge prosperity. But I do not want to compete for honors on this question.

Mr. BORAH. Nor do I, and I would be the last to minimize any honor due to the Senator for his work in this matter. He has been a leader in it. But he must not classify so generally without regard to some exceptions.

Mr. WAGNER. I was very impatient at the time because I could secure no cooperation from what they called the "regulars" on the other side, nor from President Coolidge or President Hoover.

Mr. BORAH. Or "regulars" on the other side.

Mr. WAGNER. We finally passed a bill in the Hoover administration. We pleaded for it, and passed it.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, let me remind the Senator that he does not wish to do an injustice, or forget at this time to pay tribute to the debate of the Senator from Idaho with the then national chairman of his eminent party, now passed to heaven, let us hope, having passed from earth, let us hope for the best estate which we desire for a great soul. The Senator from Idaho assumed a position at that time the same as that occupied by the Senator from New York, which was in opposition to the distinguished representative of his great party.

I ask the Senator from New York if he will not recall that a few of us—may I say "us"—joined with those on the opposite side, all conjoined together in the creation of what is known as the R. F. C. now, and passed a law which enabled the Government to lend to the States and localities?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I hope I have not seemed to seek too much credit. The Senator from Illinois was largely responsible for that law, because his city was in a serious state, and as a result of that legislation, it was extricated from its predicament.

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator from New York did not mean to detract from the services of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. WAGNER. No. That legislation was the result of the support of the bill by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] and the rest of us. Senator FESS took a position against it, regarded relief as merely a local problem, and said it was none of our business, and the Senator from Idaho came to our defense, in what I regard as one of the most magnificent and humane addresses he has ever delivered. I recall that debate as if it were yesterday.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. WAGNER. I should like to proceed for a little while.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to correct the Senator historically.

Mr. WAGNER. I am about to be corrected historically, and I am willing to be.

Mr. BAILEY. I wish to make a statement as to the process by which the whole relief program has been developed.

The Republicans put forward in 1932 a national scheme of relief, with a national appropriation. The Democrats defeated it. Then the Democrats put forward a scheme of relief which contemplated loans to the States. We took the local view, the Republicans took the national view. Now we take the national view.

Mr. WAGNER. To what bill does the Senator refer? Who introduced it?

Mr. BAILEY. The first bill was the La Follette bill, and the next bill was introduced on the Democratic side, I do not recall by whom; but I set out the historical sequence on February 3, and it appears in the RECORD. If someone will bring me the RECORD for that day I will give the Senator the data, because I took pains to collect them.

Mr. LEWIS. Whatever vice there was in it, let me assume it, because it was my bill looking to loans to the States; and what we did then represents my position now.

Mr. WAGNER. I cooperated with the Senator from Wiscousin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] in all these matters. I shall nevertheless continue with my historical statement, in spite of these side remarks, which I know are accurate. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] caused me to stay up all night preparing my statement.

Mr. BAILEY. I really did not intend to cause the Senator to do that, and I beg the Senator's pardon for causing him to stay up all night.

Mr. WAGNER. I am sure the Senator did intend to do it; otherwise he would have left New York alone.

Mr. President, a halfway step toward unemployment relief was manifested by the act of 1932, providing for Federal loans to the States. We soon found that this was not enough, and in 1933 we embarked on our present program of national action.

That national action will always stand out among the most valiant efforts in our history. Under a great and fearless leader we mobilized the resources of the Nation and directed them toward the cure of Nation-wide ills.

The program which we embraced in 1933 was in some aspects dictated by the emergency. But the concept of integrated Federal responsibility, based upon the interwoven pattern of our national economic life, was not a matter of the moment. It was based upon the acceptance of a permanent fact. It recognized that the States of America had become an indivisible economic unit with inescapable common problems. Because we fitted our action to this fact, we were able so well to rally and revive.

Now, so soon, too soon, we are driven to ask ourselves: "Are we today as divided a Nation as we were in 1929 and 1931? Are we no longer the united Nation that we were in 1933 and 1935? Are we prepared to abandon the unifying philosophy which has spelled success, and yield once more to the divisive forces which spelled failure?"

Let us not deal too long in general principles, important though they are. Let us, as practical realists, examine the proposal that the States and localities shall be required to contribute 40 percent toward the relief of the unemployed. Does it represent a sound or workable public policy?

The first theory upon which mandatory and uniform State contributions might be defended, is the theory of benefits received. Let each State, the argument runs, contribute a fixed and unvarying sum for every dollar of benefits it gets in the form of Federal aid.

This sounds simple. Mr. President, it is too simple. I challenge any economist, I challenge any analyst, to allocate among the separate States the ultimate benefits received by each when the Federal Government spends a dollar for the relief of the unemployed anywhere. When the jobless masses in Pennsylvania get money to spend, do they not consume the bread baked with the wheat grown in the Middle West? Do they not buy the clothes woven in the factories of the South and New England? Do they not create a demand for houses, built with the products of every State in the Union? If this consuming power is cut off at the source, will not the freight cars stop carrying their commerce from State to State?

When Federal aid is extended to the needy in any State, it flows into a general stream of purchasing power. This stream knows no State boundaries. It cannot be segregated by geographic traditions. Federal assistance to the unemployed is not assistance to the State in which they live. Inescapably it is assistance to the Nation at large.

The second argument which might be advanced in support of exactly a 40-percent contribution from each State and its subdivision rests upon the theory of ability to pay.

Certainly the very statement of this argument, as applied to relief, carries its own refutation. To say that the more a State receives in Federal aid, the more it should itself contribute for unemployment relief, is a manifest fallacy. One might as well claim that each distressed individual should contribute toward his own family's support in direct proportion to the help given him by the State. The very excesses of economic collapse which make some States need more outside help than others make them less able to bear so large a proportion of the total load.

Thus neither the test of benefits received nor of ability to pay can justify the pending amendment. The third test is the test of sound fiscal policy, and here, too, the proposal breaks down.

It is conceded that State tax systems are less able than Federal taxation to distribute the burden equitably among the people at large. The general property tax, which is the chief source of revenue in most States, means that relief costs paid by the taxpayer fall largely upon the man who is just above the relief recipient in the economic scale. The Federal Government, though it does not always do so, is better able to distribute the cost of relief among those who can best afford to pay it; and in this fact we find an additional ground for large Federal responsibility.

Let us not confuse the problem of administering relief with the problem of financing relief. I firmly believe that the administration of unemployment relief should be and is being decentralized as rapidly as possible. That is something which the localities can do better than the Federal Government. But when we throw back upon the localities a larger part of the obligation to finance relief that is something which they are infinitely less able to do than the Federal Government.

Mr. President, there is a fourth test to which the pending amendment may be submitted—the most important test of all: Is the proposal designed to provide more adequate or equitable relief for the unemployed?

This is a fair and relevant question. We are all familiar with the use of mandatory local contributions to increase the resources at the disposal of the underprivileged. Such is the case with old-age pensions, with aid to the crippled and the blind, with grants to education. But most of the advocates of the amendment under discussion do not even pretend to view their proposal in that light. Most of them admit quite frankly that many of the States are not in a position to meet the 40-percent requirement. They are so well satisfied that the amendment would cut relief from 30 to 50 percent, that they are willing to forego direct efforts to reduce the bill in exchange for the acceptance of this amendment. Their proposal is not a drive for more adequate, or more equitable, or more soundly financed or administered relief. It is only a drive for a vast reduction in relief.

Above all, the proposal does not represent a drive for the reduction of relief in those areas which need relief least. It is not a drive for the gradual reduction of relief as private industry takes up the slack. It is a drive which by its very nature will reduce relief first in those areas which need it most—in those areas which are least equal to make a matching contribution. That, Mr. President, is the sum and substance of the whole question. The adoption of the amendment means that the stricken unemployed shall be made victims of the straitened circumstances of the localities in which they happen to live. It means that those whose chances of obtaining private employment are slightest, because they live in areas still most affected by the depression, will be the very ones hit hardest by this amendment and denied the benefit of Federal aid.

Why this sudden and short-sighted flare-up of misdirected economy? The bill before us is not large in terms of the acknowledged needs. Its funds are sufficient to care for, over the coming year, fully 500,000 less workers than are now dependent upon the Works Progress Administration. It is directly in line with the policy of scaling down public activity as private industry expands. Since the peak of relief in January 1935, the number of relief cases has declined 29 percent, and unemployment only 24 percent. Since February 1936, the numbers on the Works Progress rolls have declined by 26 percent and unemployment by only 19 percent.

In short, we are already paring down relief faster than employment is being relieved. Must we add unnecessarily to human suffering by further accelerating this pace? Must we say to the millions of men and women who are still unemployed, to the 500,000 of the younger generation who each year come into working manhood and womanhood, to the rising thousands displaced by technological unemployment, to those crowded out of industry by the growing length of the work week—must we say to all of these:

We cannot guarantee you a job in private industry, but neither will we guarantee you a livelihood through a full continuation of the responsibility of civilized government.

I have listened to the claims of the Senator from North Carolina that there is no serious unemployment problem today. Does the Senator not know that the vast construction industry is now limping along at less than half of the normal rate of activity? Where are the building workers affected by this stagnation? Does he not know that there are no more people employed in industry today than in 1929, despite the fact that there were two to three million unemployed then, and despite the fact that 4,000,000 of our youth have come of working age since then? Does he not know that the very lowest current estimate of unemployment, that of the conservative National Industrial Conference Board, is 7,533,000, and that the average of all responsible estimates is about 9,000,000?

What, in the Senator's judgment, has become of the "technologically" unemployed? He must, indeed, be familiar with the tobacco industry. Nineteen hundred and thirty-six was, indeed, a banner year for that industry. The annual return on invested capital surpassed that of 1929. Profits increased by 26 percent over those of 1935. At the present rate 153,000,000 cigars and cigarettes are being manufactured annually for every 100,000,000 that were made each year in the period 1923–25. But, despite this huge increase of 53 percent in production, there are only 61 workers in the industry for every 100 employed in that earlier period. What has become of the other 39 percent? Has the employed tobacco worker of today benefited by this amazing technological advance? On the contrary, the average full-time employee is receiving a wage 20 percent below the 1923–25 level. Has the consumer benefited? On the contrary, he is paying the same old price for his smoke or a little more. Who has gained? The owners, and the owners alone.

Now, let us look at it as a business question. To what does business owe its present prosperity, if not to the far-sighted vision of the Government, in creating work and purchasing power and markets for goods through the use of the public credit? To remove this public prop from our business structure more rapidly than private industry is prepared to substitute its own support, would send us tumbling backward into the depths of the depression.

Mr. President, I plead for the unemployed; I plead for business; but, most of all, I plead for the preservation of that public morale and public responsibility which we have developed during the last 4 years. I plead against a reversion to that dark day when the man unemployed through no fault of his own was treated like an outcast, when we did not recognize the only kind of effective responsibility, namely, Federal responsibility, to make sure not only that no one starved, but also that as many as possible might earn their bread in a decent and self-respecting way.

There are some slackers on the W. P. A. pay rolls, just as there are some sluggards in industry and some cheats in business; but the overwhelming majority of those now dependent upon public employment are American men and women, like you, like me, like the millions of their brothers and sisters, who have been more fortunate—men and women eager to work, anxious to make a living, solicitous for the welfare of their children, devoted to the preservation and protection of American institutions. During the past 4 years we have given these people a sense of partial security, a sense of renewed hope, a sense of justified faith in life. And we have given the whole Nation something as well—the satisfaction which comes from the fulfillment of inescapable human obligations, the knowledge of pursuing a path dictated by every consideration of sound economic and social policy.

The proposed amendment, in my opinion, fails by every test. It does not base relief costs upon ability to pay or benefits received. It introduces no improvement in administrative or fiscal policies. It establishes no coordination between less public employment and more private employment. It sets up no mechanism for giving Federal aid where it is needed most. It is an indirect attack upon the maintenance of adequate relief, so designed that it will cut off relief first from those areas which need it most, and last from those areas which need it least. It does not meet the needs of the unemployed, and, therefore, it does not meet the needs of the united Nation whose welfare depends upon their welfare.

Mr. President, I urge, therefore, the rejection of the amendment as amended.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from North Carolina desires the floor, and I yield it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would like to explain to the Senator from North Carolina that prior to his taking the chair the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], who was then presiding, had agreed to recognize the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], following the remarks of the Senator from New York. Perhaps the Senator from Florida will yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. PEPPER. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I am not inclined to detain the Senate. It seems to me I was heard yesterday with a great deal of patience and courtesy. I feel like withdrawing my apology I made just now when the junior Senator from New York accused me of keeping him up nearly all night. I think it was to a very good purpose, for I very greatly enjoyed his address and the contribution he has made to this discussion.

While I am making my apologies, I think I owe another apology to the senior Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND]. In undertaking to be courteous yesterday to the junior Senator from New York I inadvertently left out the senior Senator from New York. I was saying that I would not wound the sensibilities of the junior Senator. To be sure, I would not wound the sensibilities of the senior Senator from New York, either. But I also said that if the junior Senator from New York should run for mayor of New York I should be glad to support him; and I thought he would solve some of our problems there. I wish to say the same thing for the senior Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. I desire to relieve the Senator of that obligation, although it is very kind of him to make the suggestion.

Mr. BAILEY. Very well. I simply wish to treat both Senators equally and properly, and I am going on with my statement that if the senior Senator from New York can be induced to run for mayor of New York I think that would solve our problems there likewise, and I would be happy to give him my support. I will add to that that if both of them should run I would go back to North Carolina and disclaim any right to vote for either.

Mr. President, it is a strange thing to me how good men, very noble men, very fair and honorable men, will undertake—I do not think intentionally—to negotiate their opposition into a false position. I would not say that about the junior Senator from New York; I do not think he would do that purposely; but he made statements just now that would imply that those of us who oppose the particular scheme of things that is presented are not in sympathy with the unemployed. He would not say that intentionally; he would not even imply it. I have the utmost sympathy for the man out of work, and I recognize every obligation, National, State, county, and personal. I was speaking in the Senate on that subject in 1932, and I stated then that it was the duty of us all, the duty of the Government, to see to it that men, and, of course, women, who were able to work and wished to work should have an opportunity to work. We are all of that view; but that is not the question before us.

I have voted for every measure of relief that has been put forward here. I have had views about how much money should be expended, but that is a question of judgment. I am unwilling to encourage the attitude of putting upon those of us who offer amendments or who have a different view the burden of exonerating ourselves before the American people as against the accusation that we are unsympathetic with people who are in need and in distress.

I have always had a view about that sort of thing. I have always been suspicious of the man who proclaimed his religion or advertised his sympathies. I have never been inclined to stand up before the people and proclaim myself as one of their friends. I think Senators will realize why a man should hesitate to do that.

I do not think we should boost ourselves one above another either in sympathy or friendship or patriotism or honesty or piety. We have an ancient injunction to the effect that we should be known by our deeds and not by our professions. Those of us who prefer not to advertise ourselves and to proclaim our benevolence at the public expense might at least be allowed credit for decent regard for our fellow men as well as a decent self respect.

I am in sympathy with the unemployed. Merely because I think $1,000,000,000 from our Federal Treasury is enough, how can anyone impute that statement to me by way of saying, as one Senator intimated this morning, that I wish to balance the Budget of the Government of the United States at the expense of the suffering of human beings? He has no right to visit that judgment upon me. If I think $1,000,000,000 is enough I am entitled to my judgment about it. It is twice as much as the Senate of the United States thought was necessary 3 years ago.

We began this business of relief in 1932. I have the act before me. In the emergency relief and reconstruction act we appropriated $300,000,000. We thought it was enough. Am I to be pilloried here because I now say that one thousand million dollars is enough? If so what would Senators say about the Senate of 1932?

Mr. WAGNER rose.

Mr. BAILEY. I am not saying anything by way of reproach to the Senator from New York.

Mr. WAGNER. Oh, no; and I would not mind it anyway because I have broad shoulders. In referring to the $300,000,000 bill for public works, my very distinct recollection is that every Senator who participated in the introduction of that measure desired a larger public-works program at that time, but Mr. Hoover was then President of the United States and, of course, we had to reach an agreement with him. The administration would not go above $300,000,000 at that time. They did not spend that much either.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Hoover is not here, and of course I do not know. I know what happened. My recollection is perfectly clear about it because I took the pains to look it up and get the details. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] introduced here the first bill, proposing to appropriate $5,500,000,000. It was defeated. The Democrats defeated it. A great many Republicans voted against it. A great many Senators on both sides of the Chamber voted against it.

Then we came along with the bill which was known as the Garner bill, when our present Vice President was Speaker of the House of Representatives. That contemplated a big construction program. That was defeated.

Then we came to the act which we passed, carrying $300,000,000. I invite particular attention to this language in that act:

> Such sum of $300,000,000 shall, until the expiration of 2 years after the date of the enactment of this act—
>
> Two years—
>
> be available for payment to the Governors of the several States and Territories for the purposes of this section.

My recollection is not doubtful about that. We voted for that measure and for the lending of the money to the States because we were unwilling to trust the national administration with that money and the power directly to appropriate it in an election year.

Now we come to the other side of the picture and say the matter is wholly national and we must have the money and we must distribute it as a Federal matter. I am not complaining about that, but I am saying that my position now, in saying that the matter of relief is at least to a very considerable degree a local obligation and a local problem, is not only in accord with the Democratic policy, the Democratic program, and the Democratic record, but is in accordance with statements of the Democratic President—and no one can deny that. Any effort to make it appear to the contrary will at once be met with the record of speeches of the President of the United States and the Democratic platform and the record written here in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

So much for that. I wish now to come directly to the matter of the necessity for local responsibility and a certain degree of local administration. I will say to my very noble friend, the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], that I did not bring up the facts as to New York by way of criticizing New York State. I brought up those facts by way of showing the inequities, the necessary inequalities, when we have a national administration of this fund, when we do not have the local checks and the local responsibility. That is asserting a principle about relief. It is not trying to take the bread out of anybody's mouth or jobs from anybody.

I am asserting a principle which my party initiated, on which my party's President was elected, that the States and the counties and the cities have a primary responsibility; that they ought to have a part in the administration and ought to have a part in the payment of the funds. That is all there is to that.

I am not saying we should limit the funds. I say appropriate $1,000,000,000. Let the States, counties, cities, and towns raise $2,000,000,000 more, if so much is necessary. It is all right with me. They are acquainted with the facts; they know the situation. I am not putting any limit on that. I am simply putting a responsibility on them in the year 1937, when the Secretary of Agriculture is saying that the depression is over—that was his statement in a recent speech as published in the newspapers—I am simply saying the time has come for the Federal Government to shift a larger measure of this responsibility upon the States, counties, and cities, and when I say that I am also saying there should be more local responsibility in the administration of the program.

I have some evidence here. I hope no one will think I am uttering that in a provincial spirit. I am not doing it as an advocate or the representative of a section. I have here some facts which I think the national administration ought to take into consideration. I think they are facts which the Senate should take into consideration.

Approximately 2 percent of the population of the wealthier Northern States—and I am referring now definitely to Pennsylvania and New York—are employed on W. P. A. projects, as contrasted to 1 percent of the population employed by W. P. A. in the Southern States. That is 2 to 1. Since the W. P. A. workers in the Northern States receive approximately twice as much wages per month as do the southern W. P. A. workers, it is quite simple mathematics to figure that the net result is that the Northern States, on the basis of population, receive $4 to $1 for the Southern States.

When I protest against that I hope no one will say that I am provincial. I am just not in favor of distributing the national subsidies on a basis of 4 to 1. I should not be willing to do that in North Carolina as against New York. What I am saying is that when we centralize this thing, and make of it a great subsidy to be handed out here by one man, this sort of thing will inevitably occur. In other words, for every 1,000 population residing in the States of New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania there are approximately 20 persons employed on W. P. A. at monthly wages averaging $60 or more per month, or a total of $1,200 Federal funds allotted to such States monthly for each 1,000 population. Contrast this with the Southern States, where approximately 10 persons out of 1,000 population are employed as W. P. A. Workers for the average monthly W. P. A. wages of $32 per month, or a total of $320, and we say that the Federal funds received in the Northern States per 1,000 population are four times as much as in the Southern States under the W. P. A. program. The Northern States get $1,200 where the Southern States get $320 on a per-capita basis.

Let us look at that a moment.

The Senator from New York was arguing that there was some justification for the condition stated on the ground of taxes paid. I am willing to recognize the argument, but I have some question about it, notwithstanding the fact that my State has a very high record in taxes paid. The taxes, however, have not yet been paid. There is the significant thing. The debt that we have created is now $19,000,000,000; and at least $12,000,000,000 of it is due to this distribution of money, not just for W. P. A., but for all manner of relief and reconstruction projects. When this debt is paid, we who got $1 per capita where the people of the Northern States got $4 per capita are going to have to pay at least $2 where they pay $4. That is stripping our section of the country. That will tend to break the backbone of those struggling Commonwealths in the South.

We sometimes say that the poor people do not pay taxes. That is a great mistake. We have a way of saying that the Federal Government does not levy any sales taxes. That is not the truth. We have a long list of sales taxes, and at this moment there is pending a bill to renew those taxes for the next 2 years. The Senate is familiar with it. I say to the Senate that the poorer classes of the people in America today pay $1,500,000,000 a year of the annual taxes of the Federal Government.

How do I figure it? Take the tobacco tax, then take the excise taxes, then take the taxes in the lower brackets, and they very quickly add up to a billion and a half dollars. I have never been in favor of a general sales tax, but I have never said that we did not have a sales tax. If a man buys gasoline, he pays a sales tax. If a man buys a package of cigarettes, he pays a sales tax. If a man goes to a movie show, he pays a sales tax; and that is true all the way along. Of course, we have sales taxes, and they fall upon the great masses of the people.

It is my judgment also that all the taxes paid by the corporations fall upon the masses of the people. Corporations do not pay taxes out of their capital. If they did, the capital would soon evaporate. They pay taxes out of their profits, and they get their profits from the rank and file of the American people. We now put a tax of 15 percent on the net earnings of corporations. Where does a corporation get the 15 percent? It gets it out of the pockets of the great masses of America, north and south and east and west.

Now apply the principle: We all understand that this debt will be paid. The national honor demands that it shall be paid. It is going to be paid, not by paper, but by the earnings of the people. It is going to be paid by annual revenues. When the revenue collected in North Carolina is used to build houses and provide jobs for persons in New York City, we do not get a quid pro quo. We are put in the position of stripping ourselves in our poverty to support a population which the United States Census says has twice the per-capita income and twice the per-capita wealth of my Commonwealth.

If that is provincialism, make the most of it. I think a Senator has a duty in the national interest and also in the interest of the Commonwealth that sent him here. I wish to serve both, and I hope to serve both without being provincial.

That is the situation about those things. That is what troubles me about the matter. Why can we not require New York State to put up 40 percent?

Now, hear me, Senators: There are only 286,000 persons on relief in New York State. There are 12,000,000 persons not on relief in New York State. Do you tell me that 12,000,000 persons cannot support 286,000 persons—about 2 percent?

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. Surely.

Mr. WAGNER. Did the Senator understand me to imply in any part of my speech that New York could not do that?

The Senator insists upon using New York State as his issue, and asks why we cannot pay 40 percent in New York State. I think I stated in my address that I was trying to view the matter from the standpoint of the Nation; that so far as New York is concerned, on all of the relief and work relief we are now contributing 37 percent.

There would be no difficulty in complying with the terms of this amendment if it affected only New York; but there are many States that will not be able to make that contribution. That is what I was trying to say. Perhaps I did not say it very clearly.

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator's State is already paying 37 percent, I should not think he would complain very greatly if we added 3 percent more, and made it 40 percent. And he admits his State is able to pay it!

Mr. WAGNER. I did not complain. I am trying to make the Senator understand that I was speaking from the national point of view, from the standpoint of the other States that are less able to pay. I tried to emphasize that in what I said, but evidently it escaped the Senator, because I am sure he would not willingly do me an injustice.

Mr. BAILEY. I am sure the Senator is speaking from the national point of view. I would not think anything else. I think he is speaking in utter sincerity; and while I am not demanding that others think I am doing that, I have the satisfaction within my own breast of knowing that I am. We can get along about that, and, of course, I am using New York only as an illustration. I should be perfectly willing to use North Carolina; and, as I said yesterday, I would not wound the sensibilities of the Senator from New York on any account whatever. If I shall, and he calls my attention to it, I will make due correction and apology every time.

Mr. WAGNER. No; the Senator owes me no apology. Perhaps I owe him one for these interruptions; but I do not think the Senator ought to complain about my sensibilities being somewhat aroused. Both he and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] have persisted in referring to only one item and emphasizing the contribution that New York has been making to W. P. A., whereas, as a matter of fact, there are a number of other Federal-State activities toward which we are making large contributions, in all averaging nearly 37 percent of the total spent in New York; and there are only two States in the Union that are making higher contributions than that. That is what I was trying to bring forth. When we are discussing these contributions, let us take them all together.

Mr. BAILEY. There may be a little difficulty there.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Carolina yield to me?

Mr. BAILEY. Just let me answer the remark of the Senator from New York, and then, of course, I will yield.

The Senator from New York insists on bringing in P. W. A.——

Mr. WAGNER. The entire picture.

Mr. BAILEY. And, as the Senator says, prompting me, the entire picture. The Senator from South Carolina and I are very much inclined to confine the picture to the P. W. A., and the joint resolution before us is a joint resolution dealing with the P. W. A. I should be glad to take up all these other matters when they come in order; but I cannot see that we should get very far if every time we discussed the W. P. A. we had to discuss this whole alphabetical picture. That is a very difficult task.

Mr. WAGNER. But in order to give evidence of the good faith of New York in its contributions, when the Senator refers to a contribution of only 7 percent by the State insofar as W. P. A. is concerned, he ought then also to enumerate the contribution which we are making to the same relief problem in the other fields of social activity; and that amounts to more than the State of North Carolina contributes totally, and more than the State of South Carolina contributes. I do not think it is fair constantly to refer to the State of New York as making a small contribution, as the Senator says, to W. P. A., and not give us the entire picture. If I referred to North Carolina, instead of limiting the discussion to North Carolina's contribution merely to one item of all the different items which make up the activities to help the unemployed, in fairness to the Senator's State,

I should have to enumerate all of its contributions; and all I am asking is that the Senator be fair in that regard.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I wish to be so fair that I am willing to have the Senator be my judge and say whether or not I am fair. I am willing to say anything in the line of the whole picture that the Senator would wish me to say, and to read into my remarks any amount of statistics the Senator may give me. I heard the very fine statement the Senator made, and I understand one was made earlier in the day by the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH]. I think probably the picture is before us now. Let us take it that it is. The fact still remains that the sponsors in New York put up only 7 percent. The fact still remains that the monthly wage in New York is $65, while in North Carolina it is $23. I do not hold that against New York. That is against this Hopkins administration. That is what I am driving at.

I am not arraigning New York about that. I am willing to say that perhaps the New York wage is right; but if it is right, the disparity is intolerable as between the New York wage under the W. P. A. and the North Carolina wage; and I do not think anyone will deny that.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Of course I have had no part in the administration of this relief fund, or any of the other funds, in New York. A general of the Army, or colonel, has charge in New York City, and up-State it is under the charge of one of the distinguished members of the Republican Party. But I am sure they have done a most honorable job and have not given any relief where it has not been needed. I inquired this morning, and the answer I got was that the cost of living is so different in different localities that they have to take it into consideration.

If the Senator thinks there is an error, he ought to call the attention of Mr. Hopkins to that fact.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I am not going to call the attention of that administrator to anything except on the floor of the Senate and that is what I am doing now and that is what I am talking about. I am glad we have finally gotten to it.

The Senator thinks I am attacking New York. I have said a dozen times in this debate that I have mentioned the facts as to New York and North Carolina to illustrate how this national system is carried on. There have been no unkind reflections, no invidious comparisons. I am saying that the facts cannot be avoided, and that the thing is wrong.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. During the presentation by the Senator from New York in his statement I did not interrupt him; but because of the repeated statement that it is provincial to call attention to the table inserted by the Administrator, Mr. Hopkins, in the hearings before the House committee, I only desire to call the attention of the Senator from North Carolina and of the Senator from New York to the fact that in first presenting my views as to this amendment, in discussing the proportion of the total cost of a project which should be paid as between the sponsor and the Federal Government, I called attention to the wide variance between the proportion put up by various sponsors merely in advocating uniformity.

The figures are not mine; they are Mr. Hopkins' figures. They show that to January 1 of this year in New York City there were 734 projects; that the total cost of those projects was $433,783,001; and Mr. Hopkins said that of that total cost of the projects the Federal Government contributed out of the $433,783,000 the sum of $431,538,624, and that the city of New York contributed $2,244,377.. He said that he contributed to these 734 projects in New York City 99½ percent of the total cost of the projects, and the only question we were submitting was not what New York would do for the rest of this country, but we know that knocking at the doors of this Chamber now is a bill to continue for another year the taxes upon every gallon of gasoline bought by the man in Michigan, Idaho, or California, as well as New York City, and on all matters that are taxed, and from all those taxes we will get but $600,000,000. Mr. Hopkins said he contributed $431,000,000 out of $433,000,000 to New York City, or 99½ percent. I was not attacking New York City, but my question was whether this Government can in a few days pass a bill to collect out of the pockets of the people $600,000,000 and say to New York City, "We will give you 99½ cents out of every dollar your projects cost", and say to my friend the Senator from Idaho, "We will give your State $70, and it will have to put up $30."

Mr. President, I believe the contributions should be uniform. No percentage is sacred, but there should be some uniformity, and when it comes to determining the question as to whether it should be 99½ in New York and 70 in Idaho it is immaterial how much is spent for hospitalization in New York, or for the fire department, or for the police department, or for anything else, and it is immaterial how much is spent for those things in Idaho. When Mr. Hopkins says that of this $600,000,000 we are going to collect he gives $433,000,000 to one city, gives them 99½ cents out of the cost of a project on every dollar, and gives 70 in Idaho, and makes Idaho put up $30, the question is whether it is fair or whether we should not try to make every State and every city pay its share.

If 99½ cents is right for New York, it should be right for us. If New York is made to put up $70, make South Carolina put up $70. By whatever standard the Government measures, we will agree to it. But we do not agree to a provision which will say to South Carolina, "You put up 40 percent", and to some other State that it may put up a different percentage. I have here a copy of an application for a nurses' home at a hospital where we put up 54 percent. I do not complain. I think it should be 54 percent. I urged 50 percent. But I think that whatever they demand of Idaho, Kansas, Michigan, and South Carolina, they should demand of New York City, and that is all. If that is provincialism, then I am provincial, and proud to be provincial.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. BYRNES. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator has calmed down now? [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRNES. After watching the Senator from New York, I have learned to be calm always.

Mr. WAGNER. Let us all be calm. Did the Senator ask Mr. Hopkins what other contributions New York made toward this whole program of relief and work relief?

Mr. BYRNES. No; I did not ask him. I can see that the mind of the Senator from New York is simply not in accord with mine on this question. My position is that when Mr. Hopkins said he had $433,000,000 to spend for projects in New York, and he gave four hundred and thirty-one million of Federal money, collected as the imminent bill will provide it shall be collected to those projects, it is irrelevant what New York City is spending for its hospitals, or for relief, and it is immaterial and irrelevant what the people of South Carolina are spending in community chests by levying taxes or in any other way. We have said that is their problem, that they must look after the local direct relief.

Mr. WAGNER. In New York City that is a Federal problem.

Mr. BYRNES. Under the pending measure there is not provided one dollar for direct relief.

Mr. WAGNER. But you are still going to get direct relief from the Federal Government, are you not?

Mr. BYRNES. Not that I know of. There is no provision for it in the joint resolution. Where would the Senator get it?

Mr. WAGNER. I dislike to keep repeating, but while the Government gave us this larger aid, so far as the Works Progress Administration is concerned, we in the city of New York assumed obligations which other States in the Nation did not assume, which were Federal in their nature, namely, other types of work relief and relief. The result is that we contributed as a whole toward all these problems, which involve one question of relief, 36.6 percent of all the money spent in our State, whereas the total contribution from the State of South Carolina amounts to 17 percent this year, and was even less in previous years.

The Senator refuses to give the State of New York credit for making almost a hundred percent contribution in some of these other activities, and insists upon limiting his discussion to the Works Progress Administration. That can be easily adjusted. New York can pay its 40 percent. Then, of course, the Government will have to assume some other obligations which the city of New York and the State of New York have now assumed, and which the Government does assume in other States of the Union. I am simply pleading for fairness to New York. That is my only plea. The Senator has not been fair to New York.

Say what you like, New York will come along all right. I do not think many of the other States will. Let us be candid about this, Senators. I do not say that this is the object which the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] had in mind in offering his amendment, but the result of the amendment will be to cut down the relief to a sum below $1,000,000,000, because throughout the Nation the different municipalities will not be able to make these contributions. That is what I am worrying about. I am pleading for the unemployed, for those I know to be unemployed, between seven and eight million of them. My first consideration is for them. We shall not take care of the Budget with a rapidity so as to starve good American citizens ready and willing to work, but not able to work now because our system has not been properly adjusted.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] says our industries have recovered. Mr. President, they have not absorbed our unemployed. We must have shorter hours, we must have minimum wages, and through better labor organizations the workers will get a fairer proportion of the wealth which they create. These, however, are problems foreign to the question now under consideration. I wish Senators to know that my whole concern is not now New York. Whatever is done now we shall adjust ourselves to it, but let us think of other States which, as Senators have told us, are not able to comply with these very rigid and fixed provisions.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I wish to say that the rest of the States of the Union will look after themselves. They are made to pay 25 percent to 35 percent. I have no doubt New York will take care of itself, but the rest of the States of the Union will have to take care of themselves, and they cannot do it by turning over 99½ percent of the cost of a project to New York City.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. With the consent of the Senator from North Carolina, I beg to revert to one of his statements which gives me information but occasions me some astonishment. I do not allude at this moment to the controversy between New York and South Carolina. I am not unconscious that there is in history an instance of conflict between South Carolina and Massachusetts which led to a rather strange conclusion and an unfortunate and fateful end. I do not wish that duplicated, and therefore wish to cut off as much as I can the further conflict between these two great nationalities. [Laughter.] But I ask the great Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] did he mean literally, if I understood him correctly, that the difference in the wage rate between the State of South Carolina or that of North Carolina and the wage rate stated by the able Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] applicable to New York—that that difference was the result of some action by him whom the Senator called Harry Hopkins or Mr. Hopkins? Will the Senator from North Carolina explain in what way Mr. Hopkins, as Administrator of this relief system, is responsible for the difference in the rate of wages in these two different States which he has described—the States of North Carolina and New York.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Hopkins is the Administrator over all of them. He supervises all of them. He makes the allotments. We ask him how many dollars we can get. We appropriate billions of dollars for him and then sit like beggars on his doorstep and ask him for some of them.

Mr. LEWIS. And let me say that I have not been able to agree with Mr. Hopkins as to Illinois and as to Chicago——

Mr. BAILEY. That, Mr. President, is one of my complaints with regard to this whole matter.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I regard the work which Mr. Hopkins has done as marvelous. I believe he is entitled to a great reward for what he has done.

However, I wish to ask the Senator how he can explain to anyone wherein Mr. Hopkins is responsible for the difference in the rate of wages of those working in the State of New York and those working in the imperial States of South Carolina and North Carolina? How does he control the wages within those States?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Illinois must be under some misapprehension. The Administrator is in charge of it all. It is a one-man affair. It is not under any board. The Administrator determines what we shall get. He gives out the money on a certain basis; if there are so many people on the rolls he gives so much for wages and such-and-such projects. He has to do it. I wish the Senator from Illinois to consider this, that for every thousand population in New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts, where they have a monthly wage of $60 per capita, there is $1,200 of Federal funds allotted. It is allotted on the basis of the people employed.

Mr. LEWIS. Exactly. That is why I cannot see that it is fair to charge Mr. Hopkins with being responsible for the rate. His allowance may be based upon the basis of the rate, but he does not create the rate of wages.

Mr. BAILEY. Oh, yes; Mr. President. If you divide the number of people available for employment with the amount of money that is handed to you, you find it is a mathematical proposition.

Mr. LEWIS. I thank the Senator for his statement, but I cannot see that that is exactly an answer to the question as to how he is responsible for the rate.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call the Senator's attention to the following provision of this joint resolution governing the very subject that he has been talking about in discussion with the Senator from Illinois:

Provided further, That in the event the Congress or any Federal agency so authorized by the act of Congress shall establish minimum rates of pay for persons employed by private employers in any occupation or occupations, thereafter no greater percentage differentials in the amount of compensation paid than the average minimum differentials established by the Congress or such Federal agency shall be applicable to persons engaged upon projects under the foregoing appropriations, and in the event no differential be established there shall be no differential in compensation applicable to such persons.

Mr. BAILEY. I think that is a very fine amendment. It is made necessary by the very fact that I have been citing. It is not in the law.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; but it is in this joint resolution. If the Senator will vote for the joint resolution, he will get what he wants.

Mr. BAILEY. I want to pay a tribute to the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] for putting it in there. I am very glad it is in the joint resolution.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, if I heard him correctly, I think the Senator from Tennessee failed to read the clause which really confirms the statement of the Senator from North Carolina as to wages. It is in this joint resolution, and I think it is copied from the existing law:

That the rates of pay for persons engaged upon projects under the foregoing appropriation shall be not less than the prevailing rates of pay for work of a similar nature in the same locality as determined by the Works Progress Administration with the approval of the President.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] is the author of this amendment, and I shall be very glad if he will explain it.

Mr. RUSSELL. The provision read by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] applies only to the hourly rate of pay. It does not apply to the so-called security wage.

Mr. ADAMS. All I was doing was to point out that under the law as it stands these matters were fixed by the Works Progress Administration, and we have the tabulation in the hearings of the rates fixed per hour in the various States.

Mr. RUSSELL. As to the hourly rates that are paid?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. RUSSELL. However, the so-called security wage, which is the total amount which can be paid any person on any project at one time, is not fixed by the law, but is arrived at as the result of various considerations by the Works Progress Administration.

Mr. Hopkins testified that the so-called security wage was based more upon a standard of living than it was the cost of living, and that was one of the impelling reasons for offering the amendment, which the committee saw fit to adopt.

Mr. BAILEY. Now, I think we have that clear.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to ask a question?

Mr. BAILEY. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Regardless of the difference in the wage scale paid by the W. P. A. to those who are employed on its projects, and while that wage does not track the wages that prevail in the various communities, it is true that the wage scale is based primarily and fundamentally on the wages that are paid in the various parts of the United States, so as to have a fair proportion as between the different communities and the different States. That is true, is it not?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky may undertake to speak for Mr. Harry Hopkins. I would not under any circumstances.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not attempting to induce the Senator from North Carolina to speak for Mr. Hopkins.

Mr. BAILEY. I do not know what his basis is.

Mr. BARKLEY. Far be it from me to entice the Senator from North Carolina into such a field which would be so unwelcome to him.

Mr. BAILEY. It would, indeed.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have not heard him, Mr. Hopkins, say anything about it, and not being on the committee I did not hear his testimony, and I have been unable to read all of it. If the Senator is not willing to give that information, I think it is fair that the Senate should have it. Regardless of what Mr. Hopkins may or may not have said, the fact is that the wage differential and the wage scale in the various cities, counties, and States of the Union is fundamentally based somewhat on the wage that prevails in the community. Although not as high as the prevailing wage, it is based on that sort of proportion. I say that if Mr. Hopkins has fixed a wage that seems unfair in any State as compared to another it is because of the fundamental unfairness of the background and foundation of that wage as he has associated it and fixed it in his Works Progress Administration.

Mr. BAILEY. Manifestly, that would be a very fine explanation, but that will not explain.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAILEY. Let me answer the Senator from Kentucky, and then I will yield. No one can explain on any basis of fact, or right, or reason, or experience why the Federal Government should pay a wage of $32 in North Carolina and a wage of $65 in New York. There is not that difference. We have got the whole experience of the N. R. A. to controvert it. If that is the theory, I am just saying the facts are not squaring with our theory.

Senators, hear me, as I want to get the facts before us. For every thousand population in New York the contribution of Federal funds is $1,200; for every thousand population in North Carolina Federal funds were contributed to the amount of $320. That cannot be explained on any basis of wages or taxation or reason or right. It is wrong, and our State cannot stand it.

Now I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I am not disagreeing at all with the views of the Senator from North Carolina as to the impropriety of these differentials, but I think the situation would be made a little more clear if we were to refer to the record. The questions asked by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] indicated some doubt in his mind as to whether Mr. Hopkins fixed these differentials. At the hearings before the Senate committee as found on page 80, if the Senator from North Carolina will permit me, I should like to read two or three questions propounded to Mr. Hopkins and the answers made by him to those questions. First the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] asked this question:

How do you account for the difference in the cost as between the cities and the country?

Mr. HOPKINS. Different standards of living in the country and variations in the cost of living. Actually the cost is less in the country than it is in the city. For the same kind of shelter, I doubt if the cost is half as much in the rural areas as it is in the cities.

Part of it is due to the lower standard of living in the rural areas.

Senator HAYDEN. Is it also due to the fact that persons in need of relief, residing in the country, are able to produce from the land a part of their own food?

WAGE SCALES

Mr. HOPKINS. Partly, no doubt. Of course, I think our wage scale is not based as much on the cost of living as it is on the standard of living.

For instance our figures show that it costs as much for a worker to live in Washington as it does in New York, and certainly the difference between the wages we pay in New York City and Charleston, S. C., does not represent a difference in the actual needs of the workers. The difference is rather in the standard of living.

Mr. BAILEY. Yes; and I am saying that there is no standard of living in the South that would justify $320 down there for every $1,200 in New York or $30 wage there for a $60 wage in New York. That is wrong.

Mr. STEIWER. May I suggest to the Senator that, so far as the W. P. A. standard of living is concerned, it is created by Mr. Hopkins?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it may not be created by him but may be followed by him.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I should like to add, if I may be pardoned, that while I am not an advocate of Mr. Hopkins, and we have differed much, I think it is unfair to accuse him of being responsible for a situation which it appears he did not create but which was created under a law which he is not able to repeal.

Mr. BAILEY. But which he has misinterpreted. That is not the situation, however. There are no facts to be found on which to base the differential. I can put that to the test in 2 seconds.

The Congress has now before it a wage-and-hour bill. No Senator here would ask that the minimum wage be made twice as high in New York as in North Carolina. Of course he would not. Yet we have it in this instance. The worker is a worker, the hungry man is a hungry man, human rights are human rights, Federal money is Federal money, and there is an equal right under the law.

Mr. President, I rose to make a few remarks, and in the course of the remarks I became first an innocent bystander and then finally I got to be a referee. But there were no casualties, and I wish to say that both Senators came off with a great deal of honor and both are fine and extraordinary men.

Mr. LEWIS. And the Senator from North Carolina is a great orator.

Mr. BAILEY. I thought I would conclude by reading, if I could do so without offense to the Senators from New York, a short column—it will take me a moment or two—from the New York Times of June 7. The junior Senator from New York has been talking a great deal about public works. Now let us see about that.

New York City leased from the United States Government yesterday, for an experimental year at $69,062 rental, the four square blocks of model dwellings known as Harlem River Houses, now nearing completion as a Federal Public Works project.

At a public ceremony in the great court of the new houses at One Hundred and Fifty-first Street, Mayor LaGuardia approved the lease in which the Federal Government fixed the monthly rentals to be charged by this city to the Negroes of Harlem, at a monthly average of $7 a room.

"We have had very generous Government help", he said. "It represents a new theory in government—aiding Americans in distress—which was initiated by Franklin D. Rooseevlt."

He did not even take the trouble to call him President.

The audience of more than 4,000 vigorously cheered the President. The mayor then got a cheer for himself when he added, "I selected this place."

He is running for mayor this year, and he was not going to be left out of the picture. At least he selected the place, and we furnished the money.

According to official figures, the project cost the Federal Government $4,219,000.

That is one-fifth of all North Carolina has obtained in 20 months, and it is just for a Negro apartment settlement on One Hundred and Fifty-first Street in New York City.

Only 55 percent is to be repaid—

That is all New York will ever pay us back—

Only 55 percent is to be repaid—over a period of 60 years. The rest is a subsidy. Otherwise, according to the P. W. A. engineers, yesterday, the monthly rental would have to be more than $14 a room.

That is what it cost the Federal Government to build the houses. This project is almost equal to the one over in Maryland.

DUNBAR APARTMENTS CONTRASTED

Three blocks away the Dunbar Apartments, the model Negro housing built by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in 1928 at a cost of $3,300,000, which he wished to recover in 30 years, are charging $12 a room.

In the absence of Secretary Harold L. Ickes, who laid the Harlem cornerstone but is now ill in Washington, the operating policy of the Public Works Administration was represented in an address yesterday by his director of housing, Howard A. Gray.

Here is a significant thing—

"I hope that Harlem River houses is a forerunner", he said "of many similar projects in this city and in all our cities dedicated to the same purpose. Owned by the Federal Government and operated by the city, it is symbolic of a great change in public attitude—for the betterment of our common lot."

Referring to the Dunbar Apartments, where there are 18 vacancies among 536 apartments, the P. W. A. director said, "As the Dunbar Apartments were meant to pay their way, great numbers of Harlem families could not qualify as tenants."

In contrast, the rush of 14,000 applicants for the 574 apartments in the Federal housing was emphasized by Langdon W. Post, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority, which is to manage the leased Harlem River houses and to make detailed monthly reports to the Federal Public Works Administration concerning tenancy.

POLITICAL PULL SCORED

"This is obviously only a beginning", said Mr. Post—

He is representing officially the Public Works Administration—

"when there are so many thousands still unprovided for." He said the names of the 574 families selected by the city housing authority as both needy and desirable tenants would be announced within the next few days.

I suppose there will be a great lottery—547 apartments for 14,000 people.

"Political pull has been tried to get these apartments", he said, "but I want you all to know there is going to be no political pull in this."

Just how they will pick out the fortunate ones, I do not know. This is a political year in New York City.

Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER wired from Washington that he was detained there to push his new housing bill, which would commit the Federal Government to a long-range policy of such subsidized housing "for that third of Americans who are ill-housed and whom the President and the country are determined to help."

Very well; there is notice that the Federal Government is going to build houses for one-third of the American people, which means for nearly 45,000,000 people. They are going to take the money from down our way and spend it up there. They are going to say we are entitled to $3.20, but the man in New York would be entitled to $10.

If we do not put an end to this sort of thing, it is perfectly clear to me where we are going. We will never have a balanced Budget. On the other hand, we will have a broken Treasury.

Here is the program: We are building houses in Virginia. The junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] brought out the fact the other day that the houses being built there cost $12,000 a piece, and he protested against it. He is entitled to honor, because he is the only Senator I know of who has protested against these things being done in his own State. I suppose, if Virginia has these houses built there, it is nothing but right that they should be built elsewhere. If New York City has them, we ought to have them in Raleigh, my home city. American citizens are entitled to the equal protection of the law. We cannot distribute public money on any other basis, and to undertake to do it is to work injustice; and the one thing the people never forgive their government is injustice.

Take the whole situation and look at it. I say to the Senate in all earnestness and solemnity that if we want to save the Federal Government from bankruptcy we will have to decentralize this public spending. We will have to tell New York City that if she has a bad housing problem it is her business to look after it; if her streets are not good streets, it is her business to make them good. Put the tax on the people who enjoy the streets. If New York cannot attend to the sewage disposal of the city, she ought to go out of business as a city. If New York cannot provide schools for her children, she ought to give up the game and cease to call herself the center of civilization.

The idea of New York, Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, Cleveland, and all the other cities of the Nation hanging onto the Federal Government and crying, "Build this and build that. Do this and do that." I say unless we stop this tide, unless we arrest this process of dependency and degeneration, the break-down of the financial structure of this Government is inevitable. I say to those Senators who have made their professions of sympathy with the unemployed, if they want to wreck America really, if they want to fill the streets with unemployed, just let them destroy the credit of the Government and go into the inevitable inflation that will follow, when its money can buy nothing. Then we would have a situation, indeed.

On the basis of sympathy not alone for the people who have not jobs, but for the people who have jobs, on the basis of sympathy for the men who are trying to do for America, trying to carry on, on the basis of interest in the farmer as well as the unemployed, I appeal that we adopt here a policy which will at least notify the people of America that we are going to preserve the national credit, that we are going to preserve the integrity of the national currency, that we are going to preserve the wages of the worker and his right to exist.

Mr. President, I am through. I feel very earnest about this matter. To be sure, I give the utmost credit to the good faith of every man who differs with me. I have not meant to reflect upon anyone. I have not greatly cared when utterances have been made here tending to leave an argumentative impression, at any rate, that those of us who advocate what we consider a necessary and a constructive policy are not as sympathetic with the unemployed as those who talk about us. That is all right. I will abide the outcome of the policy and not ask for any credit. I will stand on my position.

I am merely saying to the Senate that we cannot go on as we are now going. Senators can make these appeals to us, whenever we try to stop this tide of spending, and raise one excuse and the other. Senators cannot go on that way without exhausting the credit of the Republic of the United States—and that is the most precious thing we have. That is just as important to the unemployed as it is to the employed. That is more important to the poor fellow who hangs upon us pleading for relief than the dollars we might grant from day to day.

I am saying that now we have counties and cities and States where there is a reasonable return of prosperity, and we all know there is. Everybody knows it. One day we boast of it and the next day we deny it, but we all know it is here. There is a recovery, and now that there is recovery why should not the Federal Government, which has borne the burden in such great measure for 4 years, now say to the counties, and cities, and States: "We saved you and we stood in your place when the liability was yours and the primary obligation was yours. Now we are in debt. Our budget is unbalanced. You are all right because we made you all right. Come in now and do your duty."

If we will do that, we can balance the Budget. If we do not do that and if we continue to keep the Budget unbalanced, not only the seven or eight million who are now dependent upon us will go to wrack, but twenty or thirty million more will follow.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States, submitting nominations, were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

RELIEF APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 361) making appropriations for relief purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have listened with great interest to the remarks of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY]. I do not presume I have the ability or the power to persuade Senators about this matter which has already been discussed at considerable length; yet out of my own experience I happen to entertain certain sentiments with regard particularly to the impressions which may be deduced by the public of the United States with respect to this issue, and I desire to express briefly those sentiments.

I have listened with a great deal of interest and such alertness as I was capable of to the arguments which have been made by the proponents of the amendment now under consideration. I thought perhaps at first that they were dissatisfied with the operation of the details of the Works Progress Administration.

I thought perhaps they were solicitous for a purge of the relief rolls, and it occurred to me that it was a simple thing to have an elimination of those who were improperly upon the relief rolls, and such a suggestion would readily occur to anyone, but I did not hear that suggestion made. So, therefore, I assumed that no one was primarily discontented with any of the so-called "sorry" crowd which has crept or been put on the relief rolls of the Nation. In fact, I have heard no protests against the number of persons, estimated at some 2,200,000, who happen to be the beneficiaries of this meager contribution from their Government.

Then I thought perhaps some were concerned about the reduction of the amount of the relief appropriation, but even the proponents of the amendment do not propose a reduction in the gross amount available for this objective. In fact, some enthusiastically suggest that even more money may be available if this matching amendment should, perchance, be adopted.

So I have begun to observe, as I have listened more and more to the comment on this measure, that there was a deeper sentiment in the hearts of those who were the proponents of this principal amendment; and as the discussion progressed, as I heard an expansion of the philosophy and the view of some of the Senators who spoke chiefly for it, I was assured that my first impression was correct, because it is very evident from this discussion that there is a disagreement among the Senators with respect to the fundamental philosophy of this thing of public spending and public relief, and, I may add, social progress.

I wonder if we who talk about the emergency justifying the early expenditures are not a little bit too enthusiastic in our assumption that the emergency is past, with 2,200,000 persons actually now on the relief rolls, and that admittedly being a small share of the total number eligible for such relief. If they were at one time concerned about human suffering, and if human beings still suffer, to my mind the emergency has not passed.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. If a billion and a half dollars, not reduced by any kind of an amendment or process, is not sufficient to take care of all the unemployed who are entitled to work relief, then if we should reduce the amount to $1,000,000,000 there would be still more cut off the roll; and therefore, if we reduce the amount by half a billion dollars, in that method we have half a billion dollars to reduce the deficit and go toward balancing the Budget. So if we are that far on our approach to a balance of the Budget, we have taken $500,000,000 from relief to balance the Budget; we have taken it from the needy of this country.

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly so.

Mr. President, I have also listened to a discourse upon the degeneration of America which has occurred during the past 4 years. We may have different ideas about what constitutes degeneration. I have heard the mayors of this country who have come to the Federal Treasury seeking succor for their people castigated as a degenerate group of municipal officers. I suppose it is only a profligate Government which has attempted to succor them and their citizenry in distress.

Mr. President, the kind of "degeneracy" which has increased the wealth of this Nation manyfold in the past 4 years is a desirable and not an objectionable "degeneracy", in my opinion; and if we can continue to "degenerate" in the next 4 years to the same degree that we have "degenerated"—using that term as it has been used here today—in the past 4 years, the national income will soon exceed eighty or ninety billion dollars, and we shall have far transcended any prosperity that we have ever before enjoyed.

Then the proponents of the amendment say that the national debt has reached dangerous proportions, and they propose to remove the threat to the national credit by imposing additional burdens upon the local governmental subdivisions of the Nation.

Mr. President, I live in a State which, by virtue of its constitution, is incapable of incurring bonded debt save to repel insurrection or for similar purposes; so the State of Florida could well say to the world, "We are financially perfect, because our State has no outstanding obligations." There was a time, however, in the recent history of our State when we preferred that those on the outside look at the condition of the State treasury and not at the condition of the several counties and municipalities constituting that body politic; and I, ignorant as I am of national finance, am unable to understand why, if the proponents of the amendment wish to take care of the same number of unemployed now being cared for, they profess to do it out of the pockets of the lesser political subdivisions and attribute the credit to the major subdivision, the Government of the United States. I do not see how the individual taxpayer can speak any less of his burden because the exaction comes from his local municipality rather than from his National Government. I cannot see how the public credit can be improved at the expense of the lesser political subdivisions. So, Mr. President, I cannot understand that any very great benefit is proposed to be conferred upon the taxpayers by the method of matching which is now proposed.

Then I have heard reference made to a balanced Budget. I suppose everybody is in favor of a balanced Budget. I desire to ask the Senator from North Carolina at what point he proposes to balance the Budget.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I hope to balance the Budget, if the Senator will permit me to say so—I think it is easily in sight if we will do our duty here now—by the first day of July 1938. All we have to do to balance the Budget is to reduce the national expenditures by between $600,000,000 and $700,000,000. The counties and the cities and the States ought to be perfectly willing to put up that amount of money this year for the unemployed to accomplish that purpose.

Mr. PEPPER. Perhaps I did not make myself clear. I was anxious to know the figures of income and outgo at which the Senator proposed to balance the Budget—at $4,000,000,000, at $5,000,000,000, 6 or 7 billion dollars, or at $1,000,000,000, which was the Budget in 1917?

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator will permit me, the President laid that proposal before us about 30 or 40 days ago, and stated that the Federal revenue had fallen short of his anticipation by about $400,000,000, and himself indicated that if we would cut the appropriations this year by about $600,000,000, the Budget would be balanced on the 30th of June 1938. That is the end of the next fiscal year, and I am driving in that direction. I think it is very reasonable.

The Senator asked me as to the expenditure. That balance of the Budget is predicated upon an income and an outgo of about $6,800,000,000 a year; and, Heaven knows, that is enough.

Mr. PEPPER. And the same President who made that suggestion, I may say, requested of the Congress the appropriation of one and a half billion dollars for the Works Progress Administration, with no matching provision such as that which is represented by this amendment.

Mr. BAILEY. And I may say, if the Senator will permit me, that when the President made that statement he made a request which was predicated upon disbalance of the Budget, notwithstanding repeated assurances both from him and from our party and from all concerned, including the Senator from Florida, that we intended to balance the Budget.

We are never going to balance the Budget by talking about it or promising it. The only way to balance the Budget is to cut down expenses.

Mr. PEPPER. No, Mr. President; that is not the only way to balance the Budget. The Budget may be balanced in one of two ways—by reducing the expenditures, or by increasing the amount of the public revenue, or both.

Mr. BAILEY. If the Senator will let me make one more remark——

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BAILEY. Let me say that we have increased the public revenue from $2,200,000,000 in 1932—it was very low then; the normal was about $3,100,000,000—until now the revenue is estimated at $5,500,000,000, and so far as taxation is concerned we have reached the point of diminishing returns. When the Senator says he wants more taxes, I say to him that more taxes will mean, under the circumstances, a general sales tax or a lowering of the exemptions of the income-tax payers in the lower brackets, and I should like to avoid that.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to point out to the Senator from Florida that the point of the diminishing returns upon income taxes is the point where gentlemen go out and incorporate yachts, and insurance companies in the various neighboring foreign countries, and when the President of the United States raises an objection to that, he is denounced from one end of the country to the other by the newspaper editorial writers as attempting to use a red herring. I have not seen anyone in this body who is opposing the President's program today upon either side of the Chamber who stood up and defended the position of the President in his effort to push further away this point of diminishing returns upon tax moneys available to the United States Government.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. While we are talking about diminishing returns, it might be observed that the point of the diminishing returns was reached long ago by the millions we are trying now to assist by the appropriation at present under consideration. I might also remark that the same President who in his message asked us to economize and reduce expenditures is the President who is asking us to appropriate a billion and a half dollars now to meet this responsibility of the National Government.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me, in response, to say that I do not think the Senator from Washington meant to suggest that I was in favor of evading taxes. Yet he calls attention to the fact that none of the Senators who are now in opposition to the one billion five hundred million, or are in favor of the 40-percent contribution by the States, took part in the debate. As I recall, the debate was very brief, and there was unanimous consent. Could we not have credit for the unanimous consent, along with others?

When it comes to the matter of the yachts, I read the President's message and the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury. I thought that the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury described the evasions, and my impression was that if the Secretary of the Treasury and the collectors of internal revenue had cared to collect those taxes they could have collected them. When a man incorporates a yacht clearly to reduce his taxable income, he has violated the law as it is, just as when a political party sells its year book or its convention proceedings at $10,000 a copy it has evaded the corrupt practices act. I question whether the yacht illustration is a good one; but I am going to agree that there are evasions, and I am going to say I am perfectly willing to go the limit to get for our Government every dollar of taxes justly due, and to put the stamp of disapproval upon all who evade.

With that statement, I say compare that with the simple fact that the highest estimate made is that if we stop all the gaps we will get less than $100,000,000, and $100,000,000 will not balance the Budget. We have to come down to the figures, and nothing less than a reduction of our present spending program $600,000,000 to $700,000,000 will balance the Budget.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I conceive of three objectives to be encompassed within the scope of national expenditures.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, before the Senator leaves the other point, I should like to interject the suggestion that the rise in the national income since 1933 has had more to do with the increase in revenue than has the increase in taxes.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the senior Senator from Wisconsin. Mr. President, I said that I regarded three objectives as within the scope of the national expenditures. The first is to carry on the ordinary and the regular activities of the Government. The second is to contribute, to the degree necessary, to maintain a fair standard of life of human beings in a Christian nation. The third one is the additional sum necessary to keep up the circulation of money which shall bring about a general prosperity by the fact that it does circulate in the various economic channels of the country. The income of the Government will have to be adequate to meet those three objectives.

I think we have some experience with respect to the antipathies between these philosophies of government. In the 4 years of the last Republican administration there was a total expenditure of $15,000,000,000. We all give just credit to the Republican administration and the Republican Party for having initiated a great many of the enterprises which have been of momentous benefit to the Nation since that time.

There was one essential difference between that administration and the present one, and that was in the adventurousness with which the Democratic administration ventured to expend the public money for the public benefit, because in 1933 it was a question as to whether or not it was not too dangerous for the public welfare to expend the colossal sums of money which were suggested at that time. The previous administration, I am willing to assume, comparable in its humanitarian impulses with us, thought such a course was not a wise public policy, and they did not adopt it except to a modified degree.

In the following 4 years a different administration, proceeding upon a different philosophy but cognizant of the same emergency, spent $26,705,000,000. What has happened? Our credit is better, there is greater prosperity, there is better business. No man can go the length and breadth of this country today in any city and in any hamlet but that he will see upon the faces of the citizenry the corroboration of the wisdom of the latter political philosophy.

I do not join my good friend the senior Senator from North Carolina in condemnation of the one who uttered the phrase, "Spending to save", because the best test under the sun, a pragmatic test of it actually working, has been illustrated to the world in the last 4 years of the Democratic administration.

The strange thing to me is what has happened between the 20th day of January and this day of June of the year 1937. On that cold day in January in company with my colleagues here, I stood on the front portico of this building and listened to the second inaugural address of the leader of the Democratic Party, and the President of the United States, and in that inaugural address there were used these words:

> Our progress out of the depression is obvious. But that is not all that you and I mean by the new order of things. Our pledge was not merely to do a patchwork job with second-hand materials. By using the new materials of social justice we have undertaken to erect on the old foundations a more enduring structure for the better use of future generations.

Then he says:

> Shall we pause now and turn our back upon the road that lies ahead? Shall we call this the promised land? Or, shall we continue on our way? For "each age is a dream that is dying, or one that is coming to birth."
>
> Many voices are heard as we face a great decision. Comfort says, "Tarry a while." Opportunism says, "This is a good spot." Timidity asks, "How difficult is the road ahead?"
>
> True, we have come far from the days of stagnation and despair. Vitality has been preserved. Courage and confidence has been restored. Mental and moral horizons have been extended.
>
> But our present gains were won under the pressure of more than ordinary circumstances. Advance became imperative under the goad of fear and suffering. The times were on the side of progress.
>
> To hold to progress today, however, is more difficult. Dulled conscience, irresponsibility, and ruthless self-interest already appear. Such symptoms of prosperity may become portents of disaster. Prosperity already tests the persistence of our progressive purpose.
>
> Let us ask again: Have we reached the goal of our vision of that 4th day of March 1933? Have we found our happy valley?

That speech, Mr. President, was made by one who had received the mandate of a greater number of votes than any leader of the Government in this Nation had ever received.

In conclusion of that address, the same President said this:

> I assume the solemn obligation of leading the American people forward along the road over which they have chosen to advance.

That, Mr. President, was in January of the present year, when he had behind him such a big majority that some of us who thought we were good Democrats, who thought we came of a good Democratic tradition, even had to move over on this side of the aisle to find a place to sit. With a party so colossal in its majority that the like of it had never been known, this Government launched itself upon its way in the early days of this Congress. Yet I have here before me, Mr. President, a list of the items of major legislation which have emanated from this body in a period of half a year, namely:

The neutrality bill prohibiting the shipment of war materials to Spain.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill providing for its extension until June 30, 1939—no new extension of the social frontier.

The first deficiency appropriation bill.

The reciprocal trade agreement resolution.

The retirement of Supreme Court Justices resolution.

The neutrality bill prohibiting shipment of war materials.

The bituminous coal bill—the one outstanding star in all of this period.

The Civilian Conservation Corps bill.

The various appropriation bills.

What I wish to know, Mr. President, is what has happened since January? Why is it that every time a bill to extend the social frontier comes before this body something happens to it, or it is lost in such controversy that its progress cannot be observed?

I want to know has the Executive who uttered those stirring words changed his mind? I, Mr. President, have seen no evidence of it.

I want to know whether the people whose impulse gave him that aspiration have changed their minds; and I find, Mr. President, no evidence of that.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I desire to call attention again, as I did the other day, to an additional fact right along that line, as to who has changed. The Senate in seven successive sessions has, by its assent to acts of Congress, made these appropriations for relief and work relief just as the President has asked for them. In six of those measures the Congress has reappropriated the unexpended balances. It has given these sums of money to our President virtually without let or hindrance. Why is it that after having made that record—a record in which every one of us who claims to be a Democrat expressed the greatest pride last year—we should now change our conduct, and say that we must hedge the President around with all kinds of limitations; that we must reduce the appropriation for these poor people, the care of whom, everyone realizes, is a national concern? Why is it that when we talk about economy we apply it only to these poor people whom it is the duty of the Government to protect and to take care of?

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator for the suggestion.

Mr. President, I do not know what may constitute this thing that we call idealism, but I do know that it is made of very fragile substance, because I know that in no period in history has it long been able to show consistent duration. I do not know what it is about the human heart that makes the idealistic impulse assert itself for so short a while. Then, only a little while later, there begins a diminution of its energies and a reduction in its strength, until finally it becomes scarcely an observable impulse. But in our national life I see this strange phenomenon too strongly every day to be deceived about its existence; and I suspect that even here in this body the old sentiments of conservatism, the old beliefs that back to the wilderness or even back in Egypt were the better course, are beginning to reassert themselves.

People who always had misgivings as to whether it was wise to throw our objectives, like Bruce's heart, ahead of us, are beginning to be again the victims of those early conceived ideas; and now when we talk about more housing—when we talk about more jobs—when we talk about conferring a greater purchasing power upon the people—when we talk about the improvement of the public health—now when we talk about the improvement of the social frontiers which we were committed to the expansion of either the timid or the fearful, the recalcitrant or the selfish, get in the way of the program, and they decide suddenly that it is better not to go ahead in that adventurous way.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Is it not possible that the idealism collapsed after the election returns came in, because certain persons forgot how they were elected?

Mr. PEPPER. The quality of idealism lasts for such a short time, Mr. President, that it is extremely difficult to make a diagnosis of the substance of its body.

Mr. President, I remember a Scriptural incident which is of some pertinence here, perhaps. The children of Israel were one time on the way to the Promised Land. They had come a long way. They had started away back in Egypt in bondage, in slavery, in servitude. The Divine Power which had looked upon them with His beneficent countenance raised up a leader for them and sent them out on their eventful journey. They made their way through the Red Sea; they vanquished their foes in the wilderness; they were fed with manna from on high; their thirst was quenched from the solid rock; and eventually they got to Kadesh-Barnea; there, just a little way ahead, was the Promised Land.

The same leader still guided their destiny. The same guide who had talked with their God was there with them, and over there just a short distance beyond the Jordan was the Promised Land. Everyone perhaps thought they would go immediately over. But, instead of that, they decided to send 12 spies to see what kind of land it was which they had so long sought. The spies returned, all 12 of them. They all said it was a rich land, flowing with milk and honey; but 10 of them said, "Look here: That land is inhabited by the sons of Anak, who are giants, and they live in the protection of walled cities, and we are but a feeble people, and we would better not adventure to such a land."

Mr. President, you would have thought that if ever there was a people whose confidence would be assured in the Divinity which had guided them thus far, it would have been this people. Yet, they hesitated, and the resultant judgment of retribution is too well known, Mr. President. All of them who were then 20 years of age or more left their bones to bleach in the wanderings of the wilderness. No one but old Joshua and Caleb, two of the faithful, ever got over into the Promised Land of all those stalwarts who went from Egypt to Kadesh-Barnea.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. PEPPER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BAILEY. Did it ever occur to the Senator that those spies who came back and told them how hard that country was to take did a right good job?

Mr. PEPPER. Let us see, Mr. President, what a good job they did. There was a great host which constituted the children of Israel. There must have been many warriors above the age of 20 years when they first reached Kadesh-Barnea. However, at the end of 40 years more of wandering in the wilderness they were all dead except Caleb and Joshua. Whether the results were good or not, the Senator will have to judge by the value which he fixes upon life here and the value which he attributes to the hereafter. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAILEY. But it took them more than 700 years before they did finally get over.

Mr. PEPPER. That was because they did not go ahead the first time. [Laughter.]

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. HUGHES. Does not the Senator think it would have been better to have stuck the first time and taken the chance?

Mr. PEPPER. Undoubtedly so.

Mr. President, I have here the statistics relating to the general income of the population of the United States which reveal that 10.4 percent of the population of this country make an annual income of less than $500. How much purchasing power is in that 10 percent of our population? These same figures reveal that 39.8 percent of our population annually make less than $1,000; that 96.4 percent make annually less than $5,000; that 98.7 percent make every year less than $10,000; that 0.05 percent of our total population each make over $100,000 a year, and receive 10.6 percent of the total national income. These figures relate to the general population.

If we were speaking alone of the farming population of the country I should have said that 30 percent of the farmers of the United States make annually less than $500 each; 63.4 percent make less than $1,000 each; 96.1 percent less than $3,000 each; 99.94 percent less than $10,000 each; and 99.99 percent less than $15,000 each.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to invite the attention of the Senator to the fact that during the period of this safe prosperity, when we had the protecting arm of a balanced Budget about the country, during the period between 1926 and 1929, the average income per family of five of those engaged in agriculture in the United States was $593, just a little less than $50 per month per family of five during the period of normalcy to which some want to return.

Mr. PEPPER. Where is the purchasing power in that group?

I may add also, Mr. President, that the statistics show that over 500,000 individual farmers operate over 650,000 farms, covering 100,000,000 acres of land which are too poor to yield a decent livelihood.

I might also have added that 42 percent of the total farm population is tenantry and that from 1930 to 1935 there was an increase of over 200,000 in the number of tenant farmers in the United States.

In the realm of education I learn that in 1933 there were a total of 2,160,000 handicapped or underprivileged children in the Nation while in that same time only 167,000 of such children were enjoying any kind of special education to alleviate their handicaps in the public schools or any other schools of the country; that in 1933 there were 359,000 patients in hospitals for mental diseases, and 102,000 patients in feeble-minded and epileptic institutions under the several States.

I learn also that it would require 1,300,000 houses to be built every year for the next 10 years to bring housing conditions in the United States up to the minimum standard of 1930.

Mr. President, in this country, where the Government rests upon the intelligence of the citizenry which supports it, there are a total of 3,670,000 illiterates, and a population of college graduates of only a little more than 2,000,000, or 2.93 percent of this population.

Only 32,000,000 have had any elementary school education at all, 14,000,000 have graduated from the elementary schools, and only 5,000,000 have received a high-school education.

I might add further that in the growing generation which is about to become the responsible citizenry of this Nation, now between the ages of 16 and 24 years, there are 20,100,000, and out of that number of 20,100,000 there are 4,700,000 out of school unemployed and seeking vainly for jobs. These figures were given to me by the Superintendent of Education for the United States here in Washington.

May I refer to one more walled city in the promised land? There are 700,000 crimes committed annually by people under 21 years of age in the United States. There are 4,300,000 criminals here. A felony is committed every 24 seconds; 36 lives are taken by homicide every day; 1 murder is committed every 40 minutes.

Those who are interested in economy might observe that the estimated cost of crime in the United States and all of its political subdivisions is $15,000,000,000 every year. Yet some castigate those who "spend to save" not only the lives but the money of the Nation.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. I am sure the Senator has studied the subject enough to be able to confirm my own view that most of these criminals come from the slums of the country.

Mr. PEPPER. They do, indeed.

Mr. WAGNER. That is why I am interested in the building program.

Mr. PEPPER. Indeed so. I thank the Senator. Further, there are 46,292 inmates of county and city prisons; 137,997 inmates of State and Federal prisons; 30,496 in attendance in institutions for juvenile delinquency.

One more fact, Mr. President, in the realm of public health: I realize there are many who say we cannot afford to spend for these services, as they say we cannot afford to spend to create work for those who are unemployed.

What would they say if they knew that in the year 1933 at least 250,000 deaths in the United States were attributable to preventable diseases? What would those 250,000 lives mean as producing economic units to the welfare and the prosperity and the wealth of the United States?

That is a class that is worth "spending to save", in my humble opinion.

Also, Mr. President, we are told that last year 120,000 babies died, when it is estimated that by adequate medical care 60,000 of those little lives could have been saved; that 74,000 persons died from tuberculosis, when it is estimated that 37,000 of those lives could have been saved by adequate hospitalization and care.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I recall that a few years ago, when we were trying to put through Congress legislation to assist in taking care of the lives not only of these babies but of the mothers of these babies, opposition to such an appropriation arose in both Houses of Congress on the ground that it was none of the Government's business to go into the process of lifesaving.

Mr. PEPPER. That is not one of the State's rights for which I desire to put myself on record.

Mr. President, it is a singular thing, but I do not believe that from the beginning of history down to the present time there has ever been a social reform proposed, there has ever been the expansion of a social frontier suggested, there has ever been the mastery of a natural resource which might be applied to the public benefit anywhere proposed that there have not been those who raised upon the horizon the red flag of danger that "It has to be paid for", and "We cannot afford it", and "If we do it, it will disrupt and destroy the fiscal structure."

Mr. President, I do not take my liberalism, which I am proud to profess, as a doctrine which is just one for which I happen to have a fantastic affection. I believe that liberalism in politics and political philosophy is what the maxim "Honesty is the best policy" is in the realm of business morals. I believe that Franklin D. Roosevelt and the party that is dominant in this assembly have given the best evidence the world has ever seen that liberalism as a practical philosophy not only confers benefit upon human beings but is better for everybody concerned in the most practical way. Else, Mr. President, we have been the most outrageously unsuccessful administration in the history of this Nation.

What I am alarmed about, what I am astonished about, Mr. President, is that the patient takes the cure that has brought him to health again, and, as Shakespeare describes the fellow who gets up to a certain rung on the ladder of personal success, he then, "looking out into the clouds, scorns the base degrees by which he did ascend." What I am troubled about is whether or not the Democratic Party is the party in whose breast the pulses of liberalism still beat in this Nation.

I do not know but that it is a good thing to have two political parties. I do not condemn the Senators on this side of the Chamber for embracing a philosophy of conservatism if they believe it to be for the best interests of the country; but I want my party to grow greater by the same substance upon which it has grown thus far, and I want the President who gave that challenge to the people of this Nation and to the world to be able to say with assurance that when he flings his objectives ahead of him, he moves forward to their attainment not alone so far as my party in the Senate of the United States is concerned.

So, Mr. President, I believe that those who have their fears about this expenditure are in the same category with those who have had their fears about other expenditures that have made it possible for us to be here as a peaceable assembly this day. You know, singularly enough, I do not suppose anybody ever suggested a reduction in working hours but that most persons engaged in manufacturing, in the control of dominant business, honestly in their hearts thought the reduction of those hours would wreck the country and the industry. I do not believe there was ever a suggestion for an increase in the wage of those who labored in those institutions but that those who managed them honestly believed that such increase would bring chaos and turmoil to a very noble and profitable industry.

Yet, under the impulse of the social conscience as it has manifested itself through the legislative bodies of the several States and the Nation, we have gotten where we are today, transgressing every red flag of danger that has been held up by every honest reactionary in the history of the politics of this country; and we got here, Mr. President, by the employment of the humanitarian philosophy manifest in all social progress. As for me and my house, I do not like to wander in the "wilderness", and I shall not return to the bondage of Egypt.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Clara B. Rosser to be postmaster at Broadway, N. C.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Edmund P. Johnson to be postmaster at Rosholt, Wis.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That concludes the Executive Calendar.

RECESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate stand in recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, June 18, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 17 (legislative day of June 15), 1937

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

George Gregg Fuller, of California, to be a Foreign Service officer of class 5, a consul, and a secretary in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America.

John W. Bailey, Jr., of Texas, to be a Foreign Service officer of class 5, a consul, and a secretary in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America.

FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

John W. Scott, of Indiana, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission for the term expiring June 22, 1942, vice Herbert J. Drane.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Thomas C. Trimble, Jr., of Arkansas, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Arkansas, vice John E. Martineau, deceased.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

Saul Haas, of Seattle, Wash., to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 30, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash. (Reappointment.)

Joseph H. Lyons, of Mobile, Ala., to be collector of customs for customs collection district no. 19, with headquarters at Mobile, Ala. (Reappointment.)

Arthur A. Quinn, of New Jersey, to be comptroller of customs in customs collection district no. 10, with headquarters at New York, N. Y. (Reappointment.)

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Passed Assistant Dental Surgeon Allen M. Perkins to be dental surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from May 29, 1937.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

Glenn William Moore, of South Dakota, to be aide (with relative rank of ensign in the Navy), vice J. C. Tison, Jr., promoted.

James Chisolm Tison, Jr., of South Carolina, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer (with relative rank of lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy) vice F. G. Johnson, promoted.

Clarence Robert Reed, of North Dakota, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer (with relative rank of lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy), vice M. H. Reese, deceased.

Kenneth Surrell Ulm, of Massachusetts, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer (with relative rank of lieutenant, junior grade, in the Navy), vice P. A. Smith, promoted.

Frank Gerard Johnson, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer (with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy), vice R. D. Horne, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

MEDICAL CORPS

To be first lieutenants with rank from date of appointment

First Lt. Frank Rodney Drake, Medical Corps Reserve.

First Lt. Joseph Wallace Batch, Medical Corps Reserve.

CHAPLAIN

To be chaplain with the rank of first lieutenant

Chaplain (First Lt.) Ralph Warren D. Brown, Chaplains' Reserve, with rank from date of appointment.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

The following-named first lieutenants to be captains in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of July 1936:

Francis J. Cunningham

Bernard H. Kirk

Richard P. Ross, Jr.

First Lt. James V. Bradley, Jr., to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of September 1936.

First Lt. Zebulon C. Hopkins to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of November 1936.

First Lt. Robert H. Williams to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of January 1937.

First Lt. Randall M. Victory to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 3d day of January 1937.

First Lt. James R. Hester to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of March 1937.

Second Lt. Charles A. Miller to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 2d day of March 1937.

The following-named meritorious noncommissioned officers to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, revocable for 2 years, from the 1st day of July 1937:

Sgt. Charles R. Boyer

Corp. Brooke H. Hatch

Sgt. Clair W. Shisler

Corp. Herbert H. Townsend

Corp. Alfred T. Greene

Corp. Virgil E. Harris

Sgt. Gregory J. Weissenberger

The following-named citizens to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, revocable for 2 years, from the 1st day of July 1937:

Howard F. Bowker, Jr., a citizen of California.

Gregory Boyington, a citizen of Washington.

Fred R. Emerson, a citizen of Washington.

Freeman W. Williams, a citizen of Georgia.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 17 (legislative day of June 15), 1937

POSTMASTERS

NORTH CAROLINA

Clara B. Rosser, Broadway.

WISCONSIN

Edmund P. Johnson, Rosholt.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, infinite in power and love, dwelling in light unapproachable, hear our humble prayer. Help us to nourish good thoughts, forward the generous impulse, follow the upward-seeking desire, and starve the roots of bitterness and resentment. We pray Thee to let the words of a righteous and redeeming God sound forth in all our land. Bright with the morning glow of eternity, may they ever be a lamp unto our feet and a guide unto our path. Let them echo and resound where anger sweeps through the multitude. Give them irresistible appeal where men are convulsed in the throes of perilous conflict.

Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding. The gain is better than silver and the profit more than gold. Length of days are in her right hand, and in her left hand are riches and honor.

In the Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 17. Concurrent resolution authorizing the appointment of a committee to represent the Congress of the United States at the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare.

The message also announced that on June 16, 1937, the Senate adopted the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 146

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. WILLIAM P. CONNERY, JR., late a Representative from the State of Massachusetts.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the President pro tempore to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Senate do now take a recess until 12 o'clock meridian tomorrow.

INTERFERENCE WITH UNITED STATES MAIL SERVICE IN STRIKE AREAS

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution, House Resolution 233, with an adverse report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the House of Representatives, at the earliest practicable moment, all facts and information as to whether or not the United States Postal Service has refused to make delivery to addresses in certain mills or industrial plants at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren, Ohio, or elsewhere in the State, of any type or class of mail that complies with the established provisions of eligibility;

Whether or not any restrictions have been placed upon mail service in the aforesaid area by reason of strike conditions, and if so, by whose orders and by what legal authority;

And whether or not any stoppage of or interference with the United States mail service on the part of either companies or labor groups has been encountered or permitted in said area.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report may be read for the information of the House.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEAD. I shall be very glad to yield after the report is read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, to whom was referred the resolution (H. Res. 233) requesting information from the Postmaster General, having had the same under consideration, report it back to the House and recommend that the resolution do not pass.

The action of the committee is based upon the following informative letter from the Post Office Department:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., June 14, 1937.

Hon. JAMES M. MEAD,
Chairman, Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. MEAD: I have your letter of the 8th instant, transmitting a copy of privileged resolution (H. Res. 233), upon which you state report must be made to the House within 7 days from June 7, the date of the introduction of the resolution. The resolution calls for information respecting the mail service at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren, Ohio, and elsewhere in the State.

Respecting the first paragraph of the resolution, I wish to state that the Postal Service has not refused to make delivery to the addresses mentioned of any type or class of mail complying with the established conditions as to mailability, with the exception that at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren, Ohio, as I have been informed and believe to be the case, the postmasters and/or their assistants declined to accept parcels of a character not hitherto mailed to the addressee industrial plants, such parcels containing food and clothing, upon the ground that while they could accept the parcels, they would be in no better position to effect delivery within the plants involved than the private carriers previously performing this service without endangering the person of the postal employees assigned to the duty of making delivery and the safety of the mail involved, some of which was offered for registration involving payment of indemnity for its damage or loss.

Further responding to the first paragraph of the resolution, as well as to the second paragraph of the resolution, you are advised that when, several days later, these facts were ascertained by the Post Office Department in Washington, the First Assistant Postmaster General, to whom by regulation has been delegated by the Postmaster General the supervision of the delivery of mail in cities, approved the action taken by the postal officials at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren, Ohio, and directed that such course be continued unless and until further advised, with the purpose in mind of maintaining at least the usual and normal service and meantime ascertaining whether the types of mail involved could, if accepted, be delivered, to the extent of postal transportation equipment available, without grave danger to the postal employees engaged upon the service and to the safety of the mail involved, as apprehended by those postal representatives on the ground. The legal basis of this course of action in section 369 of title 5 of the United States Code, section 22 of title 5 of the United States Code, and section 492 of title 39 of the United States Code.

As to the third paragraph of the resolution, you are advised that, as I have been informed and believe, while there has been encountered by local postal officers objection upon the part of labor groups to the delivery by the Postal Service of food and other items of merchandise to the plants at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren, Ohio, our normal mail service has been maintained. There may have been a few instances where mails were delayed, but ultimately deliveries were effected to the plants without any violence. The Chief Inspector will make an appropriate investigation of all interference with the delivery of the mails and submit to the proper representative of the Department of Justice all facts connected therewith for suitable action.

There is attached hereto a copy of a statement made by me to the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads last Friday.

Very truly yours,

W. W. HOWES,
Acting Postmaster General.

JUNE 10, 1937.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE: In response to your letter of June 10, with which you transmitted Senate Resolution 140, the Department is glad to have an opportunity to present to you all of the available facts relative to the handling of the mail at the post offices where it is alleged that there is some interference due to industrial strife.

The Department has been advised that strikes are in progress at Youngstown, Warren, Niles, Cleveland, Canton, and Massillon, Ohio, but the only reports of alleged interference or complaints because postmasters have refused to perform an abnormal service involve the offices of Niles, Youngstown, and Warren, Ohio.

At Niles, Ohio, the Republic Steel Corporation is located three-fourths of a mile from the post office, outside the city limits, and the service afforded to this plant has been by mounted carrier (vehicle with limited capacity), two trips daily. Under the normal service the morning delivery consists of first-, second-, and third-class mail, averaging from 30 to 50 pieces, delivered to the office near the entrance gate. The afternoon delivery is made to a storeroom inside the plant, one-fourth mile from the entrance, consisting of all classes of mail, averaging approximately 2 parcels and 20 pieces of other mail matter. This delivery service has been in effect only since April 1, 1937. Prior to that time, parcels only were delivered once daily.

At Youngstown, Ohio, the Republic Steel Corporation plant is located one-fourth mile from the post office, and there are two plants of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., one located inside the city limits about 2 miles from the post office and one in Campbell, Ohio, 3 miles from the Youngstown post office. No delivery service was given to these two latter plants prior to the strike, and the mail has been delivered to their downtown office. This service has been continued without any interruption. The Republic Steel Corporation have been receiving their first-class mail through a post-office box, and their parcels, consisting of approximately three sacks daily, have been delivered to the plant by post-office truck.

At Warren, Ohio, the Republic Steel Corporation plant is located outside the city limits about one-half mile from the post office, and two deliveries daily have been made to the plant by carrier with a vehicle of limited capacity. The normal amount of mail delivered to this plant has averaged approximately 700 letters and 3 sacks of parcel post daily.

It is our understanding that following the calling of the strikes the plants were picketed and it has been impossible for private carriers to transport food and clothing into the plant without violence. When this could not be accomplished by the private carriers, the local postal service was requested to accept large shipments of food and clothing for transportation by mail into the plants, which service could not be accomplished without adding greatly to our equipment and personnel and without endangering the lives of postal employees. The postmasters advised the company officials and their agents that they had neither the facilities nor personnel for performing this abnormal function, which had not been a previous function of the Postal Service, and that to attempt to deliver food and clothing into the plants would involve the safety of the mail and endanger the person of the postal employees assigned to the delivery duties.

When these facts and conditions were reported to the Department, we approved the action taken by our postal officials at Youngstown, Niles, and Warren and directed that their course be continued unless and until further advised, with the purpose in mind of maintaining at least the usual and normal service and in the meantime we would ascertain whether the types of mail involved could, if accepted, be delivered with our normal postal facilities and without grave danger to postal employees engaged upon this work.

The Department has been advised that we would be called upon to deliver large truck loads of mail containing food and clothing to these plants daily, which we are not prepared to do with our normal transportation facilities or personnel at the offices involved.

The legal basis of this course of action is section 369 of title 5 of the United States Code, section 22 of title 5 of the United States Code, and section 492 of title 39 of the United States Code.

While the strikers have threatened violence in the case of any attempt to carry food and clothing into the plants, the Department has received only one report of any attempt to interfere with our normal mail service. The postmasters have advised that there would be violence in the event the Postal Service were enlarged to carry these large shipments of food and clothing into the plants and feel that any attempt so to do would result in grave danger to the postal employees engaged upon such delivery service. It is reported that at Youngstown, Ohio, a slight delay was occasioned by the strikers stopping a mail truck, but the mail was ultimately delivered into the plant without any violence. All postmasters have reported that there has been no interference with our normal mail service, which is being continued daily.

We wish to assure this committee that no official of the Post Office Department has discussed the Postal Service with any official or member of any of the union organizations. No agreements of any kind have been entered into by any representative of the Post Office Department with any member of the labor organizations concerning the acceptance or delivery of mail matter. The postmasters at all of the offices involved state that neither they nor any of their employees have entered into any such agreements, but, to the contrary, they have insisted that they will tolerate no interference with our mail service.

There has been some newspaper reports to the effect that some members of the union organizations have been permitted to examine mail matter destined to these plants. The postmasters at all of the offices involved have stated that on no occasion and under no circumstance has anybody outside the Postal Service been permitted to examine any mail matter. They positively state that there is not a single instance in which any person, except duly authorized postal employees, has been permitted to examine, handle, or even inspect the address of any mail matter whatever.

I can assure you that the Department would not tolerate any such practice under any circumstances.

The reports from our officials in the field up to date indicate that our normal mail service is being performed without any interference.

W. W. HOWES,
Acting Postmaster General.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I believe that the purpose of the resolution has been carried out, that the committee and the Department have attempted diligently to supply the required information, and I am quite sure that we are not in controversy with either the minority members of our committee or the sponsor of the resolution.

I yield to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARLSON].

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, under reservation of objection, the House is now receiving from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads House Resolution 233, which called for facts and information dealing with the nondelivery of mail. During recent days newspaper stories have been carried, editorials have been written, photographs have been printed in regard to the nondelivery of mail at certain points mentioned in the resolution. While the distinguished chairman of the committee [Mr. MEAD] returns the resolution with an adverse report which complys with the request, I say it must not end here. I do not believe that the country or the Congress should at this time be satisfied with merely receiving an adverse report from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. This is a serious matter.

Charges have been made that the United States mails have been censored by private individuals or by corporations. Charges have been made that mail trucks and mail deliveries have been interfered with, and it seems to me that the least the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads could do and should do would be to bring in a resolution demanding a complete investigation.

The interference of the United States mails by a private citizen or a corporation is a serious charge. The mails must be dispatched without fear or favor. In these instances it is charged that strikers censored mail and obstructed regular mail traffic, but that is not the real issue, as I can readily foresee instances where the corporation or plant owners would be desirous of doing the same thing. It must not be allowed.

The Revised Statutes of the United States provide:

> Whoever shall knowingly and willfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail, or any carriage, horse, driver, or carrier, or car, or steamboat, or other conveyance or vessel carrying the same, shall be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than 6 months or both.

Quoting from the Postmaster General's letter I find these words, "Performing this service without endangering the person of the postal employee", which calls to my mind in 1934 the Department, after canceling air-mail contracts, forced Army pilots to carry the mail regardless of equipment or hazards, and that 8 pilots—12 persons in all—gave their lives in order that the mails "must go through." It is a matter of pride, I think, to every American citizen to realize the reality of the slogan, "The mails must go through." Let us keep it that way.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, my interest in mail interference rests entirely upon my belief in the principle of supremacy of the law and that this principle should never be permitted to be placed in jeopardy.

My resolution was not based upon accusation. It asked the Post Office Department to provide Congress with all facts and information concerning the mail problem. The Post Office Department has complied to the extent that they have furnished a reply, but I still contend they have not furnished all the facts and information in this connection. There is considerable concrete evidence available showing direct contradictions to the answers given by the Post Office Department in this reply. However, the most substantial information can be developed through committee action.

I first broached this subject on Tuesday, June 3. Subsequently other action developed along similar but not exactly the same lines. A Senate committee has authorized an investigation in this direction.

As Members of the House of Representatives, I think we could perform a sorely needed duty if we authorized the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of this House to investigate the merits of present claims relating to mail interference, with the purpose in view to establishing permanent policy in actual law, so there can be no doubt about the functions of the United States mail service, and so that this question is not left to discretionary action.

AGREE TO PROBE—PERMANENT POLICY IN ACTUAL LAW

In a conversation yesterday with the distinguished chairman of the Post Office and Post Roads Committee, he told me he would be willing to see his committee undertake an investigation for the purpose of establishing permanent policy in actual law. If the committee is willing to adopt their own resolution, it will be perfectly agreeable with me; otherwise I will be glad to propose it. I have confidence in the Post Office and Post Roads Committee of the House. I believe they could do as good a job as any Senate committee and maybe a little better. I express the hope that this task will be undertaken by them.

As soon as action is taken on this report I shall ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute, in which request I hope the House will indulge me.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MEAD. I yield.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman know of any other instance under average conditions where the Post Office Department has refused to receive parcels of this kind?

Mr. MEAD. Unofficial word has reached me that unusual or abnormal mails have been refused under similar circumstances, but perhaps under circumstances slightly different than the present circumstances. Whether or not it pertained to the mailing of groceries and provisions to sit-down strikers or to strikebreakers I am not in a position to state, but I may say to the distinguished minority leader that it has been the policy of the Department under the authority of law to refuse abnormal unusual mailings when their acceptance would endanger the personnel of the Department.

Mr. SNELL. It is currently reported that during the sit-down strikes the Department received and delivered similar packages to the sit-down strikers. Can the gentleman tell me whether or not that is correct?

Mr. MEAD. Regular mail and not unusual mail was delivered to the strikers, if I am correctly informed.

Mr. SNELL. This would not be called unusual mail, would it, or out of the usual routine of the post-office business?

Mr. MEAD. Yes; these mailings would require more equipment than the Postal Service in the communities involved could furnish, because it would require the delivery of large supplies of groceries, provisions, and clothing.

Mr. SNELL. Would the gentleman state to the House they did not receive and deliver food to the sit-down strikers?

Mr. MEAD. There was no complaint of that character made to our committee.

Mr. SNELL. I am asking the gentleman a question whether they did or not?

Mr. MEAD. To the best of my knowledge they did not deliver unusual mail. I merely bring up the point that Members of Congress representing those districts and diligently pursuing their legislative prerogatives, never brought a matter of this nature to the attention of the House or our committee.

Mr. SNELL. That may be so. I would not say positively, and I do not know, but the rumor is that practically the same kind of packages that were offered and refused by the Post Office Department at this time were accepted and delivered to sit-down strikers.

Mr. MEAD. The information which I have received from the Department is to the effect that they did not deliver unusual mailings to the sit-down strikers.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. I know the gentleman wants to be very fair, and I have a great deal of confidence in him. I hope he will head this investigation. But I would like to call the attention of the gentleman to a letter which appeared in the Chicago Tribune of June 5 wherein it was stated that the Post Office Department had delivered to the sit-down strikers at the Fan Steel plant in North Chicago, groceries, periodicals, newspapers, medicines, and in fact everything that was necessary in order for the sit-downers to maintain themselves in that plant.

Mr. MEAD. While I do not question the accuracy of either the newspaper or the editorial, I do not believe everything I read in the newspapers.

Mr. KNUTSON. I am calling this to the attention of the gentleman so that he will make special inquiry about this particular statement when the time comes to investigate the action of the Post Office Department.

Mr. MEAD. I may say to the gentleman I am in favor of the determination of a definite policy in matters of this nature, both as it pertains to sit-down strikes and to strike-bound plants. If the House will be good enough to authorize and empower our committee to proceed we will undertake the task as the gentleman suggests.

Mr. KNUTSON. I am sure that the gentleman is in favor of treating all alike.

Mr. MEAD. I am in favor of justice and fair dealing, having in mind the Postal Service, its traditional policy, and those who are parties to industrial conflicts.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEAD. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARLSON], a member of the committee, and the gentleman who introduced the resolution, have both spoken very favorably of the chairman of the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, and I think the House as a whole believes that JIM MEAD is one of the finest and most conscientious fellows in the House of Representatives. [Applause.] But I understand that gentlemen will ask that this resolution be tabled. How soon is this fine gentleman that we look forward to to make the investigation going to bring in the resolution to see that proper action is taken, and immediately taken?

Mr. MEAD. I would hesitate to do it immediately unless I heard favorably from my distinguished colleague, whose concern over the condition of our Treasury I deeply appreciate, relative to an item of expense that might be involved in the resolution.

Mr. RICH. When it comes to doing the right thing, and a thing that will perpetuate our form of government, such as maintaining the integrity of our postal laws, I am for any expense, but when it comes to spending money foolishly like the present Congress has been doing, then I object to money being spent, and further increasing our national debt, placing a millstone about the necks of our children and children yet unborn.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be laid on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

SUPREMACY OR DEFIANCE OF LAW

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the request for information from the Post Office Department contained in House Resolution 233 is one thing. Beyond that, another vital question is presented to Congress by reason of the strike conditions throughout the United States today. Without attempting to prejudge the guilt or responsibility of any elements in these disputes, we must truthfully recognize that a form of civil war exists and is spreading its terror throughout the citizenship of the country. The conditions have reached sufficient proportions to command the deep interest and concern of every thoughtful citizen. They have reached the place where Congress and every person in high office, I believe, is obligated to take whatever steps may be necessary to preserve the supremacy of law and order.

Beyond the question of mail interference, these knock-down-drag-out strike battles suggest an additional course of action. The action I refer to is that a special committee of five Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker, three from the majority political party and two from the minority political party, should be authorized and directed to make full and complete investigation of lawlessness incident to strike conditions, as a means of submitting to Congress recommendations whereby the loopholes which now permit mass violations, defiance, and evasions of existing laws, can be plugged.

GUNS AND GAS; BOMBS AND BRUTALITY

If in the face of existing laws one side or the other can resort to the use of guns and gas, bombs, and brutality in labor disputes, then is not it obvious that Congress has a duty to perform by strengthening the laws relating to labor strife or by tightening the penalties against those public officials who sacrifice law and order for votes?

The sword of justice is a two-edge blade. It must work both ways. Brutality, coercion, threats, and force on both sides should be outlawed in terms strong enough to effectively prevent armed attacks and actions of force that deprive citizens of their rights and endanger life and property, regardless of whether these things come through weaknesses in present legislation or through weakness of public officials who fail to do their duty.

It seems to me there is a very genuine possibility and desirability of making use of weapons of destruction by agents of either industrial concerns or labor groups, or by any group other than duly constituted police officials, a Federal offense punishable by Federal courts, especially when the acts interfere with the free flow of products in interstate commerce.

A man's right to work and the protection afforded by law apparently need clarification. Whether labor contracts are going to be binding to both parties in agreements and provide the same punishments for violations on either side is another question that apparently needs clarification.

MOST MENACING PROBLEM OF ALL—SHALL WE IGNORE IT?

Will both sides of labor disputes be required to meet the same terms of responsibility? Must labor battles continue to paralyze communities? Must communities face bullets and bombs as a result of these economic disturbances? These and many other extremely vital questions are involved. They need special study. They need special action right at this moment.

In the interest of the Nation's welfare, let us not continue to legislate about everything else under the sun while this most dire problem of all continues unheeded, along its path of destruction, and while high officials of the United States Government sit idly by. Let us at least try to meet the challenge of the need of this hour in the protection of the law and order that is the sacred right of the American people.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ALESHIRE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL—1938

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5996) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection, and the Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. COLLINS, Mr. CALDWELL, Mr. HIGGINS, Mr. STARNES, and Mr. ENGEL.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a very brief but a very timely statement by the chairman of the Committee on Roads, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTWRIGHT] on the subject Do the States Want Federal Aid for Roads?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein copy of certain tables I am sending to Edward McGrady, of the international labor conference, and others, as well as copy of a letter to Madam Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a brief article written by Mrs. Florence Boeckel on a bill I have introduced.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a communication written by George A. Hormel to the Members of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PROCEDURE IN TRIALS INVOLVING JUDICIAL BEHAVIOR

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file the minority view of the members of the Judiciary Committee on the bill (H. R. 2271) to provide for trials of and judgments upon the issue of good behavior in the case of certain Federal judges, which has been considered by that committee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

(Mr. CARLSON and Mr. DITTER asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.)

THE PERNICIOUS SUGAR LOBBY

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Mr. Speaker, the majority report of the Senate Judiciary Committee on the President's Court proposal was so utterly devastating to every argument or excuse advanced in favor of it that it must have had the same devastating effect upon the Presidential state of mind. Nothing else can account for the abandon and asperity with which he discussed a number of different topics during his press conference on Tuesday.

In discussing what he was pleased to call "the most pernicious lobby I have ever seen", he struck blindly and angrily at those who have the temerity to oppose him in his unwise and un-American sugar policy, which has as its objective the ultimate destruction of the domestic beet- and cane-sugar industry. His words and actions were reminiscent of the day 2 years ago when, in discussing the Supreme Court decision in the Schechter case, when the N. R. A. was declared unconstitutional by the unanimous vote of the Court, he declared in rage that the "decision had thrown us back into the 'horse and buggy' days."

When asked to name the lobbyists he referred to, he told the reporters that "you know them as well as I." When asked what they were doing, he said they were being "pernicious", and, upon being further pressed, he elaborated by saying they were "pernickety."

Now, let us examine the facts. Every Member of the House knows that the subcommittee which considered the bill is composed of gentlemen of intelligence, ability, and integrity, who have been here long enough to learn the ways of lobbyists and the weight that can safely be given their arguments. These Congressmen came here with a proper knowledge of and regard for the welfare of American agriculture, and still retain that knowledge and regard. Their desire to accomplish something really worth while for this sorely beset portion of our population is as keen as that of the President or of anyone else could possibly be.

The statement that "pernicious lobbyists" are holding up the enactment of proper sugar legislation is a studied reflection upon the members of this subcommittee and upon every member of the House Agricultural Committee, and is typical of the methods used by this administration in forcing through Congress legislation, the wisdom of which the Members thereof are in serious doubt.

The President would have the public believe that these Members, every one of whom deservedly has the confidence and esteem of his colleagues, are amenable to the wishes of some vicious element of our society whom he is pleased to call "pernicious lobbyists." There is something sinister in the use of that appellation. No one is more gifted in finely turned phrases expressing the most delicate shades of meaning and implications than he. He knows what the effect of his statement ordinarily would be upon those back home not properly informed. He hopes through this method to scourge the recalcitrants into line for anything he may ask, regardless of what it may be.

But reverting again to lobbyists. Why did Mr. Roosevelt decline to name these conspirators against the public good? What held his hand? What closed his lips when it came to a question of naming names. Why did not he particularize and name the influences which were keeping the Congress from enacting this legislation? Was it because from every beet- and cane-sugar growing section of the country there were here the representatives of the American farmers urging American legislation on this subject?

Yes, Mr. Speaker, why did he not tell the people the whole truth about the situation in connection with this proposed legislation? Why did he not let them know that the committee, as it alone should have done, has prepared a bill, drawn in the interests of the American farmers and manufacturers instead of in the interests of the farmers and manufacturers of other countries? Why did he not say in that interview with the press that the committee bill would long ago have been reported to and passed by the House of Representatives had it not been for the violent opposition that he, through his Cabinet, interposed to prevent this body from performing its constitutional function?

Why did he not say that his Secretary of State and his Secretary of Agriculture, who seem far more concerned about the development of the sugar industry in foreign lands than they are about the American industry; that his Secretary of the Interior, who expresses great interest in the development of the sugar industry in Puerto Rico and Hawaii and little interest in that of continental United States; and that his Secretary of War, whose heart's desire seems to be the extension of Philippine sugar industry at the expense of the American farmer, were all thrust into the picture to prevent the Congress from writing legislation which, in the opinion of the Congress, should be upon the statute books?

Why did he not disclose that every power at his command had been brought to bear without avail, and that those splendid members of the Agricultural Committee are still standing steadfast and determined to write into the law provisions that will perpetuate our great sugar industry, not destroy it?

Why did not he call attention to the fact that extensive hearings were held on the bill and that during these hearings those upon whom he would put the brand of lobbyists came before the committee and there submitted their opinions for the public record and themselves to the cross-examination of the committee members? Why was nothing said about the good American farmers and their representatives who appeared there, were heard, and cross-examined?

And another thing, Mr. Speaker, why was it that the statements and arguments of these Cabinet officers and the statements and arguments of the representatives of the sugar-control section of the Agricultural Department and the reasons for their opposition appear nowhere in the recorded hearings? Why were their objections not registered there?

Why was it that those who did appear before the committee were not willing to say anything "for the record", but appeared only in executive session?

Just who are these "pernicious", these "pernickety" lobbyists who are holding up this legislation? Are they the mysterious, unnamed individuals whom the President would have the people believe are responsible, or is it the powerful lobby composed of his Cabinet officers and bureaucrats who declined to submit their opinions to the public record, who, with him, are striving to prevent the Congress from doing its duty?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

GORGAS MEMORIAL PRIZE CONTEST

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday last the President of the United States presented to a student from my district the annual $500 Gorgas memorial prize for the best essay on preventive medicine. This is the third time a high-school student from my district, out of 100,000 participants in the last eight contests, has won this prize.

The Gorgas Memorial Institute of Tropical and Preventive Medicine was incorporated, I am advised, for the purpose of perpetuating the memory of Maj. Gen. William Crawford Gorgas, a native of Alabama, whose great work in the field of preventive medicine, particularly through mosquito control, the institute seeks to perpetuate.

Each year for the past 8 years, with one exception, the institute has conducted an essay contest among the high-school boys and girls of the Nation, awarding prizes for the best annual essays on mosquito control and preventive medicine. The first national prize of $500 and $200 travel allowance is made possible through the generosity of Henry L. Doherty, of New York.

It is, therefore, Mr. Speaker, of great gratification to me, as the Representative of the Fifth Wisconsin District, that out of eight competitions high school students of my district have carried off first honors in this contest three times. This outstanding record in a competition among thousands of students all over the country is not only a great tribute to the boys and the girl who have won these contests but to the parents and the school system of the city which I have the honor to represent in this body. In the fifth contest, 1932–33, Joseph S. Brendler, 4964 North Santa Monica Boulevard, Whitefish Bay, Milwaukee, won first prize. In the seventh contest, 1934–35, Helen Mae Collentine, 4184 North Fourteenth Street, Milwaukee, won first prize, and in the eighth contest, just concluded, William Lord Drake, Jr., 4101 North Woodburn Street, Milwaukee, won first prize.

Thus the President of the United States, who annually presents the prize, has presented to three winners from my district this famous annual award. I know the people of Milwaukee and Wisconsin are proud of the achievements of these students, as I am, and their ability, I have felt, should not go unrecorded, especially since no other city in the Nation has won first prize more than once since the inception of this contest.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise my remarks in the RECORD including therein the names of the students from my district who have won the annual Gorgas memorial prize.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

R. N. TEAGUE AND MINNIE TEAGUE

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2630), for the relief of R. N. Teague and Minnie Teague, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 1, line 5, strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert, "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is this bill?

Mr. McCLELLAN. This is a bill for the relief of some people injured in an automobile accident.

Mr. SNELL. All right, I have no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TAX BILL

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 243.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

House Resolution 243

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 7472, a bill to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered by titles rather than by sections.

Mr. MAPES. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what is the purpose of the request?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. To expedite the matter. As the bill is prepared, the sections are not numbered consecutively. They are divided among the titles. There are nine titles in the bill. If the bill is read by title, of course, all the amendments which could be offered to any section would be permissible as to the title. This is just to expedite the matter.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I call the attention of the gentleman from New York to the fact that when the committee prints came out this morning only the first three paragraphs of the income-tax title were reproduced in the bill. I do not know what the gentleman has in mind, but I believe that title ought to be read.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. It will be read.

Mr. DIRKSEN. So far as consideration of the entire bill is concerned, there might not be objection to the gentleman's request, because if we undertake to perfect title IX before it may be stricken out of the bill I should say it ought to be taken care of by sections rather than by title as we go along. The gentleman's intention is that we read the entire title?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. And then offer any amendments to any part of the title.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say to the gentleman I would have no objection except insofar as title IX is concerned. If the gentleman will exclude that, I shall be agreeable.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it proper to state to the gentleman from Illinois that any amendment to perfect the title would take priority over a motion to strike out the title.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It was put in the form of a unanimous-consent request by the gentleman from New York, and I am just amending his request.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. RICH. I see you are going to give the long time of 1 hour for consideration by the House of Representatives of the tax bill of the District of Columbia. We have seen much in the papers in the last 3 or 4 days about what is contained in this bill. No Member of Congress now knows what the bill is. There has not been one Member who has had an opportunity to read it. If you are going to give the House of Representatives only 1 hour to consider this bill, do you think you are doing justice to the people of the District of Columbia?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I may state to the gentleman considerable time was devoted to this controversial matter on last Monday. One hour of general debate was thought sufficient. We were not asked for any more time. Consideration can be given to the bill under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. RICH. You are trying to get down to considering the bill by titles now so you can eliminate the 5-minute rule.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. No.

Mr. RICH. You know how hard it has been to get a chance to talk on anything here in the House of Representatives lately.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. No, indeed.

Mr. RICH. Now you are trying to gag us so we cannot get any time at all.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The 5-minute rule is not affected one bit by reading the bill by title rather than by section.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my unanimous-consent request.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

(Mr. O'CONNOR of New York asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD).

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, if the Members will obtain the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this rule, House Resolution 243, it will furnish them, in the first instance, with information which may be valuable as we approach the consideration of this rule and the District of Columbia tax bill. During the 14 years I have been a member of the Rules Committee, this is the first report from that committee which was anything more than the three-line perfunctory report. The Rules Committee felt, in view of the consideration we had given to this bill, it was worth while to state to the House the situation as we find it.

Despite the editorial comments and the news articles and the articles by columnists, especially in the Washington papers, misrepresenting my position in this matter, the Rules Committee has been trying to help out, through no personal or selfish interest, a serious, controversial situation as to this bill, with the immediate need, as of the 1st of July, of meeting the requirements of the District to maintain their policemen and their firemen, and so forth.

As you all know, on Monday last there seemed to be an impasse. Rules Committee had no desire to intrude in the situation and, reluctantly, considered the matter of granting a special rule, especially to the District of Columbia Committee, which has a preference over other committees by reason of the fact it has 2 days a month set aside for the consideration of its business.

Of course, one cannot help resent the interpretation of the action of the House on last Monday as carried in a portion of the press as a selfish piece of legislative conduct on the part of the Members of the House to free themselves of taxation. Nothing could be further from the truth. Personally, in spite of some editorials I have seen, both false in fact and conclusion, I voted for the consideration of the bill, even though it might inflict taxes upon me. One of the most prevalent delusions which permeates the country is that Members of Congress pay no income taxes. This is what the country believes, but, of course, as you all know, it is not the fact. Members of Congress pay Federal income taxes on their salary, and every time we increase those taxes, we further tax ourselves. In the brief period of my service here I think I have voted to double my own taxes.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. For a brief question; yes.

Mr. COLDEN. Is it not a fact that any other businessman or professional man can deduct usual expenses from his income while a Congressman cannot?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Well, I do not know the detail of that.

Here is the difficulty in dealing with the tax problem in the District of Columbia: It is not a State. The people who come here are more or less transients, and the great bulk of the so-called residents are Federal employees. It is rather difficult to meet the problem of taxing Federal employees. If you treat it from the standpoint of a State, of course, because of a strained construction of the Constitution, where it was stretched practically to the breaking point, the salaries of Federal employees are not taxed in the States and the salaries of people in the States receiving their income from the State or any subdivision thereof are not taxed under the Federal income tax. This is an anomaly which will some day be done away with, and should be as promptly as possible. There is nothing in reason or in morals why people who receive their income from their own government should not be the first people to contribute to the upkeep of their government, because if the government could not pay its bills, they would not be receiving the salary. There is nothing in reason or in morals why the Governor of New York or the mayor of New York City should not pay a Federal income tax on his salary, and there is nothing in reason or in morals why a Member of Congress should not pay a State income tax in New York. Until this anomaly is stricken out by constitutional amendment, together with the tax exemption of government securities and bonds down to the last drainage district, you will have this problem in the District of Columbia. Of course, the day is coming, and must come, when we will wipe out tax-exempt securities, and when we do this we will wipe out the exemption of Federal employees from State taxes and State employees from Federal taxes. [Applause.] But this problem is connected with this bill. In about 30 States we have a State income tax. How to impose the same kind of tax in the District of Columbia is a problem which should be studied by this committee.

So when it is recommended that you strike out title IX, as to income taxes, it is not suggested for one moment that there should not be an income tax on the residents of the District of Columbia, like in the States, when this can be worked out and the complications, practical or legal, adjusted.

I regret very much that in order to raise additional revenue there must be imposed an additional tax of 20 cents per $100 on real estate in this District, and I regret it for this reason: It will affect the little home owner whose home is appraised or assessed at full value, while we have information—of course, denied by this lobby which is flocking this building at this very moment, and has been for weeks, against any kind of tax bill for the District of Columbia—that some of the larger pieces of property here are not assessed at their full value. This assessment just for 1 year on the small home owner here is going to add another burden, and I hope that in the consideration of the bill there will be offered an amendment exempting the small home owner from this added burden. Of course, while all taxes are passed on to the ultimate consumer, the real-estate tax is immediately and directly passed on to the tenant.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield.

Mr. SACKS. I propose to offer such an amendment to relieve such home owners.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman think that the small home owner in the District pays more tax on his home than the small home owner in the State of New York?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. No; of course he does not. He does not pay anywhere near the tax levied generally throughout the country.

Mr. SNELL. Then why does the gentleman have any more interest in the small home owner here than in the small home owner at home?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The District does not need that much money here, that is all. The assessors here, I am informed, do not carry out the letter of the law as in other municipalities. They do not sit down and determine what they need to carry on the business of the government and then divide that by the assessed value of the property and fix the tax rate accordingly. They fix an arbitrary tax rate, which they have never increased, but many times have lowered, and then come to the Federal Government for a contribution to make up the difference.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. If the assessors are not conducting themselves properly, why does not this Congress find some way to make them do so?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. That is the intent of this amendment, which it is proposed to offer, when you strike out title IX, the income-tax feature, and insert a direction to them to fix the tax rate at 1.7, or $17 a thousand, on real estate and intangibles, which is ridiculously low when compared with the average of $40 a thousand throughout the country.

Oh, I have been criticized and bitterly maligned in the local press in the past 48 hours—I am used to that. Editorials and news columns have falsely quoted me for talking about the people of the District of Columbia not contributing their fair share to the maintenance of their government. Well, you can go to any window in this Capitol Building, and look out in any direction, and you cannot see one piece of ground or one building to which the people of the District of Columbia have contributed one penny. You can get in an automobile at this Capitol and ride from here to the Shoreham Hotel, a distance of 6 miles, and you will never pass over a piece of land, you will never go through a park, you will never see a building, to which the people of the District of Columbia have contributed one cent. What park did the District of Columbia ever provide for its people? What would any city, what would any State, how much would the merchants of any big city in this country underwrite to have the Nation's Capital in that city? Surely twenty or thirty million dollars a year they would guarantee just to have the Capital there with its countless millions of consequent business.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. COX. Would there be any injustice involved to anybody in the levying of a tax rate in the District of Columbia comparable to the rate that prevails in cities of comparable size throughout the country, and thereby produce all the money that the city needs, and cut off this Federal contribution to the support of the Federal Government?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Of course, you should not levy that much unless the District needs the money. The first question you have to determine is how much is needed.

Take the automobile tax, for instance. I have a car out there of the vintage of 1930. It has New York license plates on it, for which I pay $27.50 each year. Of course, if I were an economical, thrifty young man, I would come down here and get those license plates for $1 a year. You cannot get them that cheap anywhere else in this country.

The press carried the story that the House was opposed to taxing Congressmen's salaries. I voted to tax them if the bill is proposed. I voted to do it, despite the newspaper criticism of me to the contrary. In the first place, the bill did not intend to tax Congressmen's salaries; and in the second place, they could not be taxed even if the bill so provided. The constitutional situation to which I previously referred makes that impossible.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman will concede, however, that contained in this bill, as proposed today, is a weight tax on automobiles, which will correct the situation of which the gentleman speaks?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I am very glad to hear that. Again, on what theory can a Member of Congress be considered a resident of the District of Columbia? If he were a resident of the District of Columbia, he would be ineligible for election back in his own State. When those dilemmas can be gotten over, Congress will be able to work out a real income-tax bill for the District of Columbia.

Mr. MOSER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. MOSER of Pennsylvania. In line with the gentleman's discussion did the great Empire State of New York ever receive a Federal contribution because of the tax exemption of all of the Federal buildings in the State of New York?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. No. We often gave the land. In the city of New York the city in some instances bought the land and presented it to the Federal Government for the Federal building.

Mr. MOSER of Pennsylvania. Of course they did, and in line with the gentleman's discussion, the District comes here and gets an appropriation from this Congress because of the tax exemption of the Government buildings.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I can remember a few years back—and this will further subject me to newspaper editorial and adverse comment—when in the shadow of this great Capitol was to be found the lowliest, filthiest slum area in America, what with fortune-telling joints, lodging houses, and chop-suey joints and other unmentionable dives. Did the District of Columbia ever do anything to eliminate that eyesore in the Nation's Capital? Not one thing. The Federal Government had to step in and clean up the streets, and clean out the dives, and who benefited by it? The business interests of the District. If this is going to continue to be a paradise for the tax dodger to come here, we all ought to know it and so prescribe and issue engraved invitations. I understand one man moved here just to avoid his taxes on an annual income of $900,000 or a million dollars. You can figure out what that would be in the State of Wisconsin, for instance, under that State income tax. But of course it was worth while moving to this tax-free haven. Again, we have commuters here, men who take a train every day from Baltimore and other places and come into Washington, and go home at night, who earn tremendous fees and income in the District of Columbia. They do not have any State income tax back home, and they have no similar tax here.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. KRAMER. Apropos of the gentleman's remark about cleaning up a moment ago, I am wondering whether any effort was made by the District of Columbia to make any regulations and why the people of the States should pay the taxes here for the people of the District of Columbia.

California has many Government buildings in the State. We do not tax Government buildings for the space they occupy or the land which the Government owns. There is no tax. We would welcome the Capital of the Nation in California today, without any tax.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Of course, I do not go so far as to say that the rest of the country should not contribute a fair share to make this District the Nation's real Capital. Within the last 6 years this has grown into the center of the United States. The strides made in the last six years, the advances made in property values, and so forth, have been greater than in the previous 25 years. I am proud of this District. Fine people live here, own their homes, and are willing to help contribute to the support of the District. I am talking about the selfish people who conduct big businesses here or who have big enterprises here, who, through their boards of trade and other organizations, fight every provision for taxes. The opposition to this bill is not directed solely against the income tax or any one of these other taxes. The people who are lobbying against this bill do not want any tax bill whatsoever imposed upon the District. They want to leave the situation so that on the 1st of July the District will be in a helpless position and we will have no alternative except to again dip down into the Federal Treasury and bail this community out of its bankruptcy. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the minority leader the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL].

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I am in accord generally with the statements made by my colleague from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR]. The only thing to which I would take any exception is that I would not use the small-home owner in the District any differently than the small-home owner is used in every part of the country.

I have a very deep-seated and firm conviction relative to this resolution. I think the House made a serious mistake in refusing to consider the District tax measure on last Monday. It was not a question of whether we liked the tax bill as presented by the committee or not. It was to be considered under the general rules of the House, and if the majority did not like it, they had an opportunity to amend it.

One of the important duties of this House is to pass tax bills to pay the expenses of the District of Columbia. We make the appropriations and it is our responsibility to arrange for taxes to meet those appropriations just the same as it is a duty to lay taxes to pay the expenses of the Federal Government. My hope is that there will not be a single vote cast against this resolution for considering the tax measure today. We should consider it calmly and dispassionately, and try to be absolutely fair to the people of the District.

I have no feeling against the individuals of this District or the District itself. On the other hand, I have no sympathy with the people of the District who are continually claiming they are overtaxed. I would not claim that I am a specialist along this line, but I have spent some time in looking over reports and tax rates in other similar cities. I have never been able to find any city, comparable in size or improvements to the city of Washington, where the people of that city paid a tax rate as low as is paid here in Washington.

In the report of the Jacobs committee, which cost the Government some fifty-thousand-odd dollars, they went very carefully into the situation existing here, the assessments on various properties, and so forth. According to that report, property is only assessed at 70 percent of its actual value. Even if it were assessed at 100 percent, the proposed tax rate of $17 per thousand is the smallest of any place that I know of in this country. In my own small village of about 5,000, where real estate is assessed, in my judgment, for all it would sell for, we are paying this year between $45 and $50 per thousand. Here in Washington, with all the conveniences, with all the parks and the beautiful roadways and everything else that the Federal Government has given to the District, they are complaining about $17 a thousand on real estate that, according to the investigator's report, is assessed at about 70 percent of its value.

I saw a statement in the paper yesterday itemizing several different apartments in the city, giving the amount they were assessed for and what they were sold for. Of course, I do not know what apartments those were, but I do know that the apartment houses here in the District that range in value from two or three thousand dollars up to $125,000 were not representative apartments. Even if they sold at the low price, the net return on those various properties, as given in this newspaper article, was over twice what the same valued property would return in any other section of the country.

There were tremendous huge rentals received from those properties in proportion to the value, if the valuations were correctly given.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. SNELL. I want to do what is fair and right toward the District, but I know from what information I have that when we vote a tax bill on the District of Columbia which does not exceed $17 a thousand, we are making an actual present to the people of this District. [Applause.] You cannot find a smaller tax rate in any other community in the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. In support of the gentleman's statement, I want to state that in Los Angeles, where I live, the rate on real estate is $43.20 per thousand.

In addition to that, we pay a sales tax, an income tax, an inheritance tax, and our merchants pay a license tax.

Mr. SNELL. These people in the District pay very little compared with that. Every year a great many wealthy people move into Washington to escape taxation, and that fact in itself is proof of the low taxation that exists in the District.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes. Mr. Speaker, we all know that service on the Committee on the District of Columbia is largely a labor of love. For one, I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the committee for having worked out and reported a tax bill for the District to the House. It is no small accomplishment.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. PATMAN. The gentleman was chairman of the special committee, I believe, of five Members that worked on this question for about 2 years. I happened to be a member of the committee myself, and I recall that the gentleman spent practically all of his time in that work. It is my belief that the gentleman from Michigan knows as much as, if not more, about this question than any other Member of the House. I hope that he gives us the benefit of his opinions.

Mr. MAPES. The gentleman from Texas, of course, is over generous. He was a very helpful and important member of that committee. I do not intend to attempt to discuss the different provisions of this bill, but I do want to say that I hope that the House will pass this rule and that it will consider this bill with care and deliberation. The subject deserves it and the committee which has put so much time and work on the bill deserves it. I voted to take it up on District day last Monday. That motion having failed, I am in favor of the passage of this rule so that the bill can be considered.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Is it not true that as a result of the gentleman's study in connection with experts retained by his committee an income-tax bill was introduced in 1931?

Mr. MAPES. Yes; and I may say to the gentleman what I intended to say, that I am sorry that in order to get this rule the Committee on the District of Columbia had to agree to make a motion on the floor this afternoon to strike out the income-tax title. I think it is one of the best titles in the bill, and it is something that the personal-property assessors of the District have wanted for a great many years in place of the intangible-property tax. I am indeed sorry that the majority of the committee saw fit to vote to strike out that title.

As the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] said, the people who oppose this bill do not oppose it alone because of the income-tax title. They oppose it because they do not want any tax legislation passed for the District. I think anyone who is impartial and who will make a study of the comparative tax rates between the District of Columbia and cities of comparable size, or cities of almost any size, or even country districts, will come to the conclusion that the tax rate here is very much smaller than in almost any other place in the United States and that the people of the District get off with paying what is comparatively a very small tax.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS], who is now presiding over the House, I may say, was a member of the committee to which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] has referred. He was a very able and helpful member of that committee. As chairman of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, he has introduced in this Congress practically the same bills that the Mapes committee introduced and which were passed in the House of Representatives several years ago without a dissenting vote.

I am not impressed with the emergency cry which has been put out in order to get this legislation considered. The situation here today is the same as it has been every year. There is a law upon the statute books which levies a rate of tax upon the real estate and the personal property in the District of Columbia sufficient to raise revenue to meet the appropriations of Congress for the District. Let me read that provision of the law:

> A tax is levied at such rate on the real and personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia as will, when added to other taxes and revenues of the District, produce money enough to enable the District to pay promptly and in full all sums directed by Congress to be paid by the District, and the Commissioners are directed to ascertain and to fix annually such rate of taxation as will raise that revenue.

So we do not need to be rushed off our feet as far as the emergency feature of this legislation is concerned. The District government will continue to function whether this bill is passed or not. It should, nevertheless, be perfected and passed.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. COX. Have not the Commissioners of the District taken the position that there is some question as to their power to raise the tax? In other words, heretofore the practice has been to reduce year after year, but there has been no action on the part of the Commissioners raising the taxes. They now take the position that they have not moved in that direction because of some doubt as to their legal authority, when, of course, there can be no doubt, in view of the language of the statute which the gentleman has just quoted, because the rules that govern the Commissioners in making the levy are very distinctly set forth in the law itself.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from Georgia that the statement of the district attorney before the Rules Committee yesterday was the first time I ever heard that question raised. The truth of the matter is that the Commissioners of the District have lowered the tax from time to time without any question being raised as to their power to do so; but now that there is an opportunity, or perhaps the necessity, of raising the rate, this question of the legality or power of the Commissioners is raised for the first time. I am not impressed, I may say to the gentleman from Georgia, with that objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. The subcommittee in considering this tax bill had that question ever before it. In the consideration of leaving authority in the hands of the Commissioners to raise the tax on real property, we were at all times conscious of the very close legal question existing as to whether it was not an unwarranted delegation of authority to an executive branch.

Mr. MAPES. The language of the statute, of course, definitely levies the tax. It is only an administrative act on the part of the Commissioners to fix a rate that is sufficient to raise the revenues required.

People who live in the District are like all other humans. They do not want to pay any more taxes than they are required or are obliged to pay. In the passage of tax legislation for the District the Congress of the United States should, of course, be fair with the District. At the same time it ought to be fair with the rest of the country. To work out a fair and just bill it will be necessary to tackle the subject in earnest. This bill ought to be considered very carefully, section by section, and line by line.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 additional minute to yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There is nothing new or novel about discretion being vested in the city government to fix the rate. That is vested in all authorities and under all laws where the tax is actually levied.

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The authority is left to the body to fix the rate?

Mr. MAPES. There is no doubt about that. The question was never raised when the rate has been reduced, and Congress should not get excited about it now when there is a prospect of an increase of the rate.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] 1 additional minute.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, I deeply regret that the Washington newspapers have seen fit to unjustly condemn the chairman of our committee on account of his attitude with respect to the District bill. As a matter of fact, he is more responsible for this bill being considered today than any other Member of the House. However, there is a strong lobby in Washington which is exercising a great deal of effort and energy to prevent the passage of any kind of a tax bill.

I cannot agree with the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL], the minority leader, who said:

> Why should we be concerned with the small-home owners in the District of Columbia, when they are not fully protected in other States?

As a matter of fact, a great many States have passed acts to exempt small homesteads from all taxation.

Mr. COX. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. COX. In order to give that treatment to the problem, did those States not have first to amend their constitutions?

Mr. DIES. That is true in reference to the States.

Mr. COX. The question of the Congress introducing a tax which has in it inequality with reference to the District comes up? Do we have that authority?

Mr. DIES. There is no question, in my judgment, but what Congress has the authority to pass an act exempting small-home owners from taxation.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. Let me proceed. I want to discuss some of the amendments I shall propose to this tax bill.

Mr. COX. Is the gentleman certain of the statement he has just made?

Mr. DIES. That is the result of my study and research on the question. Manifestly, if Congress could not do it, it would have to amend the Constitution for that purpose.

Mr. COX. Of course, Congress cannot amend the Constitution. The question is as to the competency of the Congress to treat one class of property owners in one way and another class in a different manner. We are violating the rule of uniformity, which, of course, applies to all general measures.

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. The way to get by that is to provide for an exemption of $5,000 to every owner of real estate.

Mr. DIES. At any rate I shall offer an amendment to that provision of the bill which provides for a rate of 1.7 percent of the assessed valuation which will read that on the first $5,000 of assesed valuation of any real property occupied solely as a homestead by the owner, all taxation will be exempt and upon the next $5,000 the tax rate will be 2 percent per year. I have forgotten the exact terms of the amendment, but at any rate it graduates the tax rate so as to first exempt the small-home owner, then gradually increases the tax rate on those who have tremendous property holdings in the District of Columbia.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICHOLS. May I ask the question as to whether or not the gentleman has computed what that tax would yield in the District of Columbia?

Mr. DIES. The increase in the tax rate upon property in excess of $10,000 to 2 percent, provided it is not in excess of $500,000, and then 2½ percent of the amount of assessed valuation in excess of $5,000,000, in my judgment, will offset to a large extent the loss of taxes upon the first $5,000. But if it does not, I propose to offer a chain-store tax similar to the chain-store tax passed in the States of Louisiana and West Virginia, which acts have been held valid by the supreme court of the States. This will yield to the District of Columbia $750,000 a year. Certainly the chain-store tax, with a graduated tax upon the land in excess of the minimum, will more than yield to this District enough money to operate.

In addition to that I have an amendment which will increase the rate on gifts and inheritances as provided in this bill.

Certainly, whatever tax bill we pass represents our views in reference to taxation. It should be a model for other States to follow. I am absolutely convinced that the time is coming in the United States when wealth should be decentralized and we should open the door to equal opportunity. We must do this by some measures other than some of the policies and the ointment method we have been adopting in recent years. In order to prevent an ever-increasing centralization of wealth in this country, we must decentralize the vast ownership of land in the United States by a few. Of course, this is a modest beginning. This will not mean that those who own more than $10,000 worth of property will be ruined.

Their rate will still be less than the rate in other comparable cities. I have in the amendment a provision to protect renters from having this tax passed on to them, to the effect that in any case where an apartment owner or a hotel owner can show to the satisfaction of the District Commissioners that the rates or rents charged by him are approximately the same as those which prevail in the majority of cities of comparable size, taking into consideration the accommodations and services afforded, the Commissioners can grant the owner a rebate not exceeding one-half percent on the assessed valuation. This will protect the apartment and hotel owners who are charging reasonable rates. [Applause.]

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, for Mr. MAPES, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION].

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the House, as the people of the city of Washington and District of Columbia have no vote and are without representation in either the House or Senate, the House is today acting as a city council or board of aldermen for the city of Washington and District of Columbia in the consideration of H. R. 7472, a revenue bill, the caption of which says:

To provide additional revenues for the District of Columbia.

The House of Representatives today in urging new taxes and an increase of taxes upon the backs of the people of the District of Columbia is running true to form. Congress in each and every one of its sessions since 1933 has passed and considered tax bills creating new taxes and increasing taxes. Congress has set the pace for every revenue-producing body in the United States, and the States, counties, cities, towns, and other taxing districts have been and are now following suit. There has been no real effort made by Congress or any other taxing body, so far as I can learn, to reduce the expense of government in the Nation, States, counties, cities, or towns. Those in control have been and are still devoting their time in finding new ways to squander the people's tax money and devising new schemes to create new taxes and increase existing taxes.

This bill before us provides for new taxes and an increase of taxes for the voteless population of the District of Columbia and the city of Washington. If this bill is adopted, the people of the District of Columbia will be required to pay annually in taxes approximately $41,000,000. This is a larger sum in taxes than is paid by the people of many of the States of the Union in their respective States each year, and is a much larger sum than was collected annually in taxes by all the Thirteen Original Colonies when they rebelled against Great Britain because they were taxed without representation. There are living in the District of Columbia approximately 600,000 people. They are just as patriotic, intelligent, and law-abiding as the people living in any State in the Union; but they have no spokesman on the floor of the House or Senate. They have no one selected by them to represent them in either the executive, legislative, or judicial branches of the District government. We have in the District of Columbia and the city of Washington taxation without representation. Taxation without representation was wrong in 1776 and was one of the chief issues on which the Revolutionary War was fought. Is not this principle still wrong in 1937?

When I became a Member of Congress in 1919, after a careful investigation, I came to the conclusion that the people of the city of Washington and District of Columbia should be granted the right to vote, and I still strongly favor that policy. The States not only have their legislative bodies to fix the revenues of the States, but each State, however small in size and population, has not less than two United States Senators and one United States Representative to speak for them in the National Congress. The people of Kentucky are annually taxed approximately the same sum as the people of the District of Columbia. The District of Columbia has no representation in Congress, while Kentucky has two Senators and nine Representatives.

Because of the lack of representation, I am inclined to think that the people of the District of Columbia do not receive the consideration that they should. The Members of the House and Senate are busy looking after their own constituents and the affairs of the Nation as a whole, and it is almost impossible for Congress to resolve itself into a city council or a board of aldermen and give proper consideration to the revenue measures as well as all other measures for the District of Columbia. Many times I have heard Members of this body deliver tirades against the people of the District of Columbia, the purpose of which, it seemed to me, was to add to the popularity of such Member in his own district and State, and at the expense of the voteless population of the District of Columbia. The District of Columbia could have no one on the floor of the House or Senate to answer these attacks.

In the very nature of things, the people of the District of Columbia are the wards of Congress and the Nation, and therefore each and every measure affecting the people should receive the most careful and painstaking consideration at the hands of Congress.

The tax bill before us covers 80 large typewritten pages and affects every man, woman, and child, and every business, profession, and calling in the District. I am advised that practically no hearings were held on this important tax measure, and under the rules we are limited to 1 hour of debate and an effort will be made to force this measure through this afternoon. Would we consider it fair for any State legislature to rush through a bill of this size and importance with only 1 hour of debate and in a single afternoon?

A reading of the bill will clearly show that this measure is unskillfully and inequitably drawn. It appears that the proponents had only one thing in mind—to provide additional revenue—seeking new taxes and increases in taxes.

I am one of those who firmly believe that every citizen who is able to do so should, according to his ability to pay, help to support the necessary governmental agencies. I have no sympathy whatever with a tax dodger or a tax evader. It has become almost common knowledge that many wealthy people have given up their residences in their respective States and have taken up residences in the District of Columbia in order to avoid income taxes in their States. The Rules Committee and the leaders of the House, it seems to me, made a serious mistake in insisting that the income-tax provision should be eliminated before a rule was granted to consider the bill. Kentucky and other States have adopted income-tax measures. The District of Columbia should not become a haven for rich income-tax dodgers. People able to pay and enjoying the privilege of living in the Nation's Capital should be willing to contribute their fair share to the upkeep of the District government.

I understand that it is claimed that the income-tax provision was cut out to protect Members of the House and Senate and other Federal officials. There is no just reason to impose an income tax on a Member of Congress or other Federal official who is temporarily located in Washington on official business. These taxes are to keep up the schools, the streets, police, fire department, and other local District governmental agencies. Kentucky and other States have their income taxes and Members of Congress and other Federal officials must answer to their States on income taxes as well as other taxes to provide school, highway, and other governmental benefits in their respective States. This income tax should apply to people who are residents of the District of Columbia and are not charged with or paying income tax in the States.

There can be no defense of the effort to cut out the income-tax provision and add 20 percent to the real-estate taxes. Most of the States have begun to realize that real estate already pays more than its just burden of taxes. Tens and tens of thousands of homes and farms are being sold throughout the Nation every year for taxes.

The inheritance tax provision has some great gaps in it. It will catch the small inheritances but will perhaps afford opportunities for the large inheritances to escape their just proportion of the burden.

This bill also provides for a sales tax, without much regard for the ability of the persons to pay. I strongly oppose a sales tax and especially in the form provided in this bill.

This bill fails to give credit for inheritance and estate taxes paid to the Federal Government as is given to the States under the act of 1926.

I favor the people of the District of Columbia having representation, and they are entitled to a revenue measure that is just and fair to all. Such a measure cannot be worked out properly on the floor of the House. The people of the District of Columbia should be given an opportunity to be heard, and I am sure if such hearings are held, many valuable suggestions and much helpful information would be obtained.

Feeling that the measure as presented is not what it should be, I shall vote to recommit the bill for further study by the committee unless suitable amendments are adopted. I shall not hesitate to vote against the bill unless I feel that it does justice to the people of the District of Columbia.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman mean by his statement he believes the District should be granted statehood?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I believe they should be granted the right to establish a local government here and to have representation in this House. They should have the right to select their own officials, to fix the taxes and to spend the tax money. If taxation without representation was wrong in 1776, it is still wrong.

I am opposed to the unnecessary increase of the tax burden on the people of the District of Columbia and the people throughout the Nation.

WE ARE ALL TAXPAYERS

Our Democrat colleague from the State of Ohio [Mr. LAMNECK] made a most interesting speech the other day in which he demonstrated that approximately 33⅓ percent of the income of the people of the State of Ohio was taken for taxes, and I am satisfied that a careful survey will show that on the average approximately one-third of the income of the American people goes for taxes.

We hear much said about soaking big corporations and the rich with heavy taxes, and many people believe that the rich and the big corporations pay these heavy taxes. This is not true. We are all taxpayers. The new-born babe in its swaddling clothes and the great-great-grandmother, the millionaire and the hobo, the farmer and the merchant, the factory, mine, shop, railroad, and relief worker—all are taxpayers because there is a tax on everything consumed—on our food, clothes, shelter, heat, water, light, medicine, books, and so forth. These so-called big corporations and the so-called rich are engaged in producing these articles for consumption. These heavy taxes are added to the cost of the product, and they are passed on to the consumer. The tax burden falls most heavily upon the workers, the farmers, and the common people because they are the large consumers. The average person does not realize these burdensome taxes because most of these taxes are hidden or concealed taxes.

The common laborer on relief in Kentucky in my section receives $23.10 per month. Now, what if there was a tax collector there who would demand a third of that sum—nearly $8—for taxes? What if the farmer who sold his tobacco for $600 found a tax collector there who would collect all the taxes for his tobacco in a lump sum—$200—and would take out a like third when he sold his corn, hogs, wheat, fruit, milk, eggs, and other farm products; and suppose a factory, railroad, or mine worker who is receiving $100 per month found a tax collector present who would demand a third of the worker's money? That is the very condition in which the American people find themselves today. On an average one-third of our incomes—and this is especially true as to the low incomes of farmers and workers—goes for taxes.

President Roosevelt, when he was a candidate for President in 1932, said in substance that we must reduce taxes because the taxes were paid out of the sweat of the workers and was a great handicap on the business of the country. Some day the American people generally will understand that, while reasonable taxes are necessary and should be gladly paid by those who are able to pay and according to their ability to pay, yet heavy unnecessary taxes are a great burden on the taxpayers and a handicap to real prosperity.

If there are people in the District of Columbia or elsewhere who are able to pay taxes and are dodging their taxes, let us find who they are and require them to pay; and if those who are least able to pay are overburdened with taxes, let us reduce their burdens. As a general proposition I have been for sometime and I am now unalterably opposed to creating new taxes and increasing taxes. They are already too high. Taxes could be cut down at least a third, if these various governmental agencies would cut out the hundreds of thousands of useless officeholders and useless expenditures and cut out chiseling, cheating, and grafting and give to the American people 100 cents in service for each dollar of taxes paid.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Yes.

Mr. COX. Does the gentleman favor the proposition of the overburdened people in his district and every other district of the county paying taxes to support the Government of the District of Columbia?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. When I came to the House in 1919 there was a law which provided a 50-50 contribution.

Mr. COX. Is there any justification for that?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Just a moment and I will answer the gentleman's question. I helped others to make a fight to bring it down to 60-40, and then on down to the present contribution by the Federal Government to the District of Columbia.

Mr. COX. Does not the gentleman think it should be brought down to zero?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. That might be all right. There is no reason why the people of my district or of my State should pay the taxes to maintain the schools, buy school books, or pay teachers in the District of Columbia. This is the Nation's Capital. It is the Capital of the greatest Nation on the earth and I am interested in it being the most beautiful and the best governed Capital of any nation of the world. I am speaking of the general attitude of Congress and of other taxing bodies. Every time they meet they are asked to vote more taxes, new taxes, and increase of taxes, not only for the District of Columbia, but for the American people, for the State, and for my own county and city. In some of the towns in my district recently, after they had exhausted every other means of taxation, they put a $5-to-$10 tax upon every school teacher, clerk, paperhanger, painter, baker, garage mechanic, carpenter, and others. One of these days the American people are going to rebel against these tax burdens. There is too much use of the tax money to maintain bureaucrats, office holders, and politicians. [Applause.]

REDUCED TAXES AID RECOVERY

The policy of the present administration—to tax and squander ourselves into prosperity—violates every principle of common sense and government for 50 centuries. No nation or individual ever squandered itself or himself into prosperity. Unjust and burdensome taxes oppress the people, discourage business, and incite the people to evade and dodge taxes. They feel that the imposition is unjust when they see the tax money squandered and wasted. In 1921 the Republican Party came into power. We still had in force the high, oppressive war taxes. There was a heavy tax on everything—articles of food, clothing, railroad tickets, and telegrams, and a heavy income tax on workers' moderate salaries and a very high income tax on other salaries. A bill was introduced to eliminate many of these taxes and to greatly reduce all other taxes. The measure was bitterly opposed by our Democratic minority. They urged that we would impoverish the Treasury, but the bill went through and was signed by a Republican President. Business was so encouraged that in spite of the great reduction in rates and the elimination of many taxes, the revenues collected greatly exceeded those received under the higher rates. Every 2 years thereafter, a similar tax reduction bill was introduced, passed by the House and Senate and signed by a Republican President. In 10 years 5 great tax-reduction bills were passed by a Republican Congress and signed by a Republican President. Did this action impoverish the Treasury? It certainly did not. During these 10 years, the national debt was reduced approximately $10,000,000,000, and we had one of the most prosperous periods in the history of our country. Since the Democrats have been in control, we have had a new tax bill, if not every year, at least every 2 years—creating new taxes and increasing existing taxes. At the same time deficits continue and the national debt is on the increase. These heavy taxes are necessary because of the squandering and waste of the people's tax money. These deficits and increases in the national debt are factors in preventing recovery and real prosperity in this country.

IMPERILING THE FUTURE OF OUR CHILDREN

In the last year of the Hoover administration the revenues collected by the Federal Government were approximately $1,800,000,000. In the present fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, the Federal Government will collect a little less than $6,000,000,000, and for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, it is estimated that the Federal Government will collect over $6,000,000,000. In other words, we have increased the tax collections over 200 percent.

The policy of the present New Deal administration to tax and squander ourselves into prosperity has been discredited. This policy and attitude on the part of the Federal Government has caused the taxing authorities of the States, counties, cities, towns, and school districts to do likewise. There might be some excuse for these heavy taxes if the Federal and other governmental agencies were not wasting a lot of the money and using a lot of it for boondoggling and other useless purposes and to build and maintain political machines.

The Federal Government under Mr. Roosevelt has spent approximately $15,000,000,000 more than it has taken in during his administration. We have increased the national debt from approximately $20,000,000,000 to over $35,000,000,000. Although we have increased our revenues 200 percent over 1932, yet in this year we will have a deficit on June 30, 1937, for this fiscal year of approximately $3,000,000,000. Congress has already appropriated and authorized to be spent more than $8,000,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1937, and as Congress will more than likely continue in session for another 2 months, it will be a miracle if there is not added one or two billions more before Congress adjourns. Congress is doing this unwise thing when we know that the Federal revenues from every source for the next fiscal year will be approximately $6,000,000,000, and this, of course, means another big deficit for the coming fiscal year.

We hear rumors that in a short time the President will come forward again with a suggestion for a great increase in taxes. There is no suggestion from the President or any of his New Deal friends about cutting down expenses or cutting out boondoggling or other wasteful and extravagant policies or projects. In order to take the sting out of these new proposals, the President, in all his tax proposals, suggests that he is "going to soak the rich", but in the end he soaks the poor. He has done more to soak the poor man with taxes than any man who has ever been President.

But we are told that these heavy taxes are necessary to take care of relief. That cannot be true. The President and his administration have added more than 300,000 officeholders on the backs of the taxpayers. Billions have been squandered and wasted. It is now generally admitted that not over 61 cents out of each relief dollar we appropriate goes to those who claim relief and a much less percentage to those who need relief. It goes, a big end of it, to this big army of bureaucrats in Washington and throughout the country who are busy traversing every part of the Nation playing politics and building up political machines with the taxpayers' money.

I have heretofore called attention to the speech of Mr. BUCHANAN, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, who stated that we had appropriated more than $15,000,000,000 in the last 4 years for relief and recovery. This money has been turned over to the President and he has turned it over to Harry Hopkins and a few others. It has never been claimed that there were over 5,000,000 families in America needing relief, and if this money had been turned over to the 5,000,000 needy families, each family would have received over $3,000. But, in truth and in fact, they have not cared for 5,000,000 families. For the most part of the time they have not cared for 3,000,000 families. If this relief money had gone to 3,000,000 families, each family on an average would have received $5,000, but the records show, for instance, that each needy family in Kentucky for the whole period of 3 years or more received on an average only $369. I challenge that the relief families of America during this administration have not received on an average as much as $1,000 a family.

Where has the balance of the money gone? It has gone for boondoggling, waste, graft, and politics. The taxpayers of the country who are soaked are the farmers, the workers, and the common people who are forced to pay high prices for farm machinery, for clothing, and for other necessaries. It is the common people, the workers, the families on relief who are paying the high prices for their clothing, rent, heat, shelter, food, and so forth. It is the relief workers, one-third of whose wages are taken for taxes.

I am not concerned about the big taxpayers—they can take care of themselves—but it is indefensible to take from the common people and the working people one-third of their wages, earnings, and income for taxes.

We complain about our national debt being increased to more than $35,000,000,000, but this is only a part of the debt that is being piled upon the backs of the young people of this country. If we add to this the debts of the States, counties, cities, and towns, and other taxing districts, it would amount to the stupendous sum of $70,000,000,000; and these debts everywhere are being increased.

Now these debts of the Federal, State, county, city, and town governments are a first mortgage on every dollar of property and a first mortgage on the future of every newborn child. We have no right to hang any such millstone about their necks. Instead of trying to find new taxes or increase taxes, let us devote more time to find ways to reduce the expense of government and thereby cut down the burden of the taxpayers.

As one Member of Congress, I am unwilling to so handicap and embarrass the boys and girls of this country, and I have and I shall continue to vote against these tax bills until a new policy is adopted which will declare for a dollar's worth of benefits for every dollar of the taxpayers' money and a policy of not only honesty but common sense in spending the people's tax money.

President Roosevelt's words were as true as Holy Writ when he declared in 1932 as a candidate for President that if we continue to pile up deficits and increase our Government debts, in the end it would mean the poorhouse and bankruptcy. It is most regrettable that since his election he has done nothing except to create more and more deficits and to increase by billions annually our national debt and has encouraged the States, counties, cities, towns, and other taxing units to do likewise. [Applause.]

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, of course, time will be taken to fully explain the contents of this bill if the rule is adopted. I want to take this time, however, to answer two or three propositions that have been made during the discussion of the rule itself. Gentlemen have spoken at great length about the fact that taxes within the District of Columbia are so low. On this we are all agreed.

Up until this time there has been very little opportunity for citizens of the District of Columbia to pay the cost of their own government. By the adoption of this bill, or some tax bill, we will now cure some of the things gentlemen have been complaining about.

In addition to this, I want to point out to the Members of the House that taxes in the District of Columbia should be, and probably always will be, lower than in cities of comparable size in the United States and to say that the reason is that a city of comparable size to Washington in the United States would have to contribute to about seven different governments in order to maintain its own municipal government. Any other city of comparable size in the United States would make contribution to Federal taxes, contribution to State taxes, contribution to county taxes, in many instances contribution to township taxes, contribution to school districts, and then a tax to carry on its own government, making a total of six or seven subdivisions.

You do not have this burden of taxation in the District of Columbia, because this city does not have to pay, by contribution, to the maintenance of these various other governments, to wit, they do not pay for the maintenance of a State, because there is none here. The only taxes they pay are for the support of the city government, and their contribution to the support of the Federal Government and all the other contributions that the ordinary city would have to pay are cut out. Thus the taxes in the District of Columbia are lower, and in every bracket should be lower, if this city government is carried on in an efficient way.

Now, as to the exemption of small homes, no one is more in sympathy with seeing small homes and those in the lower brackets escape any more than their just share of taxation than I am. In my State of Oklahoma we have a homestead-exemption law, but it does not go up to $5,000. It should not go to $5,000 in the District of Columbia. Now, maybe, your graduated property tax is a good tax, maybe that should be done; but, Mr. Speaker, it is too important a thing to do in haste. Let us see about this. From real-estate taxes today you raise about $1,000,000 for every 10 cents per hundred dollars of tax. Who knows when you exempt all homes under $5,000 from the payment of tax how much taxes you are taking away from the government of the District of Columbia? Who knows when you go from $5,000 to $10,000 and make your tax rate 1 percent, or any particular percentage, and then you jump from that classification to another classification and make it another percentage—who is there in this House that is armed with the facts that can show the House how much money will be raised by such a system of taxation? Why, Mr. Speaker, this is a problem that would take research of no small proportions before it could be determined what the fiscal system would be in the District of Columbia if such an amendment were adopted, and if it is a good amendment, let us have the gentlemen interested in the amendment study the proposition throughout the years and suggest it after they can tell us exactly what the result will be.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7472) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7472, with Mr. MEAD in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY].

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen of the Committee, the bill before the Committee for consideration at this time is H. R. 7472, the purpose of which is to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia.

Early in this session of Congress it was apparent that there would be a revenue deficit for the next fiscal year of over $11,000,000. This amount, however, was reduced by a Federal contribution of $5,000,000, leaving a net deficit of $6,149,119, which the Government of the District of Columbia will be required to raise by local taxation.

A special subcommittee of the Committee on the District of Columbia of the House of Representatives was appointed to ascertain the manner in which this deficit is to be met. This committee considered numerous methods of taxation, and then prepared a bill to provide this additional revenue, which in its opinion adequately supplies the necessary funds to meet the deficit and create the least amount of hardship on the taxpayers.

As chairman of this subcommittee, I desire at this time to thank my associates on the committee on both sides of the aisle, namely, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MCGEHEE], the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. ALLEN], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], and the gentleman from New York [Mr. COLE]. All of these men have given generously of their time in the work of this committee, and while we have had some differences of opinion, each one has cooperated with one objective in view, namely, to do the best job possible within the time allowed and under the circumstances existing.

I will attempt to describe the bill briefly, and would suggest that each member interested in this legislation obtain a copy of the bill and the report accompanying same. The bill is divided into nine titles, which I will attempt to describe in their order.

TITLE I

The first title of the bill is an authorization for the Secretary of the Treasury to advance to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, up to and including the end of the next fiscal year, such sums as may be necessary to meet the general expenses of the District. The money so advanced is to be reimbursed out of the taxes and revenues collected for the support of the Government of the District of Columbia. The necessity for this authorization for the coming year is in order that funds may be provided to carry over the affairs of the District of Columbia in the event the taxes anticipated are not received within the time and in such amounts as will be necessary to meet their current expenditures. This money will eventually be paid back to the Federal Government, and authorization is only for the next fiscal year.

TITLE II—PARKING METERS

Title II of the bill authorizes the Commissioners in their discretion to use parking meters within the District. There is nothing compulsory in this provision, and if the Commissioners find it is not practical, they are not required to take any action under this provision.

TITLE III—TANGIBLE AND INTANGIBLE

Title III of the bill has to do with the taxing of tangible and intangible property, and it is the same as existing law except that the authority of the assessor is broadened so as to give him power to examine books, records, and so forth, the purpose being to endeavor to receive the payment of taxes particularly on intangibles that now are believed to escape taxation under the present set-up. It is estimated that in addition to the present $2,200,000 revenue under this item, an additional revenue of $1,000,000 will be collected.

I might say in that connection there is some question whether or not $1,000,000 is the amount that will be received. However, the committee, in considering the make-up of the entire amount that we have to raise, did not take into consideration that we would receive actually $1,000,000, believing that we would receive approximately $500,000.

TITLE IV—INSURANCE

Title IV of this bill raises the tax on insurance premiums from 1½ to 2 percent. It is estimated that this item will produce an additional revenue of $200,000.

TITLE V—GASOLINE

Title V of the bill is what is generally known as the gasoline tax. The rate remains as at present, namely, 2 cents per gallon. However, the law is strengthened to the extent of requiring a bond to be furnished guaranteeing the payment of the tax collected from the consumer. It is not known how much the change in this law will produce. It is felt, however, that in a number of instances it is possible that these taxes are being collected and not returned to the District government. This title also provides that the taxes collected thereunder shall be placed in a special fund in the Treasury of the United States entirely to the credit of the District of Columbia, and shall be used solely and exclusively for the following purposes:

(1) For the construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of public highways, including the necessary administrative expenses in connection therewith.

(2) For the expenses of the office of the director of vehicles and traffic incident to the regulation and control of traffic and the administration of the same; and

(3) For the expenses necessarily involved in the police control, regulation, and administration of traffic upon the highways; provided, however, that the total amount to be expended under this item shall not exceed 15 percent of the total amount appropriated for pay and allowances of officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force.

TITLE VI—WEIGHT

Title VI of the bill is what is known as the weight tax on motor vehicles. At present all motor vehicles, both pleasure and commercial, regardless of size and weight, are charged $1 per vehicle. This title proposes to increase this fee, making the charge $5, $8, and $12 on pleasure cars, and $15 as a minimum and $150 as a maximum on trucks, tractors, trailers, and passenger-carrying vehicles for hire when the seating capacity is eight passengers or more in addition to the driver or operator. It also provides for a fee of $5 for each motorcycle. It is estimated that this legislation will yield $1,500,000.

TITLE VII—INHERITANCE AND ESTATE

Title VII of the bill is known as the inheritance and estate tax. Under this provision beneficiaries are divided into three classes. Property in excess of $3,000 transferred to the father, mother, husband, wife, children by blood or legally adopted children, or any other lineal descendants or lineal ancestors of the decedent, is subject to a tax of 1 percent on the value thereof. Property in excess of $2,000 transferred to brothers, sisters, nephews, and nieces of the whole or half blood of the decedent, is subject to a tax of 3 percent thereof. Property in excess of $1,000 transferred to any persons, firms, institutions, associations, or corporations, not included in the first two classes, is subject to a tax of 5 percent thereof.

Article 2 of this same title is known as the estate tax, the purpose of which is to secure for the District of Columbia its share of the 80-percent credit allowed under the Federal Revenue Act of 1926.

TITLE VIII—BUSINESS PRIVILEGE

Title VIII of the bill is known as a business privilege tax. This requires a license to be obtained within 60 days after the approval of the act, all licenses to date from the 1st day of July in each year and to expire on the 30th day of June following. The license must be conspicuously posted and is good for only one designated location. A fee must be paid at each separate place of business and the Commissioners are to have the power to revoke licenses for cause, such as failure to file correct returns, and so forth. There will be a filing fee of $10. It will also be required that a statement be filed within 30 days after passage of the act showing the gross receipts for the preceding year. The Commissioners will be given the right to examine books, records, and so forth, and the Commissioners may extend the time for filing returns not to exceed 30 days. A tax of three-fifths of 1 percent is imposed on the gross receipts derived from the business for the preceding year, national banks and all other incorporated banks and trust companies, utilities, bonding companies, title and guaranty companies, incorporated savings banks, building associations, and insurance companies being exempt, inasmuch as all of these pay a special and higher tax either upon gross receipts, gross earnings, or net premiums. Under this provision the Commissioners are authorized to make necessary rules and regulations, and it will be unlawful for the Commissioners or any administrative officer to divulge any information relative to the business of a taxpayer.

Title IX of this bill provides for an income tax. However, when the bill is ready for amendment the committee will offer an amendment to strike out this title and in lieu thereof insert a new title, as follows:

Title IX. Rate of taxation on real and tangible property.

This will require that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the rate of taxation imposed for the District of Columbia on real and tangible personal property shall not be less than 1.7 percent on the assessed value of such property.

The subcommittee has been holding meetings on this matter continuously since March 17 of this year, in many instances beginning its work at 9 o'clock in the morning and continuing until 5:30, with the exception of a short period for lunch. Many suggestions were made to the committee as means of raising taxes. Many persons appeared to protest against the various proposals. At all times your committee has fully realized that it had a difficult task, and that regardless of what conclusion it might arrive at, it could not be a perfect solution of the problem at hand. However, we have made an honest effort and present this bill to the House with the hope that it will pass without serious amendment thereto. [Applause.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 7472, under consideration, be considered by title rather than by sections.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 7472, now under consideration, be considered by title for the purpose of amendment rather than by sections. Is there objection?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. My reason earlier in the day for objecting to a similar request was to preclude shutting off debate on title 9 until the matter had been generously debated.

Mr. NICHOLS. In reply to the gentleman from Illinois, I know the gentleman's interest in title 9, the income-tax feature of the bill. It will not be the purpose of the committee to cut the gentleman off or anyone interested from debate on this subject.

Mr. DIRKSEN. With that understanding, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] has some amendments, and I wonder if he has been consulted about this.

Mr. NICHOLS. He has, but it would not affect the right to offer amendments.

Mr. PATMAN. It is the purpose of the committee to be liberal under the 5-minute rule?

Mr. NICHOLS. All this does is to consider the bill by title instead of by section because the bill is drawn by title.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of New York. Mr. Chairman, apparently the problem we have here this afternoon, the principal one at least, is to determine for ourselves whether we are going to make up a portion of this deficit by increasing the tax on real property or are going to make up a portion of the deficit by levying a tax upon the incomes of the business and salaried people in the city of Washington. A considerable number of rather loose statements have been made on the floor, not only last Monday afternoon, but this afternoon, concerning the tax rate upon real property in the city of Washington.

I recall 2 or 3 years ago sitting on the floor listening to our former colleague, the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Blanton, criticize with his characteristic vehemence the abnormally low tax rate upon real property in the city of Washington. As I sat there listening to him tell me that the tax rate was $15 per $1,000, and I recalled that back home my own people were paying $40 per thousand, there arose in my own mind a feeling of indignation to think that the people here should be so very, very fortunate. But after serving on this committee and studying the matter more carefully, I find that the tax rate upon real property, low as it is in comparison with the tax rate upon real property in other jurisdictions, is carrying its own fair share of the burden of taxation in the District.

In order to arrive at a determination of this problem it is necessary to create a picture of what has happened in the past. I think almost without exception every year the city of Washington has received contributions from the Federal Government. For many, many years it was on a 50-50 basis. They paid 50 percent and the Federal Government paid 50 percent. For 4 years, 1921 to 1925, the Federal Government paid 40 percent and the District 60 percent. Since 1925 the amount of contribution by the Federal Government has been by lump sum and has gradually decreased from $9,000,000 until the current year it is $5,000,000, and for next year it is also $5,000,000.

For the past 10 or 15 years this problem of the fiscal affairs of the city of Washington has been very bothersome. A number of commissions have been appointed. Last fall the President appointed a commission for this very purpose. I want you to consider the type of people who composed that commission. There was Mr. George McAneny, chairman and former borough president of Manhattan, in the city of New York, former chairman of the transit committee of the State of New York, and at the present time president of the Title Guaranty & Trust Co., New York City. A second member of that commission was Mr. Clarence A. Dykstra, former city manager of the city of Cincinnati, now president of the University of Wisconsin. A third member was Mr. James W. Martin, chairman of the State Revenue Commission of the State of Kentucky. Those three men engaged as their expert Mr. J. L. Jacobs, who in turn engaged a staff of 14 men who went into this entire problem from beginning to end and made certain recommendations to the Congress. What are some of those recommendations? Let me quote to you from a portion of their report:

> The following principles are recommended for adoption as the basis upon which relative Federal and District obligations shall be equitably determined:
>
> 1. That District residents and taxpayers should provide sufficient revenues for normal local commercial purposes as do the citizens of comparable cities.
>
> 2. Until District residents have a direct and formal part in determining the character and extent of local services and expenditures they should not be expected to bear costs in excess of those normally borne by residents of other comparable communities for similar services.
>
> 3. As long as congressional control is direct and conclusive the National Treasury should bear any cost in excess of those borne normally by taxpayers in communities comparable with the District.

I may say for myself, and speaking entirely for myself and not for the subcommittee which considered this matter, that throughout the entire deliberations I have been motivated by that very purpose, as outlined by the Jacobs' committee, of arranging the fiscal affairs of the city of Washington in such a way that the people here would pay their own way, and my people back home in New York State would not have to contribute one red cent until the people in Washington are on the same comparable basis with cities of the same size.

Let me read another statement of the findings of this committee:

> In order to insure a wider and more equitable distribution of the tax load, consideration should be given to reduction of the importance of the property tax as a source of fiscal revenue; the adoption of a net income tax and inheritance and estate tax; increase of the gasoline tax; graduation of motor-vehicle tax upon commercial vehicles with reference to weight; and a reexamination of existing business taxes.

They felt that throughout all the considerations of this problem too great importance had been paid to the problem of real-estate taxes. I do not make any effort to justify the exorbitant rents that the people of Washington have to pay. I have no desire to protect the real-estate owner, but I do say to you that the real property of the District today is paying as much as real property in my district, or your district, or any other district in this Nation. That is, it is paying its proportionate burden of the revenues collected by this municipality in comparison with those of other cities. That, apparently, was one of the findings of the Jacobs committee. Why? The Jacobs committee found that over a period of 10 years in the city of Washington the general property tax, with this ridiculously low rate of $1.50 per hundred which we have heard so much about, has raised 83.7 percent of the total revenues of the District of Columbia. What was their finding with regard to the 17 comparable cities with which they compared the District of Columbia? The general property tax in those other 17 cities throughout that same period raised 79.5 percent of the total revenues collected by those other 17 municipalities.

So we find that in the city of Washington real estate is carrying 83 percent of the load, whereas real estate and general property in other communities is bearing 79 percent of the load.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE of New York. I yield.

Mr. PALMISANO. Is not that so because the District of Columbia has no indebtedness, whereas most of the cities the size of the District of Columbia charge a certain tax to provide a sinking fund to pay off indebtedness?

Mr. COLE of New York. That is just the reason why the taxes on real estate, gasoline, or any other tax in Washington are so low, because the city can operate much more economically, as was shown by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of New York. I want now quickly to point out just what we are doing by increasing the rate upon real property. In our temporary passion what are we doing in order to try to make these fatuous apartment-house owners pay a greater share of their burden of the costs of running the city? What are we doing? We are raising the rate 20 cents a hundred to collect $2,000,000. I am advised by the city assessor that of the total taxable property in this city 25 percent comes from income-producing property. What does this mean? It means that of this $2,000,000 that we are going to raise by the 20-cent increase, 25 percent, or $500,000, is coming from these people that we are trying to get; and three-quarters of it, 75 percent, $1,500,000, is coming from the small-home owner, the man we are trying to protect. In order to do this, in order to get that rich man, that landlord who we think is not paying enough, we put a 20-cent increase on everybody and strike out the very thing that would get that man, which is an income tax upon not only individuals but also on corporations doing business in this city. Just because some of us may feel that there is no justification for levying an income tax upon Federal employees is no reason in the world, to my mind, why a businessman here in the city of Washington, having no official connection with the Government, should also escape an income tax.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE of New York. I am sorry I have only 2 minutes left. I want to point out now how extremely burdensome this obnoxious, this horrible income tax is that we are going to levy upon the people of Washington—that we hope to levy upon the people of Washington—irrespective of whether he is a Federal employee or not. The single man having an income of $2,000 a year would pay $10; nobody else would pay a thing. Under this bill a single man earning $4,000 a year would pay $35, a married man $15 a year, and a man with three children would pay $3. Now, I will take the highest salary I computed, $10,000 a year. On this salary a single man would pay $145, a married man would pay $115, a married man with three children would pay $91.

In conclusion may I again repeat the hope that I have had in mind all along that we should broaden the tax sources upon the people here in Washington so as to increase the revenue and then be in position next year to say to the people of Washington: "You do not even get the $5,000,000 Federal contribution. We are going to make you make up that amount yourself by a small increase in the real property tax and perhaps an increase of the rate in the new taxes we impose this year."

If the real property tax is adopted and an income tax defeated, you and I must expect that from now on we must continue, year after year after year, to make our people back home dig down in their pockets. To those people who we say have been paying such exorbitant, unbearable taxes, we are going to say: "You have got to chip in to the extent of $5,000,000 a year to help out these people down here on whom we are unwilling to place an income tax at these ridiculously low rates." It is a matter for us to decide. I have no interest in defending real property here other than to say that I feel that the real property owner does have a just case before this Congress. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, in my time I would like simply to point out the provisions of this tax bill. In order to do this, I shall have to deal with the bill by titles. At the outset, however, may I say that I am not one of those who shares the view that Congress and the Members of the House should be too severely criticized for their action on Monday last, because I am sure that had the Members of the House upon that occasion understood what was in this bill, had they been advised, had the members of the subcommittee had the opportunity to explain exactly what was in the bill, the action of Monday would not have been taken by the House.

Title I of this bill is authorization for an advance of funds by the Federal Treasury to the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1938.

That is necessary for this reason: Although under the provisions of this bill a sufficient amount of money will be raised to carry on the government of the District of Columbia, still some of the revenues from these taxes will not be collected until the middle and in some instances the end of the next fiscal year; therefore, in order to keep the District government on a liquid basis, it is necessary to give the District Commissioners of the District authority to borrow money from the Federal Treasury, the bill providing that the money shall be repaid to the Federal Treasury by the District of Columbia. In other words, it simply permits them to get the cash in order to carry on until the revenues from these taxes come in.

Title II is a title which authorizes the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to experiment with the installation of parking meters for two purposes; first, in an effort to alleviate to some extent the congestion from parking on the downtown streets and also as a revenue-raising measure.

Title III strengthens the already operating machinery for the method of collecting personal taxes. In other words, it gives the assessor of the District of Columbia authority to examine books and to call in the books of all businesses and taxpayers in the District of Columbia, an authority which the assessor does not now have. Much criticism has been made on the floor of the House of the assessor of the District of Columbia because the assessor did not collect more personal taxes. May I say in his defense he has not been able to do that because he has never before had authority to examine books to ascertain whether or not returns made for payment of personal taxes were accurate and correct or not.

Title III strengthens, or, so to speak, puts teeth in the existing personal-tax law.

In none of these sections do we estimate any revenue will be raised for this fiscal year; therefore they are not calculated in the computation of revenue that will be raised.

Under Title IV the tax on insurance premiums which will be paid by insurance companies has been increased one-half of 1 percent. In other words, it has been raised from 1½ to 2 percent. This will yield, it is estimated, $220,000 to the District of Columbia.

Title V will raise no revenue. It simply takes the highway fund and provides what departments of government in the District of Columbia shall be paid from that fund, and it also provides that the gasoline tax shall be placed in the highway fund and that the revenue derived from the weight tax or motor-vehicle tax and fees collected by the Bureau of Traffic will be placed in the highway fund to be expended on streets and highways only. It further provides what may be expended out of that fund and what departments of the District of Columbia government may use money from that fund; namely, the maintenance, construction, and rebuilding of streets and highways. Then we put in here that the Director of Traffic and the administrative costs of his office may be paid from this fund. We put that portion of the police force in the District of Columbia whose duty it is to take care of traffic and the payment of their salaries in this provision.

We have done these things carefully because we want to be sure that there will be no diversion of highway funds, namely, gasoline- and motor-vehicle-tax funds, from the purposes for which they are collected, because if there is diversion the District of Columbia will not receive some $700,000 to which it is entitled as a contribution from the Federal Government upon the basis of Federal aid to roads.

The registration and the weight tax will raise $1,500,000, it is estimated.

Title VI provides for an estate and inheritance tax which will raise approximately $800,000.

Mr. KLOEB. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KLOEB. Did the gentleman's committee consider a graduated inheritance tax?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes.

Mr. KLOEB. Why was not that put in?

Mr. NICHOLS. It would be too lengthy for me to take time out of 10 minutes to go into details. We did consider it; and after having considered the matter, we thought that this plan at the present time was the easiest and the most workable.

Mr. KLOEB. Certainly it does not tend to break up large estates.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, title VIII of the act provides for what is called a business-profits tax, which is a tax of three-fifths of 1 percent based upon the gross income of businesses within the District of Columbia. Before this time the businessmen of the District of Columbia have paid nothing to the District government for the privilege of doing business within the District of Columbia. Heretofore the only thing that was provided for was an inspection fee, which is set out in the District Code. For instance, the Washington ball park down here, I think, pays $5 a year for the privilege of carrying on their business in the District of Columbia. Parking lots, I think, pay $5. Picture shows, I believe, pay $25. They were set out in different instances, and in no case was the payment over $100 a year for any business.

This simply puts it on the basis of three-fifths of 1 percent, but provides for an exemption of $1,000 for all business, so that we will not tax the peanut vender unless he is making over a thousand dollars. We will not compel the newsboys to take out a license or the small business man to take out a license under the provisions of this bill if the gross income involved is less than $1,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I may say that under the business privilege tax there will be returned, it is estimated, $3,000,000.

Title IX of the bill originally was the very much discussed income-tax feature. By agreement reached yesterday and by a vote of the full Committee of the District of Columbia, those in charge of the bill today, when title IX is reached, will offer an amendment to strike title IX from the bill and insert in lieu thereof a provision increasing the real-estate tax within the District of Columbia 20 cents a hundred, or to the figure of $1.70, which will return $2,500,000.

Mr. Chairman, under this bill there will be returned in increased taxes to the District of Columbia approximately $8,020,000, which will be ample to take up the existing deficit that is now confronting the District of Columbia. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW].

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, I am as much handicapped in talking on the subject of taxation to this audience as though I were talking in a strange language. Forty-three years ago a great friend of mine, Tom L. Johnson, for 9 years mayor of Cleveland, stood in the well of this House and supported an amendment to a tax bill which incorporated a principle in which I have believed for 40 years. Our common belief in this cause was the basis of my lifelong friendship with this great Ohio citizen. They got 6 votes for the amendment in the House at that time, and the names of the six men were recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that they might go down in history.

I have no illusions as to the possibility of passing such an amendment, which I am going to present at the appropriate time, but I do it to find out how many more people in this House will vote for this proposal than voted for it 43 years ago. Moreover, I do it because of the sentiment involved. I spoke the last words at the grave of Tom Johnson in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, 26 years ago, where we left him sleeping beside his great friend, Henry George. It is a matter of sentiment with me to stand in the well of this House and do what my great friend did 43 years ago, and offer the same proposal.

In just a couple of minutes I must try to give you a little flash of this truth. The first pioneers come to a community like the District of Columbia. There is no land value when they come, but as the community grows, the growth of population creates the land value. When the first pioneers come there is no need of public revenues, no need of taxes, but as the community increases there is increasing need of public revenue. This is the economic drama which has happened in every city in America. First you have the growth of population, there being now 600,000 people in the District of Columbia, and as a result of this growth of population you have two economic forces. You have land values and taxes. Taxes and land values rise and go up and up together, caused by the same thing, the growth of population. I say the rising land values of a community are just as clearly Nature's provision for the increasing needs of revenue of the community as the milk in a mother's breast is Nature's provision for the babe in her arms. At the proper time I am going to offer this amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, first of all I want to clarify, if it is necessary, what the parliamentary situation is with respect to the highly controversial title IX of this bill, which provides for an income tax. As the bill now pends before this House, title IX, providing for an income tax, is a portion of the bill. At a subsequent time when the bill is read the subcommittee will offer a motion to strike title IX from the bill and will offer also to add another title to provide a 20-cent increase in the realty tax upon all real estate in the District of Columbia.

Most of the bill has been discussed, so I want to address myself very particularly to those two titles. I feel, of course, like a Christian martyr who went into a Roman arena. As the bloodthirsty lions began to roar, history records that the martyrs said "morituri te salutamus", meaning, "We who are about to die salute you." Having had a very particular interest in the income-tax title of this bill and knowing something of the sentiment which pervades the House today, I suppose as one of the martyrs I ought to salute you, because I am afraid, I am sorely afraid, that the House is going to make a grievous mistake today when it rejects the income-tax title and puts an additional burden upon real estate in the District of Columbia.

We seek to salve our consciences and find comfort and self-assurance in the fact that the property-tax rate here is only $1.50. We seek a grain of comfort in the fact, perhaps, that the assessments are not as high as they ought to be. We seek to assuage our own troubled spirits by saying rents are exorbitant in the District of Columbia, but this is simply begging the question and has no relation to this matter at all that I can see.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES], who has opposed the income-tax title, stated in this well only a little while ago something ought to be done to decentralize wealth, to get away from palliatives, salves, cures, and tax ointments; yet he, no doubt, on the basis of previous expression, will oppose the income tax and vote for a realty tax, with some modifications, as if that is going to solve the tax problems.

This program which is offered to you is not a haphazard kind of an affair. It is the kind of model program which is endorsed today by the National Tax Association. It is the kind of program that is endorsed by the National Tax Policy League. It is the kind of program which was recommended by the Jacobs committee, for which this Congress appropriated $50,000, and which was appointed by the President of the United States to examine meticulously into the whole abstruse subject of taxation. Therefore these proposals which are offered to you today, including the income-tax provision, come here with the best of parentage and with the best of precedents; yet I fear you are going to make a mistake by rejecting the income-tax title and adding to the real-estate burden.

How singular it is as we seek to find comfort that we talk about how much lower the taxes are here than they are back home. This is nothing but an articulation of the old expression that misery loves company. If the rate is low here, we say, "Why, let us boost it up, so they will be in the same misery as the taxpayers in the 48 State jurisdictions of the country." Is this an answer? The real answer is to go back home and seek to repair the tax structure in your own States so that the tax rate will be brought down to a comparable range instead of bringing up the rate of the people down here. If you approve a realty increase today, you are flying in the very face of the best tax precedent, and flying in the face of every hope of everybody who would like to see the millions of unemployed put back to work.

You all have a copy of the Federal Reserve report for the month of June. If you would examine page 512 of the report, this is what you would find:

You would find that the index of industrial production today is 118 as compared with 119 in that very lush peak period of 1929. Industrial production is up. You would find that in manufacturing the index is 118 as against 119 in the peak period. You would find that in mineral production the index is 114 as against 115 when we had a small volume of unemployed in the country; but when you look at the construction index, you will find that today it is only 48 in residential construction as compared with 87 in 1929, and a somewhat higher index in 1925 and 1926. When you look at the index of carloadings you will find it far below what it was in 1929, and the discerning eye can see there that much of the unemployment, much of the misery, much of the agony, much of the reason for the billions of expenditures by this Congress lies in the fact that there has been a lag in the construction industry.

This means that some incentive ought to be provided for the building of homes. It means that some of the load ought to be taken off of real property, so that the man who has accumulated a nest egg may have some incentive to build a home to shelter his family and be a place of comfort in his last, decrepit days.

Is this what we are going to do today? Are we going to give some incentive to building? Are we going to give some assurance to the home owner? Oh, no; we are going to add 20 cents to his tax rate. This may be the answer of the Congress today if you reject the income-tax title and insist upon an increase in the real-estate tax.

Oh, my friends of the committee, I hope you do not make that mistake today. Whatever lack of refinement or whatever inequities may be pointed out in this income-tax title, it is your beholden duty today to examine that title and to keep it there, first of all, by your vote when they seek to strike it out, and then refine it paragraph by paragraph and section by section, and let it go over to the Senate side and let them hold hearings, if they please, and preserve this essential pattern of taxation, the only tax, to my knowledge, outside of inheritance and estate taxes that attaches when the money has been earned, when it can no longer be passed on to the other fellow, the most equitable tax that one can devise.

And by way of implement to my argument, must I say to you on this side, today, that the President of the United States only a day or two ago, in his press conference, stated he favors an income tax in the District of Columbia.

Are you going to let these administrative problems, no matter how confusing, about taxing Members of Congress and taxing Federal employees and taxing nonresidents, mislead us and take us into a byway, when we will say, "We do not want to expend the mental energy necessary and we will just throw the whole thing into the ash can." Your President believes there ought to be an income tax. Justice and equity demand that there be an income tax because if there is not, there will be thousands and thousands of Federal employees who earn infinitely more than the shopkeepers and the butchers and the bakers and others engaged in small enterprises back home who have got to pay a Federal and a State tax, if they are within the necessary brackets, while here in Washington they will be paying only a Federal tax and no local income tax to meet the bills that are incurred by the furnishing of municipal services. They share in like measure with anyone who is born in the District. They share in all of the benefits of this District in the same degree as anyone who is native here and yet, living perhaps in rented establishments, voting back home, visiting with the folks back home 2 weeks in a year, in the judgment of many you lift them out of the burden of this tax and put them in a preferred class.

I am not insensible to the inequities that may exist so far as a few folks in Maryland or Virginia are concerned, but should we let those exceptions blind us to the fact that here is an essential pattern of taxation which I say to you ought to be preserved.

When that motion is made later in the day, do not be deluded, because you are going to divest this whole tax pattern of what I deem to be the most essential element of all, which is the income tax.

I have heard it said today that a lobby is at work seeking to destroy this whole taxation measure. I have never heard of such a lobby. This may be the case, but the thing appeals to me in this fashion. They have, perhaps, in the past received generous largess, but when we brought this bill before the House 2 days ago for the purpose, perhaps, for the first time of imposing a tax so that the people here shall pay their own way, it was promptly thrown out of the window without any consideration, and the whole matter crystallized, apparently, around this income-tax matter. I admonish you not to dismiss the matter lightly and say, "Oh, well, we will get rid of a very confusing and difficult problem by simply striking this title from the bill and saddling the burden upon the real estate", because this means not only the income properties, not only the Shoreham and the Mayflower, not only the Wardman and the Carlton, not only the La Salle and the Willard, not only the business buildings in Washington, but all the little homes that you find in the outskirts here.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of the time to myself. I am in a rather peculiar position this afternoon. Of course, I reserved the right before the Committee to oppose one of the titles of the bill. Had this bill been considered on Monday, I might have voted for that particular title. I want the Members of the Committee to obtain the committee print of the bill, a copy of the bill as reported on June 11. On page 43 they will find that an amendment was offered—and this is the so-called gross-receipts tax I am speaking about—whereby the merchants of the city are to pay three-fifths of 1 percent on gross receipts. Of course, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] spoke about an exemption of $1,000, not profit, but gross receipts. The peanut merchant you are talking about. How much profit is there in $1,000 exemption? An individual may make 20 or 25 percent, and so, if he only makes $250 a year, he is exempt from the payment of this tax, but let me show you the particular provision that I am opposed to, and that makes me oppose this particular section. On page 43 the amendment appears in the committee print as follows:

> Provided, That the term "gross receipts" when used in connection with or in respect of financial transactions involving the loan or advance of money, discounting notes, bills, or other evidences of debt, shall be deemed to mean the gross interest, discount, commission, or other income earned by means of or resulting from said financial transactions: Provided further, That in connection with commission merchants or brokers the term "gross receipts" shall be deemed to mean the gross amount of such commissions.

In other words, when you are dealing with banks and financial institutions you shall consider three-fifths of 1 percent of their net interest. I asked one of the District officials the following questions: Suppose a merchant who deals in perishable goods should buy $10 worth of goods and unfortunately, on account of conditions, he would be compelled to sell them for $9, would he pay the gross receipts tax, and the reply was that that is unfortunate; that he has taken a gamble. So the little merchant who makes perhaps $250 a year, and is exempt because his gross receipts are not $1,000 a year, if he happened to lose money because he cannot sell his goods in time, of course, must pay, whether he earns it or not, but the banker must see to it that he pays only on his profits.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act, divided into titles and sections, may be cited as the District of Columbia Revenue Act of 1937.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the enacting clause.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. SACKS. In certain respects, yes; as it is now written.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman, to make his motion, must be opposed to the bill.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, as was stated here in debate early this afternoon, the income-tax title has been stricken from the bill and in its place an increase of 20 cents has been placed on the real-estate tax. In the committee I tried to eliminate that increase, by excepting all the small homes under $8,000 valuation, and a graduated land tax on assessments thereafter, making the large landowners pay the greatest amount. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] told you about the exemption. However, there is another method which can raise this money, and we will not have to put an additional tax on real estate nor a tax on income at this time. We can get more money, or as much, as either would bring in by an increase in the gasoline tax. The people of the District of Columbia today pay a 2-cent gasoline tax. The people of every other State around the District pay 4 and 5 cents. Let me read you a list of some of the States' levies on gasoline. Alabama has a tax of 6 cents a gallon, Arizona 5 cents, Oklahoma 4 cents, Pennsylvania 4 cents, Maryland 4 cents, Virginia 5 cents, West Virginia 4 cents. That is the exact situation all over the country. It has been estimated in this bill that for purposes of highways, highway construction and maintenance, and so forth, this tax of 2 cents in the District will bring in $2,500,000. If we raise an additional 2 cents and apply that last 2 cents to the general funds of the District, we would have already earmarked $2,500,000 which is required for highway purposes in the District, and at the same time we would have placed $2,500,000 in the treasury of the District to be used for general purposes.

This 2-cent tax will bring this District in line with the rest of the States surrounding it. Furthermore, we have heard talk about income-tax loopholes and about a real-estate tax inequality. This tax is placed on the source, upon the distributors. It is easy to collect. It does not require a large expenditure to collect, while the cost of collecting an additional real-estate or an income tax would be much greater. This would relieve the entire problem, and when the time comes I shall offer an amendment to add a 2-cent tax to be applied to the general fund. Objection may be made that under the present law the District would lose $700,000 from Federal funds. We wrote that law. The Congress created that act, and it can exempt in this act the additional 2 cents regardless of the other 2 cents. This does not constitute a diversion, and this act could be made not to apply, and the District can get the $700,000 and at the same time satisfy our deficit. This is a wise, simple manner, and the best way out.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE I—AUTHORIZATION FOR ADVANCE OF FUNDS

Until and including June 30, 1938, the Secretary of the Treasury, notwithstanding the provisions of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, approved June 29, 1922, is authorized and directed to advance, on the requisition of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, made in the manner now prescribed by law, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary, from time to time, during said fiscal year to meet the general expenses of said District, as authorized by Congress, and such amounts so advanced shall be reimbursed by the said Commissioners to the Treasury out of the taxes and revenue collected for the support of the government of the said District of Columbia.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the title.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would have waited until the gentleman from Pennsylvania offered his amendment with reference to the gasoline portion of this bill, except I am afraid some gentlemen who are here now may not be present at the time the amendment is discussed, and while the matter is fresh I want to answer the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS].

I am sure you all understand the situation. It is this: Under the Hayden-Cartwright Act it is provided that those jurisdictions which divert highway funds to any other use than that of highway purposes will be precluded from participating in Federal aid given to jurisdictions by the Federal Government in the construction and improvement of roads. If the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS] were to prevail, we would have this situation: The gentleman suggests that we take a 2-cent tax on gasoline and put that into the general fund. It is patent on its face, of course, and there can be no argument but that that is a diversion of funds. If it is, then immediately it would cost the District of Columbia approximately $700,000. The gentleman says that in order to get around that proposition all we need do is to pass a law or provide in this bill that as far as the District of Columbia is concerned this is not diversion, even though it is diversion. I do not think that would change the situation; but even if it did, then you would be in this peculiar position: The very thing which the gentleman proposes to do is diversion in every State in the United States. If it were possible for us to except the District of Columbia, then we would be giving the District of Columbia privileges which we have denied to every other State in the United States.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield.

Mr. SACKS. What is the difference if the District does not get the $700,000 if the deficit is made up? Then perhaps next year we can get an equitable tax.

Mr. NICHOLS. If the District of Columbia got $700,000 in addition to what they got this year, the $700,000 could have been deducted from the $5,000,000 which your taxpayers and mine paid to the cost of government in the District of Columbia.

Mr. SACKS. Will the gentleman yield for a further question?

Mr. NICHOLS. I will.

Mr. SACKS. If they do not get the $700,000, then the money would go to the States?

Mr. NICHOLS. Oh, no; no.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the paragraph. This is a bill from the Committee on the District of Columbia. No bill is entitled to be considered by the House, carrying an appropriation of money, unless it shall be reported from the Committee on Appropriations. This paragraph, unquestionably, carries an appropriation of money. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to advance and loan to the District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary. It is a clear appropriation of money, coming from a committee not authorized to bring in appropriation legislation, and it is clearly in violation of the rules. I therefore make a point of order against this title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] desire to be heard?

Mr. NICHOLS. I do briefly, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I should like to point out to the Chair a portion of the paragraph which was not read by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], the closing portion of the paragraph, which provides:

And such amounts so advanced shall be reimbursed by the said Commissioners to the Treasury out of the taxes and revenues collected for the support of the government of the District of Columbia.

Which, in my opinion, clearly takes it out of the purview of an appropriation. It is not an appropriation in any sense. We simply are attempting to confer authority upon the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to borrow from the Federal Treasury and reimburse that fund from which they borrow. If it were an appropriation, the money would be appropriated and given to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia by the Treasury or by the Congress. This certainly does not do that. I cannot see in any sense how this is an appropriation.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] desire recognition on the point of order?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not want to put myself in the position of conceding the point of order, but I do believe there is some merit in the contention which the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] makes. However, we are faced with an exigency and I do believe that the title could be cured by an amendment. I would prevail upon the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] to withdraw the point of order and to amend title I so as to make it conform, which, in my judgment, would help us in disposing of order and still maintain the title in the bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, if this title should be thrown out and a germane amendment which would be in order and which this committee would have the authority to bring in, were offered, I am inclined to believe it would be better legislative practice. I therefore insist on the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York insists upon his point of order. The Chair will quote for the benefit of the Committee, clause 4 of rule XXI which bears upon the subject:

No bill or joint resolution carrying appropriations shall be reported by any committee not having jurisdiction to report appropriations, nor shall an amendment proposing an appropriation be in order during the consideration of a bill or joint resolution reported by a committee not having that jurisdiction. A question of order on an appropriation in any such bill, joint resolution, or amendment thereto may be raised at any time.

The language of title I reads:

Until and including June 30, 1938, the Secretary of the Treasury, notwithstanding the provisions of the District of Columbia appropriation act approved June 29 * * * is authorized and directed to advance on the requisition of the Commissioners * * * out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary * * *.

In the opinion of the Chair an authorization being granted to advance funds out of moneys in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the language constitutes an appropriation on a legislative bill.

The point of order made by the gentleman from New York is sustained.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIRKSEN: Page 1, line 10, after the word "directed", insert "when appropriated."

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment, and I hope the Chair will indulge us for a moment while we get the amendment perfected.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the gentleman's amendment on the same grounds as those upon which the section was held out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will withhold his point of order, a perfecting amendment is being prepared and will be offered.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to press my point of order so that we can proceed with the balance of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises the gentleman from Wisconsin that no amendment is pending. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois has been withdrawn.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

CHAIN STORES

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, our colleague the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] has prepared an amendment which, if adopted, would place a graduated tax on chain stores in the District of Columbia. As most of you know, the District of Columbia has more chain stores than almost any other city in America. The food business here is dominated practically by the chains. The drug business is also dominated practically by the chains. You will discover, by checking the Department of Commerce figures, that food prices are higher here than in any other city in this country where the independent merchants do most of the business. I believe that the people of this country are independent-merchant-minded. I believe that they are in favor of local business, locally owned and owner-operated. If you believe this way, you will have an opportunity to express yourself by casting a vote for the Dies amendment.

A recent investigation disclosed that unless something was done the independent merchants of this country could not survive. By reason of these disclosures, which were startling and astounding, this Congress passed a law known as the Robinson-Patman law, which had for its purpose relieving certain national corporate chains of unfair advantages which they had and to which they were not entitled. This Congress passed a law dealing with the subject, every Member of the House voting for it except 16. In the Senate all the Senators voted for it except one, and that one Senator was defeated at the last election. That law has been copied by 25 States in this Union. Almost the identical law has been passed in 25 States during the last few months. This shows, to my mind, that there is much interest in favor of the independent merchant and independent business. I hope that you vote for and adopt the Dies amendment.

A few days ago a statement was made to the effect that in the cities where corporate chains dominated the food business food prices were cheaper than elsewhere. I have had an investigation made of that. I took Washington, D. C., as a basis of 100 and from that considered the other cities. In Houston, Tex., where the independents do 52 percent, or a majority of the business, the food prices were only 90 compared with 100 in the District of Columbia. At El Paso, where the independents do a majority of the business, the food cost is only 92. In Dallas, Tex., where the chains do a majority of the food business and the independents only 44 percent, the food cost is 95. I can name you cities all over this Nation and prove to you that where the chains have control in any line of business, prices are higher than in cities where the independents have control of similar lines of business; so if we want lower prices for the consumer and if we want to encourage independent business locally owned and owner operated, we should make a start in this direction by voting for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a statement of purchases here in the District from a national corporate chain and an opinion from the circuit court of appeals.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have here a photostat copy of notations of purchases that were made in the District of Columbia. The Superintendent of Weights and Measures sent two or three different people to the chain stores of one corporation to make purchases. It happened he selected dressed chickens as the commodity to be purchased. There were 81 purchases made. They were as follows:

List of purchases of dressed poultry made from stores of Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. in the District of Columbia from June 13 to Aug. 2, 1935, by buyers of District of Columbia weights and measures department

Date, 1935	Location of store	Price per pound, in cents	Weight represented		Weight received		Short weight		Amount paid
			Pounds	Ounces	Pounds	Ounces	Pounds	Ounces
June 13	401 H St. NE	29	2	13 3/5/29	2	11		2 3/5/29	$0.83
15	do	29	3	13 7/29	3	6		7/29	1.11
15	do	29	3	12 20/29	3	10		2 20/29	1.10
15	do	25	5	4 1 5/25	5	4		1 5/25	1.32
July 20	do	35	3	2 7/7	3			2 7/7	1.10
June 13	713 H St. NE	29	2	13 7/29	2	11		2 7/29	.82
15	do	29	4	10 1 7/29	3	14		12 1 7/29	1.35
15	do	35	3		3	13		3	1.05
15	do	29	4	13 7/29	4	2		11 7/29	1.40
July 20	do	35	3	2 1 5/35	2	14		2 3/5/35	1.07
27	2245 Rhode Island Ave. NE	33	3	10 6/33	3	6		4 1/11	1.20
27	2004 Rhode Island Ave. NE	27	2	12 13/27	2	12 1/2		0	.75
27	1507 Rhode Island Ave. NE	27	4	11 3/27	4	11 1/2		0	1.28
27	938 Rhode Island Ave. NE	20	5	2 5/20	3	12 3/4	1	5 3/4/10	1.49
26	800 Upshur St. NW	33	3	3	3	3		0	1.05
26	832 Upshur St. NW	33	3	4 1 3/33	2	9 1/4		10 3 7/20	1.08
June 13	1209 13th St. NW	25	5	3 1/5	5	2 1/2		1/10	1.30
13	13th and K Sts. NW	37	1	5 2 3/27	1	5		2 3/27	.50
13	do	21	1	8 1 1/21	1	8		1 1/21	.32
July 6	3004 14th St. NW	35	3	13 5/35	3	11 1/2		1 5 3/10	1.34
6	do	23	3	13 5/23	3	12 1/2		4 3/10	.88
June 22	227 Pennsylvania Ave. SE	29	3	4 1 3/29	3	1		3 1 3/29	.95
July 20	do	35	3	4 1/7	2	12 1/2		8 1/14	1.15
22	521 8th St. SE	29	3	4 1 3/29	3	3 1/4		1 3 3/11	.95
22	923 8th St. SE	35	2	13 1/7	2	13 7/7		0	1.00
June 22	708 15th St. SE	29	3	12 2 3/29	3	10		2 2 0/29	1.10
22	1225 Pennsylvania Ave. SE	29	3	11 1 1/29	3	9		2 1 7/29	1.08
July 20	do	29	3	12 5/29	3	10 1/2		1 3 7/58	1.09
June 28	234 2d St. NE	27	4	14 5/27	4	14		5/27	1.32
28	723 East Capitol St	27	4	4 1/27	4	1 1/2		3	1.15
July 20	do	35	3	3 1/5	3	3		1/5	1.13
June 28	331 15th St. NE	35	3	2 7/7	3	2 7/7		0	1.10
28	1337 B St. NE	33	3		3			0	1.00
28	405 7th St. NW	35	3	4 5/35	2	12		8 5/35	1.14
July 10	do	23	4	15 7/23	3	15	1	7/23	1.14
13	do	35	5		4	2 1/2		13 1/2	2.75
19	do	35	3	9 1/7	3	2 1/2		5 9/14	1.25
June 28	714 K St. NW	35	3	3 1/5	3	3		1/5	1.12
26	1418 7th St. NW	25	3	9	3	9		0	.89
19	do	35	3		2	9 1/2		6 1/2	1.05
26	do	33	3	5 9/11	2	13 3/4		8 3/14	1.11
13	1721 Columbia Rd. NW	35	2	8 5/35	2	5 1/2		2 6 1/20	.88
13	1756 Columbia Rd. NW	25	2	5 1/25	2	5		1 7/25	.82
13	1813 Columbia Rd. NW	35	2	11 3/7	2	5 1/2		5 1 3/42	.95
13	2001 18th St. NW	27	5	4 5/27	5	2 1/2		1 3 5/54	1.42
25	4806 Georgia Ave. NW	33	2	9 7/33	2	8 3/4		6 1/22	.85
26	4841 Georgia Ave. NW	27	4	4 1/27	4	2 1/4		1	1.15
26	6239 Georgia Ave. NW	33	3	2 1 9/11	2	12 1/4		6 2 3/4	1.05
26	5125 Georgia Ave. NW	33	3	10 2/11	3	9		1 3/11	1.20
26	3646 Georgia Ave. NW	33	3	6 2 5/33	3	5 1/2		1 1 3/66	1.13
27	5542 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	2	10 1/3	2	6 1/4		4 5/12	.88
27	5632 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	2	14 3/33	2	12 1/4		1 1 0 3/132	.95
July 10	3143 M St. NW	35	2	12 1 3/35	2	12 1/2		0	.98
13	929 18th St. NW	35	3		2	15		1	1.05
13	1035 17th St. NW	27	2	9 1 3/27	2	3 1/4		6 2 5/108	.70
19	do	27	2	14 9/27	2	7 1/4		6 2 5/36	.78
26	do	33	2	8 9/11	2	6		2 9/11	.84
13	1537 17th St. NW	35	3		2	15		1	1.06
13	1710 17th St. NW	35	3		3			0	1.05
13	1801 Connecticut Ave. NW	35	3	8 5/35	2	14 1/2		9 1/10	1.23
6	2007 14th St. NW	35	2	8 5/35	2	5		3 5/35	.88
19	do	35	3	6 9/7	3	6		9/7	1.20
6	2502 14th St. NW	35	2	12 2 3/35	2	12 1/2		0	.98
6	2621 14th St. NW	25	5	8 1/25	5	6 1/2		1 4 1/20	1.38
19	3034 14th St. NW	35	2	15 3/35	2	12 1/2		2 1/70	1.03
6	2818 14th St. NW	25	5	10 1/4	5	10 1/4		0	1.41
6	815 14th St. NW	35	4	7 2 7/35	4	7		2 7/35	1.37
27	5502 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	3	5 1/3	3	1 1/4		4 1/12	1.10
27	8023 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	3	13 5/33	2	12		7 1 5/33	1.06
27	3517 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	2	15 1/3	2	15 1/2		0	.98
27	3311 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	3	2 1 5/33	2	1 1/2		1	1.04
27	3000 Connecticut Ave. NW	33	4	6 3 5/33	3	4	1	2 3 5/33	1.46
Aug. 2	3400 13th St. NW	27	3	11 2 3/27	3	12		0	1.01
2	3475 14th St. NW	27	3	8 8/27	3	7 1/4		1 5/108	.95
2	3105 Nichols Ave. SE	27	3	14 5/27	3	12 3/4		1 5 1/108	1.05
2	1401 Good Hope Rd. SE	27	3	14 5/27	3	14		9/27	1.05
2	2436 Wisconsin Ave. NW	27	4	1 9/27	3	13 3/4		3 4 7/108	1.10
2	1715 Wisconsin Ave. NW	27	4	2 1 9/27	4	1		1 1 9/27	1.12
2	1400 Wisconsin Ave. NW	27	4	4 2/27	4	1 1/4		2 9 7/108	1.15
2	4938 Wisconsin Ave. NW	27	4	11 7/27	3	11 1/4	1		1.27
2	3228 Wisconsin Ave. NW	27	3	13 1/27	3	8		5 1/27	1.03

Out of 81 purchases you would naturally think that some would be overweight, some would be underweight, and some full weight. That is the way honest people deal. You cannot have the weights exactly alike and no one expects it. Of course, I know you will find dishonest people among the independent merchants as well as among the corporate chains, but I make this point for the purpose of showing that the system of these national corporate chains is such that it compels honest men to be dishonest. In other words, the manager of the branch is billed with a certain quantity of merchandise at the retail price. He must account for that merchandise, either by money in the cash drawer or by the commodity on the shelves or in the ice box. He therefore must be very careful about his weight.

Out of these 81 purchases, 68 purchases were short weight, 13 were full weight, and not one of them was even a fraction of an ounce overweight. That does not seem just exactly right. There must be some system that causes these short weights to be given in practically every case and never an overweight.

Several cases were filed, one of which was tried before a jury in the District of Columbia. The concern involved, the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., was convicted by a jury in the District of Columbia. The president of that great store, representing an investment of millions of dollars, with the general counsel of that company, appeared there before the court and jury and appealed to them not to convict the concern in that case. However, there was a conviction. The case was appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and I will place in the RECORD a copy of the opinion by the circuit court of appeals. Other cases remain to be tried.

I am not accusing the officials of this concern of dishonesty. I presume they are honest, outstanding, honorable men. I do say, however, they have a system that is so conducted that honest men are encouraged to be dishonest. The evidence I shall place in the RECORD I believe is convincing to that end.

United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. No. 6734. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., Inc., Santus W. Zink, General Superintendent, plaintiff in error, v. District of Columbia, defendant in error. In error to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. (Decided Feb. 1, 1937.)

Abbot P. Mills, of Washington, D. C., and Caruthers Ewing, of New York, N. Y., for plaintiff in error.

Elwood H. Seal, Vernon E. West, and Chester H. Gray, all of Washington, D. C., for defendant in error.

Before Robb, Van Orsdell, Groner, and Stephens, Associate Justices.

ROBB, Associate Justice: Writ of error to the Police Court of the District to review a judgment of conviction, on the verdict of a jury, under an information charging the defendant corporation (plaintiff in error) with selling two chickens represented to weigh 4 pounds and 6$^{2}/_{33}$ ounces, the actual and true weight being less.

The information was brought under section 7 of the act of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. 1219; sec. 7, title 28, D. C. Code, 1929) which provides, in part, as follows:

"No person shall sell * * * any commodity of any kind as a weight * * * greater than the actual or true weight * * * thereof * * *."

The evidence so far as material is substantially as follows: Mrs. Exley, an employee of the Bureau of Weights and Measures of the District, testified that on July 27, 1935, she went to defendant's store at 3000 Connecticut Avenue in the District. There were two or three clerks behind the meat counter and she asked one of them the price of frying chickens. Being advised that the price was 33 cents a pound she told the clerk that she wanted a chicken that would weigh around 3 or 4 pounds, and was informed that no one chicken would weigh that much; whereupon she told the clerk that she would buy two. The clerk took two chickens out of the case and put them on the scale. She asked, "How much are they?", and he said, "They come to a dollar forty-six cents." She paid him that amount, which he rang up on the cash register, and he put the chickens in a paper bag for her, and she left. She made a note on the bag of the address of the store, time of day, the price per pound of the chickens, and the total sum she paid therefor.

Mrs. Exley was accompanied to the store by Mr. Diller, chief inspector of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, who waited for her outside the store. After making the purchase she joined Mr. Diller and he "made the same notes in his book." They arrived at the Bureau 20 minutes later, and Mr. Diller weighed the chickens. They were found to weigh 3 pounds 4 ounces. Mrs. Exley had calculated that, with chickens selling at 33 cents per pound, for $1.46 she should have received 4 pounds 6$^{26}/_{33}$ ounces; that on that basis the chickens purchased were 1 pound 2$^{26}/_{33}$ ounces short. Witness testified that she would not be able to recognize the clerk who sold the chickens to her, and could not approximate his age, height, or whether he was fat or thin or an old or young man. Mr. Diller testified in corroboration of Mrs. Exley.

Mr. Bussey, manager of the meat department of defendant's store at 3000 Connecticut Avenue on July 27, 1935, testifying for defendant, stated that on that date chickens were sold at two prices, one kind at 27 cents a pound and another at 35 cents a pound; that there were only three clerks (including witness, Dabbs, an extra, and May, a regular clerk) behind the meat counter on that day; that witness could not recall ever having seen Mrs. Exley; that he did not on July 27, 1935, "sell two chickens, representing them to weigh 4 pounds 6$^{26}/_{33}$, which in fact weighed 3 pounds 4 ounces." When a sale is made by weight and a price per pound, the price is computed mechanically on the scale; "is not figured with a pencil but is figured right on the standard scales—computing scales—and very seldom we ever have to figure * * *." Witness accounts weekly to defendant's supervisor of the meat department for what comes into his (witness') department; that witness' cash is checked weekly by an inspector. An inventory of the meat department is taken every Saturady evening, and he must then account for the chickens which he had received that week; that he "would either have to have the chickens there or the cash representing the chickens"; that a special inventory just for chickens is not made, "but we inventory the department."

"Q. If you were short, you would have to pay for it?—A. Not necessarily; no, sir.

"Q. Under what conditions would you not have to pay for it?—A. Sometimes you can't figure exactly the amount.

"Q. Are you allowed any leeway in your figuring?—A. I am supposed to make a certain profit."

The computation device is on the clerk's side of the scale, and is not visible to the customer. The price to be paid by the customer is mechanically registered, based on weight. Poundage is registered separately in the center of the scale, and the price of the article is mechanically computed by the scale and registered on the scale. The price of an article on the scale is obtained by looking at a column reflecting the price per pound of the article, and a red line shows "the amount it comes to." The scale shows the computation for selling an article at 33 cents a pound—the price of the chickens in the present case.

Mr. Dabbs, a witness for defendant, testified that he was employed as an extra and worked about 2 days each week during July and August 1935; that on July 27 Mr. Bussey and Mr. May worked behind the meat counter with him at defendant's store here involved; that, after looking at Mrs. Exley, witness could not tell whether or not he had ever seen her before; that on Saturady, July 27, he did not "sell to any person 3 pounds 4 ounces of chicken and charge for 4 pounds 6$^{26}/_{33}$ ounces."

Mr. May, a clerk-butcher employed at defendant's store on July 27, testified that he did not recall ever having seen Mrs. Exley except in court during the trial; that he had made no sale of "two chickens where there was a difference between the actual weight and the weight on which the price was computed of 1 pound 2 ounces."

In impanelling the jury it developed that four of the prospective jurors were employed by certain governmental agencies; one by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, another by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, a third by the Resettlement Administration, and the fourth by the Patent Office, under the Department of Commerce. Defendant challenged these prospective jurors, individually and collectively, for cause on the ground of implied bias. There was no inquiry as to actual bias. The court overruled the challenge and defendant excepted, and this action of the court is assigned as error. It does not appear that the defendant exhausted its three peremptory challenges. When the jury was sworn the above four Government employees remained as jurors.

Prior to 1935 "salaried officers of the United States" were exempted from jury service in the District by virtue of section 360, title 18, District of Columbia Code, 1929 (sec. 217, D. C. Code, 1924), but by the act of August 22, 1935 (c. 605, 49 Stat. 682), amending the above section of the Code, eligibility for jury service was extended to persons "employed in the service of the Government of the United States", with certain exceptions not here material. The challenged jurors in the present case were not within those exceptions. In United States v. Wood, — U. S. —, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States on December 7, 1936, rehearing denied January 11, 1937, which involved the eligibility of Government clerical employees to serve on criminal juries in the District, the constitutional validity of the act of August 22, 1935, was sustained, and it was held "that the imputation of bias simply by virtue of governmental employment, without regard to any actual partiality growing out of the nature and circumstances of particular cases, rests on an assumption without any rational foundation." There is, therefore, no merit in this assignment.

In the next assignment of error it is contended that "when correctly analyzed and understood, there was no evidence justifying submission of the case to the jury." It is said that "the uncontradicted evidence showed that if there was a transaction such as detailed by Mrs. Exley, it was because of an error arising from reading a mechanical device which computed the price and not an error in weighing the chickens." It is conceded that "an error in stating the weight of a commodity and selling it at that weight would justify a conviction." Mrs. Exley testified that she was told the price per pound of the chickens. There is no dispute as to that. Neither is it disputed that she told the clerk that she wanted a chicken or chickens "that would weigh around 3 or 4 pounds." The clerk then put two chickens on the scale, and when Mrs. Exley asked, "How much are they?" he responded, "They come to $1.46." In common parlance, there was an implied representation as to weight. Certainly the evidence warranted the jury in so finding.

Counsel for plaintiff in error requested and was refused an instruction that if the jury should find that a duly authorized agent of the plaintiff in error made a sale of chickens "and made no representation as to the weight of the chickens, but innocently and honestly computed the result of a correct weight at the prevailing price, and innocently and honestly gave the customer an erroneous computation", their verdict must be "not guilty." In his charge to the jury the court said: "If you have a reasonable doubt in your minds as to whether this lady did actually go in there and purchase this chicken, as to whether the price was quoted at 33 cents a pound, and as to whether the price charged was $1.46, it will be your duty to give the benefit of that reasonable doubt to the defendant, and acquit the defendant." The court further instructed the jury "that if it was a mistake made by the employee without any intent on his part to cheat and defraud the customer, the mistake is no defense." This is assigned as error.

The statute makes it an offense, regardless of intent, to sell "any commodity of any kind as a weight * * * greater than the actual or true weight." Undoubtedly it was the purpose of the statute to protect purchasers. To permit a defendant charged with a violation of the statute to avoid the consequences by contending that it was a mistake on his part, without intent to cheat and defraud the customer, would measurably defeat the purpose of the statute. Moreover, the evidence in the present case would not justify such a contention. The court observed in City of New York v. Biffle (91 N. Y. S. 737) that a violation of the statute, "no matter for what reason", renders the violator liable to a penalty.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Chairman, in order to give to the District of Columbia needed added revenue and to encourage local business, I ask the Members to vote for the amendment which will be offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

While large corporate chains are destroying independent merchants in any one town, the people will profit for a short time by lower prices, but as soon as the independent merchants are destroyed, the prices are increased to the consumers in that locality, and a part of the excess profits used to finance the losses in other localities where the squeezing-out process is going on.

A study has just been completed which shows that the cost of food is higher in cities where chain stores predominate. The percentages of business done by chains and independents are taken from the 1935 Business Census. The cost-of-living price indexes are from the full report of the Division of Social Research of the Works Progress Administration on the inter-city differences in the cost of living, series 1, pamphlets nos. 20 and 21, published in the last months of 1936. Bear in mind that the index figure is 100 for Washington, D. C., and on the basis of $1 cost for food in Washington, the other cities are compared.

In Houston, Tex., the independents do 52.2 percent, a majority of the business, and food costs are 90.7. El Paso, Tex., the independents do 61.2 percent, a majority of the business, and the food cost is 92.5, while in Dallas, Tex., where the chain food stores do a majority of the business, and the independents do only 44.5 percent, the food cost is 95.

In Oklahoma City, where the independents do 59.7 percent of the business, the food index price is 93.1, but New Orleans, where the independents do 67.2 percent of the business, the food-index price is 90.7.

In Spokane, Wash., where the independents do 68.3 percent of the business, the food-index number is 89.7. In Denver, Colo., where the independents do 59.9 percent of the business, the food-index price is 91.3, but in Salt Lake City, where the independents do 66.2 percent of the business, the food-index price is 90.7.

Some interesting figures are also found in the Middle West. In Minneapolis, where the independents do 79.5 percent of the business, the index price of food is 91.6. In Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where the independents do 87.2 percent of the business, the index figure is 87.7, but in Kansas City, Mo., where the independents do only 51.4 percent of the business, the index figure is 94.1.

In the east south central section, we find Louisville, Ky., where the independents do 55.4 percent of the business, with an index figure of 93.1, contrasting with Knoxville, Tenn., where the independents do 74.2 percent of the business and the index-food figure is 88.7.

Some other outstanding figures in the Middle West are the city of Milwaukee where the independents do 75.1 percent of the business and the index figure stands at 90.2 as contrasted with Detroit, where the independents do only 40.9 percent of the business and the food-index price is 93.2, and Chicago, where the independents do 42.3 percent of the business and the index figure stands at 97.1.

In the South, Atlanta, Ga., the independents do 41.8 percent of the business, and the food-index price is 97.1. In Washington, D. C., the independents do only 45.5 percent of the business, and the food-index price stands at 100, but in Baltimore, Md., where the independents do 63.4 percent of the business, the food-index price stands at 94.9. In Jacksonville, Fla., where the independents do only 35.1 percent of the business, the price of food is 96.1 index, and has oftentimes been the highest food-cost city in the country.

It will be noticed that an increase in food prices follows control by corporate chains.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. NICHOLS: Page 1, after line 4, insert the following:

"TITLE I—AUTHORIZATION FOR ADVANCE OF FUNDS

"Until and including June 30, 1938, the Secretary of the Treasury, notwithstanding the provisions of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act approved June 29, 1922, is authorized and directed, when appropriated, to advance, on the requisition of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, made in the manner now prescribed by law, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary from time to time during said fiscal year to meet the general expenses of said District, as provided by law, and such amounts so advanced shall be reimbursed by the said Commissioners to the Treasury out of the taxes and revenue collected for the support of the government of the said District of Columbia."

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make the same point of order against the amendment as was raised by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and upon which the Chair just ruled. The language of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act makes this amendment an exception to the appropriation act. The amendment states "out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated." It seems to me the amendment seeks to have Congress authorize and appropriate a certain amount of money which the Congress would have to reimburse the Treasury for if the District itself was not able to reimburse the Treasury out of the revenues to be obtained under this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. It is the opinion of the Chair that the language included in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], which indicates that the money cannot become available until and when appropriated, is proper, and therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, may I say that under the section as now amended it is provided that the District of Columbia cannot borrow this money from the Federal Treasury until the money is appropriated and made available by an appropriation act. This means that even after this bill is passed the District cannot go down there and borrow the money. It will be necessary for the Congress, either through a deficiency appropriation bill or by some other means, to appropriate the money before the District may borrow it from the Treasury.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. Does not the gentleman believe that the business way to do such a job as this would be for the District Commissioners to be authorized to borrow not exceeding a certain sum in the open market, just like your city and my city have to do when they need money, instead of having the Government of the United States pay interest on money the District of Columbia wants to borrow. It is a peculiar way of doing business, in my opinion.

Mr. NICHOLS. I may say to the gentleman I think the District of Columbia should pay interest on the money which they borrow, and I would not object to an amendment which would provide that it pay interest, although I do not think it should be forced into the open market for the money.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. It seems to me the Congress has expressed itself on that subject years ago, at which time it virtually denied to the District the right to bond itself or to have a free and easy rein so far as money is concerned. This might reestablish a practice that was frowned upon by the Congress years ago. The amendment just offered preserves the title of the bill.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have ever especially interest myself in the legislative affairs of the District of Columbia. At the time the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] made a point of order against title I, I had an amendment pending at the desk to strike out the title.

It seems to me that for the first time the government of the District of Columbia is entering upon an anticipation warrant basis and thus seeks to abandon its "pay as you go" policy.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe there is a city or a school district or a county in the United States that has experienced financial difficulties in the last 5 or 10 years where such difficulties were not caused by the issuance some time—5, 10, or 40 years ago—of anticipation warrants, anticipating taxes yet to be collected.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman is familiar with the fact that by an act of Congress the District of Columbia is now precluded from doing that very thing?

Mr. THOMPON of Illinois. That is true, I may say to the gentleman from the committee, but the Congress of the United States is going to meet here in January, and we can meet any situation that may develop then. The fiscal year of the District of Columbia begins at the same time as the fiscal year of the Government of the United States. I think we are embarking upon a bad legislative policy if we permit the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to go over to the Treasury and borrow on anticipated revenues.

I do not think it makes any difference whether or not they have to come up to the Committee on Appropriations of the House and get permission to borrow money up to a certain amount. As has been pointed out by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], every city in the United States has a limit on anticipation warrants. In my State a local government can borrow up to approximately 75 percent of the amount of taxes levied but not collected. To permit the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to go over to the Treasury and borrow money without interest would work an injustice and an inequality on the rest of the cities of the United States. I do not know any reason why the District of Columbia Commissioners should be permitted to go to the Treasury and get money without interest or at a nominal rate of interest any more than the city of Detroit or the city of Chicago or my home city of Rock Island, or any other city or school district of this land which may be obliged to borrow money upon anticipation warrants. The District of Columbia should operate upon a cash basis and should not enter the field of borrowing money by one means or another. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] states the District of Columbia cannot borrow money unless such authority is given them. I say it is sound legislative policy for the Congress of the United States to continue to deny the appointed Commissioners of the District the right to borrow money from the Federal Treasury. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment is defeated. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois) there were—ayes 28, noes 40.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE II.—AUTHORIZATION FOR PARKING METERS

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to fix, prescribe, and collect fees for the parking of automobiles in or upon any street, avenue, road, highway, or other public space within the District of Columbia under their jurisdiction and control, and to make and enforce regulations to provide for the collection of such fees. Any person violating any such regulation shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment not to exceed 10 days.

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are further authorized and empowered, in their discretion, to purchase, rent, and install such mechanical parking meters or devices as the Commissioners may deem necessary or advisable to insure the collection of such fees as may be prescribed for the parking of vehicles as aforesaid, and to pay the purchase price or rental and cost of installation of the same from the fees collected, the remainder of such fees to be paid to the collector of taxes for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the revenues of said District.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SHAFER of Michigan: Beginning on page 2, line 9, strike out all of title II.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I wish to compliment the subcommittee for the excellent work the Members have done in connection with preparing this bill. However, I can see no reason for the insertion of title II. It is apparent an effort is being made to slip something over on the District. As I see it, there is no more need for these curb-side alarm clocks, these gadgets to time the parking of automobiles on the streets of the District, than there is for my dog to have six tails. At least nine cities, according to the information I have been able to gather, have tried cut these parkometers, and each one has thrown them out for one reason or another.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman name those cities? I would like to have that information.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Yes; I can name them. West Haven, Conn.; Mobile and Birmingham, Ala.; Hutchinson and Topeka, Kans.; Paducah, Ky.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Lubbock and Tyler, Tex. And, I might add, these:

Topeka, Kans., was one of the first cities to install parkometers. They were thrown out when the merchants of the city complained that their use drove customers away from the downtown district, and that they had suffered losses in business of at least 50 percent while these devices were in operation.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me again?

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. I have only 5 minutes, and I have a long way to go.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman is saying "parkometers."

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Parking meters or parkometers. Some of them are known as parkometers.

Mr. NICHOLS. Parkometer is a trade name, of course. "Parking meter" includes all of them.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. It is a little gadget they install on the curb and the motorists puts a coin in, and so forth, and a bell rings when the parking time is expired. It is just another device to prevent the poor man from parking his Model T in the business district.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman used the word "parkometer", and I thought the gentleman was talking about the one meter.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. That is the situation. These devices have been thrown out in practically every city in which they have been tried. They have been declared illegal by numerous courts. Courts in Paducah and the Alabama Supreme Court have declared them illegal.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. I cannot yield further; I have only 5 minutes.

The illegal aspect of the meters is clearly set forth in the ruling of the Paducah, Ky., court, which stated the use of the parking meter was clearly an attempt on the part of the city of Paducah to raise revenue by installing these parking meters under the guise of its police power to regulate traffic and stated further:

> This court does not believe the ordinance in any way tends toward prevention of any offense or the preservation of the health, morals, or welfare of the citizens. Hence, on this point, it is the opinion of the court that the ordinance is void and unenforcible.

The Alabama Supreme Court went further, declaring that the meter ordinance of the city of Birmingham violated the city charter, was an illegal exercise of taxing power, and was a violation of the due-process clause of the Constitution.

There have been two cases, one in Oklahoma and one in Florida, in which the highest courts of the State has failed to invalidate the meter ordinance, but in neither of these cases were the all-important questions of illegal revenue or property confiscation brought to the attention of the court.

The fact that parking meter interests are agitating measures in numerous State legislatures, which would permit cities to install the devices, is clear admission on their part that the meters cannot be legally installed under existing laws.

It is scarcely surprising that mayors and city managers of municipalities where meters have been installed should, in some instances, report favorably on their operations, because the meters represent a fat income to the city which can be utilized by the tax spenders who are not likely to find fault with any device which helps to swell the treasury.

That article II of this bill does not provide for the mandatory installment of these parking meters is an argument presented by proponents. Then why include article II in the bill? I am always suspicious of these provisions that are not mandatory.

At least one Commissioner for the District of Columbia is opposed to parking meters. I have a letter written by the Honorable Melvin C. Hazen, which reads, in part:

> I have read with interest your questionnaire concerning parking meters for Washington. The Commissioners, as a board, have not approved the installation of parking meters. It has been very informally discussed, and the Commissioners are not prepared to definitely determine a policy at this time. Personally, however, I wish to say that my theory of this matter is to get automobiles off the streets to facilitate traffic and not rent the public streets for parking purposes.

In view of this statement by Commissioner Hazen, I can see no reason whatever for continuing this section in this bill. I hope the Members of Congress will adopt my amendment. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, as I stated in my opening remarks, this simply authorizes the District Commissioners, in their discretion, to install these parking meters, if they care to do so and find it is practicable.

If you will refer to the hearings on page 15, you will find a discussion of this matter. The party in charge of the matter of parking automobiles in the District of Columbia is Mr. William A. Van Duzer, the director of vehicles and traffic in the District of Columbia, and in answer to a question by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] in reference to whether or not they had available data on the installation of parking meters, Mr. Van Duzer stated:

> We have reports of several cities that have them and from an enforcement angle it only takes about one-third as many policemen to get better results; that is, to have an observance of 1-hour parking or 30 minutes * * *. Of course, we have prohibited parking in the morning from 8 to 9:30 and from 4 to 6, which would reduce the time of parking to 6½ hours. It seems from all the testimony that I have seen that the motorists are in favor of them, that the newspapers are in favor of them, and the automobile clubs likewise.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I yield.

Mr. DIES. It has been my observation in the District that you can seldom find a place to park and you have to go to some parking lot and usually pay from 25 cents to 40 cents in order to park your automobile and transact any business in town here.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. That is true.

Mr. DIES. It seems to me this would be a helpful thing.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I agree with the gentleman, and I may say that what we are trying to do is to get at this all-day parking in the District of Columbia in order to stop that undesirable practice.

Mr. DIES. Some people here leave their cars parked indefinitely all up and down the streets.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes; and this would also prevent double parking.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Would the gentleman tell the House how much one of these parking meters costs?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. The average cost is about $55.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. And can the gentleman tell us how many meters would be required in the city of Washington?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I have no information on that subject, but they can install them as they find need for them.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Will the gentleman tell us where these meters are manufactured?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I do not know.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. In what State?

Mr. NICHOLS. There are about 15 different companies in the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. What is the largest manufacturer of these meters?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I have not that information, and may I say that insofar as the cost is concerned, it would cost the District Government nothing because they are paid for out of the fees collected by the meters, and it is estimated that the average income is about 40 cents a day from these meters. It would take about 9 months to pay for each meter. After that time they would be the property of the District of Columbia and all the fees coming from them would go to the treasury of the District.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. About how many meters does the gentleman think would be required for the District of Columbia as a minimum?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I would say to cover the entire District it would take about 2,500 or 3,000.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Three thousand meters at a cost of $55 a meter?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. It would not cost the District government anything because they are purchased under a plan whereby they are paid for out of fees received from the meters. The meter is installed and a portion of the money received by the meter goes to the District of Columbia and another portion goes to the party from which they are purchased and is applied to the purchase price.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. But we have to put up the original cost price.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. No; we do not have to put up one dollar. They install the meters and guarantee the operation of them, and under this bill it is purely a matter in the discretion of the Commissioners and, as a matter of fact, I believe the Commissioners are opposed to their installation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, in order to talk a little about parking meters, and there is nothing novel or new about this device, and insofar as the cities that have taken them out are concerned, I think a check of the figures will disclose that in nearly every instance where they have been taken out it has been the trial meter that was taken out and installation made of other meters.

My distinguished friend has stated that nearly every city in the United States that has installed them has taken them out. As a matter of fact, there are some 35 large cities in the United States today that are operating parking meters, and let us see if they are so terrible.

At a recent meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors, the resolutions I have here were adopted, and I have a synopsis of a long resolution which was adopted by them, and this is the booklet which I have in my hand. The United States Conference of Mayors endorsed parking meters—not anybody's particular meter, but the theory of parking equipment and they said:

In our opinion the parking meter is the most noteworthy development in traffic control since the advent of the now universally used traffic lights.

Why, I can remember, and so can you, when the cities of this country wanted to put in traffic lights and we hollered our heads off and said, "What sort of device is this that they want to install here to impede the orderly flow of traffic?"

The conference of mayors of the United States says that the advent of parking meters is the most noteworthy improvement since that time, and they say further that downtown parking is a problem of every community, both large and small, and that for the first time a solution of this problem is offered by the parking-meter system of control. To answer the question a moment ago asked, about the cost of parking meters to the city, they will cost the District of Columbia not one cent. What is the proposition for their installation?

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I refuse to yield. There are 15 companies in the United States which will install parking meters for any city, and for the District of Columbia. It will cost the city not one cent. This is a contract that 15 companies will enter into. They will agree to put in meters at designated points, without the outlay of any money. The meters will pay for themselves, and the company does not take all of the money while they are paying for themselves. Fifty percent of the revenue will go to the city.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twelve Members present, a quorum.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, while these meters are paying for themselves, they also pay 50 percent of the revenue to the city. As far as infringements are concerned, at least 15 companies in the United States will put up a bond to protect the city against infringement suits.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman advise us whether there are any sponsors of this legislation, whether the Commissioners have requested the authority, or who has?

Mr. NICHOLS. The director of the bureau of traffic, Mr. Van Duzer, came before our subcommittee and requested it. The Commissioners themselves, at least one of them, are opposed to it. The director of traffic is for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahome has expired.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] is a member of the committee and moves to strike out the last word, and the Chair has recognized the gentleman.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. I realize that; but it is my understanding that the gentleman from Oklahoma moved to strike out the last word, and I rose in opposition to that motion.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma, as the Chair understands it, rose in opposition to the amendment. Will the gentleman from Oklahoma give the Chair attention? The Chair asks the gentleman what was the purpose of his addressing the Committee.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, it was in opposition to the pending motion, but I asked recognition by moving to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Maryland later. The gentleman from Mississippi is recognized.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Chairman, I think it behooves the membership of this Congress who have visitors coming here every day and every week to do something about the traffic situation in the city of Washington, of which we have control. I know nothing about parking meters, I never saw one in my life, but as a member of this subcommittee I made a study as to their advantages and disadvantages, in order to make recommendation to this membership of that which I thought was best for the city of Washington. In my humble opinion, after making that study, this is one means whereby we are going to be able to control the traffic situation in the city.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGEHEE. Yes.

Mr. SCHULTE. I happened to be a member of the subcommittee at one time investigating traffic conditions in the District of Columbia, and it was the opinion of that committee that in order to eliminate all hazards downtown the proper thing to do, and the traffic experts agreed, was to eliminate all parking in the downtown district of Washington. Yet the traffic director has not seen fit to do that.

Mr. McGEHEE. I think the gentleman well knows that would be impossible in any city in this country to prohibit the parking of automobiles or cars on the streets in its business section.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGEHEE. Yes.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. To say to the gentleman that in a number of cities in Texas we have parking meters. They have proved highly successful, not only in solving the parking problem, by preventing people from parking too long, but also as a source of revenue. In the city of Dallas, only 50 miles from my home, parking meters there have worked admirably. They have solved the problem of parking and also have increased largely the revenues of the city.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGEHEE. Yes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Does the gentleman know that 12 large cities in this country have tried parking meters and have discarded them, and does the gentleman know that the American Automobile Association is absolutely opposed to them?

Mr. McGEHEE. I know that the American Automobile Association is opposed to them, but the Keystone Automobile Association in a letter to the membership of this House said that much of the opposition they believed to be ill-founded, and they are recommending that this Congress make provision for the District Commissioners to install them in the city of Washington.

Mr. Chairman, in my humble opinion, as I stated in the beginning, this is the only way you will relieve the traffic situation in this city. There is not a Member on this floor who has not gone down town to do a little shopping and had to drive for a dozen blocks and finally pay 50 cents to park his car in order to stop 15 or 20 minutes to make a little purchase. That is what is happening because there are thousands of cars placed on the streets and left there for hours by employees of the Government and others. As I stated before, it behooves us to do that not only for ourselves but for the visitors who come here to visit the city.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] has expired.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I make the point of order that this section appropriates money out of fees to be collected, and therefore it is appropriation on a legislative bill. Line 24 provides that the purchase price of these machines shall be paid from the fees collected and the remainder of the fee shall be paid into the Treasury.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the point of order comes too late. The section has been debated and amendments have been offered, and an amendment to strike out the section has been offered.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I was attempting to get recognition from the very beginning.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MEAD). The Chair is ready to rule. The last sentence of section 4, rule 21, provides as follows:

A question of order on an appropriation in any such bill, joint resolution, or amendment thereto may be raised at any time.

It is the opinion of the Chair that the point of order is properly raised at this time and that this is purely an appropriation, and, therefore, that language, as indicated in the gentleman's point of order, is ruled out of order.

The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. NICHOLS: Page 2, after line 8, insert the following:

"TITLE II. AUTHORIZATION FOR PARKING METERS

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and empowered in their discretion to fix, prescribe, and collect fees for the parking of automobiles in or upon any street, avenue, road, highway, or other public space within the District of Columbia under their jurisdiction and control, and to make and enforce regulations to provide for the collection of such fees. Any person violating any such regulation shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment not to exceed 10 days.

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are further authorized and empowered in their discretion to purchase, rent, and install such mechanical parking meters or devices as the Commissioners may deem necessary or advisable to insure the collection of such fees as may be prescribed for the parking of vehicles as aforesaid."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is offered for the purpose of correcting the only possible objection to the section, which was raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin. It strikes out that portion of the section which would attempt to appropriate.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it is a rather unique pleasure for me, after the last one hour and a half, to be able to obtain recognition.

The city that will descend to trying to raise revenue from parking meters is in about the same category as the man who would steal pennies from a blind man's cup. It is the cheapest method of trying to trim visitors to the city, and especially to the Capital of the United States. This District is an artificial entity that exists by sufferance of the States. It belongs to our people—your people and my people, and they pay taxes to maintain it. Now, you are going to put parking meters in the streets and in addition to the taxes you take away from the people of the United States, you are going to get so cheap that you will reach into their pockets for a few paltry dimes if they come down here to see the Capitol and other shrines that the Nation has built here. [Applause.]

This city has a parking law. If the officers of the District of Columbia, charged with the enforcement of that parking law, would enforce it we would not have to put dime-snatching machines on the streets to take dimes away from our constituents who come here to visit Washington, and who are held up without benefit of gunmen for everything they buy or use.

I have been in some cities where they have these parking meters, and the rich man can hog the curb for 24 hours a day, because he can send his chauffeur over there to put a dime in the meter every time the time has expired, but the poor man, the fellow that Democrats are supposed to think about, that a Democratic committee is supposed to think about, has to deprive himself and his children of some needed money to park his little flivver downtown if he wants to go down there on Sunday or has to deliver a package or transact some necessary business.

This section ought to be defeated. I tried to defeat it on a point of order. I would have made the point of order to begin with if I could have been recognized. My point of order has been sustained. If the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma is defeated, the section will go out.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. DOWELL. These machines will also drive the poor man off of the streets, will they not?

Mr. O'MALLEY. That is what they are intended to do. If you want to park in this District, make the officers of the District police force enforce the 1-hour and 2-hour parking laws downtown. Real enforcement will help traffic and bring in lots of revenue.

They do not enforce the time limits, and there is not a Member of this House who can find a place to park for even 30 minutes downtown. We keep the streets clear in the city I represent because we enforce the law, and every citizen gets a chance at parking a little while without paying for it. We get our revenue, if necessary, from law violators who park too long and not from poor people who have to go downtown on business and tourists who visit our city and spend money there.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. If this proposition stays in this bill without the Congress knowing the slightest thing about the regulations that the Commissioners are going to impose as to these parking meters, any violation by a person coming to the Capital of the United States of a regulation passed by the Commissioners under this law will be subject to a jail sentence, as well as to a fine.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Yes; a fine of $100; and if you think you have headaches now trying to fix up your constituents whose machines are tagged, you are going to find they are nothing compared to the headaches you will have if they put parking meters on the streets and hundreds of your constituents get tickets because they forgot to fix the dime machine or could not locate a dime in their pockets. No more unconscionable form of municipal petty larceny could be devised than parking meters.

I hope the amendment is defeated.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. NICHOLS) there were—ayes 34, noes 76.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Do I understand the parliamentary situation at the present time to be that title II is entirely stricken out?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct; the entire title is stricken out.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE III—COLLECTION OF PERSONAL TAXES

SECTION 1. The assessor of the District of Columbia, or any person designated by him, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return of personal property, tangible or intangible, for taxation or for the purpose of making a return where none has been made, is authorized to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return and may summon any person to appear before him and produce books, records, papers, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the same, and the assessor, or assistant assessor, shall have power to administer oaths to such person or persons. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person, having been personally summoned, shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then in that event the assessor, or any assistant assessor, may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to said summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpenas of that court.

SEC. 2. If any person liable to pay any personal property tax to the District of Columbia neglects or refuses to pay the same when due, it shall be lawful for the collector of taxes for the District of Columbia, or any person designated by him, to collect the said taxes, with interest and penalties thereon, by distraint and sale in the manner hereinafter provided, of the goods, chattels, or effects, including stocks, securities, bank accounts, evidences of debt, and credits of the person delinquent as aforesaid. In case of such neglect or refusal of the person delinquent as aforesaid the collector, or the person designated by him, may levy upon all such property and rights to such property belonging to such person for the payment of the sum due with interest and penalties thereon and the costs that may accrue and the collector of taxes shall immediately proceed to advertise the same by public notice to be posted in the office of said collector and by advertisement three times in 1 week in one or more daily newspapers in said District, stating the time when and the place where such property shall be sold, the last publication to be at least 6 days before the date of sale and if the said taxes, with interest and penalties thereon, and the costs and expenses which shall have accrued thereon, shall not be paid before the date fixed for such sale, which shall not be less than 10 days after said levy or taking of said property, the collector shall proceed to sell at public auction such property or interest therein or so much thereof as may be needed to pay such taxes, interest, penalties, and accrued costs and expenses of such distraint and sale. Said collector shall report in detail in writing every distraint and sale of personal property to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and his accounts in respect of every such distraint or sale shall forthwith be submitted to the auditor of the District of Columbia and shall be audited by him. Any surplus resulting from such sale over and above such taxes, interest, penalties, costs, and expenses shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States and upon being claimed by the owner or owners of the property aforesaid shall be paid to him or them upon the certificate of the collector of taxes stating in full the amount of such excess.

SEC. 3. Any person in possession of property or rights to property subject to distraint upon which a levy has been made shall, upon demand by the collector, or the person designated by him, surrender such property or rights to such collector or the person designated by him, unless such property or right is at the time of such demand subject to an attachment or execution under any judicial process.

SEC. 4. Any person who fails or refuses so to surrender any of such property or rights shall be liable in his own person and estate to the District of Columbia in a sum equal to the value of the property or rights not so surrendered, but not exceeding the amount of the taxes, including interest and penalties, for the collection of which such levy has been made, together with costs and interest thereon, from the date of such levy.

SEC. 5. All persons and officers of companies and corporations are required, on demand of the collector, or the person designated by him, about to distrain or having distrained on any property or rights of property, to exhibit all books containing evidence or statements relating to the subject of distraint or the property or rights of property liable to distraint for the tax due. A violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding 30 days, or both, in a prosecution filed in the police court of the District of Columbia by the corporation counsel of the District in the name of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 6. In case of the neglect or refusal of any person to pay a personal-property tax when due, the collector of taxes, or the person designated by him, may file a certificate of such delinquent personal tax with the clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, which certificate from the date of its filing shall have the force and effect, as against the delinquent person named in such certificate, of the lien created by a judgment granted by said court, which lien shall remain in force and effect until the taxes set forth in said certificate, with interest and penalties thereon, shall be paid and said lien may be enforced by a bill in equity filed in said court.

SEC. 7. When a recovery is had in any suit or proceeding against the collector of taxes, or any person designated by him, under this act for a wrongful distraint or any other act done by him or for the recovery of any money exacted by or paid to him and by him paid into the Treasury of the United States in the performance of his official duty and the court certifies that there was probable cause for the act done by the collector or the person designated by him or that he acted under the directions of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, no execution shall issue thereon, but the amount so recovered shall, upon final judgment, be paid by the District of Columbia in the same manner as judgments against the said District are paid.

SEC. 8. The remedies provided by this title for the collection of personal-property taxes are not limited as to time, irrespective of any statute of limitations, and are in addition to any other remedies available for the collection of said taxes.

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BIGELOW: Strike out all of title III and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"TITLE III—RATE OF TAXATION ON LAND VALUES

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the rate of taxation imposed for the District of Columbia shall be 4 percent on the assessed value separate and apart from all improvements thereon of the taxable land of the District of Columbia and including the land owned by the Federal Government; and no taxes whatever shall be imposed upon any improvements upon the land."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to title III, the title to which it is offered. Title III deals with the collection of personal taxes, whereas the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio provides for the imposition of a real-estate tax.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. BIGELOW. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment is offered as a substitute for all of these taxes. If this amendment is adopted, I will move to strike out the rest of the titles of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma desire to be heard further on the point of order?

Mr. NICHOLS. No.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair feels that under the circumstances the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio is out of order.

The gentleman from Ohio could move to strike out all of title III, and if that amendment were agreed to it would be in order to offer the balance of the amendment. In other words, the gentleman would then be inserting a new title in place of a title that had been stricken from the bill.

The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BIGELOW. Then, Mr. Chairman, I modify my amendment and move to strike out title III.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BIGELOW: Beginning on page 3, line 5, strike out all of title III.

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of offering this amendment is to get a record vote and compare it with a vote that was cast 43 years ago.

Should this amendment be agreed to, of course, then the balance of the amendment, as you heard it read, would be offered. Nobody expects this amendment to carry, but an Army engineer was telling me the other day the old story of Aristotle and Galileo and the falling bodies. Aristotle said that if two bodies were pushed off at a certain height the heavier of the two would reach the ground first. But he did not try it, and none of the wise men who followed him tried it, and the people believed this theory of Aristotle until Galileo climbed up a tower and pushed two bodies off, to discover that the lighter body reached the ground as soon as the heavier body. It was only when such experiments began, when men would subject their accepted ideas to the test of experimentation, that the scientific age we are now enjoying commenced.

I think that our ideas of taxation are as old and as outmoded as Aristotle's idea of falling bodies. John Dewey, one of our great philosophers, said that nobody could claim to be educated in economics if he was not familiar with the writings of Henry George.

There was a time when land in the District of Columbia was worth only a few strings of beads. Today it is worth almost a cool billion of dollars. It is owned by individuals, but this value was not created by individuals. This is purely a social value. It was created by the growth of population; it has increased as the city has increased in size. Land value is the community's income, and the community should live on its income just as individuals are expected to live on their incomes. But because we allow the community's value to go into private pockets we have to use the taxing power to make raids on people's private property.

I am proposing this afternoon—as my friend Tom Johnson, in the Well of this House, proposed 43 years ago—this idea to the Congress of the United States. We got six votes for it then. I am curious to know how many more than six we can get for it today.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW].

Mr. Chairman, my good friend from Cincinnati proposes to strike out title III of this bill, which is purely an administrative provision. We have heard it said that the tax rate is too low and that it ought to be raised. We have heard it said the assessor does not collect the taxes that should be collected. We have therefore put an administrative provision in this bill, labeled title III, for the purpose of putting teeth into tax collections. It gives the assessor the power to distrain property and to get in the money that rightfully belongs to the District of Columbia. The gentleman from Ohio now proposes to eliminate title III, after which he will suggest that we write a single-tax provision into this bill.

His amendment would provide for a 4-percent tax on land in the District of Columbia, excluding all improvements but including the land that belongs to the Federal Government. I have seen this House embarrassed with frivolous amendments. I have seen it held up to ridicule in the press of this country because in an indifferent moment it permitted some of these silly provisions to creep into a bill that was being considered upon the floor of the House.

If you want to permit yourselves to be held up to ridicule, then just be a little indifferent to some of the amendments they are trying to sneak into this bill, such as the single-tax amendment. The wreck will then be complete, and the editorial writers and the newspaper reporters will again be firing at the Congress of the United States.

This is the time to shake ourselves out of this attitude. Let us protect the bill, because it is a pretty good bill. Let us not write in a lot of these silly, frivolous things, that may be proposed.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment that has been suggested by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW] will be defeated and that the amendment which will later be offered by my friend from Cincinnati will also be defeated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the gentleman from Cincinnati for offering this amendment because when he asks the House to strike out the title he offers a substitute to raise money. [Applause.] I do not speak of the merits of the amendment, but I am speaking from the standpoint of the fact that when he seeks to strike out, he has something to offer in its place. In other words, when the gentleman seeks to defeat a title in the bill he is willing to offer a substitute which will build it up, from the standpoint of revenue if his amendment is adopted.

Mr. Chairman, we have a responsibility, whether we like it or not, and we should be willing to discharge that responsibility. It is necessary for us to legislate for the District of Columbia.

We find the District of Columbia in the position now of needing money to carry on. Is there a man or woman in this House, if he or she was a member of a legislative body of his own city or State, who would refuse to meet a situation similar to that which today confronts the District of Columbia? Of course there is not.

Mr. Chairman, on March 15 the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision holding that State officials and State employees were not required to pay a Federal income tax. I immediately offered a resolution providing for a constitutional amendment which would require every individual in the country to pay either a Federal or State income tax or both if the income justified it. We do not now have to pay a State income tax. No Federal employee does. On the other hand State employees do not have to pay a Federal income tax. Is there any sound reason why a Federal official or employee, or State official or employee should not be required to pay the same as any other citizen? We tax the people that pay our salaries and at the same time under existing conditions do not have to pay the same as those we tax. There are over 4,000,000 people in this country today who are exempt from the payment of income taxes either to the State or to the Federal Government. I am very happy to say that every Member of the committee to which my resolution was referred, with whom I discussed my resolution, told me he is sympathetic with the objective.

A hearing will be held on the resolution in the very near future. The other day the resolution was referred to a subcommittee. A report is being secured from the Treasury. The President of the United States has endorsed the principle. Practically every metropolitan newspaper in the country likewise endorses the principle and has urged in the news and editorial columns the passage of the resolution.

In my opinion, the fairest tax assessed is to collect from those who are best able to pay.

It is my opinion that this bill should contain a provision to collect income taxes from the legal residents of the District of Columbia. Such a provision can be written and should be offered by the committee to take the place of the title the rule says is to be stricken out.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Just allow me to interpose this thought. I meant no disrespect to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW]. What I meant to convey was the thought that his amendment was revolutionary; it has not been considered at all, and for all practical purposes I can say it is frivolous in that sense.

Mr. COCHRAN. I am not talking about the merits of the proposal. The point I make is that the gentleman from Ohio had a substitute to offer to take the place of that which he was seeking to destroy. It is the first time any Member of the House has offered a substitute to raise revenue in place of the provisions in the bill that he seeks to have stricken out. Anyone who has an amendment should offer some suggestion that we can vote on that will raise the amount of revenue that the District government will lose provided some provision in the bill is eliminated. That is what I am trying to impress on the Members.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. COCHRAN. If any other Member of the House wants to defeat a title in this bill, let him be man or woman enough to offer a substitute to raise the amount of money that he or she wants to strike from the bill. We must pass a bill which will raise the necessary revenue with which to carry on the affairs of the District of Columbia. It is our responsibility to do so. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I think it is hardly necessary to discuss this amendment at great length. I do not agree with the gentleman from Ohio in reference to his single-tax program, and I therefore think it is not necessary to discuss that feature, because the instant amendment would strike out title III of the bill.

Title III, as I said in my opening remarks, is an administrative feature. We have heard many criticisms on this floor of the assessor of the District of Columbia for not collecting more money under the personal-property tax law that is now on the books. Title III strengthens the personal-property provision of existing law and gives the assessor the authority and power to examine books and to call before him anyone whom he may suspect of evading the payment of personal-property taxes under existing law.

I do not think it is necessary to argue with Members of the House that title III, above all other titles in this bill, should not be molested, harmed, or tampered with in any way. I certainly hope and feel confident the Members of the House will vote down the pending amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BIERMANN. Would it be in order for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW] to offer his amendment as a new section after title IX?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may say to the gentleman it would perhaps be better for the gentleman from Ohio to offer it as a new title in the bill rather than as a new section in this particular title.

Mr. BIERMANN. After we get through with the consideration of title III he could then offer it as another title?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes; or at the end of the bill as an additional title.

Mr. BIGELOW. May I say that I will not ask for a division at this time because at another place in the bill I will offer a similar amendment and it will not involve the other proposition.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IV—TAXES ON INSURANCE COMPANIES

SECTION 1. On and after the 1st day of July 1937, every domestic, foreign, or alien company organized as a stock, mutual, reciprocal, Lloyds, fraternal, or any other type of insurance company or association, before issuing contracts of insurance against loss of life or health, or by fire, marine, accident, casualty, fidelity and surety, title guaranty, or other hazard not contrary to public policy, shall obtain from the superintendent of insurance of the District of Columbia an annual license or certificate of authority, upon payment of a fee of $25 to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia. All licenses for insurance companies who may apply for permission to do business in the District of Columbia shall date from the first of the month in which application is made, and expire on the 30th day of April following, and payment shall be made in proportion.

SEC. 2. Any such company issuing contracts of insurance in the District of Columbia, without first having obtained license or certificate of authority from the superintendent of insurance so to do, shall upon conviction be subject to a fine of $100 per day for each day it shall engage in business without such license or certificate of authority.

SEC. 3. All prosecutions for violations of this title shall be in the police court of the District of Columbia by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants.

SEC. 4. Each of such companies shall file an annual statement, in the form prescribed by the superintendent of insurance, before March 1 of each year, of its operations for the year ending December 31 immediately preceding. Such statement shall be verified by the oath of the president and secretary or in their absence by two other principal officers. The fee for filing said statement shall be $20 and payment therefor shall be made to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 5. If any such company shall fail to file the annual statement herein required, the superintendent of insurance may thereupon revoke its license or certificate of authority to transact business in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 6. All such companies shall also pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia a sum of money as taxes equal to 2 percent of its policy and membership fees and net premium receipts on all insurance contracts on risks in the District of Columbia, said taxes to be paid before the 1st day of March of each year on the amount of income for the year ending December 31 next preceding.

"Net premium receipts" means gross premiums received less the sum of the following:

1. Premiums returned on policies canceled or not taken;
2. Premiums paid for reinsurance where the same are paid to companies duly licensed to do business in the District; and
3. Dividends paid in cash or used by policyholders in payment of renewal premiums.

SEC. 7. If any such company shall fail to pay the tax herein required, it shall be liable to the District of Columbia for the amount thereof, and in addition thereof a penalty of 8 percent per month thereafter until paid.

SEC. 8. Nothing contained in this title shall apply to any relief association, not conducted for profit, composed solely of officers and enlisted men of the United States Army or Navy, or solely of employees of any other branch of the United States Government service or solely of employees of the District of Columbia government, or solely of employees of any individual, company, firm, or corporation or to any fraternal organization which issues contracts of insurance exclusively to its own members.

SEC. 9. All laws or parts of laws insofar as they relate to insurance companies, fraternal orders, Lloyds, reciprocals, associations, or other insurance organizations, and the conduct of such insurance business, and in conflict with any provisions of this title, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 10. Should any section or provision of this title be decided by the courts to be unconstitutional or invalid, the validity of the title as a whole or of any part thereof other than the part decided to be unconstitutional shall not be affected.

SEC. 11. This title shall become effective immediately upon passage and approval.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'MALLEY: On page 8, strike out all of title IV.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, my amendment has to do with striking out this entire title. The attempt of the Committee of the District to raise revenue in this manner is on the same level, as I see it, as the attempt to install parking meters. It raises revenue from the people least able to afford it. It puts a license tax upon insurance companies of all kinds, including fraternal insurance companies, which tax will be passed on to the man or woman who owns a small insurance policy. Worse than that, in section 6 it requires every company, whether fraternal or otherwise, which sells insurance in the District to pay a 2-percent tax upon its policy and membership fees and its net premium receipts.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I do not have the time just now.

This requires a tax on the premiums paid for insurance which is going to be added to the premium cost in this District as well as throughout the United States.

Often the only thing a poor family has to fall back on is the small $500 or $1,000 insurance policy the head of the family carries upon his life. You and I know there are families that scrape and save and do without the necessities of life just to pay the monthly, sometimes even the weekly, premiums upon an insurance policy. Here we propose to tax the little fellow upon the same basis as we do the big man. A 2-percent tax upon the premium of a man buying a $50,000 policy does not bother him at all, because if he can own a $50,000 policy, the premium, no matter what it is, does not bother him. However, a 2-percent tax upon the premium of the fellow owning a $500 policy or a $1,000 policy makes a great deal of difference to him. We ought to raise revenue for the District in some other manner than by taxing the underpaid and underprivileged people of the District.

I hope the section will be stricken out for one more reason. We exempt the Army and Navy associations. Members of Army and Navy fraternal or benefit associations to me are no better than anybody else, and I do not think this committee should have brought in any exemption for such associations from these tax provisions when we propose to tax other policyholders who carry insurance.

In section 9 the bill makes changes in the insurance laws, changes we know nothing about because we have not had an opportunity to study all the insurance laws before this bill came up. I believe when we go about putting an increased tax upon insurance premiums we ought to give the matter more consideration. I believe the title should be stricken. We can raise all the revenue needed from a realty tax, which makes property owners in the District pay somewhere near what property owners in our home districts are now paying.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I love my colleague from Wisconsin [TOM O'MALLEY], and I am glad to note his interest in the downtrodden, forgotten man. The only trouble with his argument is that there is no substance to it.

In the first place, there is a 1½-percent tax on insurance premiums in the District at the present time. All this bill does is to raise it to 2 percent. By way of authority for that statement, may I say 21 States have a tax of 2 percent today, and 19 States have a tax in excess of 2 percent. One of the 19 is the State from whence comes my beloved colleague [Mr. O'MALLEY], Wisconsin, where they have a tax of 2⅜ percent. I do not know that anything more is necessary. The tax is absorbed, and has been. The insurance companies are agreeable. The tax will raise $220,000. Everybody seems to be agreeable. There was no opposition to the proposal of the tax. It simply elaborates the tax now on the books.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield with pleasure.

Mr. O'MALLEY. The gentleman has stated that my State has a tax on all premiums of 2⅜ percent. I am positive my State does not tax fraternal and mutual-benefit associations, or associations in which only members take out policies.

Mr. DIRKSEN. If the gentleman will examine the bill closely, particularly section 6, he will find that fraternal organizations which write contracts of insurance only for their members and do not overstep the line and get out into the commercial field are exempted from the provisions of this bill. When they overstep the mark, they are in competition with stock companies and ought to pay. Therefore, I ask that the amendment be voted down.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Is it not true that 2 percent is the average rate throughout the country?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Twenty-one States have a 2-percent tax, and 19 have more than 2 percent.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLINS. The best argument in favor of this provision in the bill is the fact the fire and marine insurance companies for the last 12 years, including the year 1935, have collected in premiums in the District about $26,000,000 and have paid out in losses about $8,000,000.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not know that I would agree with the figures, but there was some testimony on that subject, I may say.

Mr. COLLINS. These are figures which were given to the Committee on Appropriations by the insurance commissioner of the District.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Of course, I think standing nakedly those figures need some interpretation to be fair to all sides, but there was some testimony to that effect.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me if we are going to pass any tax legislation at all, we ought to be serious about our business here and not strike out a provision of this kind, which imposes taxes on insurance companies. I hold no brief for the insurance companies, but this is one method of taxation we can arrive at which will hurt no one. It does not apply to fraternal orders or nonprofit organizations, and the tax will not be passed on. This rate is the average rate throughout the entire country. It seems to me if we are going to offer motions to strike out these revenue-producing titles in the bill we ought to have something to substitute in place thereof, because it is the self-imposed duty of Congress to raise revenue for the District of Columbia. We cannot go on with this bill and for some technical reason or other unfair reason strike out the provisions which are necessary to make up the revenue needed to take care of the deficit in the District. I certainly hope this amendment will be voted down.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pro-forma amendment.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me a moment to see if we can get a unanimous-consent agreement as to time for debate on this title?

Mr. BIERMANN. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I have two small amendments I wish to submit and would like to have about 5 minutes or so on them.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman change his request to 15 minutes?

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HARLAN in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Chairman, I was somewhat astonished to hear the brilliant gentleman from Illinois refer to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW] as something frivolous.

It is a characteristic of the human mind that anything we do not understand we reject and condemn.

I will make this proposition to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]. If during the summer vacation or the fall vacation or the winter vacation—if we ever get one—the gentleman will read carefully the textbook of the single-taxers, Progress and Poverty, and come back here on the first day of the next session and say that it is frivolous, I will present the gentleman, if I am here, with a check for $25.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BIERMANN. I yield.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I may say to the gentleman that I have read Henry George's Progress and Poverty several times, as well as other books he has written, and I did not mean to indicate that it was frivolous. What I meant was that it is frivolous to bring the matter in here when there have been no hearings on it, and when it only obtains in a modified form in one city that I know of, and that is in Pittsburgh.

Mr. BIERMANN. It has been in operation in modified form in Pittsburgh, where they have reduced the tax on improvements on real estate 50 percent, while they have left the full amount on the land itself. It has worked well there and all effort to change it have failed.

The philosophy of the single tax is that the land is something that human beings do not create. The Creator put the land here for everybody to use. Human beings do not produce the land, neither do they produce the increase in the value of the land. The community does that, and the philosophy of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW] is that the community which produces the value ought to have the fruits thereof.

The 4-percent tax which the gentleman proposes, assuming we have a billion-dollar land valuation in the District of Columbia, would produce $40,000,000 of revenue, which, I believe, would be ample to run the District government.

I hope we get a vote on the amendment, and, of course, I hope that it passes. I wish, in the District of Columbia, where we have so much trouble about taxes, we could shift the larger part of them to the land value which the people of the United States have created here. No one will contend that the holder of a fee-simple title to a piece of land in the District of Columbia has created the value of that land. The community created that value, and every year, as the population increases in the District of Columbia, the value of the land increases, and the value of the land, according to the philosophy of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BIGELOW], ought to go to the community here, instead of to the individual person who happens to own the fee-simple title to the land. A tax on improvements is a tax on progress. Nearly every tax we have here is a tax on individual initiative or on industry or on savings. The tax that the gentleman from Ohio proposes is not a tax of that kind.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I was surprised earlier in the session to hear my distinguished colleague from Philadelphia, of whom I am very fond, make the suggestion that we change the motor-license tax and by a process of diversion take that which should go into highway construction and repair and use it for other municipal needs.

I am concerned about his suggestion, not only because of his membership on the District of Columbia Committee, but I am concerned particularly because he comes from the sovereign State of Pennsylvania. As some of you may know, we have a difficult problem in Pennsylvania at the present time with respect to the diversion of funds. Under the present State administration, a very considerable amount of funds has been diverted from the motor-vehicle fund. This was confirmed by our colleague's [Mr. WARREN] statement here in the House on the 1st of June, when he told us that in the State of Pennsylvania approximately $23,000,000 had been diverted; and, of course, this means that the State of Pennsylvania at the present time is courting the possibility of a penalty being imposed upon it under the Hayden-Cartwright bill. And from information which I believe to be authentic, and which I believe can be relied upon, I understand that those who are in power in the State of Pennsylvania at the present time are much concerned lest the penalty under the Hayden-Cartwright bill be imposed upon the State.

So I plead with my distinguished friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS] to save himself from embarrassment, and to save our State of Pennsylvania from being in the unfortunate position of having this present national administration visit a penalty upon our State by withdrawing his advocacy of diversion of funds. Certainly he does not wish to have a penalty visited upon Pennsylvania by advocating that which may cause such penalty.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. Certainly.

Mr. SACKS. Would the gentleman substitute an income tax for this tax?

Mr. DITTER. No; I would rather do this, and I am happy the gentleman makes that inquiry.

Mr. SACKS. Or increase the real-estate tax?

Mr. DITTER. I would rather insist that the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, one George E. Allen, and others who are employed, and who get their salaries from the District of Columbia, would carry on the business of the District of Columbia rather than disport themselves into the political field for the benefit of the present administration by publishing a magazine called Work.

I have here copies of this publication called Work. It carries the name of the Commissioner on the masthead.

Commissioner Allen has an appealing personality. I am very fond of him personally. Were he left undisturbed and unannoyed by these purely political problems he could direct his attentions to the needs of the District, which would likely result in very substantial savings to the taxpayers and make many of these proposed taxes entirely unnecessary.

There has been much discussion here this afternoon, with all of it directed toward increasing the load on the taxpayers. Apparently the committee has used its ingenuity to the utmost to find places to gather in revenue. Nothing has been said as to methods of overcoming extravagances and saving these people in the District from unnecessary taxation. By what color of right can the Democratic National Committee expect the residents of the District of Columbia to pay for the New Deal propaganda program? While, of course, many of the recipients of the bounties of the present administration live in the District, nevertheless there are thousands who are independent of these benefactions and upon whom no part of this propaganda cost should fall. But that is just what is happening.

By what stretch of the imagination can these pamphlets, or better still these 40-page magazines, with costly illustrations on every page, published monthly by the District of Columbia and carrying Commissioner George E. Allen's name, be justified? As I leaf through one, I find an article, Where Man Improved on Nature. The boastfulness of the title is significant. It is characteristic of much of the New Deal program, and brings back to our minds the early days of New Deal philosophy when the "brain trust" devotees advocated birth control for pigs based on an algebraic equation.

That might have been called nature in the raw. This article has nothing to do with the District of Columbia, but consists of a praise chorus of the administration in its National Park Service. Another advertising article is headed Electrified Agriculture. Where are the farms in Washington, D. C.? It is the salesman's story of the blessings of the New Deal in the power field. But while we are on the subject of farming, another appealing article comes to our attention: Studying the Soil from the Skies should arrest the attention of the hotel and apartment dwellers of this city of "magnificent distances." It may have been inserted for the purpose of keeping the residents up in the air. Here, however, is a conundrum: Trouble in the Tropics is the alliterative title. At first glance it appears alarming, but boiled down it turns out to be a glorification of the New Deal in Puerto Rico. Probably it was intended as an inducement to winter tourists from Washington to visit the island. In order to be impartial and to give summer tourists from the city equal advantages, another article takes the resident to the rocky coast of Maine. Billboard methods were resorted to when they captioned this article with the hair-raising title, The Light that Must Not Fail. Movie houses in the District may take exception to this competitive effort in titling, although no heroes or heroines are listed.

In order to keep the sportsmen satisfied, and as an encouragement to anglers, another narrative entitled "Food From the Sea" occupies a prominent place, with a photogravure of Pribilof Islands as an inducement to those Washingtonians who might consider a journey to Bering Sea.

With due regard for the diversified interests of residents of the District, the publishers sought to satisfy those with archeological aptitudes by unearthing prehistoric America in a treatise called Digging Into the Past.

To bring the charms of the New Deal nearer home to Washingtonians, Professor Tugwell tells the story of Magical Greenbelt Is Rising; Model Maryland Community. Our review of the article leads us to wonder whether its purpose is to present the "novelty", as it is called, of the magic town or to serve as a real-estate sales talk.

With a flare for literary style, but inviting a possible charge of plagiarism, the publishers again attempt to hold the interest of the residents of the District with, "Gone With the Wind", a tale of the West, and the dust storms. What this may have to do with the interests of the District other than to sing New Deal praises is difficult to comprehend. Further detailed observations are unnecessary. Suffice it to say the articles noted are but a few of those which could be cited as examples of strange activities for District of Columbia officials to conduct.

We regret that Commissioner Allen, with his splendid ability, and many others, paid by the taxpayers of the District, are required to divert their attention from District matters to conduct this political propaganda.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry I desire to propound.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I have two amendments which I desire to offer to this title which are predicated upon the action that the committee may take on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY]. I wonder if we can get a vote on that first.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have read. There are two amendments, and I ask unanimous consent that the two amendments, which concern the same matter, be considered at the same time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. Let us first have the amendments reported.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois: Page 8, line 4, after the word "Lloyds", strike out the word "fraternal", and on page 10, line 21, after the word "companies", strike out the words "fraternal orders."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendments will be considered together.

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, the House District Committee is apparently writing a new insurance code under the guise of a revenue bill. If our committee has complied with the Ramseyer rule in preparing the report on this bill, for the first time the word "fraternal" is written into any legislation dealing with the general question of insurance. I know that the members of the committee will again call the attention of the committee and of myself to section 8, which provides, among other things—and I call attention to the last phrase:

Or to any fraternal organization which issues contracts of insurance exclusively to its own members.

Never before in any insurance law fixing a 1½-percent rate on insurance premiums, or even fixing the fee for dealers in insurance, is the word "fraternal" mentioned.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Section 8, that makes exemptions under the law. It attempts to exempt those fraternal insurance companies.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. If the statement of the gentleman from Maryland can be construed as it was said, and there is no doubt about that, I do not see what objection he has to the adoption of my amendments.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. The only objection is that there are fraternal organizations that are exclusively in the insurance business in competition with legitimate insurance companies. We want to tax that class, but we do not want to tax fraternal organizations, such as the Woodmen of America and others, that issue certificates of insurance only to their own members, which are nonprofit organizations.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. Let me ask the gentleman from Maryland a question. Suppose a fraternal insurance company did write a small amount of business to others than their own members, would the total amount of business written in the District of Columbia be subject to this tax?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I think it would, if they did any business other than fraternal insurance. Like any other insurance company, they would be taxed on that portion of the business written in the District.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. I maintain it is a mistake on the part of Congress to attempt to tax directly fraternal societies of the country. I have in mind the Loyal Order of Moose and the Fraternal Order of Eagles and various orders of that nature. While there is exemption in the bill, I know those organizations throughout the country, the large fraternal beneficiary societies, would feel much better about their membership and their business in the District of Columbia if the amendments offered by me were adopted by the Committee.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. O'MALLEY. One of the things that gave me great fear for this section being included in the bill at all was that if a fraternal association sold one policy to someone else other than a member, all of their receipts in the District of Columbia would be subject to this tax. I believe that was the purpose of the bill.

Mr. THOMPSON. That is right.

Mr. O'MALLEY. That is why I sought to have the title stricken out.

Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois. I trust the Committee will vote for the amendments.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendments.

I hope that this provision in the bill will be retained. In my opinion, it is one of the finest and wisest, and I think the bill as a whole is generally in the right direction.

For 12 years, beginning in 1924, down to and including the year 1935, the premiums on two classes of insurance, to wit, fire and marine, amounted to $26,991,000 plus.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question right there?

Mr. COLLINS. I yield.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I just wanted to point out that there is one organization in the District that has an income of a quarter of a million dollars that pays no taxes, because it is supposedly a fraternal organization, but as a matter of fact they are engaged in the legitimate insurance business.

Mr. COLLINS. I thank the gentleman for the information. Please keep in mind the figures $26,991,000 in premiums. The losses paid out by these fire and marine insurance companies amounted during this same period to $8,357,000. In other words, the premiums collected amounted to about three times as much as the losses.

During the year 1935 the premiums amounted to $2,007,000, while the losses amounted to $316,000. In other words, the losses were 15.75 percent of the premiums collected, showing that there is ample justification for increased taxes on insurance companies in the District of Columbia.

Furthermore, let me quote this excerpt from a letter recently written to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Mr. J. B. Moor, superintendent of insurance:

It is generally understood that companies are required by law to set up reserves equal to 50 percent of the premiums received against losses that are expected to occur. As a rule, State rating boards actually figure that a company should operate with fair profit on a basis of only 45 percent of the premiums received, allowing 55 percent available for losses. Under the liberal formula of 50 percent for expected losses the actual experience shown in the above statistics indicates a liberal premium charge over these 12 years should not have exceeded $16,714,000, the actual overcharge thereby amounting to $10,276,679.34 during this period.

While they should have operated on about 50 percent, the losses, as compared to premiums collected, in the District of Columbia amounted to 30.96 percent, again justifying the very small tax which is imposed under the provisions of this bill. Under those circumstances, I do not believe the House of Representatives can justify a favorable vote on the amendments offered by the gentleman.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMPSON].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. THOMPSON of Illinois) there were ayes 30 and noes 34.

So the amendments were rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE V—AMENDMENT TO MOTOR VEHICLE FUEL TAX ACT

SECTION 1. Section 1 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", approved April 23, 1924, be, and the same hereby is, amended to read as follows:

"That a tax of 2 cents per gallon on all motor-vehicle fuels within the District of Columbia, sold or otherwise disposed of by an importer, or used by him in a motor vehicle operated for hire or for commercial purposes, shall be levied, collected, and paid in the manner hereinafter provided.

"All proceeds of the taxes imposed under this act, except as otherwise provided in section 10 hereof, and all moneys collected from fees charged for the registration and titling of motor vehicles, including fees charged for the issuance of permits to operate motor vehicles, shall be deposited in a special account in the Treasury of the United States entirely to the credit of the District of Columbia, and shall be appropriated and used solely and exclusively for the following purposes:

"(1) For the construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of public highways, including the necessary administrative expenses in connection therewith;

"(2) For the expenses of the office of the director of vehicles and traffic incident to the regulation and control of traffic and the administration of the same; and

"(3) For the expenses necessarily involved in the police control, regulation, and administration of traffic upon the highways: Provided, however, That the total amount to be expended under this item shall not exceed 15 percent of the total amount appropriated for pay and allowances of officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force. For the fiscal year 1938 all moneys appropriated for the construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of highways and administrative expenses in connection therewith; all moneys appropriated for the department of vehicles and traffic, and 15 percent of all moneys appropriated for pay and allowances of officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force shall be paid from and chargeable against the fund hereby created."

SEC. 2. (A) Subsection (c) of section 2 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(c) The term 'importer' means any person who brings into, or who produces, refines, manufactures, or compounds, in the District of Columbia motor-vehicle fuel to be sold, kept for sale, bartered, delivered for value, or exchanged for goods. The term 'distributor' means any person other than an importer, who purchases motor-vehicle fuel for sale to another person for resale."

(B) Section 2 of said act is further amended by adding the following subsections:

"(f) The term 'highways' includes the right-of-way of streets, avenues, and roads, bridges, viaducts, underpasses, drainage structures, guardrails, signs, signals, and protective structures in connection with highways.

"(g) The term 'construction' means the supervising, inspecting, actual building, and all expenses incidental to the construction of a highway, including the acquisition of the necessary rights-of-way.

"(h) The term 'reconstruction' means a widening or a rebuilding of the highway or any portion thereof and of sufficient width and strength to care adequately for traffic needs, including all expenses incidental to the reconstruction of a highway and the acquisition of the necessary rights-of-way.

"(i) The term 'maintenance' means the constant making of needed repairs to preserve the highway."

SEC. 3. Section 3 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. (a) No person shall bring into, or produce, refine, manufacture, or compound in the District of Columbia motor-vehicle fuel to be sold, bartered, delivered for value, or exchanged for goods, and no person shall engage in the business of importer of motor-vehicle fuels in the District of Columbia unless such person is the holder of an unrevoked license authorizing him so to do issued by the Commissioners. The application for such license shall contain (1) the name of the applicant; (2) the name under which the applicant intends to transact business and the name and place of business of the local representative; (3) the location of the applicant's place of business; (4) the date such business was established; and (5) any other information required under regulations promulgated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. In case the applicant is a corporation, the application shall also contain the corporate name, place, and time of incorporation, and the names of the officers and directors, and, if a foreign corporation, the name of its resident general agent, and in case the applicant is a partnership the names and addresses of the several persons constituting the partnership. Such application shall be signed and sworn to by the owner of such business, if owned by an individual; by the partners, if owned by a partnership; or by the president and secretary of the corporation, or by its manager or resident general agent, if owned by a corporation. At the time of applying for such license the applicant shall pay to the collector of taxes as an annual license fee the sum of $5 and shall file with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia a bond in the form to be prescribed by said Commissioners, in the approximate sum of three times the average monthly motor-fuel tax due from said such importer during the next preceding 12 months, or estimated to be so due in the next succeeding 12 months, to be executed by a surety company duly licensed to do business under the laws of the District of Columbia, payable to the District of Columbia and conditioned upon the prompt payment of any and all taxes and penalties, levied and imposed in sections 1 and 3 of this act, to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, and generally upon faithful compliance with the terms of this act by such importer: Provided, That in no case shall such bond be less than $5,000 nor more than $20,000.

"(b) Upon filing such application and bond and the payment of the fee, the assessor shall issue to such applicant a license which shall authorize the applicant to engage in the business of importer of motor-vehicle fuels for 1 year unless such license is sooner revoked.

"(c) If any importer fails, refuses, or neglects to file the monthly report within the time required by section 4, or to pay the tax within the time required by section 6, there shall be added to such tax an amount equal to the sum of 20 percent of the amount of such tax, and the assessor shall promptly notify the importer and the bonding company by notice sent by registered mail to such importer requiring him to show cause why the license should not be revoked. If in the opinion of the assessor the importer fails within 10 days after the mailing of such notice to show that failure to file the monthly report or to pay the tax as the case may be within the time required was due to accident or justifiable oversight, the assessor shall forthwith revoke such license. Any importer whose license has been revoked shall not be issued another license for 12 months following the date of said revocation.

"(d) Before any person whose license has been revoked may obtain another license to engage in the business of importer of motor-vehicle fuels, such person shall pay all delinquent taxes and penalties due hereunder remaining unpaid by him."

SEC. 4. Section 5 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That invoices shall be rendered by importers and distributors to all purchasers from them of motor-vehicle fuel within the District of Columbia except in case of retail sales. Said invoices shall contain a statement, printed thereon in a conspicuous place, that the liability to the District of Columbia for the tax herein imposed has been assumed by a licensed importer named in said statement and that the importer has paid the tax or will pay it on or before the last day of the calendar month next succeeding the purchase."

SEC. 5. Section 7 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 7. That the records of all purchases, receipts, sales, other dispositions, and uses of motor-vehicle fuel of every importer, distributor, or dealer shall, at all times during the business hours of the day, be subject to inspection by the assessor and the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, or by their duly authorized agents, or by any other agent duly authorized by the Commissioners to make such inspection."

SEC. 6. Section 8 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 8. That it shall be unlawful for any person to accept or receive from any importer or distributor, except in cases of retail sales, any motor-vehicle fuel unless the statement provided for in section 5 of this act appears upon the invoice for the fuel. If any such motor-vehicle fuel is received and accepted by any person upon the invoice of which said statement does not appear, such person shall pay to the collector of taxes the tax herein imposed."

SEC. 7. Section 11 of said act is hereby amended by striking out subsection (b) thereof and amending subsection (a) to read as follows:

"SEC. 11. That any person violating any provision of sections 3 to 6, inclusive, or section 8, or refusing or obstructing inspection under section 7, or falsely making any statement or report required by this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

SEC. 8. This title shall take effect 30 days after the passage and approval of this act.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against that part of section 2 on page 12, line 2, beginning with the words "and shall", through and including line 24 on page 12, on the ground that it is an appropriation and violates the rule which requires that appropriations shall come from the Committee on Appropriations.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman advise the Chair of the language to which he makes the point of order?

Mr. ENGEL. On page 12, line 2, commencing with the words "and shall be appropriated", continuing through the remainder of the section.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes, Mr. Chairman. I do not believe the point of order will lie. This section first does not appropriate any money. It is only an affirmative direction for the expenditure of money or an indication of how the money shall be expended, but it does not undertake, either by language or implication, to appropriate money.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair will state that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has stated the matter correctly. The point of order is overruled.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SACKS: On page 11, line 15, after the word "of", strike out the figure "2" and insert "4."

On line 20, strike out the word "all" and insert "half of the."

On page 12, at the end of the page, line 24, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"The remaining half of the proceeds of the tax imposed under this act shall be deposited in the general account of the Treasury of the United States entirely to the credit of the District of Columbia and shall be appropriated and used for all general purposes of the District of Columbia."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for an additional 5 minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, much as I would dislike to object to a request made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, it seems rather unfair, the time having been limited to only 15 minutes, that the gentleman himself should have two-thirds of it.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, it seems to me it would be unfair to the other members of the committee to allow any member more than 5 minutes, in view of the limitation that has been placed upon debate.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that he may proceed for 10 minutes?

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, amendments have been offered to strike out titles in bills and complaint has been made that no constructive program has been offered to take the place of that stricken out. At this time I intend to offer a constructive program that will help the entire bill. As I said before, this is a temporary tax to take care of a deficiency. The committee first offered an income tax, which was stricken out by the committee itself. They are now offering an increase in the real-estate tax.

This increase of 2 cents in the gasoline tax will raise enough money to supply the deficiency of this year. It will take the place of the income tax, should the House want one, or the increase in the real-estate tax. As has been pointed out, every State in the Union has a higher gasoline tax than the District of Columbia. Every State bordering the District has higher gasoline taxes than the District; for instance, in Virginia the gas tax is 5 cents and in Maryland it is 4 cents. In the State of West Virginia the gas tax is 5 cents.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield.

Mr. Chairman, I am not taking one cent away from the highway funds. I am giving them exactly what they wanted in this bill—I am giving them $2,500,000, the amount that would be raised by the 2-cent tax and the amount that they said would be necessary.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I refuse to yield at this moment. The other 2 cents of the gasoline tax I propose is a temporary tax to take care of the deficit. It would be put into the general fund to take care of the deficiency.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. SACKS. I cannot yield at this moment.

Mr. Chairman, if this amendment be adopted, the money that would go into the general fund from this extra 2 cents would obviate the necessity of an income tax, and there would be no need for an increase in the real-estate tax unless it were necessary for other purposes, and then the Commissioners would raise the rate. The gentleman from Texas, furthermore, is going to offer an amendment taxing chain stores, which would bring in $750,000. If the committee's contention be correct that the District would lose $700,000 from the Federal Government, then the $750,000 which would be brought in by the Dies amendment would offset it.

Mr. Chairman, it is a question of policy. We are in dispute. Some Members want an income tax imposed upon the residents of the District, some Members say there should be an increase in the real-estate tax, other Members say there should be a tax on insurance premiums. I say to you that the way to make up this deficiency is to levy a temporary additional tax on gasoline. This does not throw the District of Columbia out of line with any other State in the Union in the matter of Federal highway aid. I want to read to my colleagues what the gasoline taxes are in some of the other States. [Applause.]

Gasoline taxes in force today

	Cents
Alabama	6
Arizona	5
Arkansas	6½
California	3
Colorado	4
Connecticut	3
Delaware	4
Florida	7
Georgia	6
Idaho	5
Illinois	3
Indiana	4
Iowa	3
Kansas	3
Kentucky	5
Louisiana	7
Maine	4
Maryland	4
Massachusetts	3
Michigan	3
Minnesota	3
Mississippi	6
Missouri	2
Montana	5
Nebraska	5
Nevada	4
New Hampshire	4
New Jersey	3
New Mexico	5
New York	3
North Carolina	6
North Dakota	3
Ohio	4
Oklahoma	4
Oregon	5
Pennsylvania	4
Rhode Island	2
South Carolina	6
South Dakota	4
Tennessee	7
Texas	4
Utah	4
Vermont	4
Virginia	5
Washington	5
West Virginia	4
Wisconsin	4
Wyoming	4
District of Columbia	2
Average	3.85

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SHORT. What I wanted to say when I asked the gentleman to yield was that in my State of Missouri the gasoline taxes were the same.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, under ordinary circumstances I would be sympathetic toward this amendment, for, as I have often said on the floor of this House, I believe that the people of the District of Columbia should be taxed to a similar extent as are the people in my district; but I feel that there is a limit. I have always been in favor of a 4-cent gasoline tax. In view of the fact, however, that we are now placing on the automobile owners of the District an additional burden running from $1 to $8 $9, and $12, and up to $150 on trucks by the proposed weight tax, it seems to me that at this time we ought to leave the automobile owners alone until we see what effect this weight tax will have on the District finances. Later, if necessary, if we do not receive sufficient money, we can raise the tax on gasoline. At this time, however, in view of the weight tax, I think we ought to leave the gas tax alone.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. The Keystone Automobile Club wrote to all the Members of Congress, urging us to vote for the parkometer proposal, and in addition to the license fee a weight increase on trucks. Congress has struck out the parkometer proposition. Since the tax on gasoline does not necessarily set the price of gasoline, why not give this increased gasoline tax a trial for the District?

We have these other taxes on cars, based on weight and all that. We have also a 4-cent gasoline tax.

Mr. PALMISANO. I agree with the gentleman from Texas to a certain extent, but this is the proposition we have today. We are now raising the tax on automobiles, not only by way of putting on a weight tax but by way of a personal tax also. The tax on real estate and tangible property will be increased 20 percent, and I expect to support that amendment. In addition we are raising the automobile tax to eight or nine dollars on each private machine and putting a tax all the way up to $150 on 5- and 10-ton trucks. If we do not receive enough, in a year or 2 years from now the Members may raise the tax.

Mr. PATRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. PATRICK. Is not the gentleman's State losing a lot of revenue on account of the tax being 2 cents a gallon in the District of Columbia?

Mr. PALMISANO. I may say to the gentleman I am somewhat in sympathy with the 4 cents a gallon tax, but in view of the increase put on automobiles by virtue of the increase in the weight tax and so forth, I feel we ought to let it alone at this time so that we may see what revenue will be obtained under this act.

Mr. MILLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. MILLS. Did the investigation reveal how this tax compared with the tax in other parts of the country?

Mr. PALMISANO. No.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, the practical situation as it applies to this gasoline tax in the District of Columbia at the moment is that the Commissioners and everyone concerned have appeared before this committee and figured how much money they need to carry on the highway activities of the District of Columbia for the ensuing year. It has been determined by them and recommended to the House by your committee that this 2-cent tax, plus the weight tax on automobiles, is all the money the District of Columbia needs for the coming year to carry on the highway program.

Mr. SHORT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. It should not be forgotten that the District of Columbia comprises a comparatively small area as compared with the various States. In Missouri, the tax on gasoline is the same as in the District of Columbia. It must also be remembered that there are more cars per capita in the District by far than in any other city in the United States; and at the present time we have a surplus in the Treasury so far as the gasoline tax is concerned.

Mr. NICHOLS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SHORT. Gas and automobile taxes are the only cheap things in Washington. For God's sake let us hold on to them.

Mr. NICHOLS. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, a great deal has been said about hurting the poor people. My distinguished friend from Wisconsin almost cried a minute ago when he talked about putting parking-meter equipment on the street which would make poor people pay a nickel to park. This amendment would increase by 2 cents the cost of every gallon of gasoline those same poor people have to buy to run those same automobiles that they are not able to pay a nickel to park by the curb.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. O'MALLEY. The gentleman must not forget that a Ford uses less gasoline than a Packard, but a Packard would pay the same as the Ford under the gentleman's parking meters.

Mr. NICHOLS. Now, then, with reference to the diversion feature, I have pointed out to the House before if this amendment is adopted no one could question that that is a diversion of the funds because it takes funds raised from the collection of the motor-fuel tax and puts it in the general fund, which is a diversion, and immediately it costs the District of Columbia $700,000. Not only that but you go against the principle that has been established in every State in the United States against diversion.

There is only one excuse for the collection of a motor fuel tax and that is because the motor vehicle destroys and wears out the highway over which that particular mode of transportation travels; therefore it is time-honored that all of the tax derived from that particular mode of transportation should go back to the improvement and maintenance of that particular thing which it destroys and nothing else. Because it has been known by lawmakers for years that gasoline was so easy to tax, the Hayden-Cartwright Act was passed to protect that commodity and the users of that commodity against the abuse of this tax, which is so easy to levy.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. SACKS. Does the gentleman think a 4-cent a gallon tax is an abuse of that?

Mr. NICHOLS. I do when 2 cents is all that is needed.

Mr. SACKS. But they need more money.

Mr. SHORT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SHORT. Coming from Oklahoma, which is an oil- and gas-producing State, the gentleman knows that we pay more taxes on gasoline in some instances than it costs to produce it?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLLINS to the amendment offered by Mr. SACKS: Strike out the figure "4" in said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the figure "3."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS] to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SACKS) there were—ayes 20, nays 40.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE VI—REGISTRATION FEES FOR MOTOR VEHICLES

SECTION 1. As used in this title—

(a) The term "motor vehicle" means any vehicle propelled by an internal-combustion engine or by electricity or steam, except road rollers, farm tractors, and vehicles propelled only upon stationary rails or tracks.

(b) The term "person" means an individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

(c) The term "owner" means a person who holds the legal title to a motor vehicle or trailer the registration of which is required in the District of Columbia. If a vehicle is the subject of an agreement for the conditional sale or lease thereof with the right of purchase upon performance of the condition stated in the agreement and with an immediate right of possession vested in the conditional vendee or lessee, or if a mortgagor of a vehicle is entitled to possession, then such conditional vendee or lessee or mortgagor shall be deemed the owner for the purpose of these regulations.

(d) The term "director" means the director of vehicles and traffic of the District of Columbia, including assistants or agents duly designated by the Commissioners.

(e) The term "dealer" means any person engaged in the business of manufacturing, distributing, or dealing in motor vehicles.

(f) The term "public highway" means any road, street, alley, or way, open to use of the public, as a matter of right, for purposes of vehicular traffic.

(g) The term "trailer" means a vehicle without motor power intended or used for carrying property or persons and drawn or intended to be drawn by a motor vehicle, whether such vehicle without motor power carries the weight of the property or persons wholly on its own structure or whether a part of such weight rests upon or is carried by a motor vehicle.

(h) The term "farm tractor" means a motor vehicle designed and used primarily for drawing implements of agricultural husbandry.

(i) The term "pneumatic tire" means a tire inflated with compressed air.

REGISTRATION

SEC. 2. (a) No motor vehicle shall be operated and no trailer operated or moved on the public highways of the District of Columbia (except motor vehicles or trailers operated by nonresidents, exempted under the provisions of section 8 of the District of Columbia Traffic Act, 1925, as amended (D. C. Code, title 6, sec. 245a), and motor vehicles covered by a dealer's registration as provided in subsection (b) (1) of this section) unless registered in the department of vehicles and traffic of the District of Columbia by the owner thereof. Upon receipt of an application from the owner of a motor vehicle and (except in the case of a motor vehicle covered by subsection (b) (2) of this section) payment of a registration fee computed as provided in section 3, and if there is in force with respect to such motor vehicle a valid certificate of title issued under the District of Columbia Traffic Act, 1925, as amended, the director shall issue to such owner a registration certificate and identification tags for such motor vehicle.

(b) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia by regulation shall provide for the issuance by the director—

(1) Annually to any dealer in motor vehicles, upon payment of the fee prescribed in section 3, of a registration certificate and identification tags bearing a distinguishing dealer's mark, for interchangeable use on motor vehicles in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Commissioners;

(2) Annually, without charge, of certificates of registration and identification tags for all motor vehicles owned by the United States or by the District of Columbia, or officially used by any duly accredited representative of a foreign government; and

(3) Of duplicate registration certificates or duplicate identification tags, upon proof satisfactory to the director of loss, mutilation, or destruction thereof, upon payment of a fee of $1 for each set of duplicate tags or 50 cents for each duplicate registration certificate.

(c) All registrations made under this title shall expire at midnight on the last day of the calendar year for which the registrations were made unless the time be extended by the Commissioners. During the last 2 months of any calendar year registrations may be made for the next ensuing calendar year, and from December 16 to 31, both inclusive, it shall be lawful to operate a motor vehicle registered for the next ensuing year.

(d) Upon the sale or other transfer to another owner of any motor vehicle registered under this title, the registration thereof shall expire. The owner selling or otherwise transferring such vehicle may register another motor vehicle for the unexpired portion of the current year upon payment of a fee of $1 and a sum equal to the difference between the registration fee originally paid and the fee computed for such other motor vehicle under section 3, in case the latter is the greater.

(e) The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title and shall prescribe such form of application for registration, such form of registration certificate, such design of identification tags, and provide for the keeping of such records of registration and transfers of registration as will facilitate the identification and the regulation of motor vehicles operated in the District of Columbia.

REGISTRATION FEES

SEC. 3. (a) There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each calendar year for each motor vehicle operated in the District of Columbia and for each trailer operated or moved in the District of Columbia required to be registered hereunder, the registration fees provided in this section.

(b) Class A: For each gasoline-propelled passenger vehicle, including passenger vehicles licensed under paragraph 31 (b) or paragraph 31 (d) of section 7 of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, approved July 1, 1902, as amended by the act of Congress approved July 1, 1932—

(1) When equipped with pneumatic tires, the manufacturer's shipping weight of which is not more than 3,500 pounds, $5; more than 3,500 pounds and not more than 4,500 pounds, $8; over 4,500 pounds, $12.

(2) When equipped with other than pneumatic tires, double the above fees.

Class B: For each gasoline-propelled truck, tractor, trailer, and passenger-carrying vehicle for hire having a seating capacity of eight passengers or more in addition to the driver or operator, with the exception of passenger vehicles licensed under paragraph 31 (b) of section 7 of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, approved July 1, 1902, amended by the act of Congress approved July 1, 1932—

(1) When equipped with pneumatic tires, the manufacturer's shipping weight of the chassis, plus the weight of the cab and body, is not more than 2,000 pounds, $15; more than 2,000 pounds and not more than 4,000 pounds, $20; more than 4,000 pounds and not more than 6,000 pounds, $35; more than 6,000 pounds and not more than 8,000 pounds, $50; more than 8,000 pounds and not more than 10,000 pounds, $65; more than 10,000 pounds and not more than 12,000 pounds, $75; more than 12,000 pounds and not more than 16,000 pounds, $100; over 16,000 pounds, $150.

(2) When equipped with other than pneumatic tires, with the exception of trailers, double the above fees.

Class C. For each motorcycle, motor bicycle, motor tricycle, and motor wheel, $5.

Class D. Motor vehicles not propelled by gasoline, double the fees for similar vehicles propelled by gasoline.

Class E. For dealers' identification tags, first three sets of tags, $25, and $5 for each additional set.

(c) When application for registration of any motor vehicle is received by the director on or after August 1, the registration fee for such vehicle for the current year shall be one-half the amount provided for the class in which such vehicle falls.

(d) All proceeds from fees payable under this title and all moneys collected from the motor-vehicle fuel tax, and fees charged for the titling of motor vehicles, including fees charged for the issuance of permits to operate motor vehicles, shall be deposited in a special account in the Treasury of the United States entirely to the credit of the District of Columbia and shall be appropriated and used solely and exclusively for the following purposes:

(1) For construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of public highways, including the necessary administrative expenses in connection therewith;

(2) For the expenses of the office of the director of vehicles and traffic incident to the regulation and control of traffic and the administration of the same; and

(3) For the expenses necessarily involved in the police control, regulation, and administration of traffic upon the highways: Provided, however, That the total amount to be expended under this item shall not exceed 15 percent of the total amount appropriated for pay and allowances of officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force.

For the fiscal year 1938 all moneys appropriated for the construction, reconstruction, improvement, and maintenance of highways and administrative expenses in connection therewith, all moneys appropriated for the department of vehicles and traffic, and 15 percent of all moneys appropriated for pay and allowances for officers and members of the Metropolitan Police force shall be paid from and chargeable against the fund hereby created.

UNLAWFUL ACTS

SEC. 4. (a) It shall be unlawful—

(1) For any person to operate any motor vehicle or trailer upon any public highway of the District of Columbia (except motor vehicles or trailers operated by nonresidents exempted under the provisions of section 8 of the District of Columbia Traffic Act, 1925, as amended (D. C. Code, title 6, sec. 245a)) (A) if such motor vehicle or trailer is not registered as required by this title, (B) if such motor vehicle or trailer does not have attached thereto and displayed thereon the identification tags required therefor, or (C) if such person does not have in his possession or in the motor vehicle or trailer operated the certificate of registration required therefor.

(2) For the owner of any motor vehicle knowingly to permit the operation thereof contrary to any provision of paragraph (1).

(3) To use a false or fictitious name or address in any application for registration or any renewal or duplicate thereof, or knowingly to make any false statement or conceal any material fact in any such application.

(b) Any person violating any provision of this title or the regulations made or promulgated under the authority hereof shall upon conviction thereof be subject to a fine of not more than $300 or imprisonment of not more than 30 days, or both such fine and imprisonment. All such prosecutions shall be in the police court of the District of Columbia upon information filed by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants in the name of the District of Columbia.

PROVISIONS NOT AFFECTED

SEC. 5. (a) Nothing in this title shall be construed to affect the power of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, under the District of Columbia Traffic Act, 1925, as amended (D. C. Code, title 6, sec. 243; Public, No. 742, 71st Cong.), to make rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the provisions of this title, with respect to the registration of motor vehicles.

(b) Nothing in this title shall be construed to relieve any person from the payment of any license tax under section 7 of the District of Columbia Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, approved July 1, 1902, as amended (D. C. Code, title 20, secs. 897, 881, 882).

REPEALS

SEC. 6. Sections 12 and 13 of the act entitled "An act to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuels sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", approved April 23, 1924, as amended (D. C. Code, title 20, secs. 842, 843), are repealed.

EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 7. This title shall take effect on January 1 of the first calendar year following the enactment thereof, except that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to provide for the registration of motor vehicles under this title for such calendar year, beginning with the 1st day of November preceding such effective date.

TITLE VII—INHERITANCE AND ESTATE TAXES

Taxes shall be imposed upon estates of decedents and upon the shares of beneficiaries of such estates as hereinafter provided:

ARTICLE I—INHERITANCE TAX

SECTION 1. (a) All real property and tangible and intangible personal property, or any interest therein, having its taxable situs in the District of Columbia, transferred from any person who may die seized or possessed thereof, either by will or by law, or by right of survivorship, and all such property, or interest therein, transferred by deed, grant, bargain, gift, or sale, made or intended to take effect in possession after the death of the decedent, or made in contemplation of death, to or for the use of, in trust or otherwise, the father, mother, husband, wife, children by blood or legally adopted children, or any other lineal descendants or lineal ancestors of the decedent, shall be subject to a tax of 1 percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $5,000.

(b) So much of said property as is in excess of $2,000, so transferred to each of the brothers, sisters, nephews, and nieces of the whole or halfblood of the decedent shall be subject to a tax of 3 percent thereof.

(c) So much of said property as is in excess of $1,000, so transferred to each of the grandnephews and grandnieces of the decedent and all persons other than those included in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, and all firms, institutions, associations, and corporations, shall be subject to a tax of 5 percent thereof.

(d) Executors, administrators, trustees, and other persons making distribution shall only be discharged from liability for the amount of such tax, with the payment of which they are charged, by paying the same as hereinafter described.

(e) Property transferred exclusively for public or municipal purposes, to the United States or the District of Columbia, or exclusively for charitable, educational, or religious purposes within the District of Columbia, shall be exempt from any and all taxation under the provisions of this section.

(f) Where any beneficiary has died or may hereafter die within 6 months after the death of the decedent and before coming into the possession and enjoyment of any property passing to him, and before selling, assigning, transferring, or in any manner contracting with respect to his interest in such property, and the tax on the property so passing to said beneficiary has not been paid, then such property shall be taxed only once and the tax shall be assessed on the property received from such share by each beneficiary thereof, finally entitled to the possession and enjoyment thereof, as if he had been the original beneficiary, and the exemptions and rates of taxation shall be governed by the respective relationship of each of the ultimate beneficiaries to the first decedent.

(g) The provisions of this section shall apply to property in the estate of every person who shall die after this title becomes effective.

(h) The transfer of any property, or interest therein, within 2 years prior to death, shall, unless shown to the contrary, be deemed to have been made in contemplation of death.

SEC. 2. The tax provided in section 1 shall be paid on the market value of the property or interest therein at the time of the death of the decedent as appraised by the assessor of the District of Columbia, or, in the discretion of the assessor, upon the value as appraised by the probate court of said District. The taxable portion of real or personal property held jointly or by the entireties shall be determined by dividing the value of the entire property by the number of persons in whose joint names it was held.

SEC. 3. The appraisal thus made shall be deemed and taken to be the true value of the said property or interest therein upon which the said tax shall be paid, and the amount of said tax and the tax imposed by article II of this title shall be a lien on said property or interest therein for the period of 10 years from the date of the death of the decedent.

SEC. 4. The personal representative of every decedent, the value of whose estate is in excess of $1,000, shall, within 15 months after the death of the decedent, report under oath, to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose, an itemized schedule of all the property (real, personal, and mixed) of the decedent; the market value thereof at the time of the death of the decedent; the name or names of the persons to receive the same and the actual value of the property that each will receive; the relationship of such persons to the decedent, and the age of any persons who receive a life interest in the property, and any other information which the assessor may require. Said personal representative shall, within 18 months of the date of the death of the decedent and before distribution of the estate, pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia the taxes imposed by section 1 upon the distributive shares and legacies in his hands and the tax imposed by section 1 hereof against each distributive share or legacy shall be charged against such distributive share or legacy unless the will shall otherwise direct.

SEC. 5. The personal representative of the decedent shall collect from each beneficiary entitled to a distributive share or legacy the tax imposed upon such distributive share or legacy in section 1 hereof, and if the said beneficiary shall neglect or fail to pay the same within 15 months after the date of the death of the decedent such personal representative shall, upon the order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, sell for cash so much of said distributive share or legacy as may be necessary to pay said tax and all the expenses of said sale.

SEC. 6. The bond of the personal representative of the decedent shall be liable for all taxes and penalties assessed under this title: Provided, That in no case shall the bond or the personal representative be liable for a greater sum than is actually received by him.

SEC. 7. Every person entitled to receive property taxable under section 1 hereof which property is not under the control of a personal representative, and is over $1,000 in value shall, within 60 days after the death of the decedent, report under oath to the assessor, on forms provided for that purpose, an itemized schedule of all property (real, personal, and mixed) received or to be received by such person; the market value of the same at the time of the death of the decedent and the relationship of such person to the decedent; and any other information which the assessor may require. The tax on the transfer of any such property shall be paid by such person to the collector of taxes within 6 months after the date of the death of the decedent.

SEC. 8. The register of wills of the District of Columbia shall report to the assessor on forms provided for the purpose every qualification in the District of Columbia upon the estate of a decedent. Such report shall be filed with the assessor at least once every month, and shall contain the name of the decedent, the date of his death, the name and address of the personal representative, and the value of the estate, as shown by the petition for administration or probate.

SEC. 9. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have supervision of the enforcement of this title and shall have the power to make such rules and regulations, consistent with its provisions, as may be necessary for its enforcement and efficient administration and to provide for the granting of extension of time within which to perform the duties imposed by this title. The assessor shall determine all taxes assessable under this title and immediately upon the determination of same, shall forward a statement of the taxes determined to the person or persons chargeable with the payment thereof and shall give advice thereof to the collector of taxes. Any person dissatisfied with such determination either as to value or the amount of tax imposed, may, within 30 days after such determination, appeal to the Board of Personal Tax Appeals. Upon hearing, said Board may affirm, modify, or set aside the determination of the assessor. The Board of Personal Tax Appeals is authorized to convene at such times as may be necessary to exercise its functions under this section.

The assessor of the District of Columbia is hereby authorized and empowered to summon any person before him or any member of the board of assistant assessors or the Board of Personal Tax Appeals to give testimony on oath or affirmation or to produce all books, records, papers, documents, or other legal evidence as to any matter relating to this title, and the assessor or any member of the board of assistant assessors or Board of Personal Tax Appeals is authorized to administer oaths and to take testimony for the purposes of the administration of this title. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then and in that event the assessor may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to said summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpenas of that court.

SEC. 10. In all cases in which there shall be a grant, devise, descent, or bequest to take effect in possession or come into actual enjoyment after the expiration of one or more life estates, the taxes thereon shall be payable by the person or persons so entitled thereto, and within 1 year after the date when the right of possession accrues to the person or persons so entitled, upon the actual value of the property or the interest of the beneficiary therein at the time when said beneficiary becomes entitled to the same in possession or enjoyment. Said tax shall be a lien for the period of 10 years on the property or interest therein from the date when said beneficiary becomes entitled to the same in possession or enjoyment.

SEC. 11. If the taxes imposed by this title are not paid when due, 1 percent interest for each month or portion of a month from the date when the same were due until paid shall be added to the amount of said taxes and collected as a part of the same, and said taxes shall be collected by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia in the manner provided by the law for the collection of taxes due the District of Columbia on personal property in force at the time of such collection.

SEC. 12. If any person shall fail to perform any duty imposed upon him by the provisions of this title or the regulations made hereunder the Commissioners of the District of Columbia may proceed by petition for mandamus to compel performance and upon the granting of such writ the court shall adjudge all costs of such proceeding against the delinquent.

SEC. 13. In case of any failure to make or file a return within the time prescribed by this title or within such additional time as may be granted under regulations promulgated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the assessor shall add to the tax 25 percent of its amount. In case a false or fraudulent return is willfully made, the assessor shall add to the tax 50 percent of its amount. The amount so added to any tax shall be collected as a part of the tax and in the same manner as is herein provided for the collection of the tax: Provided, That the penalties provided in this section shall be in addition to the penalty provided in section 11 hereof.

SEC. 14. Any person required by this title to pay a tax or required by law or regulation made under authority thereof to make a return or keep any records or supply any information for the purposes of computation, assessment, or collection of any tax imposed by this title, who willfully fails to pay such tax, make any such return, or supply any such information at the time or times required by law or regulation shall, in addition to other penalties provided by law, be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both.

SEC. 15. When the assessor is satisfied that the tax liability of any estate has been fully discharged or provided for, he may, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners of said District, issue his certificate, releasing any or all property of such estate from the lien herein imposed.

SEC. 16. No person holding, within the District of Columbia, tangible or intangible assets of any resident or nonresident decedent shall deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, unless notice of the date and place of such intended transfer be served upon the assessor of the District of Columbia at least 10 days prior to such delivery or transfer, nor shall any person holding, within the District of Columbia, any assets of a resident or nonresident decedent deliver or transfer the same or any part thereof to any person other than an executor, administrator, or collector of the estate of such decedent appointed by said District court without retaining a sufficient portion or amount thereof to pay any tax which may be assessed on account of the transfer of such assets under the provisions of this article and article II without an order from the assessor of the District of Columbia authorizing such transfer. It shall be lawful for the assessor of the District of Columbia personally, or by his representatives, to examine said assets at any time before such delivery or transfer. Failure to serve such notice or to allow such examination or to retain as herein required a sufficient portion or amount to pay the taxes imposed by this title shall render such person liable to the payment of such taxes. The assessor of the District may issue a certificate authorizing the transfer of any such assets whenever it appears to the satisfaction of said assessor that no tax is due thereon.

SEC. 17. The word "person" when used in this title shall include individuals, partnerships, associations, and corporations.

ARTICLE II—ESTATE TAXES

SEC. 18. In addition to the taxes imposed by article I, there is hereby imposed upon the transfer of the estate of every decedent who, after this title becomes effective, shall die a resident of the District of Columbia, a tax equal to 80 percent of the Federal estate tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301, title III, of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted.

SEC. 19. There shall be credited against and applied in reduction of the tax imposed by section 18 of this title the amount of any estate, inheritance, legacy, or succession tax lawfully imposed by any State or Territory of the United States, in respect of any property included in the gross estate for Federal estate-tax purposes as prescribed in title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted: Provided, however, That only such taxes as are actually paid and credit therefor claimed and allowed against the Federal estate tax may be applied as a credit against and in reduction of the tax imposed by section 18.

SEC. 20. In no event shall the tax imposed by section 18 of this title exceed the difference between the maximum credit which might be allowed against the Federal estate tax imposed by title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, and the aggregate amount of the taxes described in section 19 of this title (but not including the tax imposed by sec. 18) allowable as a credit against the Federal estate tax.

SEC. 21. The purpose of section 18 of this title is to secure for the District of Columbia the benefit of the credit allowed under the provisions of section 301 (c) of title III of the Revenue Act of 1926, as amended, or as hereafter amended or reenacted, to the extent that the District of Columbia may be entitled by the provisions of said revenue act, by imposing additional taxes, and the same shall be liberally construed to effect such purpose: Provided, That the amount of the tax imposed by section 18 of this title shall not be decreased by any failure to secure the allowance of credit against the Federal estate tax.

SEC. 22. Every executor or administrator of a decedent dying a resident of the District of Columbia or, if there is no executor or administrator appointed, qualified, and acting within the District of Columbia, then any person in actual or constructive possession of any property forming part of the gross estate of the decedent for Federal estate-tax purposes shall, within 30 days of the filing of the return for Federal estate-tax purposes required by section 304 of the Revenue Act of 1926, file with the assessor for the District of Columbia, a copy, verified by the affidavit of the person filing the return with the assessor, of such Federal estate-tax return and shall, within 30 days after the date of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, confirming, increasing, or diminishing the tax shown to be due, file a copy of such communication with the assessor. With the copy of the Federal estate-tax return there shall be filed an affidavit as to the several amounts paid or expected to be paid as taxes within the purview of section 19 hereof.

SEC. 23. The assessor of the District of Columbia shall, upon receipt of the return and accompanying affidavit, assess such amount as he may determine from the basis of the return, to be due the District of Columbia. Upon receipt of a copy of any communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, herein required to be filed, the assessor shall make such additional assessment or shall make such abatement of the assessment as may appear proper.

SEC. 24. The tax imposed by this article shall be paid to the collector of taxes within 30 days after the determination of said taxes by the assessor of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 25. If any provision of this title, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the title, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 26. This title shall become effective at 12:01 a. m. the day immediately following its approval.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIES: Page 29, line 9, strike out all after the word "decedent", down to and including line 21, and insert the following:

"shall be subject to a tax on the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $5,000, at the following rates:

"(1) Two percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $5,000, but not in excess of $15,000.

"(2) Two and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $15,000, but not in excess of $25,000.

"(3) Three percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $25,000, but not in excess of $35,000.

"(4) Three and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $35,000, but not in excess of $45,000.

"(5) Four percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $45,000, but not in excess of $55,000.

"(6) Four and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $55,000, but not in excess of $65,000.

"(7) Five percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $65,000, but not in excess of $75,000.

"(8) Five and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $75,000, but not in excess of $85,000.

"(9) Six percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $85,000, but not in excess of $100,000.

"(10) Ten percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $100,000, but not in excess of $200,000.

"(11) Fifteen percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $200,000.

"(B) So much of said property as is in excess of $2,000 so transferred to each of the brothers, sisters, nephews, and nieces of the whole or half blood of the decedent shall be subject to a tax at the following rates:

"(1) Three percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $2,000, but not in excess of $12,000.

"(2) Three and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $12,000, but not in excess of $22,000.

"(3) Four percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $22,000, but not in excess of $32,000.

"(4) Four and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $32,000, but not in excess of $42,000.

"(5) Five percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $42,000, but not in excess of $52,000.

"(6) Five and one-half percent of much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $52,000, but not in excess of $62,000.

"(7) Six percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $62,000, but not in excess of $72,000.

"(8) Six and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $72,000, but not in excess of $82,000.

"(9) Seven percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $82,000, but not in excess of $100,000.

"(10) Eleven percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $100,000 but not in excess of $200,000.

"(11) Sixteen percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $200,000.

"(C) So much of said property as is in excess of $1,000, so transferred to each of the grandnephews and grandnieces of the decedent and all persons other than those included in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, and all firms, institutions, associations, and corporations, shall be subject to a tax at the following rates:

"(1) Five percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $1,000 but not in excess of $11,000.

"(2) Five and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $11,000 but not in excess of $21,000.

"(3) Six percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $21,000 but not in excess of $31,000.

"(4) Six and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $31,000 but not in excess of $41,000.

"(5) Seven percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $41,000 but not in excess of $51,000.

"(6) Seven and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $51,000 but not in excess of $61,000.

"(7) Eight percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $61,000 but not in excess of $71,000.

"(8) Eight and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $71,000 but not in excess of $81,000.

"(9) Nine percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $81,000 but not in excess of $91,000.

"(10) Nine and one-half percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $91,000 but not in excess of $100,000.

"(11) Twelve percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $100,000 but not in excess of $200,000.

"(12) Seventeen percent of so much of the clear value of such property so transferred to each such beneficiary as is in excess of $200,000."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, in the committee's bill the gift and inheritance tax is placed at 1 percent of so much of the clear value of such property in excess of $5,000 so transferred to each such beneficiary. The beneficiaries referred to in paragraph (a) are the direct descendants only. Paragraph (b) applies to the collateral heirs, brothers, sisters, nephews, and nieces, and the tax is 3 percent on amounts in excess of $2,000. In paragraph (c), which applies to grandnephews, grandnieces, and all other persons not previously enumerated, the tax is placed at 5 percent.

My amendment proposes to start out with 2 percent, the same as the committee did, and to graduate the tax one-half percent for each $10,000 until you get into the higher brackets. When you get above $100,000, I provide 10 percent of all of the clear value of such property from $100,000 to $200,000, and on all in excess of $200,000, 15 percent. In reference to paragraphs (b) and (c) likewise the rate is graduated, beginning with the committee's figure, depending upon the size of the estate.

I maintain our national gift- and inheritance-tax rates are entirely too small. I believe more in the gift- and inheritance-tax method of properly placing the burden of taxation upon those who should share it and of decentralizing wealth than in any other method we have. You can pass on practically every kind of a tax. Even income taxes are evaded by people of tremendous wealth by the purchase of tax-exempt bonds. However, you cannot pass on gift and inheritance taxes. I do not think these rates are very steep. They are graduated in such a way the tax will not impose too large a burden upon the estates. It does seem to me that in legislating upon this important subject Congress should go on record in favor of higher rates for gift and inheritance taxes, not only in the District of Columbia but in the United States.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. I yield.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How much will the gentleman's amendment produce?

Mr. DIES. Of course, I cannot answer the gentleman. I did not have access to the experts the committee had, but it will yield a great deal of money. Whether it yields a million dollars or $10,000,000, the principle involved is a correct principle.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How much will the committee's bill produce?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Eight hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How much will this amendment produce?

Mr. DIES. I have already stated to the gentleman I did not have access to the experts who appeared before the committee. Naturally, if we in the House ever offer an amendment, we must do so without the aid of the experts the committee has had.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Then the gentleman is shooting in the dark.

Mr. DIES. This is a small increase based upon a graduated scale. It is a question of whether we are in favor of what we continually say we are, decentralizing gigantic wealth in the United States. [Applause.] It is entirely dependent, of course, upon the wealth of the person who dies. I maintain that to say a person who dies in the District of Columbia and leaves a million dollars should pay only 1 percent is entirely out of line with the policies and the objectives of the administration. [Applause.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, let me say first that with the exception of the District of Columbia and the State of Nevada every other jurisdiction in the country has an estate or an inheritance tax, or both. It is rather singular that in all these years no effort has been made to derive some revenue from inheritance and estate taxes in Washington. Since this is in line with the policy of the model program of the National Tax Policy Committee, we decided it ought to go in the bill.

The layout is very simple. We put all heirs into three classes, first, lineal heirs, including husband and wife, in the second class collateral heirs, and in the third class strangers and institutions. In the first class, including lineal heirs and husbands and wives, the tax is 1 percent on all over $5,000. On collaterals the tax is 3 percent on all over $2,000. On institutions and strangers the tax is 5 percent on all over $1,000.

The amendment of the gentleman from Texas would seek to raise the rates in the hope more money would be derived. In this connection I ought to submit to you, first of all, that it is not the purpose of this committee or the purpose of the bill to derive all the revenue from one source. We have to think of a tax pattern as a piece of cloth. If you cut too much of it out here you cut too much of it out there. So we are trying to raise revenues from a broad tax base. I am opposed to any such amendment as this because it spoils the tax pattern and spoils the broadening of the tax base we are trying to achieve. When you raise the rates, it does not mean anything.

In the State of Texas, from whence the gentleman comes, they start in at 1 percent with lineals and husbands and wives and go up to 6 percent. In class two the tax starts at 2 percent. On institutions and strangers the tax starts with 5 percent, the same as in the bill. The maximum rate in Texas does not obtain until you get up to a million dollars. There is an exemption of $25,000 for husband and wife in the State of Texas. We make no such exemption here.

The chances are that the bill we have brought before the Committee will raise more revenue than the amendment that is submitted by my good friend from Texas, and I sincerely hope that since these rates have been contrived to raise approximately $800,000—$600,000 from inheritances and $200,000 from estates—it is just about all the revenue we want from that source, and if you commence breaking up this bill, you completely destroy the pattern we have been seeking to lay down for the District of Columbia. I therefore hope that this amendment, and all other proposed amendments, will be voted down.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DIES. As the gentleman knows, we are not legislating for the State of Texas, and I may say to the gentleman that I would not want this Congress to pattern after the Legislature of Texas when it comes to dealing courageously with these questions.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will answer my friend by saying that as we examined the schedules and rates in effect in all the other States, we feel we are pretty well in line and that this will produce all the revenue we want. It is entirely satisfactory, and I hope the very complicated amendment that has been offered will be voted down and the Committee will sustain the position of the subcommittee which is sponsoring the measure.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I shall not use all of my 5 minutes. I want to point out, however, this is a tremendously long amendment. No one is probably any more in sympathy with the theory expressed by my distinguished colleague from Texas than I am, but this amendment has never been presented, so far as I know, to any member of this committee. I certainly have never had an opportunity to see it, and if I were constrained to want to be for it, on this short notice and without even having had an opportunity to see it, I would feel compelled to be against it.

This subcommittee has been in session, and has been holding hearings, intermittently from March 17 down to yesterday afternoon, and no such amendment as this has ever been presented to us, and had the distinguished gentleman from Texas appeared before us and presented his amendment, he would have received a courteous hearing.

Mr. DIES. I may say to the gentleman that, of course, like all other Members, I did not get a copy of this bill until last Friday, and I had presumed the committee would place a real gift and inheritance tax in the bill.

Mr. NICHOLS. I will say to the gentleman that if the gentleman is so interested in gift and inheritance taxes, the papers of the District of Columbia, daily since March, have talked about what this committee was doing, and on at least four different occasions the papers have carried on the front page a complete analysis of the proposed program, and if the gentleman was so genuinely interested in inheritance and gift and estate taxes, he should have been advised in this way of the fact that the committee was about to pass some kind of law.

Mr. DIES. I may say to the gentleman from Oklahoma with respect to his statement about the papers, that one of the papers today stated that Congress is a three-ring circus. Evidently, they do not intend their editorials and comments to be considered by a three-ring circus.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield.

Mr. PALMISANO. In reference to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, who stated he is not familiar with the bill, is not the gentleman from Texas a member of the Rules Committee that insists the income-tax provision be stricken out and a 20-cent increase on real estate be imposed?

Mr. DIES. I hope the gentleman will not misinterpret what I said.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I have only a limited time, and I must refuse to yield further.

I may say to the membership of the House that as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] has said, after all, this bill is patterned on a broad program and this portion of the bill will yield $800,000. If the amendment were adopted I am sure that no Member of this House can tell whether it will produce this amount or whether it will increase the amount, and, surely, to adopt an amendment of such great length is not the way to legislate. If the gentleman's amendment is full of merit, and maybe it is, hearings will soon be held on the Senate side, and his amendment can be presented there, and I am sure if it is possessed of great merit, those gentlemen will give him a kindly hearing on the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment is voted down.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN [Mr. MEAD]. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken (and, on a division demanded by Mr. O'MALLEY), there were—ayes 60, noes 46.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The committee again divided and the tellers reported—ayes 65, noes 42.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following privileged motion, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'MALLEY moves that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House.

The question was taken (and, on a division, demanded by Mr. O'MALLEY), there were—ayes 19, noes 49.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twenty-seven Members are present—a quroum.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE VIII—TAX ON PRIVILEGE OF DOING BUSINESS

SECTION 1. Where used in this title—

(a) The term "person" includes any individual, firm, copartnership, joint adventure, association, corporation (domestic or foreign), trust, estate, receiver, or any other group or combination acting as a unit, but shall not include railroad companies which report to and are subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887, as amended.

(b) The term "taxpayer" means any person liable for any tax hereunder.

(c) The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or their duly authorized representative or representatives.

(d) The term "business" shall include the carrying on or exercising for gain or economic benefit, either direct or indirect, any trade, business, profession, vocation, or commercial activity in the District of Columbia not including, however, labor or services rendered by any individual for wage or a salary.

(e) The term "gross receipts" means the gross receipts received from any business in the District of Columbia, including cash, credits, and property of any kind or nature, without any deduction therefrom on account of the cost of the property sold, the cost of materials, labor, or services or other costs, interest, or discount paid, or any other expenses whatsoever.

(f) The term "fiscal year" means a year beginning on the 1st day of July and ending on the 30th day of the June following.

SEC. 2. No person shall engage in or carry on any business in the District of Columbia after 60 days from the approval of this act without first having obtained a license so to do from the Commissioners. All licenses issued shall date from the 1st day of July in each year and expire on the 30th day of the June following, and no license may be transferred to any other person.

All licenses granted under this title must be conspicuously posted on the premises of the licensee and said license shall be accessible at all times for inspection by the police or other officers duly authorized to make such inspection. Licensees having no located place of business shall exhibit their licenses when requested to do so by any of the officers above named.

Licenses shall be good only for the location designated thereon, except in the case of licenses issued hereunder for businesses which in their nature are carried on at large and not at a fixed place of business, and no license shall be issued for more than one place of business without a payment of a separate fee for each.

The Commissioners may, after hearing, revoke any license issued hereunder for failure of the licensee to file a return or corrected return within the time required by this title or to pay any installment of tax when due.

SEC. 3. Each application for license shall be accompanied by a filing fee of $10 and shall be upon a form prescribed and furnished by the Commissioners.

SEC. 4. Every person subject to the tax hereunder shall, within 30 days after the passage of this title and on or before the 1st day of July of each succeeding year, furnish to the assessor, on a form prescribed by the Commissioners, a statement under oath showing the gross receipts of the taxpayer during the preceding calendar year, which said return shall contain such other information as the Commissioners may deem necessary for the proper administration of this title.

The Commissioners, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return filed hereunder, or for the purpose of making a return where none has been made, are authorized to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return and may summon any person to appear and produce books, records, papers, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the same, and the Commissioners shall have power to administer oaths to such person or persons. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person having been personally summoned shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons issued as herein provided, then, and in that event, the Commissioners may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof hereby is empowered to compel obedience to such summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpenas of that court.

The Commissioners are authorized and empowered to extend for cause shown the time for filing a return for a period not exceeding 30 days.

SEC. 5. For the privilege of engaging in business in the District of Columbia each person so engaged shall pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1937–38 a tax equal to three-fifths of 1 percent of the gross receipts derived from such business for the calendar year 1936 and shall, for each fiscal year thereafter, pay to the collector of taxes a similar tax measured by the gross receipts derived from such business for the calendar year immediately preceding the beginning of such fiscal year.

If a taxpayer was not engaged in business during the whole of any calendar year, he shall pay the tax imposed by this title measured by his gross receipts during the period of 1 year from the date when he became so engaged; and if such taxpayer shall not have been so engaged for an entire year prior to June 30 of any year, then the tax imposed shall be measured by his gross receipts for the period during which he was so engaged, multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which shall be 365 and the denominator of which shall be the number of days during which he was so engaged.

If a person liable for the tax during any year or portion of a year for which the tax is computed acquires the assets or franchises of or merges or consolidates his business with the business of any other person or persons, such person liable for the tax shall report, as his gross receipts by which the tax is to be measured, the gross receipts for such year of such other person or persons together with his own gross receipts during such year.

SEC. 6. National banks and all other incorporated banks and trust companies, street-railroad, gas, electric-lighting, and telephone companies, companies incorporated or otherwise, who guarantee the fidelity of any individual or individuals, such as bonding companies, companies who furnish abstracts of titles, incorporated savings banks, and building and loan associations which pay taxes under existing laws of the District of Columbia upon gross receipts or gross earnings, and insurance companies which pay a tax upon premiums shall be exempt from the provisions of this title.

SEC. 7. The taxes imposed hereby shall be due 30 days after the approval of this act and thereafter shall be due July 1 of each fiscal year following the calendar year for which said taxes are computed and may be paid without penalty to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia in equal semiannual installments in the months of September and March following. If either of said installments shall not be paid within the months when the same is due, said installments shall thereupon be in arrears and delinquent and there shall be added and collected to said tax a penalty of 1 percent per month upon the amount thereof for the period of such delinquency, and said installments with the penalties thereon shall constitute a delinquent tax.

SEC. 8. If a return required by this title is not filed, or if a return when filed is incorrect or insufficient, and the maker fails to file a corrected or sufficient return within 20 days after the same is required by notice from the assessor, the assessor shall determine the amount of tax due from such information as he may be able to obtain, and, if necessary, may estimate the tax on the basis of external indices such as number of employees of the person concerned, rentals paid by him, stock on hand, and other factors. The assessor shall give notice of such determination to the person liable for the tax. Such determination shall finally and irrevocably fix the tax unless the person against whom it is assessed shall within 15 days after the giving of notice of such determination apply to the Board of Equalization and Review of the District for hearing and review and the burden of proving the incorrectness of the assessor's determination shall be upon the taxpayer. After such hearing said Board shall give notice of its decision to the person liable for the tax. The decision of said Board may be reviewed by application to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, if the said application be filed within 20 days after said notice: Provided, however, That the amount of any tax sought to be reviewed shall, with interest and penalties thereon, if any, be first deposited with the clerk of said court.

SEC. 9. Any person failing to file a return or corrected return within the time required by this title shall be subject to a penalty of 10 percent of the tax due plus 5 percent of such tax for each month of delay or fraction thereof.

SEC. 10. Any notice authorized or required under the provisions of this title may be given by mailing the same to the person for whom it is intended by registered mail addressed to such person at the address given in the return filed by him pursuant to the provisions of this title or if no return has been filed then to his last-known address. The mailing of such notice shall be presumptive evidence of the receipt of the same by the person to whom addressed. Any period of time which must be determined under the provisions of this title by the giving of notice shall commence to run from the date of mailing such notice.

SEC. 11. The taxes levied hereunder and penalties may be collected by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia in the manner provided by the law for the collection of taxes due the District of Columbia on personal property in force at the time of such collection.

SEC. 12. Any person engaging in or carrying on business without first having obtained a license so to do, or failing or refusing to file a sworn report as required herein, or to comply with any rule or regulation of the Commissioners for the administration and enforcement of the provisions of this title shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $1,000 for each and every failure, refusal, or violation, and each and every day that such failure, refusal, or violation continues shall constitute a separate and distinct offense; that all prosecutions under this title shall be brought in the police court of the District of Columbia on information by the corporation counsel or his assistant.

SEC. 13. The Commissioners are authorized to make such rules and regulations relating to the administration and enforcement of this title as may be necessary and proper.

SEC. 14. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed under this title.

SEC. 15. Except in accordance with proper judicial order or as otherwise provided by law, it shall be unlawful for the Commissioners or any person having an administrative duty under this title to divulge or make known in any manner the receipts or any other information relating to the business of a taxpayer contained in any return required under this title. The persons charged with the custody of such returns shall not be required to produce any of them or evidence of anything contained in them in any action or proceeding in any court, except on behalf of the United States or the District of Columbia, or on behalf of any party to any action or proceeding under the provisions of this title, when the returns or facts shown thereby are directly involved in such action or proceeding, in either of which events the court may require the production of, and may admit in evidence, so much of such returns or of the facts shown thereby, as are pertinent to the action or preceeding and no more. Nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the delivery to a taxpayer, or his duly authorized representative, of a certified copy of any return filed in connection with his tax, nor to prohibit the publication of statistics so classified as to prevent the identification of particular returns and the items thereof, or the inspection by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia, or any of his assistants, of the return of any taxpayer who shall bring action to set aside or review the tax based thereon, or against whom an action or proceeding has been instituted for the collection of a tax or penalty. Returns shall be preserved for 3 years and thereafter until the Commissioners order them to be destroyed. Any violation of the provisions of this section shall be subject to the punishment provided by section 12 of this title.

SEC. 16. If any provision of this title, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this title, and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 17. This title shall not be deemed to repeal or in any way affect any existing act or regulation under which taxes are now levied.

SEC. 18. This title shall become effective immediately upon approval.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Page 43, line 7, strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the following: "Provided, That the term 'gross receipts' when used in connection with or in respect of financial transactions involving the loan or advance of money, discounting notes, bills, or other evidences of debt, shall be deemed to mean the gross interest, discount, commission, or other income earned by means of or resulting from said financial transactions: Provided further, That in connection with commission merchants or brokers the term 'gross receipts' shall be deemed to mean the gross amount of such commissions."

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, this is to take care of those people who would be doubly taxed in many instances, taxed four or five times, possibly; for instance, where a concern would borrow some money and loan it, and have the money returned to it, and have the money taxed each time it was returned.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the committee amendment.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I have a substitute for the committee amendment.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I was under the impression that the time of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY] had not expired, and that he had yielded to me for a question.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY] has the floor.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, in the instance of a small-loan company or a brokerage concern which borrows money and then loans it out, would the gentleman's amendment exempt it from a tax on the profits it made from those loans?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. No; it will only exempt them in cases where they borrow money and where the money borrowed after it is returned is loaned out. For instance, the profit, commission, and interest will be taxed.

Mr. O'MALLEY. All the profits they make will be taxed?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes. It is to keep from taxing as many times as they loan the money out.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the committee amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON to the committee amendment:

In line 3, after the word "loan", insert the word "collection"; and in line 7 of the committee amendment strike out the word "or", after the word "brokers", insert a comma and insert the words "attorneys or other agents"; and in line 9 of the committee amendment, strike out the period and insert "or gross fees received by them."

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. This amendment simply classifies and, I think, makes the meaning intended by the amendment clear. It is to make it apply not only to brokers but to attorneys or other agents who collect money, so that the tax will be laid on the commissions they receive and not on the amount they collect.

I do not think there is any objection to the amendment, so I will not argue it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY].

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer another committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 43, line 14, change the period to a comma and insert the following: "except no license shall be required of any person selling newspapers, magazines, or periodicals, whose sales are not made from a fixed location and which sales do not exceed the annual sum of $1,000."

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, the language of the amendment explains itself, the purpose being not to tax such people as newsboys and those selling newspapers and magazines other than those who have fixed stands.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I yield.

Mr. BULWINKLE. I want to ask the gentleman, with all these committee amendments, what it is contemplated will be the revenue produced under this title VIII?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Under title VIII it will be approximately $3,000,000, as near as we can estimate now.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Does not the gentleman think this is one of the most unjust forms of taxation, when gross revenues are taxed? As an illustration, a man might have a small grocery store, and his gross sales might be $15,000 or $20,000 a year. He might be just breaking even, yet upon that he is required to pay three-fifths of 1 percent. I have seen this tax before. A gross tax placed upon business as a privilege tax is manifestly unjust, and this House should not pass it. The small man is hit. Does it take in newspapers? Does it take in lawyers? Does it take in doctors? It takes in merchants. It is one of the worst forms of taxation I ever saw.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield further. I may say that certainly we take in all those people. We hear all this hue and cry about not taxing the people of Washington. That is what this particular section accomplishes. The very complaint we hear made about these people escaping taxes will be cured by this section.

Mr. DIES. In just a few minutes I will have an amendment here that will get the big establishments, the chainstores tax amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. This will get them.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY].

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer another committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 44, lines 11 to 13, inclusive, strike out all of section 3 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 3. Each application for license shall be accompanied by a filing fee of $10: Provided, however, That no license fee shall be required of any person if he shall certify under oath that his gross receipts during the year immediately preceding his application, if he was engaged in business during all of such period of time, or his gross receipts as computed in the manner provided in section 5 of this title, if he was engaged in business for less than 1 year immediately preceding his application shall be not more than $1,000. Such application shall be upon a form prescribed and furnished by the Commissioners."

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. KENNEDY] is recognized. Does the gentleman desire to be heard on the committee amendment?

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I am going to offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard on the amendment?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes. This amendment simply excludes those who have gross receipts less than $1,000. At the same time, however, it requires them to obtain a license from the District Commissioners, which license does not cost them anything.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I yield.

Mr. NICHOLS. As a matter of fact, this exempts all business $1,000. In other words, if a man had a business which earned $5,000 gross he paid on only $4,000. This exempts $1,000 of all business and provides that a business which does less than $1,000 a year must have a license but will not have to pay therefor.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I yield.

Mr. PALMISANO. In reference to this $1,000 exemption the gentleman means gross receipts and not profits.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer another committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: On page 43, line 1, insert after the word "receipts" the following: "in excess of $1,000."

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, this is simply a perfecting amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Page 46, line 4, insert after the word "receipts" the following: "in excess of $1,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Page 47, line 6, strike out the word "incorporated."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: At the end of section 6, page 47, add the following: "Any tax levied by the District of Columbia on tangible personal property owned by a taxpayer on July 1 of any year and paid by such taxpayer shall be credited upon the tax due under this title."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 42, beginning with line 3, strike out all of title VIII.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this title and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, during general debate I called the attention of the Members to a proposed amendment to be offered by my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland, exempting banks and other financial institutions from this provision with the exception of their interest.

This is strictly a sales tax that the consumer must pay, call it what you will. In the thirty-fourth session of the Legislature of Maryland such a tax was passed, but the very men who passed it, hold-overs, because they are elected for 4 years, gladly removed it at the next session. If this tax applied in your State you would not vote for it.

In the Seventy-first Congress, in order to balance the Budget, a sales tax was reported by the Ways and Means Committee under the able leadership of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON].

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield, but my time is very limited.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Will not the gentleman explain how this tax can be passed on to the consumer?

Mr. PALMISANO. All I know is that it is done. Everyone knows that it is passed on to the consumer.

According to the report there would be a deficit of $6,149,000. According to the gentleman from Oklahoma the taxes which would be received under this bill would amount to over $8,000,000.

Mr. NICHOLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman knows that by reason of appropriations which have been put back in the bill by the Senate, the deficit has been increased to approximately $8,000,000?

Mr. PALMISANO. I am referring to the report and to the statement of the gentleman from Oklahoma, but be that as it may, every one will admit that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas will increase the revenue one or two million dollars, so there is no necessity of placing on the people of the District of Columbia a sales tax, pure and simple and nothing else, and at the same time exempt financial institutions.

I asked this question: If a man purchased $10 worth of merchantable goods and was compelled to sell those goods for $9, would he be compelled to pay a gross receipt tax? The gentleman representing the District of Columbia said "Yes." But if a bank made a loan of a million dollars, and it received $999,999 back, it pays nothing. However, the little merchant must pay.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer a privileged motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'MALLEY moves that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY].

The question was taken, and on a division (demanded by Mr. O'MALLEY) there were—ayes 31, noes 57.

So the motion was rejected.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it is rather a delicate position to find myself opposing the ranking majority member of the Committee on the District of Columbia. The gentleman took this position yesterday in Committee and was voted down in his position by the District of Columbia Committee.

The title which the gentleman attempts to strike from the bill adds, as has been said, a three-fifths of 1 percent tax upon the gross income of business in the District of Columbia. It is a business privilege tax.

May I read some of the taxes that have been paid by the businessmen of the District of Columbia for the privilege of doing business in the District of Columbia:

Druggists, $12 per annum; auctioneers, $5 per annum; barber shops, $5 per annum; public bathhouses, $5; keepers of stores and moving-picture films, $65; gasoline stations, kerosene, etc., $5; owners and managers of establishments where explosives are kept, $5—

And so on.

Laundries, $18—

I am skipping through these as they appear in the statute—

mattress manufacturers, $75; theaters, moving pictures, skating rinks, dancing exhibitions, lecturers, entertainers, etc., $50; owners and managers of buildings in which skating rinks are located, $8; baseball, $5 per annum.

And so on. I am surprised, and have been all day, that Members would rise and attempt to strike from this bill provisions which make the citizens of the District of Columbia pay the cost of their own government, particularly when I have heard so many times on the floor of the House Members complain that the citizenship of the District of Columbia pay no taxes. Of course, if we vote to strike this title from the bill, then we must subscribe to the theory that the citizenship of the District of Columbia should not pay a tax to take care of the cost of their government, even if this tax is passed on down to the ultimate consumer. I may say to the Members that I know of very few taxes that are not passed on to the ultimate consumer.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Did the gentleman's committee give consideration to increasing the privilege taxes as he read them?

Mr. NICHOLS. We did. We gave consideration to that matter for 4 full days and arrived at the opinion that this was the better way to do it.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Does the gentleman agree with me when I say that a gross tax upon business is unfair?

Mr. NICHOLS. I am sorry, but I cannot agree with my distinguished friend.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How about the man who is barely breaking even in his business or losing a little money?

Mr. NICHOLS. I may say to the gentleman, if there is a business in the District of Columbia that is surviving upon the very narrow margin of three-fifths of 1 percent, it will not be long before the poor fellow will go broke anyway. I do not think a tax of three-fifths of 1 percent is going to break any businessman in the District of Columbia.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. PALMISANO].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIES. We agreed on 20 minutes. How much of that time remains?

The CHAIRMAN. Ten minutes remain, and the Chair may say he has noted Mr. RICH, Mr. DIES, and Mr. HOBBS.

Mr. DIES. When 20 minutes were agreed upon it was distinctly understood I would have 5 minutes to present my chain-store amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time was set at 20 minutes. Ten minutes of that has already been consumed, leaving 10 minutes. The Chair will be glad to apportion it at three and a half minutes to each Member.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended 5 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I wanted some time. The motion made by the gentleman from Oklahoma cut off any possibility of my getting that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, it is now 10 minutes to 6. We are on page 42 of a bill containing 79 pages.

The regular order was demanded.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. MICHENER. I object, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HOBBS: Page 46, line 6, change the period to a semicolon and add immediately thereafter the following: "Provided, however, That the tax imposed by this section shall be payable only upon the gross commissions of any person engaged in the business of a broker or agent, and shall not be payable upon the funds of his principal, of which he is a mere conduit."

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, this is a very simple amendment, with which the committee is in hearty accord, I understand. The amendment simply corrects an abuse of the taxing power, which was no part of the purpose of this committee. Let me give you an example. Section 5 purports to levy a tax of three-fifths of 1 percent upon gross receipts. But as applied to real-estate men, agents, or brokers, it would be a tax of 12 percent.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, to save time, I may say the amendment is acceptable to the committee.

Mr. HOBBS. I wish to thank the committee for that expression and ask that this amendment be adopted without a dissenting vote.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIES: Page 44, line 13, after the word "Commissioners" insert, "Provided, however, That upon stores or mercantile establishments operated in the District of Columbia and belonging to a chain or group, having more than one store, an annual license fee shall be paid for each store operated in the District of Columbia, as follows:

"(1) $10 for each retail store or business in excess of one but not in excess of five.

"(2) $15 for each retail store or business in excess of five but not in excess of 10.

"(3) $20 for each retail store or business in excess of 10 but not in excess of 15.

"(4) $50 for each retail store or business in excess of 15 but not in excess of 25.

"(5) $75 for each retail store or business in excess of 25 but not in excess of 30.

"(6) $100 for each retail store or business in excess of 30 but not in excess of 50.

"(7) $550 for each retail store or business in excess of 50.

"It is further provided that this annual license fee shall be based on the number of stores or mercantile establishments included under the same general management, supervision, ownership, or control whether operated in the District of Columbia or not."

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Chairman, a point of order. The gentleman's reservation came too late. The gentleman from Texas had already commenced to discuss the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman was on his feet and reserved the point of order in proper time.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, the language of this amendment is taken verbatim from the language used by the Legislature of the State of Louisiana, which was upheld in the case of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. against Alice Lee Grosjean, so the Supreme Court has passed upon the validity of this and held that we are within our constitutional rights in imposing this tax on chain stores in the District of Columbia.

There are approximately 1,150 chain stores in the District. In the grocery business chain stores control 84 percent of the business. In the drug business chain stores control approximately 65 percent of the business. In other words, the number of independents in the District far outruns the number of chain stores, but the chain stores have a virtual monopoly of the business in the District of Columbia. As the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] has pointed out, despite the fact they have this monopoly, prices for food and other necessities are higher in the District than in any other city in the United States, at least, any city of which I have seen any record.

If we are to restore equality of opportunity and open the doors of equal chance which have been shut to ambition, energy, and thrift, we must fulfill the pledge we have made to our constituents and to the American people that we believe while the Government cannot guarantee a man a living, it should guarantee him a chance to make a living. Today every door of opportunity is being closed to the youth of the land. If a man undertakes to go into the grocery business there is hovering above him the shadow of the Great A. & P. If he undertakes to go into any other line of business, there stands before him a gigantic corporate enterprise which controls a large percent of the business in his particular field.

Therefore, it seems to me that while this tax will yield $750,000, it will accomplish more than that, it will be an expression on the part of the Congress of the United States that we are in favor of independent business in the United States and in favor of affording an opportunity to the people of this country to earn a livelihood. Most of the chain stores in the District of Columbia belong to national organizations. The majority of them will be subject to the tax in the higher bracket. However, these chain stores are making tremendous profits. As the Supreme Court states in its decision, competitively they are in an advantageous position which enables them to whip to death their smaller competitors. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois press his point of order?

Mr. DIRKSEN. With the indulgence of the Chair, I should like to make the observation with respect to the point of order that I noticed the language of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas calls for a tax upon stores being a part of a chain or group having more than one store, but the amendment does not say whether they have more than one store in the District of Columbia or in the United States of America, and the reason for reserving the point of order was because I thought we were passing on a question which is beyond the jurisdiction of the committee.

Mr. DIES. I may say to the gentleman that the Supreme Court held that this language is necessary in order to hold the act valid. The language was copied from the Supreme Court decision.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RICH: On page 42, in line 22, after the word "in", insert "or on privately owned property in or on property owned by the United States Government."

Mr. RICH. There is no pleasure in taxes.

"It was as true," said Mr. Barkis, "as taxes is—and nothing's truer than that."

Thus wrote Charles Dickens.

Benjamin Franklin stated it thus:

But in this world nothing is sure but death and taxes.

Man recognizes death as sure, but he has managed, with some success, to dodge it for longer periods than did his ancestors. He has not been so successful with taxes, to his great regret.

Mr. Chairman, we have a number of restaurants, newsstands, cigar stores, and so forth, in Government buildings in the District of Columbia that pay no rent and have no expenses for light, heat, or anything of that sort. If it is right for the owners of restaurants and merchants in the District of Columbia to pay a tax, why should not such an establishment in a Government building pay this three-fifths of a cent tax in order to raise enough revenue to help finance the government of the District of Columbia along with other restaurant owners and merchants in the District of Columbia?

As the Members know, visitors are patronizing the House restaurant, the Senate restaurant, the Supreme Court restaurant, the Congressional Library restaurant, as well as restaurants in almost every large Government building here. These restaurants are feeding from 1,500 to 2,000 people at every meal and they are in direct competition with the men who are trying to make a living by running restaurants here in the District of Columbia.

It is not fair or right to try to run the owners of such establishments out of business by this kind of competition, and I appeal to the membership of the House, if you are going to tax other people for the purpose of doing business here, it is certainly right to tax everyone engaged in a similar business.

It may be said by some that these establishments are not run for profit. They are run for profit, because they are feeding the visitors who are flocking to these restaurants because they can buy meals cheaper than they can in a privately owned restaurant. You are making it so difficult for people in business here that they are unable to operate their business at a profit. Why should we give any consideration to one class of businessmen that is not given to all of them?

I believe the Committee will agree that this amendment ought to be adopted. It certainly should be satisfactory to the people in the District whom you are trying to help, because you will be treating all of them alike.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. As I understand the gentleman's amendment, it only taxes private individuals who own or operate stands in Government buildings?

Mr. RICH. I want to tax every restaurant and every person in the District of Columbia who is doing business here, regardless of whether the business is in Government-owned or privately owned buildings.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. That is exactly the question I asked.

Mr. RICH. Then I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. NICHOLS. The question of the gentleman from Maryland was whether or not it was the object of the gentleman's amendment to put the same tax upon restaurants operating in Government buildings as would be imposed upon other restaurants.

Mr. RICH. That is right.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Section 6 of the bill exempts national banks and utilities from the tax provided in that title. Does the gentleman think that is right?

Mr. RICH. I believe that everyone should be treated exactly alike.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Then the gentleman will support my amendment to stop these exemptions.

Mr. RICH. I certainly will if all are not to be treated in the same manner.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'MALLEY: Page 47, line 1, strike out all of section 6.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IX—INCOME TAXES

DEFINITIONS

SECTION 1. The following terms in this title are for the purpose hereof defined as follows:

(a) The term "taxpayer" includes any person, corporation, partnership, trust, or estate subject to a tax imposed by this title.

(b) The term "person" shall mean all natural persons whether married or unmarried, and also all trusts, estates, and fiduciaries acting for natural persons; it does not include corporations or partnerships acting for or in their own behalf.

(c) The term "corporation" includes foreign or domestic corporations, joint-stock companies, associations, and all enterprises operated by trustees, the interest in which is evidenced by shares of stock, whether with or without par, face, or nominal value.

(d) The term "engaged in business" as applying to corporations shall mean, if the entire business of the corporation be transacted within the District, the tax imposed by this title shall be upon the entire net income of such corporation for each taxable year, subject, however, to any correction. If the business of such corporation be transacted both within and without the District, the tax imposed by this title shall be upon the portion of such entire net income for each taxable year as is derived from sales, wherever made, of goods, wares, and merchandise, manufactured, or which originated, in this District, and from other business done or property located within this District, which may be determined by an allocation and separate accounting when the books of the corporation show income derived from business done and property located within this District; otherwise the tax imposed by this title shall be on such proportion of the entire net income of such corporation as the fair market value of the real estate and other physical assets in this District on the date of the close of the taxable year and the amount of the gross receipts in this District during that year, of such corporation, bears to the total fair market value of all the real estate and other physical assets within and without this District on the date of the close of the taxable year and the amount of the total gross receipts within and without the District during that year, of such corporation. The term "gross receipts in this District" shall include all receipts from persons, firms, corporations, partnerships, and associations, who or which are in the District, wherever paid, and all receipts from sales, wherever made, of goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured, or which originated in this District.

(e) The term "partnership" includes a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other incorporated organization, through or by means of which any business, financial operation, or venture is carried, and which is not, within the meaning of this title, a trust or estate or a corporation; and the term "partner" includes a member in such a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or organization.

(f) The term "District" means the "District of Columbia."

(g) The term "resident" in its application to individuals shall mean any natural person who is either domiciled in the District of Columbia or one who maintains a permanent place of abode within the District of Columbia and spends in the aggregate more than 3 months of the taxable year within the District of Columbia. When a person domiciled without the District of Columbia maintains a place of permanent abode within the District of Columbia, and spends more than 3 months of the taxable year within the District of Columbia, he is a resident for the entire period during which he maintains said permanent place of abode. But any person who, on or before the last day of the taxable year, changes his place of abode to a place without the District of Columbia, with bona-fide intention of continuing actually to abide permanently without the District of Columbia, shall be taxable the same as a nonresident is taxable under this law. The fact that a person who has so changed his place of abode, within 6 months from so doing, again abides within the District of Columbia, shall be prima-facie evidence that he did not intend permanently to have his place of abode without the District of Columbia.

(h) The term "gross income" wherever it appears in this title shall mean and include gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service, of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, trades, business, commerce or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership, or use of or interest in such property, also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any business carried on for gain or profit or gains or profits, and income derived from any source whatever, unless exempt from tax by law: Provided, That if a nonresident or a partnership with nonresident members carries on business both within and without the District of Columbia, the income therefrom must be apportioned so as to allocate to the District of Columbia a proportion of such income on a fair and equitable basis, in accordance with approved methods of accounting.

SEC. 2. The term "net income" as herein used shall mean the gross income less the following deductions.

(a) All interest paid during the taxable year on indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities the interest upon which is exempt from taxation under this title.

(b) Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year.

(c) Taxes paid during the taxable year, except inheritance taxes, taxes on intangible personal property paid the District, taxes paid under the provisions of this title, Federal taxes on income and profits, and special taxes imposed for property betterments.

(a) All ordinary or necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on business, or a profession or occupation, including a reasonable allowance for salaries of personal service actually rendered; also rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession for business purposes of property to which the taxpayer has not taken or is not taking title or in which the taxpayer has no equity: Provided, That the provisions of this subdivision shall not be construed to include payment as a premium to an occupant to vacate such property for the benefit of the taxpayer wishing possession of such premises.

(e) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise: Provided, That no loss resulting from the operation of business conducted without the District may be allowed as a deduction unless the income derived from the operation of business without the District is subject to taxation: And provided further, That no loss may be allowed on the sale of property purchased and held for pleasure or recreation and which was not acquired or used for profit, but this proviso shall not be construed to exclude losses due to theft or to the destruction of property by fire, flood, or other casualty.

(f) A reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence of property used in the transaction of business may be deducted from gross income, provided such depreciation is actually charged off.

(g) Contributions or gifts made within the year to the United States or the District of Columbia, or to corporations operating within the District of Columbia and organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, benevolent, or educational purposes, or to societies operating within the District conducted exclusively for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

(h) Dividends or incomes received by any persons from stocks or interest in any corporation the income of which shall have been assessed under the provisions of this title: Provided, That when only part of the income of any corporation shall have been assessed under this title only a corresponding part of the dividends or income received therefrom shall be deducted.

(i) The gains and profits of a nonresident from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of stocks, bonds, and other securities, except to the extent to which the same shall be a part of the income from a business carried on in the District of Columbia.

ITEMS NOT DEDUCTIBLE

In computing net income no deduction shall in any case be allowed in respect of—

(a) Personal, living, or family expenses;

(b) Any amount paid out for new buildings or for permanent improvements or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate;

(c) Any amount expended in restoring property for which an allowance is or has been made; or

(d) Premiums paid on any life-insurance policy covering the life of any officer or employee or of any individual financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer, when the taxpayer is directly or indirectly a beneficiary under such policy.

TAX ON CORPORATE INCOME

SEC. 3. Upon every corporation a tax is levied upon the net income as defined by this title. The rate of taxation shall be 5 percent per annum upon the net income. The net income shall be the gross income less the following deductions:

(a) All ordinary or necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in the operation and maintenance of its business, including a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear, and obsolescence of property used in the transaction of its business: Provided, That such depreciation is actually charged off.

(b) All moneys disbursed within the taxable year for personal service and salaries of officers: Provided, That such disbursements shall be reasonable in amount and that such services have been actually rendered in producing the income of the taxpayer: Provided further, That there be reported to the assessor of the District the name, address, and amount paid each employee and officer who receives a compensation of $1,000 or more during the taxable year.

(c) Losses sustained during the taxable year and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise: Provided, That no loss resulting from the operation of business conducted without the District, or the ownership of property located without the District, shall be allowed as a deduction unless the income derived from the operation of business without the District is subject to taxation.

(d) Taxes paid during the taxable year, except inheritance taxes, taxes on intangible personal property paid the District, taxes paid under the provisions of this title, Federal taxes on income, and profits and special taxes imposed for property betterments.

(e) Contributions or gifts made within the year to the United States or the District of Columbia or to corporations operating within the District of Columbia and organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, benevolent, or educational purposes, or to societies operating within the District conducted exclusively for the prevention of cruelty of children or animals any part of the income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individuals.

(f) Debts ascertained to be worthless and charged off within the taxable year.

(g) Dividends or incomes received from stocks or interest in any corporation the income of which shall have been assessed under the provisions of this title: Provided, That when only part of the income of any corporation shall have been assessed under this title only a corresponding part of the dividends or income received therefrom shall be deducted.

SEC. 4. Net income shall be computed on the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period, fiscal or calendar year, as the case may be, in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of the taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as shall, in the judgment of the assessor of the District, clearly reflect such income.

ASCERTAINMENT OF GAIN OR LOSS

SEC. 5. For the purpose of ascertaining the gain derived or loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of property, real, personal, or mixed, the basis shall be, in case of property acquired on or after January 1, 1937, the cost thereof, or the inventory value if the inventory is made in accordance with this title.

(2) In case of property acquired prior to January 1, 1937, and disposed of thereafter—

(a) No profit shall be deemed to have been derived if either the cost or the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, exceeds the value realized.

(b) No loss shall be deemed to have been sustained if either the cost or the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, is less than the value realized.

(c) Where both the cost and the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, are less than the value realized, the basis for computing profit shall be the cost or the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, whichever is higher.

(d) Where both the cost and the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, are in excess of the value realized, the basis for computing loss shall be the cost or the fair market price or value on January 1, 1937, whichever is lower.

Whenever in the opinion of the assessor of the District the use of inventories is necessary in order to determine clearly the income of any taxpayer, inventories shall be taken by such taxpayer upon such basis as the assessor may prescribe as conforming as nearly as may be to the best accounting practice in the trade or business and as most clearly reflecting the income.

PARTNERSHIPS

SEC. 6. Individuals carrying on business in partnerships shall only be liable in their individual capacity for the income tax provided in this title. There shall be included in computing the taxable income of each partner his distributive share, whether distributed or not, of the net income of the partnership for the taxable year, or for any fractional part of a taxable year; or, if his taxable income for such taxable year is computed upon the basis of a period different from that upon the basis of which the net income of the partnership is computed, then his distributive share of the net income of the partnership for any accounting period of the partnership ending within the fiscal or calendar year upon the basis of which the partner's income is computed.

INFORMATION AT THE SOURCE

SEC. 7. Every person, corporation, or partnership, in whatever capacity acting as withholding agent, including lessees, or mortgagors of real or personal property, fiduciaries, employers, and all officers and employees of the Federal or Municipal Government, having the control, receipt, custody, disposal, or payment of interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensations, remunerations, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual or periodical gains, profits, and income taxable under this title shall, when required by the Commissioners of the District, file with the assessor, at such time or times as the Commissioners may designate, a statement showing the amount of salaries, wages, or compensation in any form whatever, as outlined above, paid to any person during any taxable year in excess of $1,000, such statement to be in such form as the Commissioners may prescribe.

SEC. 8. The following individuals, whether residents or nonresidents, having income subject to taxation under this title, shall each make under oath, a return stating specifically the items of his or her gross income, and the deductions and credits allowed by this title.

(a) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $1,000 or over, if single, or if married and not living with husband or wife;

(b) Every individual having a net income for the taxable year of $2,500 or over, if married and living with husband or wife; and

(c) If the taxpayer is a minor or a person under legal disability, the return shall be made by the guardian, committee, duly authorized agent, or other person charged with the care of the person or property of such taxpayer.

Every corporation, trust, or estate, joint-stock company, partnership, or association organized for profit (except these herein specifically exempted), shall make a return, stating specifically the items of its gross income and the deductions and credits allowed by this title. The return shall be sworn to by the president or other principal officer and by the treasurer or assistant treasurer.

The assessor of the District of Columbia may grant a reasonable extension of time for filing income-tax returns whenever in his judgment good cause exists and shall keep a record of every extension. No such extension shall be granted for more than 3 months.

If any taxpayer, subject to this title, shall fail to make and file a sworn return to the assessor's office within the time prescribed by law, unless the time for filing such return be extended by the assessor of the District of Columbia, and upon all returns filed with or assessed by the assessor of the District of Columbia after the time herein prescribed for filing returns, the assessor shall assess a penalty equal to 20 percent of the amount of the tax assessed thereon, but in no case shall such penalty be less than $2. Any penalty imposed shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as a part of the tax, unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax. When the time for payment of any tax is postponed at the request of the taxpayer interest at the rate of 6 percent per annum is added from the original due date to the date of payment, but not beyond the due date under such extension.

EXEMPTIONS

SEC. 9. The following items shall be exempt from taxation under this title:

(a) The income of a single person or a married person not living with husband or wife, up to but not in excess of $1,000; the income of a married person living with husband or wife, or a single person who is the head of a family, up to but not in excess of $2,500: Provided, That if a husband and wife make separate returns or have separate incomes the exemption for each shall be $1,000; plus $400 for each person (other than husband or wife) who is actually supported by and entirely dependent upon the taxpayer for his support.

(b) The credit for dependents shall be determined by the status of the taxpayer on the last day of his taxable year. The personal exemptions (other than those for dependents) allowed by subsection (a) of this section shall, in case the status of a taxpayer changes during his taxable year, be the sum of an amount which bears the same ratio to $1,000 as the number of months during which the taxpayer was single bears to 12 months, plus an amount which bears the same ratio to $2,500 as the number of months during which the taxpayer was a married person living with husband or wife, or was the head of a family, bears to 12 months. For the purposes of this paragraph a fractional part of a month shall be disregarded unless it amounts to more than half a month, in which case it shall be considered as a month.

(c) In the case of an individual who dies during the taxable year, the personal exemption and the credit for dependents shall be determined by his status at the time of his death, and in such case full credits shall be allowed to the surviving spouse, if any, according to his or her status at the close of the taxable year.

(d) Amounts received under a life-insurance contract paid by reason of the death of the insured, whether in a single sum or in installments (but if such amounts are held by the insurer under an agreement to pay interest thereon, the interest payments shall be included in gross income). Amounts received (other than amounts paid by reason of the death of the insured and interest payments on such amounts) under a life-insurance, endowment or annuity contract, but if such amounts (when added to amounts received before the taxable year under such contract) exceed the aggregate premiums or consideration paid (whether or not paid during the taxable year) then the excess shall be included in gross income.

(e) The value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise, or descent received in 1 year the aggregate of which does not exceed $5,000.

(f) Any amount received through accident or health insurance or under Workmen's Compensation Acts, as compensation for personal injuries or sickness, plus the amount of any damages received whether by suit or agreement on account of such injuries or sickness, or through the War Risk Insurance Act or any law for the benefit or relief of injured or disabled members of the military or naval forces of the United States.

IMPOSITION OF TAX

SEC. 10. A tax is hereby annually levied for each taxable year upon every legal resident of the District of Columbia, as herein defined, upon and with respect to his entire net income as herein defined for the purposes of taxation, at the following rates:

(a) One percent of the amount of net income not exceeding $2,000.

(b) One and one-half percent of the amount of net income in excess of $2,000 but not in excess of $5,000.

(c) Two percent of the amount of net income in excess of $5,000 but not in excess of $10,000.

(d) Two and one-half percent of the amount of net income in excess of $10,000 but not in excess of $15,000.

(e) Three percent of the amount of net income in excess of $15,000 and not in excess of $20,000.

(f) Three and one-half percent of the amount of net income in excess of $20,000 but not in excess of $30,000.

(g) Four percent of the amount of net income in excess of $30,000 but not in excess of $50,000.

(h) Five percent of the amount of net income in excess of $50,000.

(i) If, for any taxable year, it appears upon the production of evidence satisfactory to the assessor that a taxpayer has sustained a net loss, the amount thereof shall be allowed as a deduction in computing the net income of the taxpayer for the succeeding taxable year, and if such net loss is in excess of such net income (computed without such deduction), the amount of such excess shall be allowed as a deduction in computing the net income for the next succeeding taxable year, the deduction in all cases to be made under regulations prescribed by the Commissioners.

(j) A like tax is hereby imposed and shall be levied, collected, and paid annually at the rate specified in this section upon and with respect to the entire net income as herein defined, except as otherwise herein provided, from all property owned and from every business, trade, or profession carried on and salaries and wages received for services rendered in the District of Columbia by persons not residents of the District.

Whenever a nonresident taxpayer of the District of Columbia has become liable to income tax to the State where he resides upon his net income for the taxable year, derived from sources within the District of Columbia and subject to taxation under this title, the assessor shall credit the amount of income tax payable by him under this title with such proportion of the tax so payable by him to the State where he resides, as his income subject to taxation under this title bears to his entire income upon which the tax so payable to such other State was imposed: Provided, That such credit shall be allowed only if the laws of said State (1) grant a substantially similar credit to the residents of the District subject to income tax under such laws, or (2) impose a tax upon the personal incomes of its residents derived from sources within the District, and exempt from taxation the personal incomes of residents of the District. No credit shall be allowed against the amount of the tax on any income taxable under this title which is exempt from taxation under the laws of such other State.

SEC. 11. The tax herein provided shall be computed and levied under direction of the assessor of the District of Columbia, and the collections made by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, and the revenue derived therefrom shall be turned over to the United States Treasury for credit to the District in the same manner as other revenues are turned over to the United States Treasury for credit to the District.

TIME AND PLACE OF FILING RETURNS

SEC. 12. The tax herein provided shall be first levied, collected, and paid in the year 1938 upon and with respect to the taxable income for the calendar year 1937, or for any fiscal year ending during the year 1937. Returns of income due in the year 1938 shall be made to the assessor of the District of Columbia on or before the last day of April 1938. Thereafter annual returns of income as provided in this title shall be made to the assessor of the District of Columbia on or before the last day of April of each year. One half of the tax computed on the net income by the taxpayer shall be paid at the time of filing the return and the second half of the tax shall be paid in the following month of October. Blank forms of returns shall be furnished by the assessor upon application, but failure to secure the form shall not relieve any taxpayer from the obligation of making any return herein required.

SEC. 13. Upon the filing of the income-tax return provided herein, it shall be the duty of the assessor of the District to examine it, or cause it to be examined, as soon as it is practicable to do so. If upon such examination it shall be disclosed that the amount of tax is more or less than the amount shown in the return, a proper adjustment shall be made upon final payment by the person taxed.

SEC. 14. If a return required by this title is not filed or if a return when filed is incorrect or insufficient, and the maker fails to file a corrected or sufficient return within 20 days after the same is required by notice from the assessor, the assessor shall determine the amount of the tax due from such information as he may be able to obtain. The assessor shall give notice of such determination to the person liable for the tax. Such determination shall finally and irrevocably fix the tax, unless the person against whom it is assessed shall file a protest with the Board of Personal Tax Appeals in accordance with the provision of section 19 hereof.

SEC. 15. If any tax imposed by this title or any portion of such tax be not paid within the time prescribed herein or within such additional time as may be allowed by the assessor, the same shall bear interest at the rate of 1 percent per month or fraction thereof until paid. The taxes levied hereunder, together with interest and penalties thereon, may be collected by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia in the manner provided by the law for the collection of taxes due the District of Columbia on personal property, in force at the time of such collection.

FIDUCIARIES

SEC. 16. Every person acting in a fiduciary capacity shall make, under oath, a return, during the period prescribed in this title, for the individual or estate or trust for whom he acts, of all taxable income received by him on his fiduciary capacity for the preceding taxable year, or for any fractional part thereof.

The income paid or accrued to estates of deceased persons before a fiduciary shall have been appointed for such estate, or before he has qualified to act in such capacity, shall be assessed to the estate.

If an estate has more than one fiduciary and any one of them shall be a resident of the District of Columbia such assessment shall be made to the fiduciary who is a resident of said District, and he shall be liable for that proportion of the tax on the net income as is paid to beneficiaries who are or were during the taxable period residents of the District of Columbia.

A fiduciary shall, in all cases where an estate extends over one taxable period, give the names and addresses of each beneficiary and the amount paid to each since the last return was made. Upon termination of his duties as a fiduciary he shall furnish the assessor of the District, in such form as said assessor may prescribe, a complete list of the names and addresses of the beneficiaries and the amounts paid, or ordered to be paid, by him to each beneficiary.

If an estate is to be distributed and terminated before the date set for making returns, the fiduciary may request from the assessor of the District permission to make a return for the expired portion of the taxable year and, if such request is granted, shall file with the assessor of the District a return for such unexpired portion of the taxable year. After verification as to the correctness of the return, a bill may be rendered for the amount of tax due, which tax shall within 30 days after the bill is rendered be paid to the collector of taxes.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

SEC. 17. Except in the case of a willfully false or fraudulent return with intent to evade the tax, the amount of tax due under any return shall be determined by the assessor within 3 years after the return was made and no proceeding in court without assessment for the collection of such taxes shall be begun after the expiration of such period. In the case of a willfully false or fraudulent return or where no return has been filed the amount of tax due may be determined and collected at any time.

If within 3 years after the payment of taxes it appears from the records of the assessor that moneys have been erroneously or illegally collected from any taxpayer or other persons, pursuant to the provisions of this title, the Commissioners shall have power upon making a record of the reasons therefor in writing, to cause such moneys to be refunded.

RECORDS OF INCOME TO BE KEPT

SEC. 18. Every person liable to any tax imposed under this title, or for the collection thereof, shall keep such records, render under oath such statements, make such returns, and comply with such rules and regulations as the Commissioners may reasonably require.

SPECIFICATION OF APPEAL PROCEDURE

SEC. 19. The Board of Personal Tax Appeals of the District of Columbia shall have power to hear and determine controversies arising in connection with taxes imposed under this title. Within 60 days after the notice of the determination of the tax liability shall have been mailed by the assessor (not counting Sunday or a legal holiday as the sixtieth day) the taxpayer may file a protest in writing with said Board requesting a hearing: Provided, That the grounds of the appeal must be stated in the protest. The Board of Personal Tax Appeals shall, after affording a hearing to the taxpayer, ascertain the correct tax, whether greater or less than the amount determined by the assessor. If the taxpayer is aggrieved by the decision of said Board, he may thereafter appeal to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 20. The Commissioners of the District shall have the power to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purpose of this title.

The assessor or his designated agent, or the Board of Personal Tax Appeals, or any member thereof, for the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return filed hereunder, or for the purpose of making a return when none has been made, is authorized to examine any books, papers, records, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and may summons any person to appear before him to produce books, records, papers, or memoranda bearing upon the matters required to be included in the return, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories under oath respecting the same, and the said assessor or his designated agent, and the Board of Personal Tax Appeals or any member thereof, shall have power to administer oaths to such person or persons. Such summons may be served by any member of the Metropolitan Police Department. If any person, having been personally summoned, shall neglect or refuse to obey the summons herein issued as provided, then, in that event, the Commissioners may report that fact to the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, or one of the justices thereof, and said court or any justice thereof is empowered to compel obedience to such summons to the same extent as witnesses may be compelled to obey the subpenas of that court.

SEC. 21. Any individual, corporation, or partnership, or any officer or employee of any corporation or member or employee of any partnership, who with intent to evade any tax or any requirement of the law, or lawful requirement of the assessor of taxes for the District of Columbia thereunder, shall fail to pay the tax, or to make, render, sign, or verify any return, or to supply any information within the time required, or with like intent shall make, render, sign, or verify any false or fraudulent return or statement, or shall supply any false or fraudulent information, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000 and shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction be fined not to exceed $1,000 or be imprisoned not to exceed 1 year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

PENALTIES

SEC. 22. Any taxpayer as herein defined whose duty it is to file the income-tax return required hereby and who shall refuse or neglect to file such income-tax return shall be liable to a penalty of not to exceed $1,000 which may be recovered in an action brought by the corporation counsel of the District in the name of the District.

SECRECY REQUIRED OF OFFICIALS AND EMPLOYEES

SEC. 23. Except in accordance with proper judicial order or as otherwise provided by law, it shall be unlawful for the Commissioners or any person having an administrative duty under this title to divulge or make known in any manner whatever the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particulars thereof set forth or disclosed in any income-tax return filed with the said assessor by any person subject to taxation under this title. The persons charged with the custody of such returns shall not be required to produce any of them or evidence of anything contained in them in any action or proceeding in any court except on behalf of the United States or the District of Columbia, or on behalf of any party to any action or proceeding under the provisions of this title when the returns or facts shown thereby are directly involved in such action or proceeding, in either of which events the court may require the production of, and may admit in evidence, so much of such returns or of the facts shown thereby as are pertinent to the action or proceeding and no more. Nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the delivery to a taxpayer, or his duly authorized representative, of a certified copy of any return filed in connection with his tax, nor to prohibit the publication of statistics so classified as to prevent the identification of particular returns and the items thereof, or the inspection by the corporation counsel of the District or any of his assistants of the return of any taxpayer who shall bring action to set aside or review the tax based thereon, or against whom an action or proceeding has been instituted for the collection of a tax or penalty. Returns shall be preserved for 3 years and thereafter until the Commissioners order them to be destroyed. Any violation of the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than 90 days, or both. This section shall not apply to any authorized representative of the United States Government or any authorized representative of any State government. Such representatives upon written request shall be permitted to examine such returns at such times as the assessor of the District may designate, provided a like privilege is granted to representatives of the government of the District of Columbia.

BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE AUTHORIZED TO SUPPLY INFORMATION

SEC. 24. The Bureau of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department of the United States is authorized and required to supply such information as may be requested by the Commissioners relative to any person subject to the taxes imposed under this title.

EXEMPT CORPORATIONS

SEC. 25. All corporations or associations organized and operated exclusively for benevolent, charitable, religious, and eleemosynary purposes, mutual savings banks, building and loan associations, insurance companies, and railroad companies which report to and are subject to regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission under the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1887, as amended, shall be exempt from the tax imposed under this title.

TAX ON INTANGIBLE PROPERTY CREDITED

SEC. 26. Any tax levied by the District of Columbia upon intangible personal property owned by a taxpayer on July 1 of any year and paid by such taxpayer shall be credited upon the income tax due hereunder by such taxpayer for the following year.

SAVING CLAUSE

SEC. 27. If any section or provision of this title shall be declared to be invalid or unconstitutional, such adjudication shall not affect the validity of this title as a whole, or any section, provision, or part thereof not adjudged invalid or unconstitutional.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Strike out all of title IX and insert a new title IX as follows:

"TITLE IX—TAX ON TANGIBLE PROPERTY

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the rate of taxation imposed for the District of Columbia on real and tangible personal property shall not be less than 1.7 percent on the assessed value of said property.

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Chairman, this amendment simply increases the real-estate tax and the tax on tangible property from $1.50 to $1.70 per hundred dollars. The amendment also strikes out all of title IX in the bill.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes.

Mr. BULWINKLE. How much does this produce?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Approximately $2,500,000.

Mr. BULWINKLE. With these amendments that have been adopted this afternoon, how much revenue will the whole thing produce?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. In round figures, about $8,000,000.

Mr. BULWINKLE. I am wondering whether the gentleman can tell us whether we are going to vote on this bill tonight?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. I hope we are. We are at the end of the bill now.

Mr. BULWINKLE. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that I doubt if he will find a quorum present.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLS. Let me say to the gentleman that I have just been talking to the majority leader, and it is the hope of the committee that we can get up to the point of the previous question on the bill and leave the vote until tomorrow.

Mr. BULWINKLE. Will the gentleman guarantee to me that we are not going to vote on this until tomorrow?

Mr. NICHOLS. I will say to the gentleman that that will be the purpose of the committee. I cannot tell what the House will do.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that I desire to offer to the committee amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois, a member of the committee.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me to present a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate upon this title and all amendments thereto close in 30 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the right to object. Will the gentleman tell us how long he intends to run tonight?

Mr. NICHOLS. That will complete the bill, and if I can get unanimous consent to close debate upon this title, it will end in 30 minutes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why not come in tomorrow and finish the bill then?

Mr. NICHOLS. This is the last title of the bill, and another committee has the day tomorrow.

Mr. MICHENER. It is now 10 minutes after 6, and if we begin on this title now, we will not be through in less than an hour.

Mr. NICHOLS. If I get unanimous consent to this request, we will be through in 45 minutes.

Mr. MICHENER. I do not want to object, but we have an important bill here and it should receive proper consideration from the House. The House is in no attitude to pass properly on legislation now.

Mr. NICHOLS. The final passage of the bill will not come until tomorrow.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, a good many Members would like to be heard on these amendments.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, the proposal now pending before the Committee is to strike out the income-tax title of the bill and to substitute therefor an additional tax of 20 cents on real estate so that the aggregate tax on real property will be $1.70 per $100 instead of $1.50. I have been very much interested in this income-tax title and I had hoped sincerely that it would be retained in the bill.

It is rather illuminating in connection with any discussion of the income tax to go away back to 1895 or 1896 and read the account of the action of the Supreme Court when an income tax was first proposed. One of the most celebrated barristers in American history, the Honorable Joseph Choate, was the man who made the argument. It was a classic, but the thing I remember best at the time is that he talked about millions of men, women, and children who would be hanging breathlessly upon the action of the Supreme Court and indicated that such a tax amounted to confiscation of property.

The contention of the appellants in that case was upheld and it became necessary then to carry on a Nation-wide movement for the purpose of amending the Constitution. Men like William Jennings Bryan, whose statue was dedicated not so long ago in the rotunda of the Capitol; men like Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin; and other leaders of thought in the country, spoke early and late, here, there, and everywhere, and as the fruition of their efforts there was written into the Constitution in 1913 a provision that the Federal Government could derive a direct tax from any source. So the stamp of legality was placed upon the income tax.

Twenty-five years ago, as I pointed out, when I was a college student, Professor Seligmann, an outstanding authority on taxation, reaffirmed again and again the position that every jurisdiction ought to have an income tax, because it is the fairest tax that can be devised. It cannot be handed down to somebody else. It attaches after the money has been earned.

In line with those progressive tendencies there are today 31 States which have an income tax. In 1931 we enacted an income tax for the Federal Government, and nobody has ever challenged the fundamental premise of that tax, because it is conditioned upon capacity and ability to pay. It puts the burden upon the shoulders of those who have been more blessed than others with the hand of fate and who have ability to pay.

The President said the other afternoon in his press conference that there ought to be an income tax in the District of Columbia. Right now we hear rumblings in the press about diffusing purchasing power by income taxes, and I submit this question to the committee today: Are you going to fly in the face of precedent; are you going to fly in the face of the best opinions of the times; are you going to fly in the face of good, sound tax premises and vote down an income tax and place an extra burden upon the property owners, particularly the home owners, of the District of Columbia?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BIGELOW to the committee amendment: Strike out all of line 2, after the word "on" in the committee amendment, and insert: "tangible personal property shall not be less than 1.7 percent on the assessed value of such property, and a rate of taxation shall be imposed on land value sufficient to produce the same revenue as would be produced by a rate of 1.7 percent on the assessed value of real property, including land and improvements."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I should like to reserve a point of order against the amendment.

Mr. BIGELOW. I do not want to talk on this. I want a vote. If the gentleman wants to make a point of order, he should make it.

Mr. NICHOLS. I reserve the point of order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, I am going to ask for a division on this. I just want a count of noses, to see how we come out as compared with the vote 43 years ago.

This has to do merely with the tax on real estate. It does not affect anything else in the bill. Without my amendment the tax on real estate will be $1.70 per $100. If my amendment passes, you will raise the same amount of money from real estate; but you will raise it, not by a tax of $1.70 per $100 on the land and the house but you will raise it by increasing the tax on the land alone. You will have to take my word for it that that will mean, instead of 1.7 percent on the land and buildings, you will impose just about 3-percent tax on the land and nothing on the building.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BIGELOW. Yes; I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. This provision proposed, of course, puts this 1.7-percent tax on real estate, tangibles, and intangibles?

Mr. BIGELOW. Yes.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Under the gentleman's proposal, how do you levy a tax on the building?

Mr. BIGELOW. This would levy 1.7 percent on intangible personal property.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. What tax goes on the buildings, for instance?

Mr. BIGELOW. Nothing will go on the building, under my amendment.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. That will be free from taxation?

Mr. BIGELOW. That will be free from taxation, but an increased rate will go on the land.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. A sort of Henry George tax?

Mr. BIGELOW. Yes; certainly. I was about to say this will be about 3 percent on the land and nothing on the house. Now, two-thirds of all the residences in this District have an average value of $7,500. If you do not pass my amendment you will place a tax of $127.50 on a $7,500 home. If you pass my amendment, exempting the building and putting a 3-percent tax on the land value, you will reduce that tax from $127.50 to $75.

That, Mr. Chairman, is one way of reducing the burden on the small-home owner.

I hope the amendment will be considered favorably.

Our ideal in this country has been an industrial society which should be permitted to run itself, spurred on by the profit motive, giving wide range to individual initiative, and free play to the laws of supply and demand.

But now we are going in for a planned economy. The laws of supply and demand are falling into disrepute. We are reaching out to agriculture, manufacturing, and mining to control production, fix prices, and regulate labor relations. But I wish that some thought were given to less socialistic remedies. We might not need so many bureaus and boards to manage things, if we would cut out some of the glaring abuses of our disordered capitalism.

It happens that the District of Columbia government faces a deficit and Congress is looking around to see where we can pick up some additional revenue. This gives Congress a chance to show some light and leading on the subject of taxation. Here is a chance to set an example of sound taxation to the cities of the Nation. Some Congressmen were favoring a sales tax, the most vexatious and villainous form of taxation that economic ignorance has yet devised. I am glad that the taxation committee of the District Committee backed away from a sales tax, but a nondescript list of other taxes are proposed which are second cousins to the sales tax.

I propose an extra tax upon the land values of the District. I do not mean to raise the present tax on buildings, but merely on the value of land, irrespective of improvements, if any, on the land.

Canberra is Australia's District of Columbia. When the District of Canberra was laid out, it was provided that, as the land values increased with the growth of population and the development of Australia's capital city, the rising ground rents should go, not to private owners, but to the public treasury.

Suppose that policy had been adopted when the District of Columbia was chosen as the seat of our Government. Since that day, the value of this land area has risen steadily with the growth of the city.

This land value of the District of Columbia is, of course, socially created value. It is not, like houses or other things, the product of private industry. This is value which in every city comes in spite of owners, as cream rises to the top of a pan of milk, according to a law of its own. The heirs of the old families who got here first skim the cream. They reap these socially created land values.

Here is a ground-rent income of some $25,000,000 a year that by right should be going to the Public Treasury. But the most of it is allowed to go into private pockets. This is one of the leakages of the capitalist system. With the loss of this revenue of its own, the city has to make tax raids on private property. If the city had, year by year, collected this ground rent, in lieu of taxes, it would have kept down the speculative price of land. Those who wanted to use land could have gotten it on more reasonable terms. But, instead of collecting its own ground rent and thus keeping the price of land down, the city has put the $25,000,000 tax burden on houses and all productive enterprises. This tax burden on houses and other forms of wealth adds to prices. Instead of collecting our own publicly earned income and keeping the price of land down, we tax privately produced wealth, thereby raising the price of land and everything that is produced on land.

Why do we have, as the President asserts, a third of our people ill-clad, ill-housed, and ill-fed?

I think that one of the reasons is our failure to distinguish correctly between private property and public property.

If one man was the first to stake out a claim around some trees in a desert, he was permitted to charge the famished and belated travelers for the water of his private oasis. If a man came upon a coal field or an oil pocket, he was free to monopolize his findings and to put on all the royalties the traffic would bear. If one's great-grandfather invested the profits of his fur business in lots in a Manhattan village, his heirs were free to collect princely fees from the luckless people who came too late on the scene.

The price of land is due to the pressure of population against the Nation's resources. It is sheer tribute that owners can levy on users. The owners hold the land against a growing population. The more the population grows, the greater the tribute. The land of the Nation is now capitalized at something like one hundred and fifty billions. This is not labor-produced value. This is monopoly value.

We could not cut up the continent into little pieces and give everybody a piece. But everybody who owns a piece of land in city or in country could be required to pay a ground rent proportionate to the location and value of his land.

If this ground rent were collected from all owners of land and then used to pay the expenses of government, it would thus get distributed to all in the benefits of government. This would not be an injustice to the owner, for, if he used his ground properly, the tax exemptions on his improvements and industry would more than balance his ground rent. The system I propose would penalize the evil of holding land without using it properly, and, in justice to all of us, this should be penalized.

This is one reason why one-third of our people are ill-clad, ill-housed, and ill-fed.

Here is just one exhibit: A small merchant, after making a living for himself and family for 25 years, has landed on the dole. For 25 years he was engaged in a small retail business on the same premises. At first his store rent was $80 a month. No improvements were made on the building in the 25 years. But his rent was jacked up from year to year, until finally $450 a month was exacted of him. More than that, with devilish ingenuity, the governments of city, State, and Nation were thinking up new taxes to heap upon him. So he landed on the dole. He was crushed between the upper millstone of taxes and the lower millstone of ground rent. He was ground down to poverty. That is what is happening to the free citizens of America.

The trouble is not with capitalism—it is with the privilege which permeates capitalism.

We should use the taxing power, as a surgeon's knife, to cut out the privilege.

In that way we might pull ourselves out of the swamps of socialism into which we are sinking—and realize our better dream of a free industrial society.

But, my friends, it is a tough job, here in Congress, to get the minds of Members so far out of the beaten track. Congressmen and other people, too, are like passengers on an airplane.

The members of the crew on an airplane are provided with parachutes. If the machine goes bad, they jump. But the passengers are not provided with parachutes. That is not because the lives of passengers are disregarded. Experience has shown that passengers, who have not been broken in to the use of parachutes, just will not use them. They are parachute shy. They stick to the machine and perish.

On this machine which we call our social order it is the same way. The passengers have a terror of new ideas. They will not do any jumping. They clutch the seat and await the crack-up.

Here I am offering them a perfectly good parachute, but what can I do if they will not use it?

I am happy to have the privilege of presenting to the readers of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the following article on the Pittsburgh graded-tax plan. This, with modifications, is the plan I am seeking with H. R. 6872 to apply to the District of Columbia:

LXXXI——375

PITTSBURGH'S PROGRESS IN TAX REFORM, RESULTING IN TAX RELIEF AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF REAL-ESTATE IMPROVEMENT

By Percy R. Williams, Chief Assessor, city of Pittsburgh

Never before, perhaps, in the world's history has the subject of taxation occupied so important a place in the public mind as it does today, with millions and billions of dollars collected annually to meet the cost of government—national, State, and local. As the extension of government service is inevitable with the rapid growth of population and the marvelous progress in inventions, the problems of raising public revenues must grow in importance from year to year and will demand, increasingly, the serious attention of all thoughtful men.

Students of municipal taxation will probably agree that the Pittsburgh tax plan is the most significant experiment in taxation that has been undertaken by any American city. It is something unique and has attracted widespread attention. Inquiries concerning its nature and its operation have come from all sections, and it has recently been a prominent subject of discussion at national and international conferences dealing with fiscal and economic questions.

REFORM IN METHODS RATHER THAN REDUCTION

The Pittsburgh tax plan has to do with reform in tax methods rather than with tax reduction. Nevertheless, it has meant lower taxes for the great majority of the taxpayers—not lower in comparison with the taxes of pre-war days but much lower than they would necessarily be were the tax system of 25 years ago in effect today. We are apt to see little if any actual reduction in taxes, municipal, State, or National. Economies can be effected by the introduction of greater efficiency in government, but these will be more than offset by the necessity of meeting new conditions that must call for greater and greater public service. This is strikingly illustrated by the recent development of the automobile, which has so revolutionized traffic conditions as to require great expenditures of public money for improved streets, boulevards, subways, viaducts, and highways, to say nothing of the increased cost of police traffic regulation necessary to deal with the new conditions incident to modern rapid transit.

The Pittsburgh plan is an effort to apply sound economic principles to the raising of public revenue. It is in harmony with the declaration of Theodore Roosevelt that the "burden of municipal taxation should be so shifted as to put the weight of taxation upon the unearned rise in value of the land itself rather than upon the improvements." Pittsburgh is the outstanding example of adoption by a great city of a definite policy of concentrating the principal burden of taxation upon land values.

TWO NOTABLE FEATURES

Briefly described, the Pittsburgh plan has two notable features: (1) The entire tax revenue for municipal purposes is derived from taxes upon real estate, this general policy having been followed for many years. (2) The municipal tax rate on buildings is fixed at one-half of the tax rate upon land. This latter and more significant feature was introduced by the "graded tax" law enacted in 1913.

The graded tax was devised to promote Pittsburgh's prosperity. It is frankly aimed at land monopoly and is a recognition of the fact that the land question is fundamental in any scheme for building better business, for solving the housing problem, or bettering living and working conditions generally. But it is a moderate tax reform and has been applied in a very conservative manner, step by step.

Twenty-five years ago Pittsburgh was extremely liberal in offering encouragement to land speculators; it actually placed a premium on holding land idle or underimproved by the old classification system then prevailing. Under this system real estate within the city was classified as "built up", rural, or agricultural. Not only were lands in the latter two classes assessed at relatively lower values, which one might naturally expect in most instances, if not all, but after the fair assessed values were determined, "rural" real estate (where houses were surrounded by trees and shrubbery) was automatically reduced for purposes of taxation to two-thirds of this fair value, while large tracts of vacant land held out of use for speculation were classified as "agricultural", and these assessed values reduced by half for purposes of taxation. This antiquated and absurd classification system was abolished in 1912, this action marking the first important step in the progress toward better conditions. All real estate was then placed on the same basis, subject to assessment at full market value, whether improved, underimproved, or entirely vacant. This cleared the way for the operation of the graded-tax law, enacted 1 year later, which did not disturb the sound principle of full-value assessments but provided for varying tax rates on land and buildings, land and building assessments, of course, being separated on the tax records under the Pittsburgh system.

The graded-tax plan is, of course, equivalent to the partial exemption from taxation of improvements, with the ratio of exemption increasing at each triennial assessment. The method, however, is superior to any scheme involving manipulation of assessments. The tax rates being fixed by the city council annually with a higher rate on land and a lower rate on buildings, uniformity is guaranteed and nothing left to the discretion of individual assessors.

The graded tax has been in process of evolution since 1913, when the law was passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature. It became effective January 1, 1914, and there have been five successive steps, corresponding to the triennial assessment periods, in each step a certain proportion of the tax burden being shifted from buildings to land; in the first period, 1914–15, the building rate being 90 percent of the land rate; in the second period, 1916–18, 80 percent; 1919–21, 70 percent; 1922–24, 60 percent; and in 1925 and thereafter, 50 percent. (Note exhibit A.)

EXHIBIT A

Comparative statement of city tax rates under graded-tax plan

Year	Land tax (mills)	Building tax (mills)	Flat tax rate required to raise same revenue
1914	9.4	8.46	9.05
1915	10.2	9.18	9.8
1916	12.6	10.08	11.63
1917	11.5	9.2	10.6
1918	14.5	11.6	13.3
1919	15.7	10.99	13.6
1920	19	13.3	16.6
1921	20	14	17.5
1922	20	12	16.5
1923	20	12	16.58
1924	20	12	16.46
1925	19.5	9.75	15.15
1926	22.4	11.2	17.25
1927	22.4	11.2	17.2
1928	25	12.5	19
1929	25	12.5	19
1930	26	13	19.439
1931	25.5	12.75	19
1932	23	11.50	17.1
1933	20.6	10.3	15.28
1934	20.6	10.3	15.24
1935	20.6	10.3	15.242
1936	20.6	10.3	15.245
1937	20.6	10.3	15.509

With the graded-tax plan now fully effective, it is possible to tell, in general terms, just what the new tax system means to Pittsburgh and its taxpayers.

SHIFTING THE SOURCE OF REVENUE

There is, of course, no loss in revenue through the graded-tax law. The law of 1913 has no effect whatever on revenues or upon expenditures, except to make possible the collection of ample public revenues with less burden on the general body of taxpayers. It simply brings about a shifting in sources of revenue. Its effect is upon the respective tax rates on land and buildings, which are fixed annually by the city council at such figures as will produce the sum estimated as necessary to meet the expenditures set forth in the budget.

The graded tax has meant the shifting for this year, 1937, of approximately $2,833,000 in taxes from buildings to land. The total assessed valuations for 1937 are:

Land	$556,552,050
Buildings	543,891,880
Total valuation	1,100,443,930

Under the graded-tax law land valuations in Pittsburgh pay a total city tax in 1937 of approximately $11,464,000 while at the rate of $15.509, which would prevail under the old tax system, the tax on land would be only about $8,631,000. Buildings under the graded tax pay this year in taxes $5,602,000, while at the rate of $15.509 this figure would be raised to approximately $8,435,000. These figures confirm the fact there has been a shifting from buildings to land of about $2,833,000, a very considerable item out of a total city tax revenue of approximately $17,067,000.

It is important, however, to note that the foregoing figures, though very significant, relate only to city taxes in the strict sense of the term. This $17,067,000 raised by the city from real estate is by no means the entire tax revenue that is obtained from Pittsburgh real estate. The board of education raises from taxes on Pittsburgh real estate the approximate sum of $12,380,000 this year by a flat rate of $11.25 per thousand. Of this total sum approximately one-half is obtained from land assessments and one-half from building assessments.

When school and county taxes are added to the city taxes we find that the total tax levy on land is $40.10 per thousand and on buildings it is $29.80.

These figures demonstrate that Pittsburgh has carried land-value taxation to quite a high point, but they also make it clear that buildings in Pittsburgh are very far from complete tax exemption due to the fact that school districts and the county are not included in the operation of the graded-tax system.

HAS STIMULATED IMPROVEMENT OF REAL ESTATE

It is not easy to accurately analyze the economic effects of the Pittsburgh tax plan, but it is possible to discover certain definite economic tendencies attributable to the operation of this system. The graded tax has undoubtedly tended to stimulate the improvement of real estate, not perhaps so much through keeping down building taxes as by increasing land taxes. Friends and opponents of the graded tax alike agree that the higher land tax has been influential in inducing those who had held large tracts of land idle to sell at more reasonable prices, because the holding of vacant land for long periods has now become unprofitable.

Another valuable index to the improvement of real estate in Pittsburgh is provided by the record of the assessed valuations over the period that the graded tax has been in operation, and when we examine this record we find that the total of building assessments has been rapidly gaining on the total land assessments. The assessed value of buildings has gone up from 282 millions in 1914 to 544 millions, approximately, in 1926, while the assessed value of land has only increased in the same period from 480 millions to 556 millions.

PREVENTS INFLATION OF LAND VALUES

The Pittsburgh Civic Commission, in its tax-revision bulletin of 1912, contended that high land prices, with accompanying high land rents, were one of the chief obstacles to Pittsburgh's progress, and a survey made at that time brought out the fact that the average value of land per acre in Pittsburgh, as shown by assessments, was second only to that of New York City. This indicated that Pittsburgh's land prices were abnormally high and therefore were discouraging industries from locating in this city. It was an avowed purpose of the graded-tax plan to lower land prices or to retard the rising process. It now seems beyond doubt from the evidence at hand that the higher land tax has had the effect which all economic authorities agree that it must have; that is to say, that, while land values must constantly rise in all growing communities, the higher land tax has checked the rise in the selling value of land. It has prevented such inflation of values as we have witnessed in our own community in times past and such as has taken place in other large cities during more recent years. Yet it is fair, in speaking of the higher land tax, to point out that the increased cost of local government has been responsible for this higher land tax to a greater extent than the graded-tax law itself.

TAX SAVINGS

Since the graded tax became fully effective in 1925, a study has been made from the official records of the department of assessors which reveals some very interesting facts. This study of the actual tax situation has gone far enough to clearly indicate that the great majority of real-estate owners are saving money in taxes through the graded-tax law. In most cases this saving amounts to a very substantial percentage of their city taxes. It follows, of course, that the owners of vacant or underimproved land, who, however, are greatly in the minority, are paying higher taxes, as contemplated by the sponsors of the law. This, as already intimated, means that such land, where valuable enough to pay a considerable tax, is not likely to remain vacant or underimproved for a long period.

ALL CLASSES OF IMPROVED PROPERTY BENEFIT

Owners of improved property of all classes are benefiting in lower taxes by reason of the graded-tax law. This is not true, of course, in all instances, as land values sometimes exceed building values even when the property is fairly well improved. But our survey of a large number of typical cases shows very great annual savings in taxes paid by various office buildings, manufacturing plants, warehouses, apartment buildings, and single-family dwellings, the degree of the saving varying with the size and type of building in relation to the value of the land upon which it stands. Three of the larger downtown office-building properties show tax savings by reason of the graded tax of 18, 21, and 21.6 percent, respectively; in each of these instances the actual savings in taxes for the 1 year being in excess of $13,000.

Apartment houses almost uniformly show substantial savings in taxes under the graded tax for the reason that they are usually structures of some size and value erected upon land of moderate price such as is to be found in residential districts. Three of the newly erected apartments show savings of 23, 29, and 30 percent, respectively, in one case the actual tax saving being over $8,000 for 1 year. On the other hand, a number of manufacturing plants and department stores occupying valuable land may be found which will not show any direct benefit in lower taxes from the graded tax. As an offset to this, however, it should be remembered that very substantial savings have been made by manufacturers through the complete exemption of machinery from taxation, while the big department store is entirely free of taxation upon its stock of goods, whereas in other cities such stores often pay very heavy taxes on their stocks of goods under the head of personal property.

But it is the home owner who stands out as the chief direct beneficiary of the graded tax. Only in rare instances do we find a home owner who has not been benefited to some degree by lower taxes through the operation of the graded-tax law. The most striking example of the effect upon taxes on homes is afforded by an analysis of the taxes paid by all property owners of the thirteenth ward, a typical residence ward, which shows that out of a total of 4,252 assessments there were 3,250 cases where the taxes paid under the graded tax are less than would be paid under the old flat-rate system, these savings ranging from 5 to 30 percent. Of the remaining 1,002 assessments where the taxes paid under the graded-tax system are higher, it is interesting to note that 980 of these represent vacant lots. This leaves only 22 improved properties that were not paying lower taxes, and these 22 are properties that are not very adequately improved.

SOME FALSE IMPRESSIONS

One of the familiar arguments against the graded-tax law is based on the false impression that the owners of large office buildings profit by the graded tax at the expense of the home owners because of the relatively small building investment of the latter. This assumption, however, is quite contrary to the facts. It is the relative value of each individual taxpayer's investment in land and buildings which determines the question of benefit, and nothing else has any bearing on the case. The high land values in the downtown business district, known as the Golden Triangle, much more than offset and cancel the partial exemption of the skyscrapers and other large structures in that section, while the home owner, through possessing a structure that seems insignificant by comparison with the skyscraper, is apt to find the value of his building from two to five times greater than the value of the land upon which it stands. Of course, every property owner whose building value exceeds his land value on the assessment books is paying lower taxes through the operation of the graded tax.

The city building tax rate is now about 33 percent lower by reason of the graded tax than it would be under the old system, and this has made a substantial difference in the tax bill of the average home owner, who is more concerned with building taxes than he is with the taxes on land.

Our survey develops the fact that it is only the exceptional business structure in the downtown district that has a value sufficient to offset the high land value and thus show a saving through the graded tax. A study of approximately 1,200 property assessments in the Golden Triangle (comprised of the first and second wards) shows that only 8 percent, or about 1 out of 12, pay lower taxes by reason of the graded tax. Since high land values are always to be found in the heart of the business district of a city, it is obvious that, under either the old or new system, the downtown wards must pay the greater share of real-estate taxes, but the higher the land tax the greater is the proportion paid by the downtown section.

The expediency of the Pittsburgh tax plan lies in the fact that it means tax relief for the majority of taxpayers and that it greatly encourages the improvement of real estate, thus stimulating the development of the community. When land is put into use the prosperity of the community is always enhanced, since the use of land brings employment to those who would otherwise be unemployed, and thus increases the wealth of the community.

The justice of the Pittsburgh tax plan rests upon the principle of equal rights to the earth that has been recognized by such great statesmen and philosophers as Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, and Henry George, and upon the fact that land values are socially created, growing with the growth of population and the extension of public improvements, and are therefore, in a peculiar sense, a natural and logical source of public revenue.

THE FUTURE

Naturally, the Pittsburgh tax plan has not been without opposition. It has been fought by some who are largely interested in unimproved land, as well as by a few who are opposed to the plan in principle. The repeal of the graded-law tax has been attempted on several occasions, but its friends have rallied on each occasion and frustrated these efforts. It has been defended by the leading civic organizations, and the daily press is practically unanimous in declaring for the maintenance of the law upon the statutes. The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce is using the advantages of the Pittsburgh tax plan as one of the principal inducements to bring new industries to this city.

When Pittsburgh taxpayers generally awaken to the realization that the repeal of the law would mean a substantial increase in taxes for the great majority of real-estate owners as well as adversely affecting the prosperity of the community, they are sure to present effective resistance against any future efforts to upset the system now well established. As the graded tax grows in public favor, it seems unlikely that there will be any backward step. In fact, there are even now indications that steps may soon be taken to extend the partial exemption of improvements beyond the present point through new legislation, and the complete untaxing of buildings is a possibility in the not distant future. Whether or not this will actually be brought about is, of course, largely a question of the development of public opinion as to the advantages and as to the justice of concentrating taxation upon land values.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time has been fixed, and those who requested time have been noted. The Chair, therefore, thought it best to vote on the amendment.

Mr. BIGELOW. I would have used my time, only I wanted to save the time of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio had expired.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Has any member of the committee been recognized in opposition to the amendment?

The CHAIRMAN. No.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may state to the gentleman from Illinois that the time for debate on this title has been fixed.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I have some time reserved, I believe. I shall be glad to yield my time to the gentleman from Illinois. I do not wish to use it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I shall not take the 3 minutes, but there is one thing I do want to say to my friend from Ohio. I recognize that the modified single tax as it now obtains in Pittsburgh, where the rate on improvements is one-half of the rate on real-estate values, seems to have worked out very satisfactorily. But here in Washington we have a situation that is quite different from that which obtains in any other city of its size in the country. Only 45 percent of the land in the District of Columbia is privately owned and is taxable. The rest of it has been preempted by the Federal Government for parks and building sites. If you are going to throw all this tax burden upon the 45 percent of the acreage of the District I doubt very much whether it will work out.

I am very much interested in the gentleman's plan, but I think it is a matter that ought to be submitted in the form of a bill. I think there should be ample hearings so that we can determine those things that have not yet been determined. So, with all due respect to the gentleman from Ohio, I feel that his amendment ought to be voted down.

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. BIGELOW. The rates that I have quoted were on the basis of $480,000,000 land values privately owned. It ignores altogether the $343,000,000 value of the land the Government owns.

Mr. DIRKSEN. That may be so, but still I think it is a very essential factor in the calculations. I think it is a matter that ought to be gone into exhaustively before we change the basic tax structure.

Mr. BIERMANN. The only difference between the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio and the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois is that the gentleman from Ohio wants to tax 45 percent of the land and the gentleman from Illinois wants to tax 45 percent of the land plus the improvements. The gentleman from Ohio wants to take the tax off the improvements.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I know exactly what he wants to do, but it should not be done until we can give the matter due and proper consideration.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BIGELOW) there were—ayes 21, noes 64.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DIES to the committee's amendment: "There is hereby exempted from all taxation so much of any real property occupied solely by the owner thereof as a homestead which does not exceed in assessed valuation the amount of $5,000, and where any homestead exceeds in assessed valuation the amount of $5,000 only the amount in excess of $5,000 shall be subject to tax. A tax is hereby annually levied upon any real property in the District of Columbia which is not herein exempted, at the following rates:

"(1) 1½ percent of the amount of assessed valuation not exceeding $10,000.

"(2) 2 percent of the amount of assessed valuation in excess of $10,000 but not in excess of $500,000.

"(3) 2½ percent of the amount of assessed valuation in excess of $500,000.

"Where, however, the owner or lessee of any apartment house, hotel, or lodging place can show to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia that the rents or rates charged by such owner or lessee are approximately the same as the rents or rates charged in the majority of other cities in the United States of comparable size, taking into consideration the accommodations and services provided by the owner or lessee of such apartment house, hotel, or lodging place, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall have the right and it shall be their duty to reduce the tax rate on such apartment, hotel, or lodging place: Provided, however, That such reduction shall not exceed in any case ½ percent of the amount of assessed valuation and in no event shall the tax rate be reduced below 1½ percent of the amount of assessed valuation."

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, this amendment exempts the first $5,000 of any homestead solely occupied by the owner. From $5,000 to $10,000 it provides for a tax of 1.7 percent, the rate proposed by the pending bill. From $10,000 to $200,000 it provides a tax of 2 percent of the assessed value. On property in excess of $500,000 it provides a tax of 2½ percent of the total amount.

This is not a very great increase; in fact, those who own property in excess of $200,000 would not be paying as much tax as they pay in the majority of the cities and States in the Union now. Not only is this true, but the amendment contains a provision to protect the renters in the District of Columbia. It provides that wherever the owner of an apartment house or hotel can show that he has charged rents or rates that are approximately the same as in the majority of cities, taking into consideration accommodations and services rendered, then in that event, the Commissioners can reduce the rate not more than one-half of 1 percent. That is for the purpose of discouraging owners of apartment houses, renting places, and hotels from charging exorbitant rents and rates and passing it on to the renters or to the lodgers. [Applause.]

Many States have passed provisions to exempt homesteads in order to encourage people to own their own homes and to live in their own homes.

It is a question whether or not this Congress is in favor of the principle of exempting these small homes from taxation and placing the burden of the tax, insofar as real property is concerned, upon the owners of tremendous property holdings. Not only am I in favor of this principle in the District of Columbia, but I believe it should apply in every State in the United States. The time is coming, regardless of what this House does today, when small homes and farms in the United States will be exempt from taxation. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, I dislike taking up the time of the House at this late hour, but may I point out again to the Members of the House that even though this amendment might be possessed of merit—and I do not know that I am prepared to say it is or not—the subcommittee having charge of this bill has been holding hearings since March 17 until yesterday afternoon. Never during that time has this proposition been submitted to the subcommittee by the gentleman who has just offered the amendment or by anybody else.

Mr. SACKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SACKS. Did I not bring it up in committee the other day?

Mr. NICHOLS. Not in the form of an amendment.

Mr. SACKS. I moved that the bill be amended in this respect.

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes. The gentleman did suggest that yesterday afternoon, and he was defeated by vote of the Committee.

Mr. Chairman, this is a serious proposition that confronts the District of Columbia. We have tried to minutely calculate how much revenue would be returned from the taxes that have been levied by this bill. I am sure that the gentleman from Texas would not attempt to say how much revenue would be secured if his amendment was adopted. May I say to the House in all seriousness, that this is too serious a proposition to consider in this short time.

Mr. DIES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DIES. What is so serious and novel about this proposition when it has been adopted by many States of the Union?

Mr. NICHOLS. I may say to the gentleman, if we are going to pick up every law that has been adopted by the several States of the Union to write it into the District Code for that reason and no other reason, we could no longer be termed a legislative body.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. May I make the observation that in the State of Texas we have a $3,000 homestead exemption. This law was passed for the purpose of encouraging home ownership and has worked out very satisfactorily.

Mr. NICHOLS. In the State of Oklahoma we have a $1,500 homestead exemption, but we did not write that provision into the law on a minute's consideration.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIES) there were—ayes 35, noes 57.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there is not a quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and fourteen Members are present, a quorum.

The question is on the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DIRKSEN) there were—ayes 88, noes 10.

So the committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN] having resumed the chair, Mr. MEAD, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7472) to provide additional revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 243, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments agreed to in Committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). Under the rule, the previous question is ordered on the bill and amendments to final passage.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. NICHOLS and Mr. DIRKSEN rose.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I shall demand a separate vote on several amendments, but, due to the lateness of the hour, I reserve that until in the morning.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement from the assessor at Pittsburgh as to the success of the Pittsburgh plan.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

TRIALS OF AND JUDGMENTS UPON THE ISSUE OF GOOD BEHAVIOR IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN FEDERAL JUDGES

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD to submit for the information of the House what will be presented as H. R. 2271, to provide for trials of and judgments upon the issue of good behavior in the case of certain Federal judges, with the amendments proposed to be offered to the bill. I think the Members of the House would like to have this printed in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

A bill to provide for trials of and judgments upon the issue of good behavior in the case of certain Federal judges

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever a resolution of the House of Representatives is directed to the Chief Justice of the United States, stating that in the opinion of the House there is reasonable ground for believing that the behavior of a judge to whom this act applies, as provided in section 6, has been other than good behavior within the meaning of that term as used in section 1 of article III of the Constitution, the Chief Justice shall convene, or cause to be convened, the circuit court of appeals of the circuit in which the judicial district of the judge is situated in special term for the trial of the issue of good behavior of such judge. The Chief Justice shall designate three judges of the circuit courts of appeal (one of whom he shall designate as presiding judge and any one or more of whom may be judges of the circuit court of appeals of circuits other than the one convened in special term) to serve on such court. Such court shall have jurisdiction to determine the right of such judge to remain in office.

SEC. 2. All of the facilities, services, and equipment of the United States in the circuit in which any such court may sit which may be appropriate and useful for the purposes of such court, are hereby made available for its use, and every officer of the United States is hereby required to cooperate with each such court and its several members and to make available all necessary courtroom and office facilities, stenographic and other services; and the clerk and marshals of the circuit court of appeals in any circuit in which any such court may sit are each hereby required to serve such court in the same manner, and as fully as they are, respectively, required to serve the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of that circuit.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of the Attorney General, by himself or by counsel designated by him, to institute on behalf of the Unitd States, and to represent the United States in a civil action in such court to determine the right of such judge to remain in office. In any such action, the United States shall be a party to such controversy and shall have all the rights and duties of a plaintiff in a civil action in the Federal courts and the judge shall have all the rights and duties of a defendant in such an action. All matters of procedure in any such action shall be governed by rules prescribed by the Supreme Court, but the trial shall be without a jury.

SEC. 4. If the court determines that the behavior of the judge has been other than good behavior within the meaning of that term as used in section 1 of article III of the Constitution, the judgment of the court shall be that the judge is thereupon removed from office, but no other penalty shall be imposed by the court.

SEC. 5. From the judgment of any such court, either the United States or the defendant, may, within 30 days after its rendition, but not later, appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. Notice in writing of the taking of such appeal must be filed in the office of the clerk of the trial court and also of the clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States, and a copy thereof must be served on opposing counsel. Such appeals shall be subject to and governed by the rules of practice and procedure now regulating appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, or such rules as may hereafter be adopted by the Supreme Court of the United States. The judgment appealed from shall remain in full force and effect, and shall be final and binding, unless or until it be reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States upon appeal. If the judgment appealed from be that of removal from office, the appellant shall forthwith cease to have any power, authority, or right to act as judge, but his salary shall be paid him until the determination of such appeal.

SEC. 6. This act shall apply to all judges of courts of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the Territories and possessions, who hold their offices during good behavior, except the judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the judges of the circuit courts of appeals, and the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement I made before the Joint Philippine Affairs Committee this morning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD on the life, character, and public service of my late beloved colleague, WILLIAM P. CONNERY, Jr.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

THE LATE WILLIAM P. CONNERY, JR.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, I was returning to the Capitol when news of the sad and untimely passing of my beloved friend and colleague, the late Hon. WM. P. CONNERY, JR., reached me.

Mr. Speaker, this news completely saddened me, but I have asked for these brief moments to pay just a word of tribute to the memory of this noble and courageous man. His loss to his district and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Nation is irreparable. His unfaltering devotion to his duties here; the hours of sincere labor and effort expended toward human betterment had taken their toll so that when he was stricken with this dread affliction, his physical reserves were unable to cope with it.

His cheerful and happy nature and his warm personality, endeared him to all who were fortunate enough to enjoy his friendship. With ready wit and a sparkling sense of humor, he pursued his busy life among us. His inimitable ability as a storyteller and raconteur brought cheer to many in a dull moment. Strong in his convictions, he fought vigorously and courageously for the right as he saw it. Yet never did he resort to a word of contempt or bitterness, however intense the debate may have waged. He died on the eve of achievement of a great endeavor which he pioneered but which has long been close to his heart, the Black-Connery wage and hour bill. However, Mr. Speaker, he established an enviable record in Congress, one which has contributed to the happiness for the masses of toilers and the underprivileged in our country—and one which has stamped him as one of the greatest progressives of our times. His loss is mourned by countless friends and by the thousands who, although not fortunate enough to enjoy his acquaintance, yet looked upon him as their great friend and leader. While his loss to the Nation overshadows all else, Mr. Speaker, I have lost a staunch and inspiring friend, one that it is yet difficult to realize has passed from our midst.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

(Mr. REES of Kansas, Mr. HANCOCK of New York, Mr. VOORHIS, Mr. KING, Mr. DIRKSEN, Mr. MAVERICK, and Mr. CHANDLER asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.)

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. ELLENBOGEN, for 2 days, on account of official business.

To Mr. REILLY (at the request of Mr. BOILEAU), for the rest of the week, to attend the funeral of a friend of his family.

To Mr. DREW of Pennsylvania, for 5 days, on account of official business.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did, on Wednesday, June 16, 1937, present to the President, for his approval, bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 1277. An act for the relief of William Hayes;

H. R. 2080. An act for the relief of Eleanora S. Richardson;

H. R. 2705. An act to provide for the manner of inflicting the punishment of death;

H. R. 2887. An act to amend the provisions of the pension laws for peacetime service to include Reserve officers and members of the Enlisted Reserves;

H. R. 2924. An act for the relief of certain officers and employees of the Foreign Service of the United States who, while in the course of their respective duties, suffered losses of personal property by reason of war, catastrophes of nature, and other causes;

H. R. 3203. An act for the relief of Rosalie Rose;

H. R. 3557. An act for the relief of the Coast Fir & Cedar Products Co., Inc.;

H. R. 4213. An act to amend the Inland Waterways Corporation Act, approved June 3, 1924, as amended, authorizing the Secretary of War to extend the services and operations of the Inland Waterways Corporation to the Savannah River;

H. R. 4575. An act for the relief of A. R. Netterville, Sr.;

H. R. 5721. An act to amend the Federal Register Act;

H. R. 5880. An act to amend Private Act No. 210, approved August 13, 1935, by substituting as payee therein the Clark Dredging Co. in lieu of the Bowers Southern Dredging Co.;

H. J. Res. 335. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to receive for instruction at the United States Military Academy at West Point, Olmedo Alfaro, a citizen of Ecuador; and

H. J. Res. 339. Joint resolution granting permission to George E. Ijams, a civilian employee of the Veterans' Administration, to accept and wear the decoration bestowed upon him by the Republic of France.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, June 18, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON FLOOD CONTROL

The Committee on Flood Control will continue hearings on Friday, June 18, 1937, at 10 a. m., on emergency and priority projects in the lower Ohio Basin.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

There will be an open hearing before the full Committee on Naval Affairs, Friday, June 18, 1937, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of S. 2193, to authorize the construction of certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, at 10 a. m., Friday, June 18, 1937.

Business to be considered: Continuation of hearing on H. R. 6968—securities amendments bill.

There will be a meeting of the Firearms Subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, at 10 a. m., Tuesday, June 22, 1937, for the consideration of S. 3—the firearms bill.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

664. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a draft of a proposed provision pertaining to an appropriation for the Veterans' Administration for the fiscal year 1938 (H. Doc. No. 267); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

665. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to remove a floating drydock from the United States naval station, New Orleans, La.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

666. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to permit the payment of the costs of repairs, resurfacing, improvement, and enlargement of the Arrowrock Dam in 20 annual installments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

667. A letter from the Comptroller, Near East Relief, transmitting a report for the year ending December 31, 1936; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mrs. O'DAY: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 7206. A bill to permit the temporary entry into the United States under certain conditions of alien participants and officials of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts Silver Jubilee Camp to be held in the United States in 1937; without amendment (Rept. No. 1038). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 6547. A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works in or in the vicinity of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1039). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CHANDLER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6963. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; with amendment (Rept. No. 1042). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McREYNOLDS: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. R. 7512. A bill to amend the act approved March 26, 1934; without amendment (Rept. No. 1043). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLOOM: Committee on Foreign Affairs. House Joint Resolution 379. Joint resolution authorizing Federal participation in the New York World's Fair 1939; with amendment (Rept. No. 1044). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CROWE: Committee on the Territories. H. R. 7378. A bill to authorize the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii to create a public corporate authority authorized to engage in slum clearance and housing undertakings and to issue bonds of the authority, to authorize said legislature to provide for financial assistance to said authority by the Territory and its political subdivisions, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1045). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. CROWE: Committee on the Territories. H. R. 7489. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to enable the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii to authorize the issuance of certain bonds, and for other purposes", approved August 3, 1935; without amendment (Rept. No. 1046). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. CLAYPOOL: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 1474. A bill for the relief of Agatha Milauskas Yakavonis, nee Agatha Milauskas; without amendment (Rept. No. 1040). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. CLAYPOOL: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. S. 779. An act for the relief of Mrs. Zeba Shargabian; without amendment (Rept. No. 1041). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CELLER: A bill (H. R. 7550) to amend the Revenue Act of 1936 with respect to the surtax on undistributed profits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 7551) to provide for the acquisition and dissemination of information concerning the quantity and character of crude petroleum in storage, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

By Mr. DIMOND: A bill (H. R. 7552) to protect and preserve the salmon fishery of Alaska, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7553) to amend the laws of Alaska imposing taxes for carrying on business and trade; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 7554) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1933, to amend the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. KERR: A bill (H. R. 7555) to authorize the preparation of a comprehensive plan for controlling the floods, regulating the flow of waters, land reclamation, and conserving water for beneficial uses, in the basin of the Neuse River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. RAMSPECK: A bill (H. R. 7556) to provide for the right of election by employees, subject to the provisions of the Civil Service Retirement Act, of a joint and survivorship annuity upon retirement; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. RAMSEY: A bill (H. R. 7557) to amend the National Labor Relations Act of the Seventy-fourth Congress, first session, chapter 372, Code of Laws of the United States, title 29, by the addition of sections 165A, 165B, and 165C, and to grant to the National Labor Relations Board certain powers as to trade disputes; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SHEPPARD: A bill (H. R. 7558) to extend the mining laws of the United States to the Joshua Tree National Monument in California; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 7559) to provide for the selection of certain lands in the State of California for the use of the California State park system; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 7560) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KING: A bill (H. R. 7561) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes", approved March 24, 1934; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. JONES: A bill (H. R. 7562) to encourage and promote the ownership of farm homes and to make the possession of such homes more secure, to provide for the general welfare of the United States, to provide additional credit facilities for agricultural development, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. EICHER: A bill (H. R. 7563) for the improvement of the Mississippi River between Missouri River and Minneapolis; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SECREST: A bill (H. R. 7564) to permit the erection of the Shenandoah Memorial in or near Ava, Ohio; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. MAGNUSON: A bill (H. R. 7565) to provide for Government ownership and operation of shipbuilding facilities and plants for the manufacture of Army and Navy ordnance and other war materials, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. VINSON of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 7566) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to remove a floating drydock from the United States naval station, New Orleans, La.; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WHITE of Idaho: A bill (H. R. 7567) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to permit the payment of the costs of repairs, resurfacing, improvement, and enlargement of the Arrowrock Dam in 20 annual installments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

By Mr. HOFFMAN: Resolution (H. Res. 244) recommending the redesignation of the American Federation of Labor as the principal workers' organization in the United States and entitled to name any representative of the American workers in the International Labor Conference; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. KERR: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 416) to authorize the preparation of a comprehensive plan for controlling the floods, regulating the flow of waters, land reclamation, and conserving water for useful purposes, in the basin of the Roanoke River, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their House Concurrent Resolution 43, with reference to a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Acts 3 and 23 of the Session Laws of Hawaii, 1937, with reference to form and sale of bonds; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States concerning an act making uniform the law securing the attendance of witnesses from without a State in criminal proceedings; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States concerning an act making uniform the law as to extraterritorial arrest on fresh pursuit and authorizing this Commonwealth to cooperate with other States in connection therewith; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 7568) for the relief of Howard Whiles; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DELANEY: A bill (H. R. 7569) for the relief of Frank Thomas; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. DEMPSEY: A bill (H. R. 7570) for the relief of the Women's Board of Domestic Missions; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DIES: A bill (H. R. 7571) for the relief of Sophrania Holmes; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KOPPLEMAN: A bill (H. R. 7572) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Order of Xaverian Brothers; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHEPPARD: A bill (H. R. 7573) for the relief of Elizabeth Seymour Hodgson; to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2657. By Mr. CURLEY: Petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, urging Congress to pass legislation to establish a 2-cent rate on first-class mail for delivery within the corporate limits of the city of New York; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2658. Also, petition of the Maritime Association of the Port of New York, protesting against the towing of laid-up ships from New York Harbor to the James River, Va., and also against the removal of these ships from New York Harbor; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

2659. By Mr. DALY: Petition signed by 157 citizens and voters of the Fourth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, supplementing petitions presented May 25, June 7 and 15, 1937, endorsing the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

2660. By Mr. EATON: Resolution adopted by the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, representing 40,000 women of the State of New Jersey, declaring their objection to the implications and the intent of the President's plan for the reorganization of the Supreme Court; to the Committee of the Judiciary.

2661. By Mr. FORAND: Petition of the American Institute of Architects, supporting the Wagner-Steagall bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

2662. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Waste Material Sorters, Trimmers, and Handlers, Union Local No. 18445, A. F. of L., Brooklyn, N. Y., concerning Senate bill 2025 and House bill 6278; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2663. By Mr. LEAVY: Petition of the International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, and Soft Drink Workers of America, Local Union 228, Spokane, Wash., protesting against the activities of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Manufacturers Association in the opposition that these organizations take toward the National Labor Relations Act and setting forth the fact that the National Labor Relations Act provides its workers with a means by which a majority vote of the employees will result in the employer dealing collectively with his employee; to the Committee on Labor.

2664. Also, petition of the International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, and Soft Drink Workers of America, Local Union 228, Spokane, Wash., protesting against House bill 6704, on the grounds and for the reason that the legislation sought to be enacted into law would foster and promote fascism in war emergencies and would tend toward making war more probable and that it is inimical to the best interests of labor and the fundamental principles of freedom and democracy; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2665. Also, petition of the International Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, and Soft Drink Workers of America, Local Union 228, Spokane, Wash., protesting against Senate bill 1710, known as the Guffey bill, on the grounds and for the reason that said bill tends to deprive organized labor of the right to strike against unscrupulous employers; to the Committee on Labor.

2666. Also, petition of the Hillyard (Wash.) Post, No. 1474, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, protesting against any and all acts that have a tendency to impair the benefits or emoluments to the veterans, his widow or orphans, if the effect of such legislation would be to impair and ultimately destroy the welfare of the veteran himself; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

2667. By Mr. WITHROW: Joint Resolution No. 63–S, passed by the Wisconsin Legislature, relating to the need for retaining Civilian Conservation Corps camps on State and county forests; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2668. Also, Joint Resolution No. 80–A, passed by the Wisconsin Legislature, petitioning the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States, to adopt agricultural and tariff policies in furtherance of the welfare of the Wisconsin farmer; to the Committee on Agriculture.